

THE LAW OF CRIMES

BY

RATANLAL RANCHHODDAS, B.A., LL.B.,

VAKIL, BOMBAY HIGH COURT,

AND

DHIRAJLAL KESHAVLAL THAKORE, B.A.,

OF LINCOLN'S INN, BARRISTER-AT-LAW,

Authors of "The Law of Torts," "The Law of Evidence," Editors of "The Bombay Law Reporter,"

&c., &c.

TENTH EDITION.

BOMBAY :

THE BOMBAY LAW REPORTER OFFICE,

2-A, CHARNI ROAD.

—
1926

Bengal Agents—
EASTERN LAW HOUSE

Law Publishers

11, College Sq., CALCUTTA, P. B.

All rights reserved.

Printed by Hoe & Co. at the 'Premier Press,' 5, Stringer's Street, Georgetown, Madras, and Published by Ratanlal Ranchhoddas, B.A., LL.B., and Dhirajlal Keshavlal Thakore, B.A., at the office of the "Bombay Law Reporter," 2-A, Charni Road, Bombay.

PREFACE TO THE TENTH EDITION.

SINCE the publication of the last edition six new Acts amending the provisions of the Indian Penal Code or substituting new ones have been enacted, and seven hundred fresh cases bearing on the provisions of the Code have been reported in law reports, official and non-official. Besides, several sections of the Code of Criminal Procedure have been amended by Act XVIII of 1923. The present edition has been carefully revised and brought up-to-date in the light of statutory changes and fresh case-law. To keep the book handy this edition is printed on tough and thin paper specially ordered out from England, and the type is also slightly altered. Even with the addition of seventy pages of new matter the bulk of the book has not increased but diminished.

January, 1926.

R. R.

D. K. T.

EXTRACTS FROM THE PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION.

THE commentary under each section is divided into three Parts ; first comes Comment ; secondly, Cases ; and thirdly, matter pertaining to Practice.

As to COMMENT.—The object of a section as foreshadowed in the Note of the authors of the Code, or in the two Reports of the Indian Law Commissioners or in the Proceedings of the Legislative Council, has been fully stated. Wherever the scope of a section has been the subject of judicial criticism it has been carefully explained. Wherever the meaning or principle of a section is elucidated in a judicial pronouncement excerpts from it have been given. Every judicial interpretation and construction of a word, phrase or clause, in a section, has been given, as much as possible, in the ipsissima verba of Judges.

For facility of reference the words, expressions and clauses commented upon are capped with figures in the text and are repeated in the Comment as sub-headings with corresponding numbers.

The conflicting opinions—the nice, sharp quilllets of law—of the different High Courts, on a few points, have been duly traced and prominently noticed.

A careful and systematic comparison of the several leading provisions of the Code and of the English criminal law has been made where they differ materially.

As to CASES.—The cases bearing on each section have been arranged into cognate groups, each group illustrating some clause.

As to PRACTICE.—This part is sub-divided into two main headings ; first comes Evidence, and secondly, Procedure.

Under Evidence all points necessary for the prosecution to prove, in order to bring a charge home to the accused, are categorically stated ; and questions relating to onus, mode of proof, and admissibility or non-admissibility of evidence are discussed.

Under Procedure fall the contents of the second schedule of the Code of Criminal Procedure ; questions concerning Jurisdiction, Sanction, and measure of Punishment ; references to Criminal Circulars issued for the guidance of subordinate Judiciary and Magistracy by all the High Courts, Chief Courts, and Judicial Commissioners' Courts ; and lastly, forms of charges for various offences,

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGE
THE INDIAN PENAL CODE	1
THE APPENDIX.
THE ELECTIONS OFFENCES ACT	1127
THE EXPLOSIVE SUBSTANCES ACT	1131
THE FUGITIVE OFFENDERS ACT	1134
THE INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT	1148
THE INDIAN EXTRADITION ACT	1150
THE INDIAN MERCHANDISE MARKS ACT	1163
THE INDIAN STATES (PROTECTION AGAINST DISAFFECTION) ACT	1171
THE PENAL SERVITUDE ACT	1173
THE POLICE (INCITEMENT TO DISAFFECTION) ACT	1175
THE PREVENTION OF SEDITIOUS MEETINGS ACT	1177
THE REFORMATORY SCHOOLS ACT	1179
THE SLAVE TRADE ACT	1187
THE TERRITORIAL WATERS JURISDICTION ACT	1191
THE WHIPPING ACT	1193

ARRANGEMENT OF SECTIONS.

	Page
PREFACE	1

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION.

SECTIONS.

1. Title and extent of operation of the Code	1
2. Punishment of offences committed within the said territories	4
3. Punishment of offences committed beyond, but which by law may be tried within, the territories	15
4. Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences	16
5. Certain laws not to be affected by this Act	33

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL EXPLANATIONS.

6. Definitions in the Code to be understood subject to exceptions	36
7. Sense of expression once explained	36
8. Gender	37
9. Number	37
10. "Man"	37
"Woman"	37
11. "Person"	37
12. "Public"	38
13. "Queen"	38
14. "Servant of the Queen"	38
15. "British India"	38
16. "Government of India"	39
17. "Government"	39
18. "Presidency"	39
19. "Judge"	39
20. "Court of Justice"	40
21. "Public servant"	40
22. "Moveable property"	46
23. "Wrongful gain", "Wrongful loss", Gaining wrongfully. Losing wrongfully.	47
24. "Dishonestly"	48
25. "Fraudulently"	49
26. "Reason to believe"	51
27. "Property in possession of wife, clerk or servant"	51
28. "Counterfeit"	52
29. "Document"	52
30. "Valuable security"	53
31. "A will"	55

SECTIONS.	PAGE
32. Words referring to acts include illegal omissions	55
33. "Act", "Omission"	55
34. Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention ..	55
35. When such an act is criminal by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention	60
36. Effect caused partly by act and partly by omission	61
37. Co-operation by doing one of several acts constituting an offence ..	61
38. Persons concerned in criminal act may be guilty of different offences ..	62
39. "Voluntarily"	63
40. "Offence"	64
41. "Special law"	65
42. "Local law"	65
43. "Illegal", "Legally bound to do"	65
44. "Injury"	66
45. "Life"	67
46. "Death"	67
47. "Animal"	67
48. "Vessel"	67
49. "Year," "Month"	67
50. "Section"	68
51. "Oath"	68
52. "Good faith"	68

CHAPTER III.

OF PUNISHMENTS.

53. Punishments	70
54. Commutation of sentence of death	77
55. Commutation of sentence of transportation for life	77
56. Sentence of Europeans and Americans to penal servitude. Provision as to sentence for term exceeding ten years, but not for life	78
57. Fractions of terms of punishment	78
58. Offenders sentenced to transportation, how dealt with until transported ..	79
59. Transportation instead of imprisonment	79
60. Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple	82
61. [Repealed.]	82
62. [Repealed.]	82
63. Amount of fine	82
64. Sentence of imprisonment for non payment of fine	84
65. Limit to imprisonment for non payment of fine, when imprisonment and fine awardable	86
66. Description of imprisonment for non payment of fine	89
67. Imprisonment for non payment of fine, when offence punishable with fine only ..	89
68. Imprisonment to terminate on payment of fine	91
69. Termination of imprisonment on payment of pecuniary part of fine	91
70. Fine payable within six years, or during imprisonment	92
Death not to discharge property from liability	92

SECTIONS.

PAGE

71. Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences	94
72. Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences, the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which	105
73. Solitary confinement	106
74. Limit of solitary confinement	108
75. Enhanced punishment for certain offences under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII after previous conviction	109

CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

76. Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound, by law	110
77. Act of Judge when acting judicially	122
78. Act done pursuant to the judgment or order of Court	124
79. Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified, by law	129
80. Accident in doing a lawful act	132
81. Act likely to cause harm, but done without criminal intent, and to prevent other harm	134
82. Act of a child under 7 years of age	141
83. Act of a child above 7 and under 12 of immature understanding	142
84. Act of a person of unsound mind	144
85. Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will	156
86. Offence requiring a particular intent or knowledge committed by one who is intoxicated	167
87. Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt, done by consent	158
88. Act not intended to cause death, done by consent in good faith for person's benefit	161
89. Act done in good faith for benefit of child or insane person, by or by consent of guardian. Provisos	164
90. Consent known to be given under fear or misconception	165
Consent of insane person	165
Consent of child	165
91. Exclusion of acts which are offences independently of harm caused	167
92. Act done in good faith for benefit of a person without consent	168
Provisos	168
93. Communication made in good faith	169
94. Act to which a person is compelled by threats	170
95. Act causing slight harm	172

Of the Right of Private Defence.

96. Things done in private defence	174
97. Right of private defence of the body and of property	176
98. Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, etc.	180
99. Acts against which there is no right of private defence	181
Extent to which the right may be exercised	181

SECTIONS.	PAGE
150. Hiring, or conniving at hiring, of persons to join unlawful assembly ..	300
151. Knowingly joining or continuing in assembly of five or more persons after it has been commanded to disperse	301
152. Assaulting or obstructing public servant when suppressing riot, etc. ..	302
153. Wantonly giving provocation, with intent to cause riot— if rioting be committed ; if not committed	303
153-A. Promoting enmity between classes	305
154. Owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held ..	307
155. Liability of person for whose benefit riot is committed ..	309
156. Liability of agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit riot is committed ..	310
157. Harbouring persons hired for an unlawful assembly	311
158. Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly or riot ; or to go armed ..	312
159. Affray	312
160. Punishment for committing affray	312

CHAPTER IX .

OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS.

161. Public servant taking gratification other than legal remuneration in respect of an official act	315
162. Taking gratification, in order, by corrupt or illegal means, to influence public servant	322
163. Taking gratification for exercise of personal influence with public servant ..	323
164. Punishment for abetment by public servant of offences defined in section 162 or 163	324
165. Public servant obtaining valuable thing, without consideration, from person concerned in proceeding or business transacted by such public servant ..	324
166. Public servant disobeying law, with intent to cause injury to any person ..	326
167. Public servant framing an incorrect document with intent to cause injury ..	328
168. Public servant unlawfully engaging in trade	329
169. Public servant unlawfully buying or bidding for property	330
170. Personating a public servant	331
171. Wearing garb or carrying token used by public servant with fraudulent intent	332

CHAPTER IX - A .

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS.

171-A. "Candidate" "Electoral right", defined	334
171-B. Bribery	335
171-C. Undue influence at elections	337
171-D. Personation at election	338
171-E. Punishment for bribery	339
171-F. Punishment for undue influence or personation at an election	340
171-G. False statement in connection with an election	341
171-H. Illegal payments in connection with an election	341
171-I. Failure to keep election accounts	342

CHAPTER X.

OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.

SECTIONS.	PAGE
172. Absconding to avoid service of summons or other proceedings	344
173. Preventing service of summons or other proceedings, or preventing publication thereof	346
174. Non-attendance in obedience to an order from public servant	347
175. Omission to produce document to public servant by person legally bound to produce it	351
176. Omission to give notice or information to public servant by person legally bound to give it	353
177. Furnishing false information	356
178. Refusing oath or affirmation when duly required by public servant to make it..	359
179. Refusing to answer public servant authorized to question	359
180. Refusing to sign statement	361
181. False statement on oath or affirmation to public servant or person authorized to administer an oath or affirmation	362
182. False information, with intent to cause public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person	364
183. Resistance to taking of property by lawful authority of public servant ..	370
184. Obstructing sale of property offered for sale by authority of public servant ..	372
185. Illegal purchase or bid for property offered for sale by authority of public servant	373
186. Obstructing public servant in discharge of public functions	374
187. Omission to assist public servant when bound by law to give assistance ..	379
188. Disobedience to order duly promulgated by public servant	380
189. Threat of injury to public servant	387
190. Threat of injury to induce person to refrain from applying for protection to public servant	388

CHAPTER XI.

OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

191. Giving false evidence	390
192. Fabricating false evidence	392
193. Punishment for false evidence	401
194. Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of capital offence	415
If innocent person be thereby convicted and executed	415
195. Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment	417
196. Using evidence known to be false	418
197. Issuing or signing false certificate	420
198. Using as true a certificate known to be false	422
199. False statement made in declaration which is by law receivable as evidence ..	423
200. Using as true such declaration knowing it to be false	425
201. Causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender—
if a capital offence ;
if punishable with transportation ,
if punishable with less than ten years' imprisonment	425
202. Intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform	429

SECTIONS.

	PAGE
203. Giving false information respecting an offence committed	430
204. Destruction of document to prevent its production as evidence	431
205. False personation for purpose of act or proceeding in suit or prosecution ..	433
206. Fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent its seizure as forfeited or in execution	435
207. Fraudulent claim to property to prevent its seizure as forfeited or in execution.	437
208. Fraudulently suffering decree for sum not due	438
209. Dishonestly making false claim in Court	439
210. Fraudulently obtaining decree for sum not due	440
211. False charge of offence made with intent to injure	442
212. Harbouring offender— if a capital offence; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment ..	456
213. Taking gift, etc., to screen an offender from punishment— if a capital offence; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment ..	458
214. Offering gift or restoration of property in consideration of screening offender— if a capital offence; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment ..	460
215. Taking gift to help to recover stolen property, etc.	465
216. Harbouring offender who has escaped from custody or whose apprehension has been ordered— if a capital offence; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment ..	467
216-A. Penalty for harbouring robbers or dacoits	470
216-B. Definition of "harbour" in sections 212, 216 and 216-A	471
217. Public servant disobeying direction of law with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture	471
218. Public servant framing incorrect record or writing with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture	473
219. Public servant in judicial proceeding corruptly making report, etc., contrary to law	477
220. Commitment for trial or confinement by person having authority who knows that he is acting contrary to law	478
221. Intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend	479
222. Intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend person under sentence or lawfully committed	480
223. Escape from confinement or custody negligently suffered by public servant ..	482
224. Resistance or obstruction by a person to his lawful apprehension ..	485
225. Resistance or obstruction to lawful apprehension of another person ..	488
225-A. Omission to apprehend, or suffering of escape, on part of public servant, in cases not otherwise provided for	490
225-B. Resistance or obstruction to lawful apprehension, or escape or rescue, in cases not otherwise provided for	491
226. Unlawful return from transportation	495
227. Violation of condition of remission of punishment	496
228. Intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceed- ing	497
229. Personation of a juror or assessor	509

CHAPTER XII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO COIN AND GOVERNMENT STAMPS.

SECTIONS.	PAGE
230. "Coin" defined— Queen's coin	502
231. Counterfeiting coin	504
232. Counterfeiting Queen's coin	506
233. Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting coin	508
234. Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting Queen's coin	508
235. Possession of instrument or material for the purpose of using the same for counterfeiting coin ; if Queen's coin	509
236. Abetting in India the counterfeiting out of India of coin	512
237. Import or export of counterfeit coin	513
238. Import or export of counterfeits of Queen's coin	513
239. Delivery of coin, possessed with knowledge that it is counterfeit	514
240. Delivery of Queen's coin, possessed with knowledge that it is counterfeit	516
241. Delivery of coin as genuine, which, when first possessed, the deliverer did not know to be counterfeit	517
242. Possession of counterfeit coin by person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof	518
243. Possession of Queen's coin by person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof	519
244. Person employed in mint causing coin to be of different weight or composition from that fixed by law	519
245. Unlawfully taking coining instrument from mint	520
246. Fraudulently or dishonestly diminishing weight or altering composition of coin.	521
247. Fraudulently or dishonestly diminishing weight or altering composition of Queen's coin	521
248. Altering appearance of coin with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description	522
249. Altering appearance of Queen's coin with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description	522
250. Delivery of coin, possessed with knowledge that it is altered	523
251. Delivery of Queen's coin, possessed with knowledge that it is altered	523
252. Possession of coin by person who knew it to be altered when he became possessed thereof	524
253. Possession of Queen's coin by person who knew it to be altered when he became possessed thereof	525
254. Delivery of coin as genuine which, when first possessed, the deliverer did not know to be altered	525
255. Counterfeiting Government stamp	526
256. Having possession of instrument or material for counterfeiting Government stamp	527
257. Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting Government stamp	527
258. Sale of counterfeit Government stamp	528
259. Having possession of counterfeit Government stamp	529
260. Using as genuine a Government stamp known to be counterfeit	530
261. Effacing writing from substance-bearing Government stamp, or removing from document a stamp used for it, with intent to cause loss to Government	530

SECTIONS.	PAGE
323. Punishment for Voluntarily causing hurt	696
324. Voluntarily causing hurt by dangerous weapons or means	698
325. Punishment for voluntarily causing grievous hurt	700
326. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt by dangerous weapons or means	701
327. Voluntarily causing hurt to extort property, or to constrain to an illegal act	702
328. Causing hurt by means of poison, etc., with intent to commit an offence	703
329. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt to extort property, or to constrain to an illegal act	706
330. Voluntarily causing hurt to extort confession, or to compel restoration of property	706
331. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt to extort confession, or to compel restoration of property	708
332. Voluntarily causing hurt to deter public servant from his duty	709
333. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt to deter public servant from his duty	711
334. Voluntarily causing hurt on provocation	711
335. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt on provocation	712
336. Act endangering life or personal safety of others	713
337. Causing hurt by act endangering life or personal safety of others	715
338. Causing grievous hurt by act endangering life or personal safety of others	716

Of Wrongful Restraint and Wrongful Confinement.

339. Wrongful restraint	717
340. Wrongful confinement	720
341. Punishment for wrongful restraint	723
342. Punishment for wrongful confinement	723
343. Wrongful confinement for three or more days	724
344. Wrongful confinement for ten or more days	724
345. Wrongful confinement of persons for whose liberation writ has been issued	725
346. Wrongful confinement in secret	726
347. Wrongful confinement to extort property or constrain to illegal act	726
348. Wrongful confinement to extort confession, or compel restoration of property	727

Of Criminal Force and Assault.

349. Force	728
350. Criminal force	729
351. Assault	731
352. Punishment for assault or criminal force otherwise than on grave provocation	733
353. Assault or criminal force to deter public servant from discharge of his duty	735
354. Assault or criminal force to woman with intent to outrage her modesty	738
355. Assault or criminal force with intent to dishonour person, otherwise than on grave provocation	740
356. Assault or criminal force in attempt to commit theft of property carried by a person	740
357. Assault or criminal force in attempt wrongfully to confine a person	741
358. Assault or criminal force on grave provocation	741

Of Kidnapping, Abduction, Slavery and Forced Labour.

359. Kidnapping	742
360. Kidnapping from British India	742

SECTIONS.

PAGE

361.	Kidnapping from lawful guardianship	..	..	..	..	743
362.	Abduction	..	..	..	..	752
363.	Punishment for kidnapping	..	..	..	..	753
364.	Kidnapping or abducting in order to murder	..	..	..	..	754
365.	Kidnapping or abducting with intent secretly and wrongfully to confine person	..	..	..	..	755
366.	Kidnapping or abducting woman to compel her marriage, etc.	..	..	..	..	756
366 A.	Procurement of minor girl	..	..	..	..	760
366 B.	Importation of girl from foreign country	..	..	..	..	761
367.	Kidnapping or abducting in order to subject person to grievous hurt, slavery, etc.	..	..	..	..	762
368.	Wrongfully concealing or keeping in confinement kidnapped or abducted person	..	..	..	..	763
369.	Kidnapping or abducting child under ten years with intent to steal from its person	..	..	..	..	764
370.	Buying or disposing of any person as a slave	..	..	..	..	765
371.	Habitual dealing in slaves	..	..	..	..	767
372.	Selling minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.	..	..	..	..	767
373.	Buying minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.	..	..	..	..	772
374.	Unlawful compulsory labour	..	..	..	..	776

Of Rape.

375.	Rape	..	..	..	..	776
376.	Punishment for rape	..	..	..	..	777

Of Unnatural Offences.

377.	Unnatural offences	..	..	..	..	783
------	--------------------	----	----	----	----	-----

CHAPTER XVII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY.

Of Theft.

378	Theft	..	..	..	..	785
379.	Punishment for theft	..	..	..	..	786
380	Theft in dwelling house, etc.	..	..	..	..	805
381.	Theft by clerk or servant of property in possession of master	..	..	..	..	806
382.	Theft after preparation made for causing death, hurt or restraint, in order to the committing of the theft	..	..	..	..	808

Of Extortion.

383.	Extortion	..	..	..	..	809
384.	Punishment for extortion	..	..	..	..	810
385.	Putting person in fear of injury in order to commit extortion	..	..	..	..	814
386.	Extortion by putting a person in fear of death or grievous hurt	..	..	..	..	814
387.	Putting person in fear of death or of grievous hurt, in order to commit extortion	..	..	..	..	815
388.	Extortion by threat of accusation of an offence punishable with death or transportation, etc.	..	..	..	..	815
389.	Putting person in fear of accusation of offence, in order to commit extortion	..	..	..	..	816

Of Robbery and Dacoity.

390.	Robbery.
	When theft is robbery,
	When extortion is robbery	..	..	..	..	817

SECTIONS.	PAGE
391. Dacoity	820
392. Punishment for robbery	822
393. Attempt to commit robbery	823
394. Voluntarily causing hurt in committing robbery	824
395. Punishment for dacoity	825
396. Dacoity with murder	826
397. Robbery or dacoity, with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt	828
398. Attempt to commit robbery to dacoity when armed with deadly weapon	831
399. Making preparation to commit dacoity	832
400. Punishment for belonging to gang of dacoits	832
401. Punishment for belonging to gang of thieves	835
402. Assembling for purpose of committing dacoity	838

Of Criminal Misappropriation of Property.

403. Dishonest misappropriation of property	839
404. Dishonest misappropriation of property possessed by deceased person at the time of his death	847

Of Criminal Breach of Trust.

405. Criminal breach of trust	848
406. Punishment for criminal breach of trust	849
407. Criminal breach of trust by carrier, etc.	859
408. Criminal breach of trust by clerk or servant	860
409. Criminal breach of trust by public servant, or by banker, merchant or agent	864

Of the Receiving of Stolen property.

410. Stolen property	868
411. Dishonestly receiving stolen property	869
412. Dishonestly receiving property stolen in the commission of a dacoity	880
413. Habitually dealing in stolen property	881
414. Assisting in concealment of stolen property	882

Of Cheating.

415. Cheating	884
416. Cheating by personation	901
417. Punishment for cheating	903
418. Cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to person whose interest offender is bound to protect	905
419. Punishment for cheating by personation	906
420. Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property	906

Of Fraudulent Deeds and Dispositions of Property.

421. Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent distribution among creditors	911
422. Dishonestly or fraudulently preventing debt being available for creditors	912
423. Dishonest or fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing false statement of consideration	913
424. Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property	914

Of Mischief.

SECTIONS.

PAGE

425.	Mischief	915
426.	Punishment for mischief	916
427.	Mischief causing damage to the amount of fifty rupees	923
428.	Mischief by killing or maiming animal of the value of ten rupees	924
429.	Mischief by killing or maiming cattle, etc., of any value or any animal of the value of fifty rupees	925
430.	Mischief by injury to works of irrigation or by wrongfully diverting water	926
431.	Mischief by injury to public road, bridge, river or channel	929
432.	Mischief by causing inundation or obstruction to public drainage attended with damage	930
433.	Mischief by destroying, moving or rendering less useful a light-house or sea-mark	931
434.	Mischief by destroying or moving, etc., a land mark fixed by public authority.. .. .	931
435.	Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to cause damage to amount of one hundred or (in case of agricultural produce) ten rupees	932
436.	Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to destroy house, etc.	933
437.	Mischief with intent to destroy or make unsafe a decked vessel or one of twenty tons burden	934
438.	Punishment for the mischief described in section 437 committed by fire or explosive substance	935
439.	Punishment for intentionally running vessel aground or ashore with intent to commit theft, etc.	935
440.	Mischief committed after preparation made for causing death or hurt	936

Of Criminal Trespass.

441.	Criminal trespass	936
442.	House-trespass	945
443.	Lurking house-trespass	947
444.	Lurking house-trespass by night	948
445.	House-breaking	948
446.	House-breaking by night	950
447.	Punishment for criminal trespass	950
448.	Punishment for house-trespass	951
449.	House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with death	952
450.	House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with transportation for life	952
451.	House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment	953
452.	House-trespass after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint	954
453.	Punishment for lurking house-trespass or house-breaking	955
454.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment	956
455.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking after preparation, for hurt assault or wrongful restraint	957
456.	Punishment for lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night	958
457.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night, in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment	960
458.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night, after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint	962
459.	Grievous hurt caused whilst committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking	963

SECTIONS.

Page

460.	All persons jointly concerned in lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night punishable where death or grievous hurt caused by one of them	967
461.	Dishonestly breaking open receptacle containing property	967
462.	Punishment for same offence when committed by person entrusted with custody	968

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF OFFENCE RELATING TO DOCUMENTS AND TO TRADE OR PROPERTY MARKS.

463.	Forgery	968
464.	Making a false document	968
465.	Punishment for forgery	969
466.	Forgery of record of Court or of public register, etc.	969
467.	Forgery of valuable security, will, etc.	970
468.	Forgery for purpose of cheating	970
469.	Forgery for purpose of harming reputation	971
470.	Forged document	972
471.	Using as genuine a forged document	972
472.	Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable under section 467	999
473.	Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable otherwise	1000
474.	Having possession of document described in section 466 or 467, knowing it to be forged and intending to use it as genuine	1000
475.	Counterfeiting device or mark used for authenticating documents described in section 467, or possessing counterfeit marked material	1001
476.	Counterfeiting device or mark used for authenticating documents other than those described in section 467, or possessing counterfeit marked material	1003
477.	Fraudulent cancellation, destruction, etc., of will, authority to adopt, or valuable security	1003
477-A.	Falsification of accounts	1005

Of Trade, Property and other Marks.

478.	Trade mark	1009
479.	Property mark	1011
480.	Using a false trade mark	1011
481.	Using a false property mark	1014
482.	Punishment for using a false trade mark or property mark	1015
483.	Counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark used by another	1017
484.	Counterfeiting a mark used by a public servant	1018
485.	Making or possession of any instrument for counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark	1019
486.	Selling goods marked with a counterfeit trade mark or property mark	1020
487.	Making a false mark upon any receptacle containing goods	1022
488.	Punishment for making use of any such false mark	1023
489.	Tampering with property mark with intent to cause injury	1023

Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

SECTIONS.	PAGE
489-A. Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes	1024
489-B. Using as genuine, forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes .	1025
489-C. Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes ..	1025
489-D. Making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting currency notes or bank-notes	1026

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CRIMINAL BREACH OF CONTRACT OF SERVICE.

490. Breach of contract of service during voyage or journey	1028
491. Breach of contract to attend on and supply wants of helpless persons ..	1029
492. Breach of contract to serve at distant place to which servant is conveyed at master's expense	1036

CHAPTER XX.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO MARRIAGE.

493 Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage .	1031
494 Marrying again during life-time of husband or wife ..	1032
495. Same offence with concealment of former marriage from person with whom subsequent marriage is contracted	1041
496. Marriage ceremony fraudulently gone through without lawful marriage ..	1042
497. Adultery	1044
498. Enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman..	1048

CHAPTER XXI.

OF DEFAMATION.

499. Defamation	1054
Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made or published ..	1054
Public conduct of public servants	1056
Conduct of any person touching any public question	1055
Publication of reports of proceedings of Courts	1055
Merits of case decided in Court, or conduct of witnesses and others concerned ..	1055
Merits of public performance	1055
Censure passed in good faith by person having lawful authority over another ..	1056
Accusation preferred in good faith to authorized person	1056
Imputation made in good faith by person for protection of his or other's interests	1056
Caution intended for good of person to whom conveyed or for public good ..	1057
500. Punishment for defamation	1057
501. Printing or engraving matter known to be defamatory	1091
502. Sale of printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter ..	1092

CHAPTER XXII.

OF CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION, INSULT AND ANNOYANCE.

SECTIONS.	PAGE
503. Criminal intimidation	1091
504. Intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of the peace	1097
505. Statements conducing to public mischief	1099
506. Punishment for criminal intimidation.
If threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc.	1101
507. Criminal intimidation by an anonymous communication	1102
508. Act caused by inducing person to believe that he will be rendered an object of the Divine displeasure	1103
509. Word, gesture or act intended to insult the modesty of a woman	1104
510. Misconduct in public by a drunken person	1106

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT OFFENCES.

511. Punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with transportation or imprisonment	1108
---	------

EXPLANATIONS OF ABBREVIATIONS.

A. C.	.. Appeal Cases, Law Reports, from 1891—
A. H. C. G. R. (Cr.)	.. Allahabad High Court General Rules (Criminal), 1911.
A. & E.	.. Adolphus and Ellis, 1834—1840; New Series, 1841—1852.
A. L. J. R.	.. Allahabad Law Journal Reports, from 1904—
A. W. N.	.. Allahabad Weekly Notes, 1881—1906.
Agra	.. Agra High Court Reports, 1866—1868.
Alison	.. Alison's Criminal Law of Scotland.
All.	.. Indian Law Reports, Allahabad series, from 1876—
App.	.. Appendix.
Archbold	.. Archbold's Criminal Law (23rd Edn., 1905).
Austin	.. Austin's Jurisprudence.
Bacon	.. Bacon's Abridgment of the Law.
B. & A.	.. Barnwell and Alderson, 1817—1822, K. B.
Bac. Abt.	.. Bacon's Abridgment of the Law.
Beav.	.. Beavan's Reports, 1838—1866, Rolls.
Bentham	.. Bentham's Principles of Moral and Legislation.
Beng. L. R.	.. Bengal Law Reports, 1868—1875.
Bing.	.. Bingham's Cases, 1834—1840 C. P.
Bishop	.. Bishop's Criminal Law.
Blackstone	.. Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England.
Bom.	.. Indian Law Reports, Bombay Series, from 1876—
B. H. C.	.. Bombay High Court Reports, 1862—1875.
Bom. Cr. C.	.. Bombay High Court, Criminal Cases, from 1911—
Bom. Cr. Circu.	.. Bombay Criminal Circulars, 1915.
Bom. L. R.	.. Bombay Law Reporter, from 1899—
Boul.	.. Boulnois' Reports, 1862—1875, Calcutta.
B. & C.	.. Barnwell and Creswell, 1822—1830, K. B.
B & S.	.. Best and Smith, 1861—1869, Q. B.
Burma L. R.	.. Burma Law Reports, 1895—1908.
B. L. J.	.. Burma Law Journal, from 1922—
B. L. T.	.. Burma Law Times, from 1906—
Burr.	.. Burrow's Reports, 1757—1771, K. B.
Cal.	.. Indian Law Reports, Calcutta Series, from 1876—
Cald.	.. Caldecott's Settlement Cases.
C. L. J.	.. Calcutta Law Journal, from 1905—
C. L. R.	.. Calcutta Law Reports, 1875—1883
C. P. L. R.	.. Central Provinces Law Reports, from 1882—1905.
C. W. N.	.. Calcutta Weekly Notes, from 1896—
Camp.	.. Campbell's Reports, 1808—1816, N. P.
C. H. C. R. & O.	.. Calcutta High Court Rules and Circular Orders, 1910.
C. B.	.. Common Bench Reports, 1545—1856, C. P.
C. P.	.. Central Provinces Reports.
C. P. Cr. C.	.. Criminal Circulars issued by the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces and Berar, 1915.
C. P. D.	.. Common Pleas Division, Law Reports, 1875—1890

C. & K.	.. Carrington and Kirwan, 1843—1850, N. P.
Car. & M.	.. Carrington and Marshman, 1840—1842, N. P.
C. & M.	.. Croxapton and Meeson, 1832—1834, Exch.
C. & P.	.. Carrington and Payne, 1823—1841, N. P.
Ch. D.	.. Chancery Division, Law Reports , 1875—1890.
Cl. & F.	.. Clark and Finnelly, 1831—1846, N. P.
Coke	.. Coke's Reports, 1752—1816.
Collett	.. Collet's Comments on the Indian Penal Code.
Cox	.. Cox's Criminal Cases from 1843—
Cr. & J.	.. Crompton and Jervis, 1830—1832.
Cranch	.. Cranch's Reports, Supreme Court of the United States, 1800—1815.
Cr. R.	.. Criminal Rulings of the Bombay High Court, 1862—1910.
Crim. P. C.	.. Criminal Procedure Code, 1898.
Cro. Car.	.. Croke's Reports, in the reign of Charles I.
Cro. Eliz.	.. Croke's Reports in the reign of Elizabeth.
D. & B.	.. Dearsley and Bell, 1856—1858, Crown Cases.
D. & P.	.. Dearsley and Pearce's Crown Cases.
Day E. C.	.. Day's Election Cases.
Dears	.. Dearsley's Crown Cases, 1852—1856.
Den. Cr. C.	.. Dension's Crown Cases, 1844.
Doug.	.. Douglas's Reports, 1778—1784, K. B.
East	.. East's Reports, 1801—1812, K. B.
East P. C.	.. East's Pleas of the Crown
E. & B.	.. Ellis and Blackburn, 1852—1858, Q. B.
Esp.	.. Espinasse's Reports, 1793—1797, N. P.
Exch.	.. Exchequer Division, Law Reports , 1875—1890.
F. B.	.. Full Bench.
F. & F.	.. Foster and Finlayson, 1858—1867, N. P.
Foster	.. Foster's Crown Law.
Gaz. of Ind.	.. Proceedings of the Supreme Legislative Council, The Gazette of India Part VI.
Hagg.	.. Haggard's Reports.
Hale's P. C.	.. Hale's Pleas of the Crown.
Harc	.. Hare's Reports, 1841—1853.
Hawkins P. C.	.. Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown.
Hay	.. Hay's Reports, 1862—1863, Calcutta.
H. & C.	.. Hurlstone and Coltman, 1862—1865, Exch.
H. L.	.. House of Lords.
Hob.	.. Hobbart's Reports.
Hyde	.. Hyde's Reports, 1863—1864, Calcutta.
I. A.	.. Indian Appeals.
I. R.	.. The Irish Reports.
Ilbert	.. Ilbert's Government of India.
Ind. Jur. N. S.	.. Indian Jurist, New Series, 1866—1867, Calcutta.
.. " O S.	.. Indian Jurist, Old Series, 1862, Calcutta.
J. P.	.. Justice of the Peace, from 1836—
Kebl.	.. Keble's Reports, K. B.
Kel.	.. Sir John Kelyng's Reports, 1673—1706, K. B.
L. B. C. M.
L. B. K.
L. J. C. P.

L. J. Ch.	.. Law Journal Chancery.
.. Ex.	.. " " Exchequer.
.. M. C.	.. " " Magistrates' Cases.
.. Mat.	.. " " Matrimonial Cases.
.. P. M. & A.	.. " " Probate, Matrimonial and Admiralty.
.. Q. B.	.. " " Queen's Bench.
L. L. J.	.. Lahore Law Journal, from 1920—
L. R. C. P.	.. Law Reports, Common Pleas, 1866—1875
L. R. C. C. R.	.. " " Crown Cases Reserved.
.. Ch.	.. " " Chancery.
.. Ex.	.. " " Exchequer.
.. H. L.	.. " " House of Lords.
.. I. A.	.. " " Indian Appeals.
.. P.	.. " " Probate
.. Q. B.	.. " " Queen's Bench
L. & C.	.. Leigh and Cave's Crown Cases.
L. T.	.. Law Times, 1845—1858
L. T. N. S.	.. Law Times, New Series, from 1859—
L. W.	.. Law Weekly, Madras, from 1914—
Lah.	.. Indian Law Reports, Lahore Series, from 1920—
Lah. Cas.	.. Lahore Cases, from 1924—
Ld. Raym	.. Lord Raymond's Reports, 1694—1734, K. B. and C.
Leach	.. Leach's Crown Cases, 1730—1788.
Lee Warner	.. Lee Warner's Native States of India.
Lewin	.. Lewin's Crown Cases, 1822—1833
Livingstone	.. Livingstone's System of Penal Code for Louisiana
Lof.	.. Lofft's Reports, K. B.
Mad.	.. Indian Law Reports, Madras Series, from 1876—
Mad. Jur.	.. Madras Jurist.
M. H. C.	.. Madras High Court Reports, 1862—1875.
M. H. C. R. P.	.. Madras High Court Rules of Practice, 1912.
M. L. J. R.	.. Madras Law Journal Reports, from 1891—
M. L. J.	.. Madras Law Times, from 1906—
M. W. N.	.. Madras Weekly Notes, from 1910—
Marsh	.. { Marshall 1813—1816, C. P. .. { Marshall 1862—1863, Calcutta
Maxwell	.. Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes.
Mayne	.. Mayne's Criminal Law of India
M. Dig.	.. Morley's Digest, Calcutta.
M. & M.	.. Morgan and Macpherson's Indian Penal Code.
Mood Cr. C.	.. Moody's Crown Cases Reserved, 1824—1844.
M. I. A.	.. Moore's Indian Appeals, 1836—1873, P. C.
M. & Mal.	.. Moody and Malkin's Reports, 1827—1830.
M. & R.	.. Moody and Robinson, 1831—1844, N. P.
M. & Sel.	.. Maule and Selwyn, 1813—1817, K. B.
M. & W.	.. Meeson and Welby, 1836—1847, Exch.
Mod.	.. Modern Reports, 1669—1732, K. B.
N. A. C.	.. Nizamut Adawlat Cases, Bengal.
N. A. R.	.. Nizamut Adawlat Reports, Bengal.
N. L. R.	.. Nagpur Law Reports, from 1906—
Note	.. Notes appended to the Draft Penal Code 1836

- N. W. P. .. N. W. P. High Court Reports, 1862—1875
 O. C. .. Oudh Cases from 1804—
 O. S. C. .. Oudh Select Cases.
 O. C. D. .. Oudh Criminal Digest.
 O. M. & H. .. O'Malley & Hardcastle's Election cases.
 P. C. .. Privy Council.
 P. C. R. & O. .. Punjab Chief Court Rules and Orders, 1911.
 P. J. L. B. .. Printed Judgments of Lower Burma, 1803—1890
 P. L. C. .. Proceedings of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General of India.
 P. L. J. .. Patna Law Journal, from 1916—
 P. L. R. .. Punjab Law Reporter, from 1900—
 P. L. T. .. Patna Law Times, from 1920—
 P. L. W. .. Patna Law Weekly, from 1917—1918.
 P. R. .. Punjab Record, from 1862—1910.
 P. W. R. .. Punjab Weekly Reporter from 1906—
 Palm. .. Palmer's Reports 1610—1660, K. B.
 Parl. Rep. .. Parliamentary Reports.
 Pat. L. R. .. Patna Law Reporter, from 1923—
 Paterson .. Paterson on the Liberty of the subject.
 Perry O. C. .. Perry's Oriental Cases.
 Phillimore .. Phillimore on the International Law.
 Phillips .. Phillip's Comparative Criminal Jurisprudence.
 Price. .. Price's Reports, Exch.
 Q. B. .. Queen's Bench Law Reports, from 1691—
 Rang. .. Indian Law Reports, Rangoon Series, from 1923—
 Rep. 1st .. First Report on the Penal Code by the Indian Law Commissioners, 1840.
 Rep. 2nd .. Second Report on the Penal Code by the Indian Law Commissioners, 1847.
 R. J. P. J. .. Revenue, Judicial and Political Journal, Calcutta.
 R. R. .. Revised Reports.
 R. & R. .. Russell and Ryan's Crown Cases, 1799—1823.
 Rob. .. Robert's Reports.
 Roscoe .. Roscoe's Criminal Evidence.
 Russell .. Russell on Crimes and Misdemeanours.
 R. & R. .. Russell on Ryan's Crown Cases Reserved.
 S. J. L. B. .. Select Judgments, Lower Burma (1873—1892).
 Snk. .. Salkeld's Reports, 1669—1712.
 Stephen .. Stephen's History of the Criminal Law of England.
 Stephen Dig. Cr. L. .. Stephen's Digest of Criminal Law.
 Step. Com. .. Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England.
 Stokes .. Stokes' Anglo-Indian Codes.
 Str. .. Strange's Reports, 1795, K. B.
 St. Tr. .. State Trials.
 Sw. & Tr. .. Swabey and Tristram, 1858—1865.
 Sty. .. Style's Reports, K. B.
 Taunt. .. Taunton's Reports, 1807—1819, C. P.
 T. L. R. .. The Times Law Reports, from 1885—
 T. R. .. Durnford and East's Term Reports, 1785—1800, K. B.
 Tupper .. Tupper's Our Indian Protectorate.

Ubi sup	.. See above.
Unrep. Cr. C	.. Unreported Criminal Cases of the High Court of Bombay 1862—1898.
U. B. C. M.	.. Upper Burma Court Manual.
U. B. R.	.. Upper Burma Rulings, from 1892—
U. P. L. R.	.. United Provinces Law Reporter, from 1919—
Vent.	.. Ventries Reports, 1688—1691, K. B. & C. P.
Ves.	.. Veeey's Reports, 1789—1817.
Weir	.. Weir's Law of Offences and Criminal Law (4th Edition, 1905).
Wharton	.. Wharton's Law Lexicon.
Wilson	.. Wilson's Reports, 1805—1817, K. B. & C. P.
W. R.	.. Sutherland's Weekly Reporter, 1862—1875, Calcutta.
W. R. Cr. L.	.. Sutherland's Weekly Reporter, Criminal Letters.
W. R. (Eng.)	.. Weekly Reports, (Eng), 1882—1906.
Wym. Cr.	.. Wyman's Revenue and Criminal Rulings.

(3) That he so delivered it, or attempted to induce some one to receive it, as a genuine coin, or as a coin of a different description.

(4) That at the time he did so, he knew that it had been operated upon.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, delivered to AB (or attempted to induce AB to receive) as genuine a coin, to wit—, in respect of which an operation as is mentioned in s. 246 (or s. 247 or 248 or 249) of the Indian Penal Code, to wit—, had been performed, and you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 254 of the Indian Penal Code and with in my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

255. Whoever counterfeits,¹ or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any stamp² issued by Government³ for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A person commits this offence who counterfeits by causing a genuine stamp of one denomination to appear like a genuine stamp of a different denomination.

COMMENT.

The remaining sections of this Chapter deal with offences relating to Government stamps. These stamps are impressions upon paper, parchment, or any material used for writing made by Government, mostly for the purpose of revenue.

This section is similar to s. 241 which deals with counterfeiting of coins.

1. 'Counterfeits.'—See s. 28, supra. Engraving a stamp, like in some part to a genuine stamp, and unlike in others, and then cutting out the unlike parts, and concealing the part cut out, amounts to counterfeiting a stamp.¹

2. 'Stamp.'—This word is used in this and the following sections to denote the impression or mark set upon the paper, parchment, etc. It includes postage stamps.²

The word 'stamp' must be construed according to its ordinary meaning in the English language. An obliterated stamp can be a stamp in the ordinary use of the English language. A stamp does not cease to be a stamp because it is cancelled. A person selling a forged stamp, although it bears a cancellation mark, commits an offence of selling forged stamps.³

3. 'Government.'—See s. 17, supra, and 263-A (4), infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the counterfeit was that of a stamp issued by Government for the purposes of revenue.

(2) That the accused made such counterfeit; or that he knowingly performed any part of the process of counterfeiting.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session

¹ Thomas Colloid, (1811.) 2 Leach 1048.

² Indian Post Office Act, VI of 1826, s. 4.

³ 16 and 17.

⁴ London, [1911] 1 K. B. 147.

Adil Mohamed	295, 641	Alfred Solomons	1006
Adinarayana Iyer	854	Algarsawmy Tevan	788
Adivigadu	869	Algoo Lal	367
Administrator-General of Bengal v. Prem Lal Mullick	13	Ali Hasan	979
Adu Shikdar	651, 788	„ Husain	799, 805
Afruddi Chokdar	175	„ Mirza	56, 831
Afridi	836	„ Muhammad	588
Agha Mahomed Yusuf	790	„ Raza	144
Agnes Hamilton	806	Alibhai	371
Agora Maistri	377	Alim Sheikh v. Sahazada Singh Burkundaz	102, 724
Agra .. 191, 288, 289, 656, 691		Alingal Kunhinayan	184, 191
Ahad Shah	43, 319, 1118	Alison	677
Ablers	334	Alla Baksh	345, 737, 918
Ahmad	1049	Alladad	288
Ahmad Husain Khan	346	Alla Ditta (4 L. L. J. 276)	58, 640
„ Khan	451	Alladitta (P. R. No. 29 of 1882)	940, 943
„ Shah	511, 516	Allah Baksh	737
Ahmada	902	„ Rakha	59
Ahmed (P. W. R. No. 23 of 1913).	650	„ Wasai	366, 396
„ (1 L. C. 454)	426	Allen (1 Mood. Cr. C. 494)	24
„ Ali	970, 972	„ (7 C. & P. 153)	7, 559
„ Ally	406	„ (9 C. & P. 31)	780
Ahmedkhan	768, 769, 776	„ (3 Cox 270)	783
Ahone Akong	496	„ (10 Cox 405)	24
Ahsan Ali	484	„ (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 367)	1034
Aidrus Sahib	393	„ v. Allen	1045
Aijaz Husain	492, 494	„ v. Lloyd	541
Aiman	611	Ali Abbas v. Subba Singh	917
Aimona	142, 143	„ Mirza	839
Ainuddi Chowkidar	612	Alia	875
Aiyannagowd	928	Ali	1040
Aiyavu	653	Allington Elliot	579
Aja Narsang	735	Alison	1039
Ajita	836	Allport v. Nutt	583
Ajudhia	65, 103, 111	Allu	499, 1121
Ajudhia Parshad	318	Ally Kurream v. Teignmouth	1076
Akal Mahomed	638	Alme and Nott	1062
Akbar Ali	755	Alraja Naidu	1080
„ Kazeer	779	Alsop	102
„ Khan	1016	Altat Hossein v. Tasuddook	1067
„ Molla	291	Altat Mian	740
„ Momin	738	Althauvan	1039
Akhoy Kumar v. Jagut Chander	812	Alu Kala	[882, 884]
Akhoy Singh v. Rameshwar Bagdi.	914	Alya Dhurma	1096
Alulpatter Gossain	626	Aman	638
Ala Baksh	1070	Amanat	591
Alazu Kone	395	Amarsang Jetha	178, 723
Alam Shah v. Jewan	1036	Amar Singh (1 L. L. J. 173)	1132, 1133
Alamramonjori v. Sonamoni	13	Amavajaya Chinnu v. Marri Poliah.	951
Alawal	149, 150	Amba Prasad	215, 253
Ali-Sinab	123, 181	Ambika Charan Sarkar	916
Alions v. Cornwall	940	„ Lal	183, 185, 196
Alfred	217, 220	„ Prasad Singh	993
Alex Pimenton	1064	„ Singh	173, 243, 239, 691
Alexander Boffe	675

Amcer Abbas Ali v. Omed Ali ..	812	Anderson v. Gorrie..	1076
„ Khan (12 W. R. 35) ..	657	„ v. McQueen ..	372
„ „ (17 W. R. 15) ..	200	Andi ..	361
„ „ in re (6 B. L. R. 392). 131		„ Servai ..	434
„ „ „ ..	635, 640	Andrews v. Chapman ..	1070
Amecroddeen ..	236, 237	Andy Chetty ..	199, 362, 363, 395
Ameeruddi Pramanick ..	102	Aneesudeen Meha ..	84
Amelia Taylor ..	976	Angappanasari ..	313
Amere Ali Khan ..	404, 406	Anglo-American Oil Co. Ltd. v.
Amgad Bugeah ..	745, 748	„ Manning ..	8
Amina (Unrep. Cr. C. 607) ..	688	Anis Beg ..	690, 691, 705
„ (7 Mad. 277) ..	766	Ann Coxhead ..	688
Aminulla ..	290	Annakumar v. Mutu Payal ..	793
Amir Chand (P. R. No. 24 of 1889). 432		Anna Laxman ..	924, 925
„ „ (P. R. No. 9 of 1878). 918		Annamalai Odayar ..	797
„ Hasan ..	173, 1065	Annappa Bharumgauda ..	204
„ Jan ..	345	Annasami Aiyangar ..	1006, 1007
Amir Khan (9 B. L. R. 36) ..	235	Annavi ..	216
„ (P. L. R. No. 183 of 1913). 736		Annawdin ..	492
„ Singh ..	1090	Anne Wycherley ..	680
Amirkhan (Unrep. Cr. C. 273) ..	387	Annu Khan ..	107
Amiraddi ..	383, 385	Anon. (3 Camp. 76) ..	680
Amiruddeen ..	472	„ (1 Cox 250) ..	515
Amiruddin ..	231	„ (1 Lewin 300) ..	820
„ Salebboy..	198, 317, 319	„ (1 Mad. 55) ..	34
Amolak Ram ..	401	„ (1 Weir 31) ..	85
Amrit Lal ..	859	„ (1 Weir 34) ..	98
„ Sonar ..	504 510	„ (1 Weir 38) ..	110, 111
Amrita Bazar Patrika (17 C. W. N. 1253) ..	35	„ (1 Weir 39) ..	110
„ „ (30 C. L. J. 289) ..	245, 251, 306, 1114	„ (1 Weir 453) ..	843
Amrita Govinda ..	217	Anookool Chunder Nundy..	1010, 1014
„ Lal Bose v. Corporation of Calcutta ..	60	Anta Dadoba ..	693
„ Lal Hazra ..	226, 228, 229, 371, 1132	Antakke ..	686
Anand Lal Bera ..	371	Anthony ..	554, 555
Ananda Bhau ..	648, 671	„ Rogers ..	1061
„ Lal Mullick ..	452	„ Udayan ..	540
„ Lavman Babaji ..	804	Antony ..	1035
„ Muttusami Aiyar ..	915	Anumantan ..	183
Anandappa Nadan ..	377	Anunto Rurnagat ..	167, 612
Anandi ..	151, 165	Anvarkhan ..	103
Anandrao B. Rangnekar ..	1073, 1074	Anverkhan Mahamadkhan ..	427, 475, 476
Ananga Mohan Dutta ..	367	Apalu ..	625, 648
Anant Pandit v. Madhusudan ..	288	Apaya Tatoba Munde ..	443
„ Ram ..	411, 953	Appa Malya ..	436
„ Shitaram ..	383, 386	Appaiya Goundan ..	914
„ Vinayak Puranik ..	1124	Appaji Narayan ..	327
Ananta Kernaya ..	346	„ bin Yadavrao ..	43, 317
Anantha Goundan ..	1090	Appalasami ..	66, 807
Anantnarayana Pattar ..	568	Appanna Hegade ..	203
Anath Nath Dey ..	1010	Appasami ..	889, 900, 901, 978
Anantpur v. Kalekhan ..	13	„ Mudahar ..	494
Anderson ..	23, 24, 25	„ Muri-ami ..	537
		Appaswamy Mudali ..	494
		Appavu Nayak ..	288
		Appayya ..	66, 257, 258

Appalsawmy	677	Ata Husain	1096
Apurba Krishna Bose ..	257, 259	" Muhammad	290
Aradhun Mundul v. Myan Khan..	48,	Atar Ali	451
	788	Ata-ullah v. Azimullah ..	591
Arayi'	43, 45	Athi Ayyar	47, 917
Araz Sircar	921	Athimoolam Pillai v. Palaniandi ..	928
Archer	874	Athinarayanasamy Pillai v. Subbier	927, 929
Ardeshir Merwanji	856		218
Ardley	897	Attaram	182, 290
Arfan Ali	788	Attiya	493
Arjan Mal'	356	Attorney-General v. Corporation of
" Parmanick	734, 738	Nottingham 541, 544
Arjun (1 B. H. C. 87)	443, 455	" v. Great Eastern
" (7 Bom. 184)	443	Ry. Co.	13
" Suie	493	" v. Richmond	544
Armugam Chetti	927	" v. Siddon	9
Arnold (16 St. Tr. 695)	146	" v. Terry	564
" (16 Bom. L. R. 544)	1061	" v. Tod Heatley	563
Arscott	997	Attorney-General for B. Colombia
Arshad Molla	828	v. Att.-Genl. for Canada	14
Arshed Ali	1051	Attorney-General for Hong Kong v.
Artu Rautra	794	Kwok-a-Sing	29
Arumuga Nadan	346	Attria	607, 617, 655
" Nadar	718, 723	Auba bin Bhivrao	498
Arunachalla Achari	944	Audheen Roy	392, 405
Arunachalam Chetty	1052	Audley's case	780
Arunachella Thevan	824, 829	Augada Ram v. Nemai Shaha ..	1082
Arunachellam	679, 771		1083
Arunja Bawa	679	Aung Do	236
Afura (P. R. No. 31 of 1903) ..	80	Austin v. Dowling	721
" (1 Gr. L. J. R. 89)	826	Autar	427
" (P. L. R. No. 299 of 1913)	54, 896, 1119	Autor Singh	647
Arzao Bebee	165	Avudayappa Mudaliar	943
Asa	735, 736	Axtell	122
" Nand	409	Aydrooss	295
" Ram	912	Ayshabai	748
Asgar Ali	749	Ayya Annasamy Aiyar	180, 282
Asghar Ali	89	Ayyaperumal	649
Asha Gopal	631, 658	Ayyaswami Iyer v. Annan Thiru-
Ashraf Ali	484	mal	1075
Ashrof Ali	67	Azeemoola	499
Ashutosh Mallick	909	Azibulla Sarcar v. Uday Sonthal ..	404
Ashwell	842	Azimooddeen	54, 993
Asia	25	Aziz-ud-din	331, 332
Asimuddi Sheikh	993, 993		B
Asiruddin Ahmed	637, 619, 700	B. Appalasami	807
Askur	287, 751	B. Suraj Bakhsh Singh	355
Asmatulla Sirdar	352, 353	Ba Nyun	383
Asrabuddin Sarkar v. Kalidyal		" Shein	907
Mullick'	991	" Tin	361
Assam v. Patthuma	13	Babaji (17 Bom. 127)	1078
Assa Nand v. Hoossein Buksh ..	513	" (22 Bom. 769)	380
Assan Shurreff	489	" bin Bhau	856
Asvini Kumar Roy	876
Asvini Kumar Chatterji	907

Baban Khan Mhaskoji	473	Baines	874
Babbon Sheikh	292	Baisakhi	440
Baboo Gunnesh Dutt v. Mugnee- ram Chowdhry	1076, 1079	Baishtab Charan Das v. Upendra Nath Mitra	551
„ Moonda	707, 708	Baistab Charan Shaba	722
Baboolun Hijrah	163, 166, 169, 608, 642, 662	Baji	689
Babu Lal	8	Bajo Huri	876
Babulal Kanaiyalal	43	Bajoo Singh	39, 43, 290
Babu Ram	391, 400, 404	Bajrangji Gope	287, 290
„ Santu Jadan	557	Bakar Halsana v. Dinobandhu Biswas	918, 920
Baburam Kanasari	833, 881	Baker	401, 402
„ Rai	889, 892	„ v. Snell	571
„ Raut	177, 189	Bakhan	662
Bacha Miah	987	Bakhshi	365
Bachu Mullah v. Sia Ram Singh ..	291	Bakhtawar (P. R. No. 24 of 1882) ..	207, 673, 1111
Badal Aurut	1033, 1039	„ (1 L. C. 56)	790
Badam Singh	372	„ Lal	1099
Badan Singh	977	„ Singh	909
Badiya	1193	Bakhtawari	688
Badri Prasad (10 A. L. J. 473) ..	998	Bakhshi Ram	380, 383, 386
„ „ (40 All. 35)	401, 403	Baku	203, 208, 771, 1109, 1113
„ „ (44 All. 538)	75, 823	Bakulla Mallik	1010, 1014
Bag	187, 637	Baku Tukaram	20
Bahadur (P. R. No. 14 of 1886) ..	80	Bal Gangadhar Tilak (22 Bom. 112) 236, 244, 245, 248, 252, 253, 255, 256, 259, 1060
Bahadur (P. R. No. 7 of 1881) ..	758	Bal Gangadhar Tilak (22 Bom. 125) ..	13, 250, 253
„ (P. R. No. 34 of 1882) ..	223	„ „ (6 Bom. L. R. 324) ..	391, 406
„ Khan	113	„ „ (10 Bom. L. R. 848)	245, 251, 255, 306
Bahal	183, 737	„ „ (19 Bom. L. R. 211)	247, 254, 256
„ Singh	59	Bal Gobind Shaha	863
Bahawal (P. R. No. 7 of 1891) ..	924	Bal Krishna Gir	421
„ (P. R. No. 17 of 1913) ..	111	Bala (Unrep. Cr. C. 160)	429
Bahirji bin Krishnaji	72, 725	„ (Unrep. Cr. C. 627)	974
Bahiru	880, 881	Bala bin Kashaba	368
Bahubal Sircar	494	Balabhai Hargovind	802
Bai Baya	921	Balakee Jolahed	196, 637
„ Ganga	1035	Balaku Vithu	902
„ Jiba	609	Balambal	210, 1051
„ Mahakor	751	Balayya	866
„ Rukshmoni	1040	Baldeo Brahmin	107
„ Rupa	1033, 1034	„ Prasad	755
„ Samrath	719	„ Sahai	316, 320, 1118
„ Shanta v. Umrao Amir ..	1078	Baldewa (23 All. 372)	50
Baij Nath (P. W. R. Cr. No. 58 of 1914)	804	„ (26 A. W. N. 52)	870
„ (1 O. W. N. 588)	280, 299	Bali	557
„ v. Burgess	899	Bali Reddi	625
Baijnath Dhanuk	178, 186, 187	Balkrishna	1078
„ Kedia	257	„ Govind Kulkarni	35
Baikanta Bauri	393
Bailey (R. & R. 1)	129
„ (L. R. 1 C.C.R. 347)	787
„ (12 Cox 56)	803
Baillie	743
Bailiffs of Romney Marsh v. Corpo- ration of Trinity House	560

Balkrishna Nabar Velhankar	920, 938, 947	Barendra Kumar Ghosh (28 C. W. N. 170)	56
" " Vaman Kulkarni	49, 983	Barindra Kumar Ghose	232, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240
Ball (6 Cox 360)	406	Barkat	396
" (R. & R. 132)	997	" Ali	877
Balls	851	" Ram	409
Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram	942, 951, 959, 1105	Barkatulla	620, 627, 629, 655
Balmokand	228, 229	Barkatullah v. Satho Kalwar	450
Balmokoond Brojobasi	435	Barlow v. Terrett	550
Balos alias Hussain Sahib	791, 799	Barnard	333, 901
Balraj Kunwar v. Jagatpal	13	Barnardo v. McHugh	748
Balthasar	851, 852, 859	Baroda Kanta Sarkar	400
Balu	153	" Kanto Pramanick	375
Balunki	557	Baron Lionel De Rothschild v. The United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co.	564
Balwant	977	Barra v. Tilbikram Chettri	857
" Singh	30	Barratt	167, 778
Balya Somya	879	Barrett	752
Baman	504	Barronet and Allain	129
Ban U	623	Barrow v. Issacs & Sons	126
Bana Punja	99, 100	Barthwick v. Barthwick	750
Banaji Framji Munshi	909	Bartlett v. Parker	584
Bandhu (22 A. L. J. R. 340)	651	Barton (16 Cal. 238)	29
" (8 All. 51)	793, 842, 843, 873	" (3 Cox 275)	147
" (Unrep. Cr. C. 689)	954, 959, 961	Basant Lall	487
Bandu Ibrahim	722	" Rai	819
Banee Madhup Ghose	862, 864	Basapa	620
Banessur Biswas	990	Basappa Shivappa	435
Banga Hadua	291	Basat Ali	349
Bangaru	1052	Basava	771
Bank of Bengal v. Mendes	803	Basava Chary	1046
" New South Wales v. Piper	137	Basdeo Singh	927
Bankatram Lachiram	406, 409	Bashika Chari	946
Bankay Behary Singh	736	Bashir Ahmad Khan	873
Banks, In re	35, 1068	Basina Appanna v. Peta Akkamma	1059, 1090
Bannen	509, 677, 798	Bassoo Rannah	102, 694
Banni	102, 684	Basumati Adhikarini v. Budram	1073
Bansi	919	Kolita	689
" Panday	407, 409	Batesar Mandal	395
" Sheikh	993	Bateshar	98, 697
Bansi Lal v. Ali Muhammad	1050	Batty	807
Banwari Karmakar v. Gosto Behary	929	Batwa Khan	1112
" Lal	52	Bava Chela	801, 875
Bapu	886	Bavaji	886, 907
" Daldi	19, 20	Bavuri Magata	915
" Jaga	541	Bawaji	692
" Naran	407	Bawool Manjee	807
" Yadav	503, 505	Baya	921
Bapuji Bechar	383	Bayaji Natha	986
" Dayaram	393, 395, 424, 441	Bayne	34, 72, 559
Barclay v. Pearson	584	Baz	761
Bardot v. Augusta	25
Barendra Kumar Ghosh (27 Bom. L. R. 148)	56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 62, 198, 216, 278

Bazid	939	Bhagai Dafadar	42, 374, 375
Beacall	860	Bhagan	684, 686
Beale	778	Bhagava Giniyappa ..	716
Beamish v. Beamish ..	1039	Bhagi	554
Beard	157	Bhagiram Dome v. Abar Dome	283,
Beatty v. Gillbanks ..	282		793, 840, 918
Beauchamp v. Moore ..	1090	Bhagirath	651, 775
Bechar Anop	183	Bhagtidas Bhagvandas ..	377
Bechoo Saout	631, 632, 634, 712	Bhagu Dhondi	1016
Beckett	924	Bhagu : Vishnu	799, 851
Beegun Mahton	439, 441	Bhagvat Jha	283
Begarayi Krishna	142	„ Saran Misir	788
Begu	429	Bhagwan Bakhsh	309
Begum	541	„ Chhagan	712
Behala Bibi	426	„ Das	1120
Beharee Lal Bose	408	„ v. Saddiq Ahmad ..	1098
Behari	1065	„ Deoraj	321
„ Lal	8	„ Din	624, 673, 701, 943, 944
„ Maharaj	748	„ Kuar	650
„ Mahton	292, 299	„ Singh	101, 291
Behary Singh	478, 721	„ v. Arjun Dutt	122
Beja	836	„ v. Secretary of
Bell	511	State	130
Bellingham's case	145	Bhagwana	68
Bengal Government Letter	91	Bhagwandas Kanji	317, 318
Beni	541, 830	Bhagwandin Singh	101, 291
„ Bhushan Roy	254	Bhagwant	829, 830, 831
„ Chamar	110	„ v. Kedari	49
„ Madhav Chakravarti ..	563	Bhagwantia	393
„ Pershad	85	Bhagwati Sahai	45
Benito Lopez	24	Bhagya	594
Benjamin v. Alson	677	Bhai Lal Chowdhry	182
„ Benjamin	1039	Bhaiji	902
„ Bonnen	509, 798	Bhairab Chandra Barua ..	446
„ Storr	541	Bhairab Misser	411
Bennett (8 Cox 74)	567	Bhairon Misr	173
„ (4 F. & F. 1105)	167	Bhaishankar v. Wadia ..	1077
Bentley	199	Bhajan	393
Bepin Behari Guha v. Pranakul		Bhakosa Tutum	497
„ Majumdar	281	Bhala Chula	712
Bepin Chandra Pal	360	Bhana	1052
Berckefeld	555	Bhanwar	111
Berriman	688	Bharat Bopari	606
Besant	252, 253, 254	Bharma bin Ningappa ..	392, 400, 405
„ v. Advocate-General of		Bhatos	877
Madras	247, 307	Bharosa	111, 1125
Beshor Bawa	690	Bhaskar Balwant Bhopathar	218,
Bethan Chetti	542		220, 251, 252, 253, 254, 256
Bethell v. Bethell	1033	Bhau bin Vitha	383
Betts v. Stevens	376	Bhau Vyankatesh	386
„ and Mahomed	399	Bhauing Jalameing	419
Bhaluti	855	Bhavani Modabhyar	499
Bhadoo Paramanick	606	Bhavambhakar	978
Bhadu	655	Bhavambhakar Hanthlan	411
Bhag Singh	864, 865	Bhavani	821
		Bhawani Day	1047, 1052

Bhawani Prasad	455	Bhutan	662
Bhawoo Jivaji v. Mulji Dayal .. 69,		Bhutia	775
127, 181, 375, 722		Bhyri Rajayya	651
Bhedwar v. Rao Shabat C. S. R.		Bhyrub Seal	102
Rao	896	Bibhuti Bhusan Biswas v. Bhuban
Bheema Goundan	587	Ram	9, 540, 541
Bhekye	634	Bibi	1031, 1040
Bheleka Aham	148	„ Imambandi v. Haji Motasuddi.	1038
Bhicajee	788	Bibudhanand Chakravarti ..	1006
Bhika Lala	445, 454	Bichitrnund Dass v. Bhugbhat ..	2
Bhikaaji	366	Bichuk Aheer v. Auhuck Bhooneea	102
Bhikaji	1073	Bhidhoomookhee Dabce v. Sree-
Bhikam	661	nath Haldar	752
Bhikam Singh	947	Bikka Mal	535
Bhikhi	782	Biku Koer v. W. J. Marshman ..	280
Bhima	802	Bilace	688
Bhimde Pandu Doli	768	Billinghurst v. Blackburn ..	228, 910
Bhimrao Narsimha	317, 319	Bimala Charan Roy	851, 861
Bhista bin Madanna	11	Bindeshri Singh	396
Bhitto Kahar	434	Bingeley	62, 216, 981
Bhoirub Chunder Datta	383	Binod	298
Bhoja	826	Bipra Das Giri v. Niradamoni Bewa.	859
Bhokteram v. Heera Kolita	443	Birbal Khalifa	733, 734, 737
Bhola	354	Birbul v. Sawan	1038
„ Mahto	181, 183	Birchall	630, 661
„ Nath Dutt v. Hari Mohan		Bird v. Jones	720, 721
Dutt	453	Birendra Lal Bhaduri	907
„ Nath Mitter	1048	„ Nath Das Gupta	413
„ Singh	610, 622	Birjoo Singh v. Khub Lall ..	178, 280
Bholanath	348	Birraj Marwari	887
„ Bannerjee	562	Birkett	997
Bholasingh Amersingh	908	Birn	651
Bholay Pramanik	997	Bishambar Das v. Gobind Das ..	1076
Bhole Singh	400	„ Lal	383
Bholu (23 All. 124)	838	Bishan Das (27 All. 561) ..	896, 898
„ (7 A. L. J. R. 991)	412, 453	„ „ (P. R. No. 33 of 1910).	905
Bhona	834, 837	„ Prasad	373
Bhonu Lal v. Vincent	985	Bishen Das	507
Bhoobuneshwar Dutt	346	Bishendhareo Kahar	150, 628
Bhoodea	754	Bisheshar (9 All. 645)	100, 291,
Bhow	942		294
Bhuan Kahar	453	„ (16 All. 124)	450
Bhuban Mohan v. Tansuk Roy		„ Dayal	981
Seraogi	918	Bishnu Banwar	879
Bhudarmull v. Ramchunder	851	Bishnooram Surma	694
Bhugwan Ahir	418, 450	Bishoo Manjee	880
Bhuita Santal v. Dama Santal	2, 753	„ Barik	446
Bhujabali Ahappa Gorwadi	469	Bishop	127
Bhujang	345	„ of Oxford	13
Bhula	865	Bishwa Nath v. Keshab Gandha-
Bhungee Ahur	745, 748	banik	1058, 1091
Bhunjun Pauray	293	Bisi Behari	384
Bhup Singh	291	Bissar Misser	736
Bhura Ahir	829	Bissessur Roy	844
Bhuran	684, 685, 686	Bissorunjun Mookerjee	781
Bhut Nath Dome	189	Bisu Haldar	182, 183

Bissuram Koiree	1033	Bren	808
Bithal Nath	386	Brice	950
Bjornsen	24	Briggs	1037
Blades v. Higgs	792	Brij Basi	942, 953
Bleasdale	207	„ Mohan Lal	474
Blenkinsop v. Ogden	559	„ Nandan Pandey	878
Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co.	558, 659	Brinbadhur Putnaik	868
Boaler	445	Brindaban Chander v. Ishaquddin	1089
Bodapati Pentadu	472, 482	Brinkley v. Attorney-General	1033
Bodh Kisben Goala	788	Brisac	200
Bodhee Khan	156	British American Tobacco Co. v. Mahoob Buksh	1010
Bodmin Election Petition	336	Britt v. Robinson	10
Bogra	407, 410	Brojo Bashi Panda	447
Bohra Birbal	350	„ Nath Ghose	384, 386
Boidnath Singh	805, 807	Brojonarain Pubraj	572
Bojjigan	486	Bromage v. Prosser	301, 477, 547
Bokoo Sheikh	290	Brooks	794
Bolai De	489, 735	„ v. Mason	8, 128
Bolton	392	Brown (Car. & M. 314)	379
Bombay Burma, etc., Co. v. Mirza	131	„ (24 Q. B. D. 357)	784, 1111, 1117
Bond v. Evans	10	„ (10 Q. B. D. 391)	674
Bondili Sankara Singh	202	„ (L. R. 1. C. C. R. 211)	689
Bongiri Pottigadu	834	„ (2 Leach. 775, 2 East P. C. 963, 965)	982
Bonnen	509, 798	„ v. Ananda Lal Mullick	370
Bonomally Ghose	826	„ v. Foot	9
„ Sohail	445	Browne v. Dawson	937
Bontien	982	Bruce	24
Boober	511	Bryan	897
Boodh Das	156, 158	Bucha	428
Boodhooa	79, 80	Budamsa Rauther v. Fatema Bi	1035, 1039
Boodhun Ahir	412, 414	Budda Reddi	928
Borron	123	Buddha	367
Bosley v. Davies	8	Buddhu v. Babu Lal	858
Bostan	1117	Buddruddeen	651
„ valad Fatekhan	137	Budh Lal	873
Bottomley v. Director of Public Prosecutions	582	„ Sen	365, 367
Boulting v. Boulting	1045	„ Singh	102, 103, 782, 920, 944
Bowers	808	Budha	918, 923
Boxsius v. Goblet Freres	1059	Budhankhan Inayatkhan	883
Boya Munigadu	634	Budho	614
„ Sunkulamma	685	Budhu	1051
Boyan	707	Budhu v. Must. Lachminis	272
Boyle v. Smith	8	Budhun Rujwar	112, 222
Boystum Moochee	844	Budhya	662
Boragellaya	755	Budri Roy	693, 700
Bradford	376	Budrod Hossein	722
Bradshaw	160, 161	Bulaki Ram	410
Brace's case	511	Bulatia	1019
Brailindoo Singh	593	Bullo	710
Brailford	893	„ Postal	875
Braro Kishore Dutt	915	Bull	277
Bramanand v. Bhuttacharjee	447	Bullaya Goud	725
Brandy	796	Bullock	925
Braw	1034

	576
	807
	407
	21, 25
	336
	157
	845
	778
	505
	231
	176, 185, 190
	1084
	670, 1108
	826, 881
	872 162
	979
	313
	546
	1032
	321
	573
	392 400
	738
	146
	486
	830
	580, 581
	1084
	1033
	398
	662
	571, 572
	204
	211
	745
	774
	920
	610, 640
	827
	111
	34,
	423, 1115
	943
	346
	1120
	98, 950

C

C. Bashika Chari	946
C. G. D. Betts and Mahomed ..	309
C. Kelly	697
C. Srinivasan	900, 972, 1109
Cabbage	788
Cadd	853
Calhoun v. Mathews	546
Cain	797
Calder v. Halket	123, 124
Callachand	99
Cama v. Morgan	733
Caminada v. Hulton	585
Campbell v. Lang	557
" v. Spottiswood	069
Camplin	778
Canniff	60
Car (Robert)	9
Carley
Carlile (3 B. & Ald. 167
" (6 C. & P. 636)

Chandu Lal	155	Chhotalal v. Nathabhai	1090
„ Singh	758	Chhotalal Babar	30, 31, 56
Chandulla Sheikh	185	„ Babar (2)	210
Changia	806	Chhote Lal	941, 942
Changu	411	Chhotey	51
Channing Arnold	1061	Chhoti Bi	445
Chanvova Shidram	72, 677	Chiareddi Munayya	650
Chapman	889	Chidambaram Pillai	259, 260
„ v. Cripps	557	„ „ v. Muhammad	928
Chappu Menon	500	Khan Sahib	449, 452
Charles Fletcher	778	Chidra	27, 28
„ Gogery	217	Chief Officer of SS. „ Mushtari	1097
„ Holmes	545, 579	Chikati Gururadu	348
„ James	973	Chikka Honappa	19
„ Lister	855	Chill	215, 872, 1112
„ Moore	541, 545	Chima	3
„ Nash	50	Chimanlal	582
„ Naylor	402, 973	Chimanlal Pranjivandas	653
Charoo Chunder Mutty	939	Chinia Bhika Koli	941
Charu Chandra Ghose	54, 909	Chinkwana	850
„ Nayiah	937, 944	Chinna Karuppa Muppan	487
Chatar Singh	826, 830	„ Madakudumban	446, 448
Chattar Singh (2 All. 33)	648	„ Ramana Goud	938
„ „ (5 A. W. N. 43)	349	„ Thoyi	449
Chatter Lal v. Thacoor Pershad	45, 374	„ Venkayya	476
Chatter Singh Damai	942, 961	Chinnakannu Udayan	550
Chatterton v. Parker	557	Chinniah	801
Chatradhari Goala	216, 217	Chiraguddin	558
Chatur	964	Chisholm v. Doulton	618
Chatur Natha	695	Chit Tha	1096
Chaturbhuj	813	Chithraputtra Pillai v. Parvati	377
Cheafor	794	Chitta Konaiya	466
Cheda Lal (3 A. W. N. 170)	375	Chittar	837
„ „ (29 All. 351)	393	Chittu	793
Chedi	411, 448	Chockalingam Pillai	843
Chedi Lal	1089	Chodapa	482
Cheeseman (7 C. & P. 455)	609	Choghatta	550
„ (L. & C. 140)	1114, 1115	Chokraj Marwari	925
„ (9 Cox 106)	1121	Cholay	937
Cheetour Chowkeedar	431	Chooramoni Sant	37
Chekutty	744	Chorlan v. Lings	499
Chellam Naidu v. Ramasami	1090	Chota Hurry Pramanick	391
Chemon Garo	1047, 1052	„ Jadub Chunder	112
Chengama Naidu	928	Chote Lal	918
Chennanna Gowd	396	Chotually	1085
Chenchugadu	568, 569	Chrestien	744, 745
Chenna Malli Gowda	446	Christian Ollifer	24
Cheranji Lal v. Ram Lal	412	„ Sattler	763
Cheria Koya	3	Chubbooa	1132
Chetsingh	356	Chuckkapalli Ramayya	634
Chetter	846, 858	Chuha	650
Cheverton	650	Chuhar Singh	917
Cheddi Upadhy	449	Chulban Ahir	609, 712
Chhajju	913	Chullundee Poramsnick	91
Chhakoo Mandal	944, 945	Chunder Coomar Mitter v. Modhoo- soodun Dey
Chhedi Singh	294

Damodhar Dalji	537	Daya Ram (P. L. R. No. 64 of 1914)	441
Damodhar Ramachandra Kulkarni	393	" (P. R. No. 16 of 1885)	993
Damri	471	Dayabhai Narotamdas	1096
Damri Ram	352	Dayabhai Parjaram	900
Damu Haree	111	Dayalji Endarji	363
Danappa Narsappa	411, 412	De Cruz	389, 1104
Danesh v. Tafir	1016	" Marny	576
Dangar Khan	107, 820, 831	" Munck	770
Dani	697	" Silva	873
Daniel Flaherty	1038	" Souza	661, 663
" Grove	920	" Sylva	15
" Groves	939	" Wilton v. Montefiore	1039
" Randall	970	Deana	191
Dant (L. & C. 567)	665	Debendra Chandra v. Mohini
" (10 Cox 102)	559, 661	" Mohan	723
Darba	88, 90	" Nath v. Bhagirath	1079
Daria Khan	366	" " Upadhaya v. Bhagrathu	432
Daroga Gope	370, 455	" Prasad	904, 908, 910
" Jha	412	Debi (29 All. 377)	483
Das (W. C.)	982, 1003	" (16 A. L. J. R. 105)	369
Dasarathi Mahapatra v. Ragubh		" Das	796
Sahu	292	" Din	42
Dasi Marimuthu	771	Debigir Tapdhan	346
" Pitchigadu	704	Debi Prasad v. Nagar Mull	852
Dasondha Singh	412	" Singh	493
Dasser Bhooyan	626	Deenabandu v. Visvasaraji	927
Data Ram (P. R. No. 45 of 1882)	1096, 1112	Degumber Aheer	489
" (26 P. L. R. 267)	185	Deni	504
Datta Ram	656, 691	Denonath Ghattack v. Rajcoomar
Dattatraya Venkatesh Belvi	498	Singh	280
Dattu Nana Pawar	610, 694, 695	Denoo Bundhoo Biswas	922
Daud	1090	Densley	877
Daude Gangudu	621	Deo Nandan Pershad	319, 320
Daulan	655	Deo Sahay Lal	487
Daulat Rai (P. R. No. 28 of 1915)	866, 1008	Deodhar Singh	216, 217, 319, 474
" " (P. W. R. No. 25 of 1915)	866	Deodhari Mahto	887
" Shaw	790	Deoji Keru	829, 831
" Singh v. Bapu	380	Deokinandan	1090
David Dant	665	Depardo	25
" Foster	508, 528	Derajuddin Akanda	748
" Jones	1040	Deshbandhu Gupta	307
" Narsu	113	Deva Singh	111
" White	792	Devama	1102
Davis (14 Cox 563)	148, 149, 150	Devarasetti Gangaiya	944, 951
" (26 L. J. Ex. 393)	313	Devi Dayal	320, 1087
" (15 Cox 174)	614	" Dyal	1089
" (6 C. & P. 177)	872	Devising Mohansing	251
Davuluri Veerayya	499	Devji Asa	498
Dawson	29	" Bhavani	986
Day	166	" Govindji	172, 632
Daya Bhima	20	Devoo Jethiram	412
" Karsan	914	Dew v. Director of Public Prosecutions	583
		Dewa Singh	328, 421, 492

Dewan Singh	647	Diwan Sing	736
Dhaklu	791	Dixon (11 Cox 341)	151
Dhalu Ram	591	„ (3 M. & S. 11)	9, 548, 605, 1109
Dhan Singh	383	„ (4 Ch. D. 133, 137)	865
Dhani Ram	691	Dod Basaya	101
Dhania Daji	137, 705	Doherty	157, 660
„ v. Clifford	721, 722	Dolan	870
Dhaniram	207	Doma Sahu	308
Dharam Chand Lal	42, 374, 376	Donald McDonald	807
„ Das	101	Doorga Doss	99
„ Rai	57	Doorgessur Surmah	202, 214
Dharama Das Kavar	452	Doorjodhun Shamonto	655
Dharamdeo Singh	101	Dorasami	117
Dharma Das Ghose v. Nusseruddin	917, 920	Doraisami Mudaly	581
Dharmalinga Mudali	918	„ Pillai	947
Dhaumun Teli	176, 193	Dorasamy Pillai	193, 736
Dhawa	549	Doraswamy Ayya r.	810, 1103, 1119
Dheramal	942	Dori Lal	896, 898
Dhera Singh v. Mussummat Kahno	747, 757	Doss v. Secretary of State for India	130
Dhian Sing	58, 296, 299	Douglas	689
Dhira	631	Dowlat Bee v. Shaik Ali	768, 774, 775
Dhirendra Mohan Gossain	789	Dowlat Ram	1021
Dhola	350	Dowlut Moonshee	414
Dhondi	608	Downes	621
Dhondi Bapu Bhapkar	103	Doyal Bawri	1122, 1124
Dhoonda Bhooya	487	„ Shilydar	876
Dhori Kullian	378	Drewett	1009
Dhum Singh	1073, 1088	Dring	874
Dhundi	1111	Drummond v. Drummond	13
Dhunput Ojhah	903	Dubey Sahai v. Ganeshi Lal	13
Dhunum Kazee	50, 972, 993	Duckworth	674, 1122
Dhununjai Poly	187	Dudley and Stephens	137
Dhurmonarain Moitro	753	Dudley West	137
Dhurunidhur Ghose	748	Duffey's case	56, 172
Dick	891	Dugdale	1109
Dickins v. Gill	527, 533	Dukharan	837
„ Randerson	553	Dukhi Mullah v. Halvay	13
Dil Gazi	151	Dullee	946
Diljour Misser	2	Dullelooddeen Sheikh	812, 819
Dilli	282	Dulli	56
Dina	861, 862	Duma Baidya	56, 58, 72, 78, 622
„ Bandhu Moitra	647, 658	Dungar	426
„ Sheikh	102, 699	Dungar Singh	95, 99, 291
„ Nath Pal v. Raja Sati Prasad	13	Dungri	117
Dinanath Gangooly	45	Dunlop Pneumatic Co. v. Dunlop Motor Co.	1010
Dinkar Chintaman Patkar	918	Dunn's case	981
Dinobundo Rai	282	Dunyapat	796
Dinonath Burooa	207, 208	Durant	1091
Dinshaji Edalji v. Jehangir	1081	Durbarro Polie	933, 934
Director of Public Prosecutions v. Beard	148	Durga	824
Directors, etc., Hammersmith Ry. v. Brand	13	Durga Charan Jemadar	493
District Magistrate of Nellore	483	„ Charan Mali v. Nobin Chandra Sil	372
		„ Das	745, 756, 758, 772, 902

Durga Das Rakhit v. Umesh Chan-	Elizabeth Owen	143
dra	Ella Boyan	707
" " Rukhit	Elliot	665
" Prasad	Elliott	579
" Tewari	Ellis	1040
Durgacharan Gir	Ellor	630
Durgiah	Elmstone	28, 29
Durwan Geer	Emaji	1017
Durzoolla	Emdad Ally	958
Dushruth Ray	Emary Nolloth	8
Dussorut Dass	Emma Bate	689
Dustoor Khan	" Forster	516
Dwarka Aheer	Emmens v. Pottle	1060
" Bania	Emperor v. Bhagwan Din	624
" Doss v. Narasimhalu	" v. Bibudhananda Chakra-
" Prasad	varti	1000
" Poonja	" v. Chanchal	662
Dwarkanath Dutt	" v. Gutali	624
Ghose	Empress v. Sham Singh	114
Dwijendra Chandra	Enai Beebee	1036, 1042
Dyer v. Munday	Enayet Hoosein	817
Dyke v. Elliott	Eng Gyaung	75
Dyson	Eno v. Dunn	1010
E	Eshak Meah	309
Eagleton's case	Eshan Meah	202
Earl Ferrers	" Muchi	875
Earl of Somerset (Robert Car)	Esop	5, 15, 122, 129, 132, 781
Eastwood v. Holmes	Essan Chunder v. Baboo Pran-
Ebrahim Sirkar 349, 352, 374, 377, 383	nath Chowdry	974
Ebrahimji Mulla Jeevanji	Essub Ibrahim	16
Echan Meah	Esufali Abdul Hussain	1081
Edgell	Etim Ali Majumdar	198, 199
Ediga Narasappa	Evans	739
Edmeads	Evening News	1070
Edmondson v. Birch & Co.	Ewaz Ali	746, 760
Edmund Balls	Ex parte Davis	313
" Mead	" Dixon	865
Edward Arnold	" Walton	218
" Ball	Ex-Raja of Coorg v. East India Co	130
" Mullany	Exchange v. M'Faddon	6, 7
" Murphy	Eyre	782
" Oxford	Ezekiel	43
" Lawes Pym	F
Edwards	Faiz Ahmed	803, 1046
Eesa v. Keemoo	Faiz Ali	297
Eggington	Faiyaz Hussain	292
Ekram Aly	Fakir (P. R. No. 22 of 1883)	33
Elahi Baksh Kap	" (P. R. No. 1 of 1885)	17, 33
" Bux	" Chand	410
Eldershaw	" Chandra De	955
Elem Molla	Fakir Muhammad	975
Eliza Archer	Fakira (Unrep. Cr. C 65)	792
Elizabeth Brown	" (Unrep. Cr. C 22)	371
Elizabeth Cornwall	" (17 Mad 105)	476

Fakira Khan	99, 103, 724	Farkha	318, 350
Fakirapa	13, 724	Farrh	792
Fakirgavda	934, 1096	Fischer	124
Fakir-ud-in	426	Fisher (t Mood. & Malk. 433)	9
Falkingham	686	" (1910, 1 K. B. 149) ..	901
Fanning	1031	Fitch	996
Fanny Schmidt	870	Fisher	1038
Faqir Muhammad	607	Flattery	167, 779
Farnham	689	Fleet	1070
Farrow	704	Fletcher (8 Cox 131) ..	778
Fatch	402, 980	" (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 39)	167, 778
" Ali	360	" (1910, M. W. N. 510) ..	909
" Chand (41 Cal. 477) ..	51	Flowers	812
" (20 A.L.J.R. 706) ..	59	Flynn	611
" Agarwalla	519	Foezullah	58
" Din (P. R. No. 1 of 1902) ..	21	Forbes	973
" (P. R. No. 11 of 1909) ..	928	" r Amecroonissa Begum ..	398
" Khan	367	" r Girish Chandra Butta-
" Muhammad	1052, 1082	chargee	921
" Singh	289, 458, 479	Forster (Deans Cr. C. 156)	516
Fatchali	175	" (6 Cox 525) ..	516
Fatehkhani Bahadurkhan ..	101	Foster (7 C & P. 491) ..	508, 528
Fatik Biswas	403, 414	" (2 Q. B. D. 301) ..	899
Fatta (P. R. No. 7 of 1878)	107, 108	Faujdar	937, 939
" (P. R. No. 32 of 1889)	572	Faulkes	807, 860
" (1 L. L. J. 253) ..	965	Fauzdar Rai	185, 281, 289
Fatteh Ali	391	Fox	609, 611, 692
Fattehdin	924	Framji D. Taraporewalla ..	576
Fatti	747	Frances	152
Fattu (P. R. No. 34 of 1881)	111	" Douglas	689
" (6 L. L. J. 110) ..	111	Francis	982
Faudi Keor	175	" Cassidy	670
Faulkes	1036	" Fretwell	701
Faulkner	931	" Mankum	791
Fazal	631	" R. Thompson	662
Fazal Ali	33	" Toshack	979
" Dad	658	" Xavier	101
" Din (P. R. No. 1 of 1907)	892, 978	Franconia case	14, 30
" (3 L. L. J. 442) ..	409	Frank Allen	24
Fazl Ahmad	401, 419	" Greening	630
Fazla	948	Franks	516
Fazul	903	Fraser	744
Featherstone	800	Fray v. Blackburn	1076
Feda Hossein	970	Frederick Wood	782
Felani Hariani	684	Fretwell	682, 699, 704
Fenwick v. Schmalz	133	Frith v. Frith	1038
Feojdar Roy	414	Frost	231, 236
Ferasat	99, 303	Fukeera Chamar	186, 637
Ferens v. O'Brien	793	Fukirigadu	638
Ferguson	661	Fula Bhana	482
Ferguson's case	162	Futteali Biswas	407
Fernandez	1075	Futteh Khan	35
Feroz	640	Fuzul Karim v. Haji Mowla	591
Ferrers (Earl)	150	Fuzza Mecah	186, 668
Finney (2 C. & K. 774)	495
" (12 Cox 625) ..	660, 665

G

Gadgagya v. Guru Siddeshwar ..	812	Ganapat (P. R. No. 20 of 1884) ..	766
Gadicherla Harisarvothama Row..	219	„ (P. W. R. No. 38 of 1918). ..	784
Gahar Mahamed Sarkar v. Pitam-		Ganpat Sitaram Mukadam..	1011, 1012, 1021
baldas	378	„ Tapidas	867
Gahra	1053	Ganpatee	557
Gainu Panday	920	Ganpati	731
Gaja	594	Ganpatrao Ramchandra	208
Gajadhar	492, 1082	Gantapalli Appalamma v. Ganta-
Gajendra Ghorai	179	palli Yellayya	1044
Gajja Nand	1037	Ganu	287
Galbraith	157	„ bin Krishna Gurav	579
Gaman (P. R. No. 9 of 1899) ..	1049	„ Ladu	102, 113
„ (P. R. No. 16 of 1913) ..	290	„ Sakharam	93
„ (P. W. R. No. 20 of 1913). ..	492, 493	Gardner	811, 815
Gamirullah Sarkar v. Abdul Sheikh.	922	Garib	622
Gamlen	157	Garnham	794
Ganapathi Aiyar	350	Gascoigne	819
„ Sarma	60, 279, 298	Gathercole	1062
Ganda Shah	65	Gati Mandal	369, 443, 446, 455
Gandhi (M. K.)	35	Gatty v. Field	583
Ganduva Nayako	628, 635	Gauntlet	10
Ganesh	748	Gaurchandra Chuckrbutty v.
„ Balvant Modak	248, 251, 252, 1117	Krishna Mohan Sing	436
„ Bhikaji	976	Gauri Sahai	453
„ Damodar Savarkar	199, 233, 234	„ Shankar (40 All. 360) ..	625
„ Das	558	„ „ (6 All. 42)	400, 401, 475
„ Khanderao	365, 367, 368, 901	„ „ (14 A. W. N. 197) ..	854
„ Narayan Sathe	360	Gavgappa	377
„ Sahu	878	Gawkaranlal v. Sarjoo Saw ..	846
„ Sing v. Ram Raja	56	Gaya Barhai	445, 447, 1090
Ganeshi	394, 406	„ Bhar	942
Ganeshi Lal	372	„ Din	833
Ganga (4 Bom. 330)	1035	Gayford v. Chouler	919
„ (19 Bom. L. R. 56)	1035	Gaylor	681, 682
„ (Unrep. Cr. C. 59)	434	Gazi kom Abba Dore	372
„ (11 C. P. L. R. 6)	774	Geach	973
„ (34 All. 451)	21	Gendan Lal v. Abdul Aziz Khan..	898
„ Charan Singh	486, 487	„ Singh	413
„ Dei	752, 758	Genya	922
„ Prasad (27 All. 260)	866	George	687
„ „ (29 All. 685)	1080	„ Brooks	794
„ Ram	455	„ Evans	739
„ Sahai	401, 406	„ Hough	997
Gangaram Malji	998	„ Kipps	744
„ Santram	995	„ Loveday	714
„ Sonar	454	„ Mason	820
„ Tukaram	432	„ Middleton	842
Gangoo Singh	454	„ Robinson	505
Gannoo Mahto	408	„ Stratton	135
Ganouri Lal Das	175, 178, 280, 288	„ Thompson	854
Ganpat (Unrep. Cr. C. 704) ..	452	„ Walton	811
„ (Unrep. Cr. C. 390)	940	Ghanasham Ramchandra Mantri.	426
		Ghanaya	358
		Ghani Khan	286, 369
		Ghansaram	455

Ghansham Das	876	Girish Myte.. .. .	459
Ghanta Veeranna	926	Girjashankar Kashiram	1060
Ghasi	937, 938	Girsham v. Muttusawmy	853, 855
Ghasin Kewat	426	Girwar Narain	816
Ghasita (P. R. No. 13 of 1919)	111	Girya Laxmappa	827
"	960, 1120	Gisbourn v. Hurst	859
" (1 A. W. N. 25)	781	Giyana Chand	18
" Mal	193	Glennie v. Glennie	1015
Ghatu Pramanik	147, 635	Glyde	843
Ghausar Singh	631, 632	Gnosil	818
Ghazi	922	Gobadur Bhooyan	185, 628, 637
Ghisa Mal	1095	Gobardhan Bhuyan	185, 191
Gholam Durbesh	385	Gobardhandas v. Jasoda Moni	1035
" Fatima	1035	Dasi	1035
" Hoosain	107	Goberdhone v. Habibullah	412
" Mahomed	278	Gobind Chandra Seal	392
Ghosh	216	" Ghose	412
Ghosita v. Kalka	591	" Roy	99
Ghufar	605, 627	" Dobey	200
Ghulam	962	" Prasad	937, 941, 944
" Ali	484, 489	Gobinda Pershad v. Garth	1064
" Hossein	576	"	877
" Hussain	447	" Mal	980
" Jelani	805, 916	Gobindu	1049
" Jilani	625, 691	Goburdhun Bera	427
" Kadir Khan	1197, 1198, 1201	" Pari	193
" Khan	318	Godi	142, 1042
" Mahomed	1046, 1113, 1121	Godlavedu Balayya	996
" Muhammad	366, 396	Goffin v. Donelly	1078, 1079
" Mustafa	835	Gogerly	217
" Rasul	175	Gogun Chunder Ghose	985
Ghulet	12, 409	Gohra	634, 635
Ghuntappa	632	Gokal (P. R. No. 34 of 1879)	369
Gibbons	402, 634	" (45 All. 142)	494, 731
Gigal v. Phio	1033	Gokaldas	416
Giles	887	Gokaran	744
Gill	945	Gokool Bowree	186, 632, 637
Gipps v. Gipps	1045	" Chunder Chowdhry	452
Girdhar Dharmdas	847	Gokul Chund v. Seith Roshun Lal	944
Girdhara Singh	282, 302	" Khatik	904
Girdharee Singh	620	" Mander v. Padmanand Singh	11
Girdhari	483, 796	Golam Arfin	297
" Lal (8 All. 653)	475, 983, 984	" Hossain	851
"	984	" Chowdhry	65
" (P. W. R. No. 26 of 1910)	908	Golap Jan v. Bholanath Khettry	1083
" (P. W. R. No. 32 of 1911)	321	" Pandey v. Boddam	941
" (P. L. R. No. 269 of 1914)	910	Goldthorpe	689
Giribala Dassi v. Pran Krishto	1082	Goli	455
Girdhari Mondul	451	Golla Hanumappa	288, 296
" v. Uchit Jha	456	" Sanyasi	622
" Naik	443, 451	Goluck Chandra Pal v. Kali Charan	383
Girish Chunder v. Jatadhari	1097	De	1000
		Goluck Chunder	214
		" Chung	608, 622, 662
		Goness Dooley	162
		Gonoo v. Deenbundhoo	162

Good	458	Government Advocate, Bihar v. Gopa Bandhu Das	1061, 1062, 1067
Goodenough	855	Government Advocate Bihar and Orissa v. Ganga Prasad ..	43
Goodman v. Harvey	804	Government of Assam v. Sahebulla	182
Goolab Rasul	1099	Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chander Mitter	898
Goolzar Khan	98, 1102	Government of Bengal v. Sheo Ghola	174
Gooroo Churn Chung	177	Government Pleader	792
Gooroodas Rajbunsee	748, 749	Govind Ballajee	646
Gopal (23 A. W. N. 115)	410, 501	Govind Pandurang	400
„ (1* B. L. J. 107)	1046	„ Ramappa	988
„ Barik	453	„ Raoji Thosur	1095
„ Bhikaji	368, 443	„ Sahoo	415
„ Burnawar	383	„ Venkatesh Yalgi	384, 385, 579
„ Chunder Sirdar	203	Govinda (1 Bom. 342)	618
„ „ Sirdar v. Fulmoni Bewa	813	„ Pillai	1079
„ Dhanuk	445	„ v. Thayammal	13
„ Kristnayya	372	„ Punja	918
„ Naidu	2, 137, 176, 722	Govindappa Nayak	1084
„ Rai	377	Govindaraju Naicken	784
„ Singh (20 Cal. 316)	353	Govindarajulu	313
„ „ (36 All 6)	736	Govindaswamy Naidu	902
Gopala Kallaiya	121, 923	Gowardhan Das	292
„ bin Rama	780, 781	Grant	1073, 1074
„ Santu	112	Great Western Ry Co v. Bailhe	535
Gopalakrishna Heggade	974	Great Yarmouth	336
Gopalasaminatha Aiyar	43, 374	Green (7 C. & P. 156)	559, 560
Gopalasamy	915	„ (3 F. & F. 274)	744
Gopalasawmi Naidu (A.)	418	Greenacre	618
Gopalrao Venkatesh	938	Greene v. Dellanney	1057, 1059, 1082
„ v. Mt. Piar B.	1061, 1067	Greening	630, 634
Gopi Chand	498	Gregory	815
Gopi Nath Mahto v. Koomar	714	Gregory v. Vadakasi Kangani	21
Gopia	349	Grey	545
Gopinath Paryah	317	Griffin	609
„ Shaha	657	Griffin v. Coleman	722
Gora Chand Gopee	57, 60, 619	Grill v. General Iron Screw Coll'er Co.	558
Gordon (21 St. Tr. 486)	231, 234	Grish Chunder Nundi	454
„ (Unrep Bom.)	366	Grove	920
„ Trials	231, 234	Groves	939
Gorle Kandungadu	876	Gubala Ram Reddi	453
Goshain	635, 654	Guddappa	974, 975
Goss	887	Guddati Reddi v. Ganapati Kandanna	770
Gossain Missir	1102	Guelder	855
Gottumukkula Narayanraju	376	Guhi Jena	110
Gour Beonode Dutt	914	Guj Hassan Shah	360
„ Chand Chang	187	Guj Singh	540
„ Chunder Das	58, 297, 622	Gujjar	607
„ „ Polie	634	Gul Muhammad	34
„ „ Roy	81	Gujah	45, 610, 628, 640, 654
Gouridas Namasudra	701	„ Hamir	113, 116
Gouri Narayan v. Tilbikaram	857
Gover	511
Government v. Doolubh	288
„ v. Govinda Ballajee	646

Gulab Singh (14 A. L. J. R. 688)	226,
	228, 1109
" " (32 All. 116)	..	491
Gulam Abbas	..	103
" Ahmed Kazi	..	361
" Hoosain	..	280
" Hyder Panjabi	..	716
" Muhammad Sarif-ul-daulah	321, 1090
Gulabchand	..	985
Gulbadan	..	196
Gulbad Shah	..	874
Gulli Sahu	..	1161, 1158
Gullic Mullick	..	410
Gullu	..	175
Gulzari Lal (2 A. W. N. 229)	..	173
" " (21 All. 254)	802, 858, 863
Guman	..	318
Gumbheer	..	1017
Gun Pal	..	492
Gunamony Sapni	369, 454, 455
Gunder Singh	..	745
Gunesb Lusker	..	653
Gunesha	..	548, 550
Gunga Chunder v. Gour Chunder	1094
Gunga Singh	..	620
Gungammah	..	419
Gunnesh Dutt v. Mugneeram	1076,
	1079
Gunning	..	29
Gunpat	..	901
Gunwant	..	986
Gunya	..	573
Gupta (6 L. L. J. 162)	..	1101
" (S. C.) (1 Rang. 290)	394, 406
Gurbaksh v. Shama Singh	..	1034
Gurdit Singh (P. R. No. 17 of 1889)	107
" (P. R. No. 12 of 1872)	179
" (P. R. No. 16 of 1883)	121
" (P. W. R. No. 25 of 1916)	..	745
Gurditta Mal	..	913
Gurreboollah	..	605
Guram Siddugadu	..	922
Gurjoon Aheer	..	415
Gurlingappa Shidramappa	..	189
Guru Charan Chang	179, 192
Gurumabanty Appalasamy	..	852
Gutali	..	624, 704
Gutch Fisher	..	9
Guzzala Hanuman	..	801
Gyan Chunder Roy v. Protap Chunder Dass	..	454
Gyannee Ram	..	978
H. C. Bayne	..	559
H. P. Sandyal v. Dhaba Sundari	..
Dehi	..	1083
Habib Khan v. Mazharul Haque	1028,
	1039
Habibulla (6 A. W. N. 23)	..	384
(P. R. No. 4 of 1890)	..	597
Habibullah	..	409
Habibul Razzak	..	66, 813
Hadfield	..	565
Hadfield's case	..	145
Hafiz Ali	..	184, 191, 191
Hague	..	331, 433, 901
Haibat Khan	..	447
Haidar	..	117
Haidar Ali	..	970
" v. Abru Nia	..	1079
Haigh v. Aerated Bread Co.	..	551
Haines (2 C. & K. 368)	..	665
" (R. & R. 451)	..	949
Hajee Mahomed Ghouse Sahib	..	593
Haji	..	700
Haji Gulam Mahomed	..	719
" Shaik Mahomed	..	8
" Sher Mahomed	..	834
Hakik Shah	..	144
Hakim	..	190, 588
Hall (3 C. & P. 409)	..	130, 819
" (3 Cox 245)	..	799
" (13 Cox 49)	..	808
" (R. & R. 355)	..	950
" (R. & R. 463)	..	855, 862
" v. Barrows	..	1011, 1012
" v. Cox	..	585
" v. McWilliam	..	582
Halliday	..	643
Halloway	..	187
Halodhur Poroe	..	554
Hamada	..	877
Hamayun	..	450
Hamid	..	626
Hamid Ali v. Imtiazan	..	748
Hamilton	..	806
Hamilton v. Bone	..	917
" & Co. v. Pandorf	..	133
Hamirmal	..	637
Hammersmith, etc. Ry. v. Brand	..	544
Hancock	..	871
Handley	..	788
Hands	..	791
Haneef Fakeer	..	634
Hanmant Chungalrao	..	384
Hanmanta	..	38, 798

Hanmappa Rudrappa	428	Harilal (14 Bom. 180)	383
Hannah Harley	704	" (Unrep. Cr. C. 433)	384, 386
Hansa Pathak v. Bansilal Das 99, 216,	801	Harindar Singh	292
Hanuman	628	Harishankar Fakirbhat	883
Hapoop Mal	542	Harka	145, 146
Haq Dad	181	Harkesh	749
Har Dial (P. R. No. 58 of 1905)	97	Harley	704
" (P. L. R. No. 144 of 1905)	802	Harmukh Rai	991
" Kesh	756	Harnam	961
" Narain (17 A. L. J. R. 686)	928	Harnam Singh (6 L. L. J. 478)	469
" " (22 A. L. J. R. 1100)	360	" " (16 A. L. J. R. 600)	59,
Hara Kumari Chowdhurani v. R. Savi 913		111, 214, 345, 856
Haradhan	969, 974	" " (5 Lah. 56)	788
" Maiti	987	Harnama	607
Harak Chand Marwari	537	Harnaman	830
Haran Mandal	392, 394	Haro Nath Malo	407
" Mundul	392, 394	Harriet Turner	689
Hardeo	746, 775	" Wilson	704
" Singh	296	Harrington v. Victoria Graving Dock
" " v. Hanuman Dat		Co.	318
Narain	447	Harris (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 282)	313, 545,
Hardie	665	" (10 Cox 352)	579
Hardit Singh	102, 709	" (7 C. & P. 428)	583
Hardwar Pal	444, 452	" (40 All. 119)	997
Hardwick v. Lane	584	Harrison	46, 845
Hardy	565	" v. Bush	515
Hardyal	416	"	1074
Harendra Lal Roy	310	Harry Jones	853
" Narayan v. Ramjan Khan 789		Harsh Nath Chatterjee	228, 229
" Nath v. Jyotish Chandra	894, 895	Harsukh Rai	321
Hargayan	466	Hart	973
Hargobind v. Greaves Cotton & Co. 1020		Hart and White	1087
" v. Ralli Bros.	1020	Hartley	807
Hargovandas	903	Harvey	509
Hargrave	161	Hasan	659
Hari (Unrep. Cr. C. 126)	566	Hasan Ali	486
" (Unrep. Cr. C. 215)	555	" Saman	543
" Bapuji	788	Hashmat	1046
" Bhuimali	789, 790	Haslam	878
" Bijal	59, 298	Hasrat Mohani	232, 235
" Chand	987	Hathem Mondal	875
" Charan Singh	393, 408, 409	Hatim Moonshee	1001
" Dagdu	857	Hau Nagji	542
" Har	813	Haveli	719
" Kishan	908	Hay	150
" Lakshman	360	Hayat (P. R. No. 11 of 1888)	69
" Mandle v. Jafur	926	" (5 P. L. R. 404)	102
" Maniram Sonar	510	" (P. R. No. 14 of 1904)	607
" Ramji	875	Haycraft v. Creasy	50, 971
" Singh (3 C. L. R. 49)	297	Haydon	808
" " (P. R. No. 25 of 1894)	355	Hayes	3
" " (28 All. 100)	575, 577	Hayes v. Christian	1081
" v. Jadu Nandan	313	Haynes	146, 147, 148, 153
Haribhai Dada	742	Hayward	612
		Hazara Singh	697

Hazelton	893	Hira Lal Ghosh	407
Head	791	Hira Naikin v. Radha Naikin	770
Headge	861	" Nand Ojha	393
Heaton	1036	" Singh	291, 328, 385
Hebbert v. Purches	13	Hissamuddoen	422
Hecla Foundry Co. v. Walker, Hunter & Co.	1012	Hla Tun	618
Heera Joeeta	659	Hock Chong & Co. v. Tha Ka Do.	850, 852, 855, 857
Heera Singh	350	Hodgson (1 Leach 6)	691
Heeramun Singh	363	" (D. & B. 3)	973
Heermun Hulwye	903	Hoe	975
Hegarty v. Shine	167	Holbrook	9, 1060
Hehir	812	Hole v. Barlow	511
Hemohandra Mukherjee	459	Holland	613
Hemoruddi Mundal	997	Holland Bombay Trading Co. v. Baktear Mull	1013, 1021
Henkars	751	Holloway (1 Den. Cr. C. 370)	787
Henry Allen (9 C. & P. 31)	780	" (18 L. J. M. C.)	1120
" " (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 367)	1031	Holmes (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 334)	781
" " (3 Cox 270)	783	" (3 C. & K. 360)	313
" Burn	200	" (Deans Cr. C. 207)	545
" Coslet	799	" (22 L. J. M. C. 122)	579
" Hodgson	973	Hoosein Buksh	543
" Hughes	807	Hopkins	749
" Hunt	259	Hopley (11 Cr. App. R. 248)	972
" Martin	889	Hopley (2 F. & F. 202)	609
" Phillips	143	Hopper	1105
" Redman	813	Horse Chapman	889
" Williams	888	Horatio Cracknell	811
Hensler	887, 1120	Hori Lal	851
Henson	546	Hormusji Nowroji Lord	558
Herrmann	505	Hosein Beg	565, 566
Herrman Marcus	973	Hossein Buksh	291
Hewitt	688	" Manjee	345
Hibbert	743, 744, 750	Hosseneer Sheikh v. Rajkrishna Chatterjee	795
Hicklin	575, 576, 1070, 1109	Hotchin v. Hindmarsh	553
Hickman	643	Hough	997
Hicks v. Faulkner	448	Howana	718
Hidayata	837	Howard	1060
Higley	688	" v. Mull	1068
Hill (18 L. J. M. C. 199)	872	Howell	216, 601
" (8 C. & P. 274)	993	Howka Ramalakshmi	751
Hilton	655	Hridoy Mondal v. Jagananda Das.	99, 102
Himayat Ali	374	Hub Ali	1037
Hinde v. Baudry	1079	Hube	592
Hindle v. Britwistle	568	Hughes (1 Mood. 370)	807
Hindmarsh	650	" (3 Cox 447)	688
Hingam Khan	367	" (4 Q. B. D. 614)	396
Hira	180, 185	" (9 C. & P. 752)	779
Hira Lal (3 A. W. N. 222)	345	" (14 All. 25)	759
" (10 A. W. N. 1)	348	Hukam Chand	1178
" (P. R. No. 19 of 1908)	855, 864	" Singh (P. R. No. 28 of 1866)	446
" (13 O. C. 243)	833	" " (6 L. L. J. 481)	465
" (P. L. R. No. 63 of 1918)	321, 322
" (24 O. C. 18)	384

Hull	665	Imam Din v. Niamat Ullah ..	407
Hunnooman Lall	447, 451	Imambandi v. Motasuddi ..	1038
Hunt	259	Imamdi Bhooya	198, 206
„ v. Williams	584	Imamuddin	963
Hunter	1044, 1046	Imdad Khan	861
Huntingtower v. Gardner ..	10	Imtiazan	1010
Hurdut Surma	428, 472, 475	Ina Sheikh	801, 875
Hurgobind	291	Incha Ram	368
Huri Giree	632, 633	Indar	62
Huris Chundra Das v. Bolai Audi- caree	788	Indar Singh v. Thakar Singh ..	1052
Hurish Chunder Bose	988	Indarman	575
Hurjee Mull v. Imam Ali ..	976, 1124	Indra Nath Bannerjee	542
Hurmukh Rai	990	„ Banerjee v. F. G. Rooke	318
Hurnarain	107	Ingle	753
Hurnath Roy	310	Inhabitants of Hodnett	10
Hurpaul	110, 112	Inhabitants of Mahalingapore v. Anderson	131
Hurree Mohun Mythee ..	716, 779, 780	In re Alraju Naidu	1080
Hurri Kishen Das	500	„ Ameer Khan	131
Hursee v. Dinobundo	2	„ Amiraddi	385
Hurnath Chowdhry	350	„ Amrita Bazar Patrika (17 C. W. N. 1253)	35
Husain Bakhsh (25 All. 261) ..	471	„ Amrita Bazar Partika (30 C. L. J. 289)	245, 251, 306, 1114
„ „ (29 All. 569)	304	„ Banks	35
„ valad Tajbhai	371	„ Basappa Shivappa	435
Hushrut Sheikh	809, 819	„ Bethell	1033
Hussain Beg	354	„ Bogra	407, 410
„ Bukeh	802	„ De Cruz	388, 1101
„ „ Mian	102	„ „ Wilton	1039
Hussainuddyy	187, 192	„ Evening News	1070
Husseinally Niazally	1181, 1182	„ Gopalakrishna	974
Hussun	634	„ Kadir Meerah	408
Husgun Ali	34	„ Kali Churn Mookerjee	176
Hutchinson	122, 661	„ Khanderao Yeshvant	452
Hyams	950	„ Maharajah Madhav Singh ..	131
Hyderally	921	„ Manikam Pillai	895
I
Ibrahim (P. R. No. 7 of 1894) ..	15,	„ Marimuthu	144
„ „ (P. R. No. 7 of 1897) ..	31, 764	„ Mendru Gadaba	158
Idn	757	„ Mew	12, 13
„ Beg	609, 610, 620, 645, 659, 661	„ Murldhar	1155, 1160
„ Jolaha	54, 993	„ Payini Chellaya	1031
„ Mandal	183	„ Umayyathantagath Puthen. „ Vantin	235 911
„ v. Amiran	748	Instant	621
Ijzatulla Kazi	890	Intru Souza	662
Ikram-ud-din	821	Ipyli Mazath	379
Ilahi Bakhsh	1021	Ion (2 Den. Cr. C. 475)	515
Imam Ali	588	„ (6 Cox L.)	996
Imam Bakhsh	34	Irad Ally	370, 453
Imam Din (P. R. No. 2 of 1891) ..	483	Irapa	155
„ „ (P. L. R. No. 39 of 1902)	867	Irbasappa	395
„ „ (2 L. L. J. 245)	206	Irowa	620
		Isa v. Razon	1049

Isab Mahomed	1052	Jaffir Naik	856
" Mandal	414	Jagannadha Rao v. Kamaraju	746, 751
Isarising	880	Jagannath Bhikaji	927
Ishan Chandra Chandra	801, 875	Jagannatham	920
" Muchi	875	Jagannath Mandhata, 182, 183, 287, 737
Ishar Das (P. W. R. Cr. No. 18 of 1908)	886	Jagat Chandra v. Rakhal Chandra, 795
" (P. R. No. 10 of 1908)	1090	" " Sarma v. Lal Chand	322
" (P. R. No. 36 of 1912)	836	" Ram	411
" (6 Lah. 50)	994, 995	" Singh	358
Ishree Persaud	806	Jageshar Rai	183
Ishri	959	Jageshur Pershad	983
Ishtiaq Ahmed	858, 868	Jaggu	608
Ishur Chunder v. Seetul Das Mitter	943	Jaggu v. Pala	455
Ishur Chander Kurmoker v. Seetal Das Mitter	943	Jaglia Raysing	483
Ishwar Chandra Ghoshal	352, 353	Jagnohan	450
" Jogee	102, 764	Jagobundhoo Karmakar	451, 454
Ismail	423, 424	Jagpat Koeeri	737
" Khan	193, 963	Jaha Bux	997
" Rustomkhan	768	Jahana	694, 901
" valad Fataru	393	Jahangir	405
Isree Panday	756, 763	Jahiruddin	278, 295
Isser Chunder Ghose v. Peari Mohun		Jaichand Mundle	648
" Palit	849	Jai Debi	1060
Issup	874	" Dyal	731
Issur Chunder Mundle v. Rohim		" Jai Ram	397, 399
" Sheik	922	" Ram	731
" v. Rohim Sheik	922	Jaikishan Das v. Sher Singh, 1058, 1059
Istlingsappa Shivappa	659, 664	Jaikrishna	1097
Isab Musa	45	Jaili Bhavin	771
Isuri Prasad v. Umrao Singh	1057, 1082	Jaimal	1116, 1120
Iswar Chunder Guho	391, 423, 424	" Shravan	498
Itwaree Dome	823	Jairam Sahu	736
Iyer v. Mudaliar	1082	" Singh	31, 763
Iyyemperumal Naiken	371	Jaipal Gir v. H. Dharmapalla	590, 591
Izod	621	Jairam Mahton	180, 183, 281, 289
		Jaladu	166, 749, 757
		Jama	662
		Jamal-ud-din v. Muhammad Ismail, 455
		Jamaludin	608
		Jambulinga Chetty	943
		Jamdad	107
		James (1 C. & K. 530)	732
		" (8 C. & P. 131)	920
		" (7 C. & P. 553)	973
		" Carley	604
		" Crawshaw	586
		" Bolton	392
		" Crawshaw	586
		" Ellor	630
		" Fletcher	909
		" Gardner	811, 815
		" Hall	808
		" Hargrave	161
		" Hopkins	749
		" Ingle	753

J.

J. M.	158
J. R. Das	349, 350
J. Roy Chowdhury	674
Jabar	805
Jackson (1 C. & K. 384)	855
" (17 Cox 104)	1123
Jacobs	784
Jadav Mahton	959
Jaddoonath Dutt	410, 415
Jadu Nandan Singh	452, 453
Jadunandan Prasad	879
Jafar	634, 711
Jafar Ali	869
Jaffir Haji	8
Jaffir	964

James Jarvis	744	Jaswant Singh (P.W.R. No. 8 of 1918)	1053
" Langmead	880	Jatra Shekh v. Reazat Shekh 1051, 1052
" Lapiar	820	Jawahir Thakur	54
" Lloyd	780, 1113	Jawala Ram	970, 977, 989
" Mackintosh	970	Jayakrishna Samanta	174
" Orris	874	Jaykrishna	1097
" Robertson	812	Jeans	924
" Scudder	679	Jeenut Bibee	938, 940
" Sullivan	665	Jeetoo Chowdhry	208
" Thompson	800	Jeeva Amtha	152
" Tite	807	Jeevanjee	8
" Walsh	799	Jeewun v. Boodha	806
" Webb	579	Jehan Bukh	88, 735
" Wedge	781	" Mullick	117
" v. Gordon	68	Jehangir v. Secretary of State	131
" v. Jones	550	Jehangir D. Davar	557
Jameson	31, 261, 262	Jehangira	836
Jamiruddi Biswas	58	Jellyman	783
Jamna	682	Jcolall	184
Jamna Devi v. Mulraj	1035	Jeoli	646
Jamni	369	Jeoni	686
Jamona	447	Jeremiah James	732
Jamsetji	856	Jeremiah v. Vas	1087
Jamsheer Sirdar	175	Jessop (7 Cox 399)	888
Jamurha	106	" (16 Cox 204)	671
Jan Mahomed (1 W. R. 49)	216	Jetha Natheo	745, 763
" " (10 Cal. 584) 50, 54, 989, 996		Jethalal Harlochand	879
" " (4 Bom. L. R. 435) 1049		Jethmal Narayan	649
Jan Muhammad v. Naram Das	589	Jhakri Chamar	58, 180, 649
" " Husen	442, 452	Jhamman Lal	111, 793
Janardhan Damodar Dikshit 1059, 1067		Jhanda Singh	902
Jane Brawn	1034	Jhandu	841, 843, 635
" Clark	545	Jhantah Noshyo	783
" George	687	Jharu Sheik	949
" May	688	Jhoomuck Chamar	110
" Perry	689	Jhubboo Mahton	296
" Robson	852	Jhugroo	223, 822
Jangama Pattam	348	Jhulan Sain	593, 594
Jangeral v. Dewajee Patel	1073	Jhumuk Nonish v. Shadavahib Roy	944
Jangu v. Ahmed Ullah	591	Jhurrup Bhunjan Singh	763
Janu Hira	908	Jiba	609
Jangi Singh	939	Jibhai Vaja	391, 460
Janki Prasad	183, 375, 736	Jipbhai Govind	445, 454
Jannalagadda Venkatarayudu	367	Jiman	107
Jarvis (2 M. & Rob. 43)	457	Jina Ranchhod v. Jodha Ghella	544
" (20 Cox 249)	744	Jit Mal	1046
Jasauli	758	" Singh	498
Jesha Bawa	647	Jita	107
Jasumaddin v. Ichohak	1051	Jitan	523
Jasoda Nand	383	Jiva	693
Jasuram Marwari	184	Jivan Raut	253
Jaswant	348	Jiwa Ram	173
" Rai	306, 507	Jiwan Das	670, 1103, 1123
" Singh (1 L. C. 429)	374	" Singh (6 L. L. J. 377)	234

Jiwan Singh (P. R. No. 17 of 1908)	..	..	912	John Shukard	..	..	996
Jiwanand	..	..	983	„ Smidt v. Reddaway..	..	1012
Joan Bleasdale	..	..	297	„ Smith (8 Cox 32)	..	970
Job Timmins	..	..	743	„ „ (27 L. J. M. C. 225)	..	53
Jobania	..	..	825	„ Taylor	..	806
Johar..	..	..	805	„ Thomas	..	157, 631, 639
Jodha Singh	..	..	795	„ Tinkler	..	751
Jocennullah Bepari	..	..	876	„ Welsh	..	507
Jogabathudu	..	..	377	„ Wiley	..	872
Jogayya	..	..	1098	„ Williamson	..	163
Jogeen Pullee v. Noho Pullee	..	103		„ Wright	..	152
Jogendra Chunder Bose.	319, 252, 256			Johnstone v. Ewing	..	1012
„ Nath Ghose	..	407		Johri	..	486, 489, 874
„ „ v. Hiralal	..	737		Jokhu	..	573
„ „ Laskar v. Hiralal	..	494		Jonathan Dade	..	981
„ „ Mukerjee	..	181, 182, 183, 378, 454		Jones (C. & M. 615)	..	1037
Jogeshur Badgee	..	801, 880		„ (11 Cox 358)	..	661, 1010
Jogjiban Ghose	..	200		„ (11 Cox 514)	..	559
Jogidas Babu	..	989		„ (12 Cox 628)	..	665
Johan Subarna	..	905		„ (11 Q. B. D. 118)	..	1037
John	..	505		„ (1898, 1 Q. B. 119)	..	893
„ Allen	..	132		„ (72 J. P. 216)	..	630
„ Ardley	..	897		„ (28 C. W. N. 831)	..	853
„ Bingley	..	62, 216, 981		„ v. Fay	..	163
„ Birkett	..	997		„ v. Gordon	..	68
„ Bruce	..	21		Joomnee	..	876
„ Bryan	..	899		Jordan	..	143, 777, 780
„ Burrow	..	157		Josef Casorati	..	175, 185, 190
„ Burton	..	808		Joseph	..	53, 990, 991
„ Cox	..	780		„ alias Thavasi	..	521
„ Curgerwen	..	1036		„ Dawson	..	39
„ Dixon	..	9, 548		„ Hadfield	..	565
„ Francis	..	982		„ Handley	..	788
„ Franks	..	516		„ Holland	..	613
„ Hall	..	855		„ Lines	..	780
„ Harper and Co. v. Wright,				„ Mariam	..	80, 81, 783, 1125
„ Butler and Co.	..	1012		„ Owen	..	217
„ Hart (Minter)	..	973		„ Senior	..	661
„ Hartley	..	807		„ Webb	..	163, 661
„ Jones	..	665		Joshua Mathews	..	920
„ King	..	467		Jotee Ghorace	..	705
„ Lewis	..	24, 25		Jotharam Davay	..	958
„ Long (4 C. & P. 398)	..	163		Joti Babu	..	922
„ „ (4 C. & P. 423)	..	163		„ Prasad	..	380
„ Mutters	..	800		Jowahir Pattak v. Parbhoo Ahir..	1096
„ Newton	..	1038		„ Shah v. Gridharee Chow-
„ Nichol	..	739		„ dury	..	719
„ Norman	..	854, 862		„ Singh (P. R. No. 16 of 1894)	..	403
„ Pascoe	..	467		„ „ (P. R. No. 33 of 1894)	..	605
„ Poynton	..	799		„ „ (P. W. R. No. 3 of 1914)	..	110
„ Reed	..	130		Jowala	..	964
„ Scott	..	173		Jowaya	..	875
„ Scully	..	186

Joy Chandra Sarkar ..	247, 248,	Kailas Chandra Das ..	988, 989
Joygopal ..	256, 306, 307	" Pal ..	905
Joy Kurn Singh v. Man Puttuck ..	704	Kailash Ghouse v. Jugal Lohar ..	945
Joyanarain Patro ..	902	Kairo ..	686
Joyanath Mundul v. Jamal Sheikh ..	430, 462	Kairthadi Anaatha Bhattar ..	930
Joyah Mohun Chunder ..	540	Kaka ..	796
Joynt v. Cycle Trading Co. ..	98	Kaka Singh ..	884
Juala Prasad ..	1069	Kakde ..	1068
Judah ..	864	Kaku ..	662
Judagi Raut ..	790	Kala ..	493
Judoo Mussulmanee ..	736	" Khan ..	370
Jugal Das Dalal ..	1033	" Ram ..	954
" Kishore ..	543, 563, 564	" Singh ..	458, 650
" Narain Singh ..	370, 444	Kalachand Gope ..	681
Jugdown Sinha ..	930	Kaladgi Magistrate's Return ..	1153
Juggeshwar Dass v. Koylash Chunder Chatterjee ..	847, 851	Kalai v. Kalu Chowkidar ..	489, 494
Juggan Lall ..	719, 917	Kalaya ..	928
" ..	400, 986	Kalee Beparee ..	288
" ..	807	" Modock ..	898
" ..	363, 395	" Mundle ..	179
" ..	v.	Kaleechurn Serishtadar ..	317
" ..	391	Kali Churn Gangooly ..	203
Kashu Chunder Mozundar ..	102	" Mookerjee ..	175
Juglal ..	115	" Das Basu ..	228
Jugo Mohun Malo ..	206, 451	" Raha v. Deodhar Mistri ..	718
Jugut Mohini Dasee ..	1035	" Din ..	995
Jukui ..	907	" Nath Gupta v. Gobinda Chandra ..	1079, 1082
Jumman ..	172, 474	" " Roy ..	260
Jungle Lall ..	941	Kali P. usanna Kabyabisharad ..	1087
Jurakhan Singh ..	868	Kah Prosonna Ghose ..	380
Jwala Prasad ..	983, 1007	Kalian ..	486
Jyotish Chundra Mukerjee ..		Kalian Singh ..	383
		Kalichurn Das ..	657
		Kalichurn Lahoreo ..	414
		Kalidas Rewadas ..	986
		Kalji ..	179
		Kalika Misser ..	652
		Kalinath Nag Chowdhry ..	950
		Kalil Munda ..	200
		Kaho Kerio ..	818, 819
		Kalipuddo Poramanick ..	910
		Kalisankar Sandyal ..	102, 489
		Kaliyani ..	609
		Kalka Prasad ..	1009
		Kallachand Moitree ..	43, 482
		Kallappa Naickan v. Palani Ammall ..	927
		Kallu (3 All. 60) ..	479
		" (4 L. L. J. 448) ..	489
		" (5 All. 233) ..	1046, 1051, 1052
		" v. Sital ..	1050
		Kally Churn Gangooly ..	410
		" Potnal ..	1046
		" Doss Mitter ..	1060
		Kalu Kaan ..	614
		Kalya bin Fakir ..	346

K.

K. Chappu Menon ..	500
K. Gopala Kristnayya ..	367
K. Narayanan Nair ..	409
K. Simhachalam v. Rati Kanta Laha ..	841
K. E. V. Ayya Annasamy ..	180
Kabil Caze ..	297
Kabiruddin ..	183, 281
Kabul Pattur ..	679
Kachria ..	654
Kadar Ravuttan ..	434
Kader Nasver Shah ..	146, 117
" Sundar ..	833, 834
Kadhu Singh ..	179
Kadimsetti Tamayya ..	793
Kadir Bakhsh ..	634, 868
" Bux (N. W. P. 16) ..	889
" Meerah ..	408
Kadrutulla ..	284
Kahanji ..	304, 305
Kaikhuro Cursedji ..	918

Kalyan Singh	1110	Karim Dad	994
Kalya Nava Patil	434	" Khan	649
Kalyanji v. Ram Deen Lala	420	Karim-ud-din	860, 862
Kamakshi Achari v. Appavu Pillai	581	Karimdad	454
Kamal	647	Karlai Prasad	959
Kamal Fukeer	825, 837	Karm	607
Kamalakshi v. Ramasami	774	Karm Din	327
Kamaraju	945	Karmun	832
Kamatchinatha Pillai	983, 991, 996	Karri Mangadu	847
Kamatchinathan Chetty	407, 410	Karsan Babu	793
Kamdar Ali Serang	560	Karsanlal Danatram	350
Kaminee Dossee	700	Katar Singh	407
Kamla Prasad	541	Kartick Chunder Holder	394, 412
Kammari Kanappa	622	Karuman	378
Kammu	745, 768	Karuna Baistobi	770, 774, 775
Kampai Gowda	121	Karuppa Muppen	515
Kampta Prasad	325	Karuppana Mudali	351
Kamr-ud-din	662	Karuppannan	462
Kanai Das Bairagi v. Radha Shyam		Karuppanna Pillai	902
Basack	1012, 1021	Kasai	688
Kanai Lal Gowla	127, 718	Kasayi Ahmed	543
Kandamuru Annappa	505, 515	Kasem Ali	836, 837
Kandan	127	Kashee Nath Chungo	102
Kandaswami Goundan	736	Kashi Nath Ghose v. Dinobundhoo	922
Mudaliar	546	" " Naek	54, 174, 210, 984, 988
Kandhaia	64, 65, 487, 490, 492	Kashi Ram	348, 349
Kandhaiya Lal	391	" Shukul	412
Kandipuri Lakshmanna	428	Kashia Antoo	112, 218
Kane	865	Kashichunder Dess	385
Kangalee Muduk	535	Kashinath	895
Kangla	607, 942, 961	" Bachaji Bagul	1073
Kanhai	628	" Bagaji Sali	868
" Shahu	178	" Bhaushet	805
Kanji Shivagi	898	" Dinkar	426
Kanhaya Lal	569	" Vithal v. Daji Govind	500
Kanshi Ram	782	Kashiraj Martand	792
Kannammall	771, 774	Kashna	651
Kanniappa Naicker	874, 883	Kasi Chunder Mazumdar	394
Kanto Ram Dass v. Gobardhan		Kasim	793, 801
Das	400	Kasim Khan	393, 398
Kapalayaya Saraya	54	Kasiya Pillai	568
Kapil Mandal v. Rabbani Sheikh	291	Kasseemoddeen	634
Kaptan v. G. M. Smith	697, 734	Kassim Isub Sab	125
Karaka Nachiar	821	Kassimuddin	35
Karali Prasad Garu	959	Kastya Rana	11, 923
Karan Singh	745, 750	Kasya bin Ravji	173
Kuraturi Nagamma	718	Katakani Narasingadu	954
Karven Bux	844	Katay Kisan	155
Kari Singh	1083	Kathaperumal	20
Karigowda	445, 447, 1078	Katta Prakasam	366
Karim Baksh	447	Katwaru Rai	98
Karim Baksh v. Habibulla	851, 1036, 1037	Kay	1032, 1038
Karim Buksh (14 Cal. 633)	449	Kazi Dawood Kazi	362
" " (17 Cal. 574)	445, 446, 449	Kazi Zeamuddin Ahmed	309
		Kedar Nath Chatterjee	50

Kedarnath Chakravarti	905	Khanderao	811
" v. Mohesh Chunder ..	412	" Yeshwant	452
Keegan	663, 690	Khandoji bin Tanaji	383
Kehr Singh	465	Khandu valad Bhavani	610, 673
Keifa Singh	80, 261	Khandu	961
Keilasum Putter	400, 402	" Vishnu Sathe	210, 217, 222
Kellie	858	Khandusingh	50, 979, 995
Kelly (2 C. & K. 379)	218	Khanoon Ran	953, 951
" (2 C. & K. 814)	631	Khaob Lall	411
" (P. R. No. 11 of 1897) ..	697	Khark Sing	1015
" (R. & R. 421)	216	Khashal	439
Kenaram Bousce	960	Khatabai	800
Kendra Kumar	838	Khedun Misser	628
Kendrick v. Hopkins	156	Khem	408
Kennedy v. Broun	1077	Khema	662
Kenny	800, 874	Khemee Sing	282
Kerr	845	Kherode Chandra Roy Chowdhury	575, 576
Keru	919, 920	Kherode Chunder Mozumdar	419, 998
Kesar	10, 746, 747	Khetramani Dasi	774
Kesar Din	624	Khetter Natha Dutt v. Indro Jalra	788
" Singh	632, 640	Khidir Bux	287
Keshab Chandra v. Nityanund		Khirode Kumar	858
Biswas	851, 863	Khitish Chandra Deb Roy	856
Keshav Govind	285, 301	Khoda Bux v. Bakeya Mundari ..	887
" Hargovan v. Bai Gandhi ..	1031	Khoda Jagta	562
" Krishna	802	" Uma	1151
Keshavlal Jekrishna	943	Khodadux Fukeer	673, 686
Kesho Ram	851, 863	Khogayi	632
Keshub Mohajan	2	Khona	872, 882
Keshwar Lal Shaha v. Girish		Khota Ram	318, 319
Chunder Dutt	59, 216	Khuda Bakhsh	716, 956
Kesree	223, 353	Khudiram Dass	701
Ketabdi Mundul	558, 606, 607, 659, 661	Khushal (Unrep. Cr. C. 17) ..	316
Kew	559, 661	" (P. R. No. 13 of 1877) ..	107
Kewul Dosad	610	" Hiraman	51
Kowala Nandgir	1061	" Singh (6 A.W.N. 20). 301, 305
Keyn or Franco lia case	14, 30	" " (P. R. No. 36 of 1886) ..	500
Khadam	739, 780	" " (17 C. P. L. R. 105)	1052
" Ali	321	Khushala	768, 772
Khader Moidin	563	Khushali	503, 515, 899
Khadim Hussain	511	Khushi Ram	873, 915
" Sheikh	203, 229	Kiamuddi Karikar	100
Khagendra Nath Chowdhuri ..	228	Kikabhai Parbhudas	1087, 1091
Khairati	784	Killikyatara Bomma	170
Khairo	684, 686	Kimber v. Press Association	1069, 1070
Khaja Mahomed Hamin Khan ..	593, 938	Kina Karmakar v. Preo Nath Dutt	155
Khajal Noorul Hossein v. Fabre-		King	467
Tonnerre	203, 288	Kinloch's case	144
Khalak	113, 116	Kipps	744
Khan Bahadur	450	Kirat Singh	902
Khan Mahummad (P. R. No. 11 of 1887)	106	Kirkham	639
" " (P. R. No. 17 of 1901) ..	112	Kirkwood	984

Kalyan Singh	1110	Karim Dad	994
Kalya Nava Patil	434	" Khan	649
Kalyanji v. Ram Deen Lala	420	Karim-ud-din	860, 862
Kamakshi Achari v. Appavu Pillai	581	Karimdad	454
Kamal	647	Karlai Prasad	959
Kamal Fukeer	825, 837	Karm	607
Kamalakshi v. Ramasami	774	Karm Din	327
Kamaraju	945	Karmun	832
Kamatchinatha Pillai	983, 991, 996	Karri Mangadu	847
Kamatchinathan Chetty	407, 410	Karsan Babu	793
Kamdar Ali Serang	560	Karsanlal Danatram	350
Kaminee Dossee	700	Katar Singh	407
Kamla Prasad	541	Kartick Chunder Holder	394, 412
Kammari Kanappa	622	Karuman	378
Kammu	745, 768	Karuna Baistobi	770, 774, 775
Kampai Gowda	121	Karuppa Muppen	515
Kampta Prasad	325	Karuppana Mudali	351
Kamr-ud-din	662	Karuppannan	462
Kanai Das Bairagi v. Radha Shyam	1012, 1021	Karuppanna Pillai	902
Basack	127, 718	Kasai	688
Kanai Lal Gowla	505, 515	Kasayi Ahmed	543
Kandamuru Annappa	127	Kasem Ali	836, 837
Kandan	736	Kashee Nath Chungo	102
Kandaswami Goundan	546	Kashi Nath Ghose v. Dinobundhoo	922
Mudaliar	64, 65, 487, 490, 492	" " Naek	54, 174, 210, 984, 988
Kandhaia	391	Kashi Ram	348, 349
Kandhaiya Lal	428	" Shukul	412
Kandipuri Lakshmananna	865	Kashia Antoo	112, 218
Kane	535	Kashichunder Doss	385
Kangalee Muduk	607, 942, 961	Kashinath	895
Kangla	628	" Bachaji Bagul	1073
Kanhai	178	" Bagaji Sali	868
" Shahu	898	" Bhaushet	805
Kanji Shivagi	569	" Dinkar	426
Kanhaya Lal	782	" Vithal v. Daji Govind	500
Kanshi Ram	771, 774	Kashiraj Martand	792
Kannammall	874, 883	Kashna	651
Kanniappa Naicker	400	Kasi Chunder Mazumdar	394
Kanto Ram Dass v. Gobardhan	54	Kasim	793, 801
Kapalayaya Saraya	291	Kasim Khan	393, 398
Kapil Mundal v. Rabbani Sheikh	697, 734	Kasiya Pillai	568
Kaptan v. G. M. Smith	821	Kasseemoddeen	634
Karaka Nachiar	959	Kassim Isab Sab	125
Karali Prasad Garu	745, 750	Kassimuddin	35
Karan Singh	718	Kastya Rama	11, 923
Karaturi Naganamma	844	Kasya bin Ravji	173
Kareem Bux	1083	Katakam Narasingadu	951
Kari Singh	145, 147, 1078	Katay Kisan	155
Karigowda	447	Kathaperumal	20
Karim Bakhsh	851, 1036, 1037	Katta Prakasam	366
Karim Bakhsh v. Habibulla	449	Katwaru Rai	98
Karim Bakhsh (14 Cal. 633)	445, 446, 449	Kay	1032, 1038
" " (17 Cal. 574)	419	Kazi Dawood Kazi	362
		Kazi Zeamuddin Ahmed	309
		Kedar Nath Chatterjee	59

Kedarnath Chakravarti	905	Khanderao	841
„ v. Mohesh Chunder ..	412	„ Yeshwant	452
Keegan	663, 690	Khandoji bin Tanaji	383
Kehr Singh	465	Khandu talad Bhavani	610, 673
Keifa Singh	80, 261	Khandu	961
Keilasum Putter	400, 402	„ Vishnu Sathe	210, 217, 222
Kellie	858	Khandusingh	50, 979, 995
Kelly (2 C. & K. 379)	218	Khanoom Ram	953, 951
„ (2 C. & K. 814)	631	Khaob Lall	411
„ (P. R. No. 11 of 1897)	697	Khark Sing	1015
„ (R. & R. 421)	216	Khashal	139
Kenarum Bousce	960	Khatabai	800
Kendra Kumar	838	Khedun Misser	628
Kendrick v. Hopkins	156	Khem	108
Kennedy v. Broun	1077	Kheina	662
Kenny	800, 874	Khemee Sing	282
Kerr	845	Kherode Chandra Roy Chowdhury	575, 576
Keru	919, 920	Kherode Chunder Mozundar	419, 928
Kesar	10, 716, 717	Khetramani Dasi	771
Kesar Din	621	Khetter Natha Dutt v. Indro Jaha	788
„ Singh	632, 610	Khidir Bux	287
Keshab Chandra v. Nityanund		Khirode Kumar	858
„ Biswas	854, 863	Khitish Chandra Deb Roy	856
Keshav Govind	285, 301	Khoda Bux v. Bakaya Mundari	887
„ Hargovan v. Bai Gaudi	1031	Khoda Jagta	562
„ Krishna	802	„ Uma	1151
Keshavlal Jekrishna	943	Khosadux Fakcer	673, 686
Kesho Ram	851, 863	Khozavi	632
Keshub Mohajan	2	Khona	872, 882
Keshwar Lal Shaha v. Girish		Khota Ram	318, 319
„ Chunder Dutt	59, 216	Khota Rattal	776, 686
„	999, 757

Kirpa Ram	1083	Krishna Chetti	293
" Singh	174, 597	" Gobinda Das	316, 361
Kirpal Singh (9 All. 523)	880	" Govinda Pal	995
" " (2 L. C. 19)	222	" Shahaji	97, 802
" " c. Mukam Singh	1082	" Shet	381, 386
Kisan Bapu	350	" Shetti	203
Kishan Lal	318	Krishna Row v. Appaswami	1073, 1090
Kishen Kour	30	Krishnaji	475
" Lal	176, 181, 710	" Ganesh	317
" Pershad	997	Krishnamal v. Krishnaiyangar	1031
" Soonder Bhuttacharjee	76	Krishnappa	516
Kishna	426, 428	Krishnanund Das v. Hari Bora	412
Kishori Lal Chatterjee	886, 892	Krishnarao Narayanrao	291
Kissoree Pater	822	Krishnashet bin Narayanshet	384
Kisto Soonder Deb	999, 1000, 1001	Krishnasami	260
Klaw	87	Krishnatatachari	591
Klier v. Ahuja	101 ^a	Krishtappa	350
Knight (1 Lewin 168)	66 ^r	" Khandappa	53, 976, 977, 1000
" (1 Cr. App. R. 185)	78 ^a	Kristodhone Dutt v. Chairman, etc. of Calcutta Corporation	81
" v. Bowers	553	Kudayan	426
Ko Set Shwin	819	Kudrutulla	292, 299
Kohmi	916, 1120	Kudruth Nath	856, 868
Koilash Chandra Chakraburty	959	Kudum	1013
Kola Lalang	10	Kudumbam	465
Komali Visvasam	829	Kuldip Panday	915
Komati Ramannah	377	Kuloda Prosad Majumdar	31
Komul Chunder v. Nobin Chunder	1058	Kumaragurudasa Swamigal v. Krishnaswami Mudaliar	1065
" Dass	752, 899	Kumarasami	1048
" Kisto Bonick	383, 386, 902	Kumeda Charan Ghose	887
Kona Tirumala Reddi	511	Kundan	107, 686
Kondeti Obalesu	998	Kunhiamma v. Kunhunni	392
Kondi Chetty	920	Kunhi Kadir	231, 232
Koonce	826, 1108	Kunhussa	80, 81
Koonathalwar Chetty	852	Kunj Beharee	503, 505
Koordan Singh	745, 748	Kunja Bhuiya	177, 178, 186, 283
Koraga	1051	Kunji Lal	937
Korban	752	Kunju Nayar	900, 977
Kori Singh J. Finch	10, 1083	Kuppa Pillai	541
Koroth Mammad	765, 766	Kuppan	350
Kotamraju Venkatrayudu	900, 972, 974, 975, 979	Kuppana Pillai	891
Kotha Goundan	1004	Kuppuswami Aiyar	387, 388, 1098
" Subba Chetti	362, 393, 411	Kure	695, 833
Kotayya	47, 791	Kureem	411
Kotoora Thevan	58, 299	" Buksh	179
Kottaigadu	102	Kuria	348, 349
Koura Khan	278, 286	Kurnam Seshayya	940
Koylash Chunder Dass	278	Kurrim Bux	186
" " Ghose v. Sonatun	13, 36	Kushee	939
Krishna (Unrep. Cr. C. 134)	567	Kushya bin Yesu	110
" (Unrep. Cr. C. 430)	922	Kustantin	1090
" Aiyar	788	Kusum Sao v. Janaklal	453
" Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal	13	Kutia Ala	485
" Ayyar	100	Kutti	489
" Baipadithaya	448

Madapusi Shrinivasa ..	311, 315	Mahomed Foyaz v. Khan Mahomed	919
Madar Sahib ..	550, 922	" Hossain ..	391, 411
Madarce Chowkeedar ..	787, 788	" Hossain (1 N. W. P. 293).	281
Madat Khan ..	296	" " (5 W. R. 49) ..	317, 320
Maddila Mutyallu ..	769, 771, 775	" " (W. R. Gap. No. 31) ..	605
Maddy ..	631	" Ishaq Khan ..	287
Madduri Krishnamma ..	811	" Ismal ..	349
Madhab Hari ..	788	" Jan v. Khadi Sheikh ..	178
Madhav Singh, in re ..	131	" Kassem Chisty ..	1106
Madhava Bhonjo Santos ..	375, 931, 932	" Khan ..	173
Madhavlal Chaganlal ..	990, 991	" Shuffeo ..	230
Madho ..	367, 709, 710	" Syedol v. Yeoh Ooi ..	13
" Singh ..	191, 195, 676, 690, 693	" Yakooob ..	710
" Sonar ..	737	Mahommed Kassim ..	485
Madhu Sudan v. Sasti Prasad		Maiku ..	878
Nandy ..	920	Maina ..	378
Madhub Chunder v. Novodeep		Mainda ..	351
Chunder Pundit ..	411	Maing Po Lu ..	890
Madhub Chunder Giri ..	1015, 1016	Maithya Gazee ..	634
Madur Jolaha ..	609	Majhi ..	650
Madurai ..	1001	" Mamud ..	345
Maganlal ..	20, 319	Majju v. Lachman Prasad ..	1082
" and Motilal ..	60	Makandi v. Mohri ..	1038
Magdalena Steam Navigation Co. v. Martin ..	6	Makhan ..	878
Magence Behara ..	562	Makhni ..	400
Maguire ..	35	Makhulshah ..	141, 144
Mahabir (33 All. 578) ..	21	Makimuddin ..	144
" (6 L. L. J. 533) ..	694	Makin v. Att.-Genl. for New South Wales ..	997
" Singh ..	913	Mala Obigadu ..	573
" Tewari ..	830	" Singh ..	58
" Thakur ..	421	Malayan Kalan ..	929, 930
Mahadeo ..	917	Malhar Martand Kulkarni ..	321
" Prasad ..	793	Malhar Ramchandra ..	475
" Singh ..	454	Malhari ..	801, 876, 877
Mahadev Lal v. Dhonraj Maisri ..	895, 905	Malkaji ..	716
Mahadshet Appashet ..	555, 922	Malkhan Singh ..	338, 339
Mahadu ..	112	Mallampati Narasimham v. Sub-Inspector of Police ..	737
Mahakor ..	751	Mallappa Tavargi ..	384
Mahamadbuksh Karimbuksh ..	21	Mallappa Reddi ..	447, 449
Mahmadkhan Sultankhan ..	296	Mallela Obiah ..	444
Mahammad Ishaq ..	394	Mallison ..	793
" Karem Ali v. Jorabdi ..	400	Mallory ..	878
Maharaj Misser ..	406, 411, 414	Malu Arjun ..	98, 103
Maharajah Madhav Singh, in re ..	131	Mam Raj ..	748
Mahboob ..	877	Mammun ..	187, 637
Mahbub ..	757	Man ..	607
Mahesh Singh ..	184	Managil Karuvan ..	542
Mahesri Baksh Singh ..	388	Manant ..	868
Mahla ..	661, 663	Manaruddi ..	292
Mahmood Hossain ..	864	Mana Sing ..	184
Mahomed Asger ..	215
" Ayoob ..	13
" Elim Abdool Kureem ..	617, 620

Manbir	1100	Marimuttu	939
Mancherji Kavvasji	580, 582, 583	Markuss	163, 665
Manchu Paidigadu v. Kadinsetti		Marmaduke Pickthall	35
Tamayya	793	" " (No. 2)	35
Mandru Gadaba	158	Marsh v. Loader	141
Manekchand	383	Martin (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 56)	889
Manga Ram	455	" (1 Leach 171)	799
Mangal	1114	" (5 C. & P. 128)	612
" Singh	101	" (5 Q. B. D. 34)	434, 982
" Tokchand	3	" (8 Q. B. D. 54)	643, 1109
Mangar Ram v. Behari	412	" v. Benjamin	580
Mangat	595	" Kelly	218
" Rai	441	Martindale	976
Mangavalli Ranganayakamma	669, 674	Martu Vithoba Prabhu	670
Mangaya Shah	876	Maru	392
Mangesh Jiwaji	1097, 1117	Maruti Dada	208
Mangobind Muchi	183, 737	Mary Baines	874
Mangrey	648	" Briggs	1037
Mangu	366	" Carlile	1070
Mani Chandra Das	375	" Farrow	704
Mania Goundan	914	" Good	458
Manika Asari	50, 972	" Mazagora	973
Manikam Pillai	895	" Williams	689
Manikka Veera Raghav Chariar	920	Mascarenhas	1059, 1067
Manikum	791	Masit	591
Manindra Chandra Ghose	56	Mason (2 East P. C. 796)	30
Maniruddin	183, 184, 281	" (R. & R. 419)	820
Maniruddin v. Gaur Chandra	1193	Massey v. Morris	8, 9
Manj Din	1046, 1052	Masti	655
Manjamma v. Sheshgirirao	770	Mata Dayal	391, 398, 451
Manjaya v. Shesha Shetti	1080	" Prasad	891
Manktelow	743, 750	Matabar Shekh	790
Mankura Pasi	836, 837	Matan	367
Manning	933	Mathi	796
Mansing Daji Patil	1119	Mathro	80
Manohar	367	Mathro Rai	100, 102
Manohar Raiji	1045, 1046	Mathura Das (6 All. 491)	213, 214
Manomohan Ghose	247, 251, 255, 256, 259	" " (16 All. 80)	986
Mansang Bhaysang	792	" Naikin v. Esu Naikin	770
Mansing Daji Patil	1119	" Prasad	43, 368, 447
Mansur Husain	953	" Sahu v. Damri Ram	411
Mantriprgrada Markondeyulu	575, 576	" Singh	471
Manuel Philip	20	" Thakur	827, 828
Maqud Husain	594	Mathuramalingam	81
Marakathan	769	Mati Lal Lahiri	1009
Marcus	973	Matilal v. Kanhai Lal Das	1021
Maria Giles	887	Mato Ho	608, 654
Mariano	1087	Mattaparti Panda	102
Marigawda	987	Matthews	920
Marigowda v. Srinivasa Rangachar	924	Matthew Byrne	891
Marimuthu (1 Weir 364)	771	Matthias Kelly	634
" (18 L. W. 183)	607, 693	Matti Venkanna	278
" In re	144	Matukdhari Singh	927
" Naidu	287	Matuki Misser	355, 427
		Maud Ally	563
		Maud Kersey	651

Maula Bakhsh	171, 851	Meeah Mahomed	707
.. Baksh	707	Meelan Khalifa v. Dwarkanath
Mauler	295	.. Goopta	102
Mg. Gyi (1 Rang. 390) ..	58	Meer Alum Khan	759
.. (7 L. B. R. 13) ..	148	.. Burks v. Mg Hla Pe ..	1081
.. Kado	911, 914	.. Yar Ali	876
.. Maung	1091	Meera	889, 1025
.. Myn Gyi v. Nga Po Shwe ..	853	Meetalahgath Poker	537
.. Po	191	.. Megha	110
.. Po Hmyin (1 B. L. J. 1) ..	910	.. Megha Meeah	609, 611
.. " (2 Rang. 53) ..	1119	.. Megraj	318, 162, 175
.. Pu	121	.. Mehar Dowalia	792, 954
.. San Myin	913	.. Mehdi Hasam	921
.. Shwe	937	.. Mehervanji Bejanji ..	899, 938
.. " Ku	944	.. Mehr Hahi	320, 659
.. " Zin v. Mg Po Ngwa ..	571, 572	.. Mehr Khan	651
.. Thi v. Henry Po Saw ..	1083	.. Mehran	757
.. U	618	.. Mehran Singh	394
Mawbey	391	.. Mehru	877
May (2 East P. C. 796) ..	50	.. Mehter Ali	707
.. (8 Cox 121) ..	807	.. Mellish	807
.. (10 Cox 418) ..	687	.. Menazoodin	72
Maya Das	1080	.. Menta Kondubhothu ..	1073
Maya Ram v. Nichala Katani ..	793	.. Meriam	80, 81, 1125
Mayadeb Gossami	407	.. Merian	783
Mayandi Pillai	858	.. Meridith v. Sanjibani Das ..	690
Mayers	778	.. Merivale v. Carson	1071
Mazagora	973	.. Merry	782
Mazhar Husain	398, 174, 983	.. Merry v. Green	845
M'Athey	874	.. Methi Mulhab	736
M'Loughlin	924	.. Methuram v. Jagannath ..	1079
M'Naphten's case	114, 117, 119, 152	.. Meumer, Re	19
McCarthy	1061, 1065	.. Mew, In re	12, 13
McDonald	807	.. Mhadnack	1103
McDonell	1078	.. Mhatu Balaji	429
McGavaran	739	.. Mi Hla So v. Nga Than ..	177
McGrath	812	.. Kun Ya	579
McGrowther's case	172	.. Min Si	577
McIntosh	989	.. Ngwe v. Mi Chit	452
McIntyre	614	.. On	566
McLeod	1060, 1069	.. Pyo Nyo	688, 689
McMahon	876	.. Shabi	647
McPherson	1114, 1115	.. Shwe Ke	408, 414
McQuire v. West. Mor. News Co. ..	1071	.. Te	1098
McRue	780	.. Tok v. Mi Shan Ma	951
Me Ya	492	.. Wa	452
Mead	792	.. Ya Pyan	537
Mead v. Young	981	.. Miard	811
Meade	157, 178	.. Michael	644, 1035
Meajan	810, 813	.. " Byrne	518
Meajan v. Sharafatullah Khan ..	951	.. " Stokes	148, 153, 156
Meakin	157	.. Michell v. Jogessur Mochi ..	804
Meango v. Baviah	410	.. Midde Venkappa	628
Meath	338	.. Middleton	842
Medley	9, 544, 555	.. Mighell v. Sultan of Johore ..	6
		.. Migotti v. Colvill	67, 68

Mihan Singh (P. R. No. 26 of 1915).	298	Mohan	633, 634
" " (P. R. No. 16 of 1883)	1019	Mohandas K. Gandhi	35
" " (1 Lah. 1)	221	Mohanundo Bhundary	80, 881
Miharban	507, 910	Moharaj Misser	414
Miles v. Hutchings	921	Mohar Singh	830
Milkhi Ram	959	Mohendra Nath Misser	407
Millard (R. & R. 215)	997	Mohar Sheikh	281, 314, 1079
" (10 Mad. 218)	1035	Mohesh Chandra Chaudhari	400
Miller (6 Cox 353)	872	" Chundar Mookerjee	499
" (13 Cox 179)	751	" Sircar	998
Milish v. Lloyds	1070	" Chunder	574
Mills	887	Moheshwari Proshad	870
Milton v. Sherman	893	Mohim Chunder Sil	753, 759, 902
Mina Nuggerbhatin	99	Mohini Mohan Banerjee	378, 737
Minty v. Sylvester	585	" v. Harendra Chan-
Mir Afzal	426, 428, 430	dra	723
" Ekrar Ali	398, 980	Mohit Kumar Mukerjee	995
" Sarwar Jan	493	Mohit Pandey	201, 667
Miran Baksh	707, 752	Mohna (P. R. No. 16 of 1901)	830
" Shah	1080	" (7 L. L. J. 59)	649
Miras Chowkidar	685, 686, 919	" (P. R. No. 20 of 1895)	83
Mirchia	10	" alias Kohara	824
Mirza Hassan Mirza v. Musst.		Mohubbut	768
Mahbubani	452	Mohun v. Gunsham	1051
Mirza Sikunder Bukhut	766	Mohunt Pursoram Doss	1063, 1079, 1082
Mithoo Sing v. Gopal Lal	99, 292	Mohur Mir	99, 291
Mitthu Lal	202	" Singh v. Laloo	927
Mitto Singh	193	Moideen Bawa v. Allandoo	808
Moah	979	Moir v. Williams	945
Mobarak Ali	993	Moizuddin	186
Mobarruk	811	Mojev	894, 902
Modhoo Manjee	825	Mokam Abayya	914
" Paul	749	Mokand Ram	1059, 1060
Modun Mohan	45	Mokandi v. Mohri	1051
Mogul Steamship Co. v. McGregor		Mokee	178, 186
Gow & Co.	477	Molla Fuzla Karim	441
Mohabut	888	Moluck Chand Khahfa	110, 112
Mohadeo Misser v. Narayan Ram	397	Moni Prodhano	632
Mohajan Sheikh	489	Monkhouse	157
Mohamed Asger	215, 622	Monmohan Roy	227
" Ismail v. Mahomed		" (24 W. R. 33)	874
" Tahir	1058	" (20 C. W. N. 292)	231
" Siddiq	406	Monson v. Tussand	1064
" Wasil	358	Moddy	997
Mohammad Husain (17 A. L. J. R.		Mookhandi	826
820)	590	Mooktaram Sirdar	833
" " (23 A. L. J. R.		Moon	757, 775
10)	750	Mooneappa Oodian	362, 392
" Ismail Khan	406	Moore (2 C. & P. 235)	511
" Kajin v. Jorabdi Nas-		" (3 C. & K. 319)	157
kar	913	" (2 B. & Ad. 184)	541, 545
" Miyan	716	" (1 Leach 325)	820
" Mohsin	576	Moorga Chetty	14, 64, 869, 875
" Narsuddin	959	Moosunbroo	356
" Yar	634	Mootkee Kora	80, 824
Mohammed Kazi	487	Morais	492

Morby	621	Muhammad Hayat ..	416, 445
Morfit	788	„ Husain ..	150, 507
Morgan	663	„ Hussain ..	880
Moriarty v. Brooks ..	924	„ Ibrahim v. Shaik Da-
Moro Balvant	174	wood.. ..	697
Moroba Bhaskarji ..	1096	„ Ishaq	405
Morriot	665	„ Ismail Khan ..	357
Morris v. Blackman ..	583	„ Khalil	358
„ v. Miller	1038	„ Nissa	1036
Morton	989	„ Sadiq	572
Moses	853	„ Saeed Khan 50, 972, 980
Moss	210, 396, 866, 905	„ Saib	88
Mostyn v. Fabrigas ..	218	„ Shah	891, 896, 977
Motawel Pakuran ..	111	„ Shah Khan ..	432, 475
Motee Chand v. Mohendronath Hal-		„ Sharif	80, 111
dar	15	„ Sirdar	977, 1008
Motee Jolaha	801, 825, 881	„ Usman	303
Mothoora Nath Roy ..	1053	„ Yar	112
Moti Lal (24 All. 155) 597, 916, 919,		„ Yusuf-ud-din ..	4, 20
1098		Muhammada	43, 329, 844
„ (23 A. L. J. R. 679) ..	938	Mukandi Lal	581
„ Ghose	35	Muker Srinivasa Padayachi ..	997
Motilal	940	Mukerji	190
„ Hiralal	408	Mukh Ram	107
„ v. Emperor	943	Mukhtar Ahmed	710
Moti Ram	475	Mukun	740
Moulavie Ally Kurreem v. Teign-		Mukund Babu Vethe ..	722
mouth Sandys	1076	„ Ram	1086
Moulton Cox	878	Mukunda Behari v. Bhikari Charan
Moulvie Abdus Subhan v. Kurban		Mahanti	454
Ali	591	Mula	1110
„ Ahmudoollah	23	„ (2 All. 105)	399, 405
Moulvy Abdool Luteef ..	367, 369	„ (17 A. L. J. R. 32) ..	365
Mousi Lal	489	„ (P. R. No. 13 of 1888) 770, 775
Movila Kurmiah	650	„ Singh	428
Muchi Mian	471	Mulai Singh	995
Muddo Soodun Shaw ..	420	Mulcahy	200
Muddun Mohun Bose ..	428	Mulharji	368, 421
Muds-ood-deen	43, 317	Muli	493
Muggapa	408	Mulia	676
Mughlu	1052	Mulla	948, 959
Muhammad (P. R. No 32 of 1886) 416		„ Abdul Rahim	259
„ (P. R. No. 15 of 1889) 871		Mullany	402
„ (2 Lab. 342)	964	Mullins v. Collins	8
„ Ali (23 All. 81)	465	Mul Raj	387
„ (P. L. R. No. 157 of		„ Singh	987
1913)	691	Mulshankar Harinand Bhat ..	912
„ „ Shet	872, 873	Mulua	2
„ Ata	789	Mullua	948
„ Bakbsh	211, 745	Mullu Teli	959
„ Baksh (P. R. No. 21		Mumtaz Ali	576 of 1882)	428	Munawar	107
„ „ (P. R. No. 16 of		Mungroo and Puttroo ..	102, 751
1904)	493	Mungul Dass	407, 414
„ Din	720	Munnadia Pillai	942

Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta v. Mahomed Ali ..	511	Musst. Dabia ..	39
" Corporation of Calcutta ..	45, 321	" Danyah v. Mussamat ..	60
Munisami ..	732	" Sooh ..	103
Munni Bukah ..	401, 405	" Gholam Fatima ..	18
Munshi Isser ..	370	" Hafizan Bibi v. Must. ..	87
" Ram v. Dera Mul ..	411	" Suba Bibi ..	87
Munslow ..	1060	" Joomee ..	10, 746, 747
Munster v. Lamb ..	1077	" Kesar ..	681, 682
Munuswamy Pillay ..	791	" Khairo ..	30
Munwar Khan ..	405	" Kishen Kour ..	80
Muppan ..	486	" Mathro ..	757
Murad ..	318, 419, 452	" Mehran ..	99
Muradi ..	216	" Mina Nuggerbhatin ..	1036
Murarji Raghunath ..	900	" Muhammed Nissa ..	676
Murli ..	435, 436	" Mulia ..	686
" Brahman ..	833, 835	" Nankee ..	216, 410
" Dhar ..	499	" Niruni ..	745
Murliidhar (P. R. No. 22 of 1887) ..	302	" Oorzcerm ..	664
" (Unrep. Cr. C. 145) ..	531	" Pemkoer ..	688
" Bhagwandas ..	1155, 1160	" Piara ..	791, 798
Murphy (9 A.H. 666) ..	853	" Piari Dalaiya ..	150
" (6 C. & P. 104) ..	160, 610	" Poochee ..	768
Murray (1 F. & F. 80) ..	403	" Rahman ..	748
" (5 Cox 509) ..	556	" Raj Begum v. Nawab ..	748
" (21 Cal. 103) ..	462	" Reza Hoossein ..	686
Murton ..	612	" Ram Dai ..	1112, 1117
Muruga Pillai ..	929	" Rupsir Panku ..	1036
Murugan ..	843, 845	" Ruri ..	688
Murugappa Naicker ..	378	" Saraswati ..	426
Murugesu Pillai ..	1084	" Sharina ..	610
Murughandi ..	394	" Siryan ..	166, 748, 749
Musa (40 Mad. 556) ..	313	" Soma ..	687
" (22 A. L. J. R 520) ..	697	" Sukhdeh ..	662
Musai Kamat ..	873, 879	" Sultan ..	775
Musgrave v. Medex ..	392	" Sunder ..	589
" v. Pullido ..	132	" Zingoo ..	594
Mushtari, Chief Officer of ..	27, 28	Mustan ..	6
Mussahur Daoudh ..	103	Musurus Bey v. Gadhan ..	873, 875
Musst. Amona ..	142, 143	Mutaya ..	328
" Anandi ..	151, 155	Muthalagiri Raju ..	386
" Bakhan ..	662	Muthiala Chetti v. Bapun Saib ..	993
" Bakhtawar ..	207	Muthia Chetti ..	551
" Bakhtawari ..	673, 688, 1111	Muthian ..	452
" Begum ..	541	Muthoorapershad Panday ..	385, 937
" Bhagan ..	684, 686	Muthra v. Jawahur ..	444, 447, 451, 452
" Bhagwatia ..	1040	" v. Roora ..	370
" Bhooda ..	754	Muthu Goundan ..	745
" Bhuran ..	684, 685, 686	" Ibrah ..	81
" Bhutia ..	775	Muthuramalingam ..	867
" Bibi ..	1031, 1040	Muthusami Pillai ..	1081, 1083
" Bilace ..	688	" Naidu ..	150
" Budho ..	614	Muthuswami Asari ..	746
" Chamia ..	1033	" Sastri v. Narayan Sastri ..	545
" Chubbooa ..	763	Mutters (31 L. J. M. C. 22) ..	545

Mutters (10 Cox 50)	800	Nanabhai Sadanand v. Dwarkadas
Muttirulappa	828	Dharamaji	384
Muttumira	541, 542	Nanak Chand (3 A. W. N. 188) ..	944
Mutturaman Chetti	441	" (P. R. No. 20 of 1913)
Mutty Khan v. Mungloo Khansana			537
	1050	Nand Kishore (6 All. 248) ..	661
" Lal Chuttopadya	321	" " (19 All. 335) ..	475
Muvvala Kondaiya	605, 625	" " (12 A. W. N. 1) ..	710
Muzhar Hussein	399	Nandkumar Bose	383, 384, 386
Muzhur Hossein	288	Nand Lal (P. R. No. 36 of 1888) ..	892
Myaing	829	" (24 A. W. N. 223) ..	321
Mya Zan	944	" " Singh	202, 213, 1037
Mycock	745	Nand Singh	944
Mylapore Krishnasami	260	Nanda	766
Mytee	922	Nandan	942
		Nandeyapagowda	921, 933
		Nandi	1035
		Nandlal	735
		Nando Lal v. Mitter	1090
		Nandu	920
		Nanhe Khan	793
		Naniamkandi v. Thazhishthatha ..	384
		Nanjan	485, 486, 492
		Nanjunda Rau	445, 449, 450
		Nanjundappa	704
		Nankee	686
		Nanni	541
		Nanny Simpson's case	163
		Nantamram	43
		Naor Mahomed Sulaiman	564
		Narain	279, 737
		" Acharj	433
		" Adhikari	563
		" Bagdee	879
		" Das (17 A. L. J. R. 927) ..	938, 939
		" " (3 Lah 144)	191, 193
		" Krishna	922
		" Singh (1905, U. B. R. P. C.
		25)	924
		Naranbhai Bhulabhai	472
		Narantakath v. Parakkal ..	1034, 1036
		Narasaiya	348
		Narasamma	579
		Narasimha v. Shree Krishna ..	596, 597
		Narayan	329
		" Babaji	477, 478
		" Krishna	922
		" Pasi	700, 701
		Narayana	383
		Narayana Reddi	348
		Narayanan Nair (K.)	409
		Narayanappa	350
		Narayanawamy Iyer	395
		Narbadeshwar	737
		Nareshi Singh	177, 184, 185

N

Nari	769	Nannai Chatteraj	744, 751
Naro Gopal	54, 974, 989	Nemdhari Singh	100, 102
Narasang Pathabhai 180, 183, 184, 185,	281	Nemi Chand v. Wallace	1012
Narshi	916	Nemichand	322
Narsingabhan	736	Nepal	156
Narsing Charan Mahapatra	714	Netai Luskar	653
Narsu (Unrep. Cr. C. 185)	921	Nettleton	808
„ (Unrep. Cr. C. 357)	922	Nevor Parivatappa	511
„ (6 Bom. L. R. 548)	113	Newton	1038
Narumal Jawarmal	550	Nga Aung Ba	977
Nash	50, 748, 973	„ „ Dwe	739
Nashkir	659	„ „ Kyaw Zan	428
Nasik Conspiracy case	1170	„ „ Po	366
Nasiruddin	51	„ „ So	804, 922
Nassib Chowdhry v. Nanno Chow-		„ „ Ba Gyaw	158, 697
dry	788	„ „ Sein	931, 996
Nataraja Iyer	936	„ „ Thein	979
„ Pillai	43	„ „ Tu	603
Nath Singh	291, 753	„ „ Bo Gale	567
Natha Kalyan	800	„ „ Gyi	413
„ Lalla	567	„ „ Lwin	431
„ Mula	91	„ „ Chan Mya	756, 758
„ Reva	571	„ „ Chet	702
„ Singh (P. R. No. 11 of 1883). 211,	758	„ „ Chet Kyi	313
„ „ (P. R. No. 6 of 1903) 920		„ „ Cho (S. J. L. B. 353)	86
„ „ (P. R. No. 22 of 1910) 719		„ „ (S. J. L. B. 411)	567
Nathalal Bapuji	802	„ „ Chow	238
Nathalie Miard	811	„ „ Dwe	620, 626
Nathan v. Woolf	1039	„ „ E	875
Nathji v. Lalbhai	1083	„ „ Han	653
Nathu (15 All. 19)	293	„ „ Hat	379
„ (45 All. 557)	624	„ „ Hla Tun U	184
„ Sheikh	393, 411	„ „ Hmu	857
Nattekallappa	632	„ „ Hnin	319
Natwarai	17	„ „ I	829
Naurang	417, 105	„ „ Ka	567
Naurang Mal	441	„ „ Kaing	107
Naushe Ali Khan	795	„ „ Kaman	640
Navalmal valad Umedmal	452	„ „ Kan Hla	144
Nawab	284, 291, 623, 639,	„ „ Tha	116, 811
	641	„ „ Khan	626
Nawab Ali	946	„ „ Ku	70
Nawabji	31	„ „ Kun Ba	107
Nawtara Singh	792, 844	„ „ Kyaw Din	211
Nayamuddin	166, 642, 643	„ „ „ Dun	177, 189
Nayan Suk Methar	107, 108	„ „ „ Zan	189
Naylor	403	„ „ Kyawt Yaung	281
Nazamuddin	43	„ „ Kyin	692
Nazir Khan	1051	„ „ Kywet	875
Nazoo Fakir	297	„ „ Lu Gyi	110
Nazru	428	„ „ „ Ngo Gyi	828, 835, 838
Neela Bebee	753	„ „ Lun	922
Negus	807, 808	„ „ „ Mya	658
Nelson and Brand	123	„ „ Maung	622, 628
		„ „ Meik	80
		„ „ Min Po	606

Nga Mya	13	Nga Po Thit	699
" Myaing Gyi	88	" " Tok	943
" Myat Aung	929	" " Tun	383
" " Tha	121	" " Twe	854
" " Thin	557, 659, 715	" " Ya	943
" Nan Da	183	" Pyan (1 L.B.R. 359)	648
" Ne U	758	" " (4 B. L. T. 267)	162
" Nge (P. J. L. B. 328)	653	" Pye	987
" " (1095), U. B. R. P. C. 17)	758	" Pyo	359
" " (11 Burma L. R. 326)	756, 759	" San	627
" Ni Ta	757, 758	" " Dun (S. J. L. B. 444)	97
" Nu Ban	627, 641	" " " (1904, U. B. R. P. C. 1)	102
" Nyen U	465	" " Hlaing	744
" Nyo	466	" " Nyein	510
" Ok Gyi	804	" " Pe	605
" On Thin	58, 1066	" " Yun	924
" Paik Hmwe	922	" Saw	430
" Paing	809	" Sein (S. J. L. B. 569)	572
" Pan Bee	802, 961	" " (3 L. B. R. 121)	829
" " E	805	" " Po	107
" " Gyi	662	" Shan	467, 908
" " Hlaing	946, 1120	" " Gale	809
" Paw	45	" " Gyi	640
" Paw E.	45	" Shein	98
" Po	331	" Shwe Baw	606
" Po	97	" " Bwin	202
" " Aung	620, 652, 654	" " Gon	617
" " Chein	486	" " Lan	81
" " Chet	608	" " Laukke	929
" " E	673	" " Lu	715
" " Hle	799	" " Meik	791
" " Kya	215	" " Nwe	669
" " Kyaw (1904, 1 U. B. R. P. C. 3)	333, 1111	" " Nyo	512
" " " (1902, 1 U. B. R. P. C. 1)	608	" " Pe	766
" " " (S. J. L. B. 334)	874	" " Po	691
" " Lon	825	" " Tha U	640
" " Lu	909	" " Thwe	749, 768, 771
" " Lwin	431	" " Waing	1095
" " Maung	896	" " Ya	291
" " Naing	386	" " Zan	291, 795, 813
" " On	430	" Si	918
" " Saing	1012	" Son Min	101
" " San	587, 594	" Te	47, 819, 854
" " Saw (1901, 1 U. B. R. P. C. 328)	754	" Te Hla	719
" " " (S. J. L. B. 410)	795	" Tha Dawe	801
" " " (2 B. L. J. 99)	655	" " Ku	715
" " Seik	81	" " Sin	647
" " Sein (1 L. B. R. 233)	56, 58, 622	" " Zan (1 L. B. R. 292)	81
" " Tha	156, 608	" " " (8 B. L. R. 80)	916
" " Thaing	107	" " " (1905, U. B. R. P. C. 19)	857
" " Thaw	1046	" Thein O	793
" " Theik	673	" Thet Hnin	626
		" Tok Kyi	943

Nga Tan Baw (1907, U. B. R. P. C.	Nobin Chunder Banerji ..	153, 155
5) 58	" " Holdur ..	787
" " (14 Burma L.R. 361) 57, 625	" " Mudduck ..	912
" " Byu 801	" " Sircar ..	817, 850
" " E 696	Nobin Dome ..	174, 1073
" " Kaing 144, 780	Nobo Kishore Chuckerbutty ..	383
" " U. 511	Nobokisto Ghose ..	442, 445, 452
" Yun Tha 113, 116	Nokul Nushyo ..	631
" U Thit 939	Nolloth ..	8
" Waik 672	Noni Gopal Gupta ..	238, 245
" Ya Baw 691	Noor Mahomed ..	512
" " Po 567	" " Suleman ..	564
" Yan E 883	" " r. Kaikhoorn ..	980
" Yauk 801	Noorjan ..	769
" Yon 401	Noorubooobu ..	485
Niadar 1050	Norman ..	851
" " Mal 516	North Meath ..	338
Niamat 916	Nota Ram ..	145
Niaz Ahmad 531	Noujan ..	98, 102, 103
" " Ali (5 All. 17) 362, 391, 411	Nourjan ..	775
" " (27 A. W. N. 149) .. 450	Nowabdee ..	175
" " (25 A. W. N. 2) .. 155	Nowell Wilkinson ..	789
Nibaran Chandra Roy .. 649	Nowrangi Singh ..	737
Nichol 739	Nripendra Bhusan Ray v. Gobinda. 309
Nicholls 621, 877	Nubi Buksh v. Mussammat Oomra 1097
Nidamarti Nagabhushanam 558, 660	Nujcebutoolah ..	981
Niddha 669, 670, 1108	Nujum Ali ..	974, 995
Nidhi 833, 834	Numbidripad ..	354
Nihal 793, 843	Nund Mohun Sirkar ..	955
Nihal Singh (P. R. No. 31 of 1866) 875	Nunda ..	399, 1118
" (P. R. No. 37 of 1882) 111	Nur Dad ..	965
Nihala (P. R. No. 11 of 1877) .. 107	" " Din ..	111
" (P. R. No. 14 of 1872) .. 446	" " Kadir v. Zuleikha Bibi ..	748
" (P. W. R. Cr. R. No. 22 of 1909) .. 1052	" " Mahomed ..	515
Nikka Jogi 279	Nuran ..	80, 81
Nikunja Behary Sen v. Harendra	Nur Khan ..	101
Chandra Sinha 1078	Nurodin ..	536, 898
Nilakanta 214, 237, 238	Nussurooddeen Shazwal ..	363
Nilappa Dayappa 555	Nuzur Ali ..	998
Nilmadhub Sircar 622	Nyo Hla Aung ..	636
Nilmoney Nag v. Durga Pada .. 1011		0
Nilmony Poddar 97, 99, 101
Nilrutton Sein 102	Obammal ..	925
Nira Chand Mookerji .. 204, 208, 395, 416	Obbava ..	875
Nirichan 95, 98, 961, 707	Obayya ..	796, 845, 914
Nirmal Das 873	Obhoy Churn Chuckerbutty ..	322
" " Kanta Roy .. 57, 209, 674	O'Brien ..	609, 611, 659, 694, 863
" " Singh 710, 1096	O'Brien v. Clement ..	1058
Niruni 216	O'Connor v. Bradshaw ..	581
Nisar Muhammad Khan 516	Odda Kolanthan ..	351
Nishi Kanta Pal 374, 649	Oxford (5 C. & P. 168) ..	145, 151
Nittar Mundle 1004	Ohi Bhusan Adhikary ..	879
Nizam Din 813	Okhoy Coomar Shaw ..	851
Noakes 660	Oliifer ..	746
	Oliphant ..	1008

Ollis	901	Palani Palagan	409
Omkar Rampratap	660	Palaniandy v. Arunachalam	321
Onooram v. Lamessor	573	Palaniappa Chetti v. Annamalai Chetti	423
On Shwe	626	Palathingal Valia	236
Oodaji	482	Palin	1007
Oodun Lall	419	Palmer	630, 634
Ooram Sungra	635	Paltu Singh	100
Ootum Chund	472	Pamba Rangadu	946
Oorzeerun	745	Pampapati Sastri v. Subba Sastri	412
Orchard	313	Panatulla	354, 357
Orris	874	Panchanada Tambiran	353, 500
Orton	160	Panchanan Bose	292
Osborn	1062	Pandaram Thulkanam	486
Osborne	782	Pandharnath Pundlik Revankar	804
Osman Sardar	227, 228	Pandia Mahar	554
Otaruddi v. Kalifuddi Manjhi	819, 823	Pandita alias Rahimulla Pramanik	789, 579
Overton	401	v. Rahimulla Akunda	571
Owen (4 C. & P. 236)	143	Pandu	410
„ (1 M. C. C. 96)	217	„ Namaji	410
„ Owens	925	„ bin Vithoji	498
„ M'Loughlin	924	Pandurang Ramachandra	898
Owens	995	Pandya Nayak	353
Oxford	145	Pandyaram Sastrulu	745

P

P. Chengama Naidu	928	Pania	842
P. Durgiah	899, 951	Panjab Singh	951
P. Kamaraju	945	Papa Naiken	499
P. Subbaiya	796	Papa Sami	775
P. Varadarajulu Nayudu	256	Pappineau	556
P. A. Mariano	1087	Parabhu Ghatgeppa	860
P. A. Somasundaram Pillai	988, 1001	Parabu	115, 450
Pachkauri v. Q. E.	180, 185, 281, 289	Paranga	348
Packinathan	889, 902	Parankusam Narasaya Pantulu v. R. A. E. Stuart	720, 722
Padala Venkatasami	201, 984, 1109, 1110, 1113, 1114	Parapravan Bavothi Hadgi	939
Padam Babul Mhatre	1076	Paras Ram	900
Padam Singh	819, 1051	„ Dube	144, 777
Padarath	376	Parashram Keshav	1090
Padarath Singh v. Ratan Singh	406, 412	„ Yeshvant	575
Padati Chenchu Reddi	719, 811	Parbati Charan Chatterji	221
Padmanabha Panjikannaya	204	Parbhudas Ambaram	1002
Padmaraju Pantulu v. Venkata-ramana	1081	Parbutty Charn Aich	382
Padmavati	771	Parbutty Churn Chuckervutty	842, 846
Page	515	„ „ Sircar	393
Pahlwan	1049	Parichat	290
Paiambar Bakhsh	500	Parimi Bapirazu v. Bellam Konda	449
Paimullah	877	Parish	973
Paira Ram	1046, 1113	Parker v. Lord Advocate	793
Pal Singh	158, 628, 634	Parkes	982
Palakora Kathersa	563	Parlement Belge	6
Palani Aari	1064, 1068, 1085	Parliam	579
„ Goundan	609, 610, 945, 1098	Parmaya	357, 358
		Parmeshar Dat	44, 908
		Parmeshwar Lal	449, 970
		„ Rai	384, 386, 387
		„ Singh (4 C. W. N. 345)	287

Parmeshwar Singh (38 Cal. 180)	919, 939	Pershad	99, 291
Parmeswari Subbi	769	Perumal Naiken	623
Parr	871	Perumalu	736
Parsotam Das	845	Pestonji Dinshaw	206
Parshram Raysing	393	Peter Mograth	812
Parsi Hajra v. Bhandhu Dhanuk ..	155	Rinaldi	975
Parsiddhan Singh	489	Rozinski	729
Partridge	891	Stanton	780
Parushullah Mundul v. Kheroo		Peterson	1034, 1109, 1114
Mundul	515, 516	Pethan Koyan	737
Parvathi v. Mannar	1063	Pet hirela Virappa	813
Parwari	1061	Petley and Son v. S. Ah Kyun ..	1011, 1021
Paryag Rai v. Arju Man	790	Petta Gazi	651
Pascoe	467	Pha Laung	56
Pasput Gope v. Rambhajan Ojha ..	617	Phalla v. Jiwan Sing	211, 1051
Pasupuleti Ramdoss	476	Phanendra Nath Mitter	248, 255, 259, 582
Pateman	970	Pharmaceutical Society v. London
Patha	551	and Provincial Supply Associa-
Patraj	408	tion	37, 553
Patrick Carroll	157	Pharmaceutical Society v. White ..	553
Kelly	216	Phiaz Mahamad	1105, 1106
Welch	516	Phikku	1051
Welsh	505	Philip	20
Paun Pandah	206	Philips	143
Paung Tha Ri	541	Phillip May	807
Paupayya v. Narsannah	393	Phillips v. Phillips	1015
Payag Singh	309	Phillipotts	402
Payini Chellaya	1081	Phimini Ramudu	692
Payne	800	Phiraya Mal	540
Peacock	982	Phoebe Bramley	796
Pearce	392	Phomonee Ahum	646
Pearson	157	Phool Chand Brojobassee	353
Peary Mohun Sircar	281	Phoolman Tewary v. Satram Ojha ..	88
Pedda Maddulegadu	796	Phul Singh	796
Peelimuthu Tewari	285	Phula Singh	763
Peer Mahomed	215	Phulel	368, 409
Peera	836	Phuman	840, 842, 843
Pelkoo Nushyo	193, 427	Phuman Singh (6 L. L. J. 318) ..	753
Pemantle	746, 747, 748	Phundi Ram	1080, 1082
Pembliton	477	Piara	688
Pemkoer	664	Piare	628
Pennell	1078	Piare Lal	477
Pera Raju	890, 981, 982	Piari Dulaiya	791, 798
Percy Henry Burn	200	Pickthall	35
Periannan	364	(No. 2.)	35
Periannamalawaram	350	Pidda Enumandugaru	821
Periapien	283	Pierce	844
Periaswamy Kangani	742	Pika Bewa	659, 664
Periyannan	796	Pillagan	559
Periyaswami Kotaswami Tever ..	1058, 1060, 1089	Pillala	441
Perkes	950	Pimento	1064
Perkins	160	Pindi Das	269
Perry	689	Pir Bakhsh	877
Perry L. Truefitt	1010	Qadir Bakhsh Shah	396

Pir Mahomed	93	Poonai Fattemah	166, 608, 642
Pira	678, 704	Poonit Singh v. Madho Bhat	379
Piran Ditta	1046	Poosia Naicken	400
Pirbhu	507	Poorusoolah Sikhdar	651
" Dial	998, 1001	Pooshoo	622
Pirtai	15, 31	Poresh Nath Sircar	289, 291, 292
Pirtappa	411	Poromeshur Aheer	801, 875
Pirtbi (3 O. C. 312)	1051	Portugal	25
" (6 L. L. J. 323)	651	Posha Hari	657
Piru Rama	100	Poshu bin Dhambuji	377
Pitani Rai	150	Potadu	186
Pitamber	1087	Potina Padmanabhaswami	547
Pitambur Singh	1038, 1016, 1051	Pottivadu v. Veerayya	937
Pitts	613	Poynton	799
Pluckwell v. Wilson	556	Prabh Dial v. Gurdit Singh	453
Plummer	200	Prabh Dyal	371
Po Ba	783	Prafula Kumar v. Harendra	1079, 1089, 1091
" Han	65	Prag Dat	180, 281, 288
" Hla	487	Prakash Chandra Sarkar	106
" Hlaing v. Ba E.	452	Pramath Nath Barat V.P.C. Lahiri. 718
" Ke	914	Pramotha Nath Roy Chowdhry	310
" Kin (1 L.B.R. 355)	940	Pran Kissen Bid	449
" " (2 L.B.R. 320)	639, 641	Pran Nath Shaha	930
" Lan	102, 755, 815	Prankhang	179, 182
" Maung	700	Prankisto Chander v. Bissonath
" Myaing	56, 831	Chunder	938
" Nyein	116, 804	Prankrishna Chandra	938
" Saing	1012, 1014	" Surma	210, 747, 751
" Serk	850, 852	Pratap Chandra Guha Roy	1061
" Set	642	Pratt (1 Mood. 250)	797
" Shin	978	" F. & F. 315)	878
" Sin	625	Prayag Gope	102
" Sin Gyi	625	Prayag Singh v. Morgan	943
" So	111	Prem Chand Singh v. Dharamadas
" Taw	732	Singh	385
" Thaung	28	Prem Chund Ouswal	80
" Thet	916	Prema Bhika	395, 902
" Tu	622	Premam	626
" Win	829	Premamundo Shaha v. Brindabun
" Ya	56, 58	Chung	959, 1105
" Yon v. Mohr. Bros. Ltd.	890	Premchand Dowlatrarm	352
" Ywet	850	Premsookh Dass	505
Pochun Chung	102, 1049, 1053	Preo Lal Mukerjee	182, 736
Pocock	660	Preonath Dey v. Gobordhone Maio. 544
Pohla	648	Preonath Bannerjee	48
Ponnambalam Pillai	853	Preo Nath Chowdhry	173, 863
Ponnammal	65	Pressy	778
Ponnuramam	796	Price (12 Q. B. D. 247)	545
Ponnusami Pillai	945	" (Unrep. Bom. 1910)	23
" Thevan	42	Primeit	744, 745, 749
Ponnuswami Iyer v. Ganapathi		Prince	127
Iyer	35, 321, 339	Privett	788
Ponrangam	770	Priyanath Gupta	66, 1095
Poochee	150	Profulla Kumar v. Harendra
Poomalai Udayan	182, 375, 376, 737	Nath	1079
Poona	1073, 1074

Profulla Kumar Mazumdar	57
Projapat Jha	387, 388		Q
Prokash Chandra Kundu	291, 736	Q. E. v. Jogendra Nath	182
" " Sarkar	349	" Narsang	180
" Chunder Das	500	" Tulsiram	182
" " Sarkar	349	Qadir Bakhsh	52, 501, 505
Prole v. Soady	1047	Quaim Din	873
Prosenno v. Uday Sant	790	Queen Hague	433
Prosunno Bose	987	Queen v. Malu Arjun	103
Prosunno Coomar Chatterjee	383	Quinn v. Leathem	205
Protab Chandra Guha Roy.	1062
Protab Chowkeedar	127		R
Proud	857	R. Thompson	662
Public Prosecutor of Madras v. Annam Naidu. 735		R. v. Brown	1115
" " v. Kimidi	43	" v. Cheesman	1114
" " v. Paramandi	654	" v. Clarence	167
Pubon	110, 111	" v. Collins	1115
Puddomonie Boistobee	892, 902	" v. Govinda	618
Pudmon	1088	" v. Jameson	262
Pakot Kotu	181, 182, 375, 376, 737	" v. Lynch	235
Pulin Behary Das	238, 239	" v. Ring	1115
Pulipati Venkiah	318	" v. Tomlinson	811
Pullman v. Hill & Co.	1059	" v. Williams	1115
Puna Luxman Bhil	87	Rab Nawaz Khan	1019
Punamalai Nadan	346	Rabi Lochan v. Purna Chandra	945
Punamchand Maneklal	986	Rachael Wardroper	873
Punchanun Tantee	609, 611, 692	Rachappa Mariappa	582
Pundit Mokand Ram	1059, 1060	" Tippanna	453
Pundlick Krishna Pat	371, 374	Radford	996
Punja Godad	923	Radha Kishan (5 All 36)	453
Punja Guni	30, 31	" " (7 L. L. J. 118, 26, P. L. R. 95)	806
Punja	899	" Kishen	4
Punni Besoyi	554	" Krishna v. Kissonlal	1013
Punya Sukharam	831	" Nath Chowdhry	309, 312
Puran	189	" Rangu	688
Purchase	230	Radhakanth Paul	102
Purmanund Dhulia	700	Radhika Mohan Kuri v. Lal Mohan Sha	391, 392
Purna Chandra Ghose	1067, 1075	Radkia Badru	690
" Kundu	486	Rafice Mahomed v. Abbas Khan	443
Purshotam Kala	1084	Raghavalu v. Sundaramurti	1012
" Nilkant Kasbekar	642	Raghavendra v. Kashinath Bhat	443, 1073
" Valji	315, 349	Ragho Singh	282
" Vanmah	377, 1096	Raghoji bin Kanoy	358
Purshottamas Ranchoddas. 1077, 1087		Raghu	445
Purshottam Ishvar Amin. 405, 408, 413		Raghu Nath Das	998
Purssoram Dass (2 W. R. 36)	1079	" Tiwari	369, 114, 455
" (3 W. R. 45)	145, 1075, 1079	Raghubir Singh	331
" Morari	858	Raghudatt Singh	319
Putiram Ruidas v. Mohamed Kasim 452		Raghunandan	297, 793
Pym	613	" Koeri	650
Pyo Gyi	897, 899, 862	Raghu Nath	901
		" Dass	198

Raghunath Rai	290, 821	Ralia	635
„ Venaik Dhulekar	302, 383	Ralya v. Arjan	58
Raghupat Sahay	453	Rama	946
Ragubir Kurmi	854	Ram Adhin	291
Rahal Singh	695	„ Angutha Singh	291
Raham Sha	634	„ Asre	607, 622
Rahamat Ali	19	„ Autar	873
Rahee	599	„ Baran	290, 821
Rahim Bakhsh	853, 1098	„ Chand	352, 402
Rahimatalli Mahomedalli Mulla	305, 575, 577	„ „ v. Jai Dial (P. L. R. 114 of 1912)	891
Rahimuddi v. Asgarali	283	„ „ v. „ „ (P. W. R. No. 18 of 1915)	887
Rahm Ali	491, 494	„ Chander	746
Rahman	597, 768	„ Charan	207
Rahmat	635	„ Chundra Saha v. Haji Meah	876
Rahmatulla	1046	„ Dai	686
Raj Bahadur	30, 902	„ Dass Boistab	369
„ Begum v. Reza Hussein	748	„ Dayal (3 All. 773)	111
„ Coomar Banerjee	888	„ „ (46 All. 94)	549
„ Kishore v. Joy Krishna Sen	853	„ „ (13 A. L. J. 1058)	796
„ Kisto Doss	195	„ „ (2 O. W. N. 510)	901
„ Kumar Dutt v. Tothal Sijo	1156	„ Dei	744, 753
„ Pal	254	„ Dhun Dey	862, 864, 865
Raja Bhagwan Bakhsh	309	„ Dial	668
„ Saliqram v. The Secretary of State for India	130	„ Dulal Gope	184
„ of Coorg v. The East India Co.	130	„ Dyal Mundle	937, 951
„ Khan	201	„ Ghulam Singh	377
„ Ram Singh	1065	„ Golam Singh	822
„ Shah	1059	„ Gopal Daw	384, 386
Rajada	108	„ Khelawan Singh	186, 298
Rajah Sahib	540	„ Khilawan	395, 426
Rajammall	771	„ Kishan Singh	288
Rajan	427	„ Krishna Biswas v. Mohendra Nath Mozumdar	84
Rajani Kanta Shaha v. Idris Thakur	1047	„ Krishna Singh	178, 179
„ Kanto Koer	648	„ Kuar	765, 766
„ „ Pal	494	„ Kumari	1035
Rajappa Ramappa Kalal	424	„ Lal Singh v. Hari Charan Ahir	789
Rajaram Bhavanishankar	399, 400	„ Lall Singh	186, 193
Rajcoomar Banerjee	209, 222	„ Lochan Sarcar	300, 311
„ Bose	117	„ Loghan Lal	449
„ Singh	918	„ Manica Shaha v. Brindabun Chunder Potdar	851
Raji	541	„ Narain	950
Rajkristo Biswas	330, 856	„ „ v. Jokhi Ram	435, 436
Rajnarain Sen	1083	„ Nareesh Singh	21
Rajoo Ghose	640	„ Nath (P. R. No. 1 of 1905)	247
Rakhal Chandra Laha	410, 412	„ „ (47 All. 268)	97, 201, 339, 340
„ Das Roy v. Kailash Banu	193, 1099	„ Newaz	62, 628
„ Naikari	210	„ Nhanu	802
Rakhmaji	735	„ Panda	206, 451
Rakma	892	„ Partab	99, 100, 291, 294
Rakhma kom Sadhu	546
Rakhmaji	735

Ram Pershad	876, 878	Raman Behari Das ..	868, 1009
" Prasad (3 A. W. N. 231) ..	620	" " Roy ..	888, 910
" " (22 A. W. N. 16) ..	472	" Singh ..	289, 735
" " (33 All. 773) ..	594	" v. Subramania ..	1076
" " (35 All. 58) ..	423	Ramanand ..	1067
" " (8 A. L. J. R. 927) ..	938	Ramanjam Chetti ..	580
" " Mahton ..	192	Ramanath Kalapahar ..	887, 889
" Prosad ..	452	Ramanna ..	768, 770, 774
" " Maity ..	994	Ramanuja Chariar v. Prathivathi
" " Roy v. Sooba Roy ..	453	Bayan ..	174
" Rang ..	959	Ramappa Hebbara ..	993
" Ranjan Roy ..	216, 217, 225	Ramara ..	493
" Rewaz Koowar ..	423	Ramasami (7 Mad. 292) ..	452
" Ruchea Singh ..	429	" (12 Mad. 148) ..	54, 174, 988, 1004
" Runjan Bhandari v. Madhub Ghose ..	452	" (13 Mad. 131) ..	45, 736
" Sagor ..	825	" (16 Mad. 364) ..	796
" Sahai ..	1151	" Goundan ..	497, 498
" Sahoy Bhur ..	158, 626	" Nadan ..	858
" Saran (5 All. 7) ..	348	" Naidu ..	1074
" " (P. R. No. 12 of 1906) ..	940, 942	" Padiyatchi v. Virasami
" " Rai ..	293	Padiyatchi ..	800
" " Tewari ..	486	" v. Lokanda ..	1060, 1087
" Sarup ..	99, 100, 938	Ramasamy ..	486, 495
" " Rai ..	295, 701	Ramasawmy Chetty ..	423
" Sewak ..	189	Ramaswami Aiyar v. Vaithalinga Mudali ..	46
" Singh ..	563	" " (41 Mad. 589) ..	53, 989
" Soondur Poddar ..	864	" " (44 Mad. 913) ..	1107
" Sukh ..	314, 697	" Goundan ..	426
" Sundar ..	20, 210, 744	" Iyengar ..	476
" " Das ..	146, 151	" Konan ..	493
Rama (Unrep. Cr. C. 484) ..	805, 946	" Mudaliar ..	581
" (35 All. 136) ..	386	" Tevan ..	290
" bin Rabhaji ..	72, 455	" Udayan ..	430
" Goundan ..	371	Ramatripati ..	554
" Lala ..	718	Ramava Channappa ..	662
" Muppan ..	298	Ramaya ..	845, 856
" Nana Hagavne ..	419	" Naika ..	379
" Nand ..	696	Ramayya ..	178, 289, 376
" Singh ..	607	Rambharthi Hirabharti ..	19, 366, 392, 405, 448
" Sona ..	1043	Rambilas ..	853
Ramachandra ..	474	Ramchandra Appaji ..	280
Ramachandra Narayan ..	244, 252, 253	" Eknath ..	385
" Nayako ..	386	" Ganesh ..	857
Ramachandrappa ..	34, 350	" Govind Harshe ..	858
Ramadass v. Anund ..	722	" v. Rutho ..	944
Ramadeen Doobay ..	286	Ramcharan Kairi ..	959
Ramadin ..	792	Ramdai ..	720
Ramajirav Jirhajirao ..	45, 45, 392, 400, 900	Ramdass Sachoo v. Anund Chunder	722
" Ramakka ..	676, 1112	Ramdayal ..	692
Ramakrishna ..	840, 844	Ram Dhari Singh ..	414
Ramakrishna Chetti v. Palaniyandi		Ramdhir ..	349
" Kudambar ..	927
Ramammal ..	991, 993

Ramdihal	102, 291	Rango Timaji	725, 883
Ramditta v. Kirpa Singh ..	511, 1098	Rangu	921
Ramesh Chandra Bannerjee.	832, 838	Ransford	199, 1118
" " Das	411	Rappel	85
Rameshar	932	Rash Behari Das 978, 983, 1006, 1007
" Rai	398, 418, 883	Rasookoollah	199
Rameshwar Singh	220, 319	Rasoolkhan Saheb	1012
" v. Gobind Prasad	900	Rasul 277, 286, 287, 288, 296, 299, 730
Ramgopal Dhur	980, 981	" Khan (P. L. R. No. 33 of 1910)	1053
Raminihi Nayar	472	" " (13 A. L. J. R. 470) ..	297
Ramjiawan	918	Ratan Moni Dey	320
Ramji Sajabarao	366	Ratanchand Dhanram	396
" Teli v. Ragho Teli	1033	Ratanrav Mahadevrao Chavan ..	387
Ramjoy Kurmoker	801, 875	Rathi	102
Ramkaranlal	313, 554	Rathnam	557
Ramkisto Dass	316	Rati Jha	993
Ramkrishna Chetty v. Palaniyandi		Ratiram	108
" Kudambar	927	Ratnam	107
" Das	43, 44	Ratna Mudali	588, 589, 594
" Yeshwant	365, 443	Ratnagiri Magistrate's Letter ..	75
Ramla Ratanji	922	Rattan Singh	404
Ramlo Jerio	1047	Raushan Rai	853
Ramnandan Prasad Singh ..	280, 282	Ravaji	874, 875
Ramnarin Chowkeedar	814	Ravishankar Jagjivan	788
" Josh	208	Ravji	377
Ramnarayan Misra	204	" Khandu v. Fraser	385
Ramnath Bhoi	111	" valad Teju	395, 407
" Rai	100	Rawal Arab	669
" Surma Biswas	220	Rawji	395
Rampat	442	Rayan Kutti	369, 446
Rampton's case	133	Rayapadayachi	940, 941
Ramsahay Ram	280	Rayaz Singh	943
Ramsarun Chowbey	1109, 1115, 1116, 1123	Raza Hussain	845
Ramsebak Lal v. Muneswar Singh	369, 1090	Razai Mia	150
Ramsoonder Shootar	426, 427	Re Mennier	19
Ramtahal Kahar	634	Re De Wilton v. Montefiore ..	1039
Ramtohol Singh	693	Readjaddin Molla	944
Ramptonoo Singh	386	Reazooddeen	373
Ramun	349	Reazuddi	57, 299
Ramza	625, 691	Rebecca Kerr	845
Ramzan (P. W. R. No. 2 of 1920).	610	Reddi Narasuramayya	351
" (7 All. 461)	590, 591	" Rama Reddi	413
" (P. R. No. 28 of 1905) ..	946	" Revanna Gowd	351
" (P. R. No. 30 of 1918) ..	146	Redgate v. Haynes	10
Ramzani (9 A. W. N. 9)	713	Redman	813
" (23 A. L. J. R. 68)	189	Reed (C. & M. 306)	130
Ranchhod Sursang	58, 675	" (12 Cox 1)	545
Ranchhoda Nagardas	994	Rockspear	784
Ranchore	174	Reg. v. Haynes 146, 147, 148, 153
Randall	970	" v. Michael Stokes 148, 153, 156
Randhir Singh 609, 611, 659, 692		Regula Bheemappa	179
Rangana Goundan	928	Rehana	940, 946
Rangasami Naidu	327	Reiley	986
Rangaswami Goundan	924	Rengaswami Ayyangar	867
		Rennie	157

Revia v. Smith	1083	Robinson v. Jones	1058
Revsing	917	Robson	852
Revu Pothadu	793	Rochester	337
Rewah Goolah	416	Roda (P. R. No. 19 of 1867) ..	766
Rex v. Beard	157	.. (P. R. No. 30 of 1889) ..	15, 30
.. v. Brisac	157, 200	.. Singh	1032
Reynolds v. Kennedy	419	Roebuck	837
Rhoday Nath Biswas	151	Rogers	519, 1064
Rhodes	901	.. v. Rogers	1015
Rhutton Ram	401	Rogi	651
Riasat Ali 976, 976, 1111, 1114, 1115,	1116	Rogier	612
Rice (3 East 518)	610	Rohimuddin	639, 642
.. (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 21)	515	Romesh Chunder Banayal v. Hiru
Rich v. Pierpont	162	.. Mondul 12, 588, 793, 812, 813, 926
Richard Bailey	129	Roopa	21
.. Beacall	860	Roopnaraia Datt	513
.. Cluderny	699	Rose	177
.. Curling	30	.. v. Kempthorne	730, 733
.. Jeans	921	Rosenberg (1 C. & K. 233) ..	800
.. Morfit	788	.. (70 J. P. 261)	689
.. Pateman	970	Ross	394, 409
.. Timmins	660	.. Tacket	152, 153
Richards (R. & R. 193)	970	Rothschild v. The United Kingdom
.. (1 F. & F. 87)	153	.. Electric Telegraph Co.	564
.. (11 Cox 43)	811, 816	Rothwell	630
Richardson	857	Rowe	845
Rickard	985	Roy Chowdhury	671
Ridgeley	511	Royal Aquarium, etc. v. Parkinson	40,
Rigg v. Earl of Lonsdale	792		123
Riley	781	Royappa	801
Ring	1111, 1117	Rowley	407
Ritbaran Singh	57, 292	Rozinski	739
Ritlal Singh	299	Rubbeoolah	102
Ritson	975, 976	Ruddock v. Lowe	163
Robb	744	Rudolf Stallmann (38 Cal. 547) ..	1152
Robert Barrat	778	.. (39 Cal. 164)	1151,
.. Car (Earl of Somerset)	199		1152, 1153
.. Kirkwood	934	Ruffee	675
.. Martin	799	Rughoo	80, 81, 827
.. Moore	820	.. Barrick	996
.. Peacock	982	Rughoonundun Puttronussee. 989, 1002
.. Reekpear	784	Ruhman Khan	818
.. Skinner v. Charlotte Skinner		Rukshmon	1040
.. .. .	1036	Rumala Nagayya	918
.. Taylor	153	Runnoo Singh v. Kali Churn Misser.	768
Roberts (Dears. 539)	1118, 1121	Rup Deb	34
.. (25 L. J. M. C. 17)	1121	.. Lal Singh v. Durga Prasad ..	788
Robertson	812	Rupa	942, 947, 1033, 1034
Robins	745, 750	Ruppell v. Ponnusami	1009, 1022
Robinson (L. & C. 604)	505	Rupsir Panku	1112, 1117
.. (2 M. & R. 14)	811	Ruri	1036
.. (4 F. & F. 43)	878	Rur Singh	486
.. (1 Mood. Cr. C. 327)	950	Russell (6 East 427)	564
.. (1915, 2 K. B. 342)	1113,	.. (1 Mood. 377)	950
.. .. .	1114	.. (1901, A. C. 446)	1034
		Russen	780

Rustam Ali	918	Sakharam Khandu	827
Rutte Ram	411	" valad Ramji	150, 632, 653
Ryan	778	Sakireddi Appalasami	811
		Sakya Kavji	110, 116
		Salar Baksh	80
		" Mannaji Rao	1086
S. A. Gordon	366	Salig Ram (28 All. 312)	550
S. C. Gupta	394, 406	" " (10 A.W.N. 179)	352
S. Veeraraghava Swami Naidu v.		" " (P. R. No. 16 of 1897)	499
Bhagavatula	411, 453	Salik	446, 455
Saadullah	288	" Roy	454
Sabalsang	789	Salimullah	27, 28
Sabapati	983	Saligram v. Secretary of State for
Sabed Ali	57, 296, 298	India	130
Sabiha	1033	Saimon	58, 663
Sabir	290, 292, 293	" v. Isaac	1070
Sachce Boler	177	Salomon v. Salomon & Co.	12
Sada	354	Salt	515
" Ram	896	Samachari	883
Sadanund Doss	332, 907	Samand Singh	626
Sadasib	730	Samanta Dhupi	426
Sadasiva Atmaram	1058	Samaruddi	287
" Pillai	34	Samban	910, 953
" Singh	788	Samba Pillai	289
Sadho Lal	54, 910	Sambhu Raghu	1034
Sadhu	624	Sami	875
Sadu	210	Samia Kaundan	210, 714
Safatulla	609, 666	Samunada Pillai	717, 719
Safdar Reza	756	Samunadha Pillai	512
Saffery	911	Samunatha	462
Sagan	378	" Thevan	447
Sagarmal Agarwalla	985, 998	Samruddin	863, 880
Sagwa	92	" v. Nibaran Chandra	863
Sahae Rae	662, 695	Samrat	710
Sahebava Birappa	769	Samrath (Bai)	719
Sahdeo Rai	346	Samshere Khan	612, 613
Saheb Din	21	Samuiddin	799
Sahebloll Reetloll	210, 612, 667	Samuel	723
Sahel Sing	106	" Gascoigne	819
Sahib	634	" Hall	950
" Ditta	206, 208	" Hopely	972
Sahrae	106	" Jacobs	784
Said Ali	634	" Lowe	9
" Nur	59	" Millard	997
Saif Ali	67	" Pratt	797
Saifin Ras-ul	43	" Rowley	407
Saifuddin	964	" Whaley	9-2
Saifulla	291, 659	" Wilson	506
Saiyid Mohiuddin	866	San Da	81
Sajanlall Brewas	994	" Hla (1900, 1 U. B. R. 280)	516
Sajawara	288	" (S. J. L. B. 475)	97
Sakharam (Unrep. Cr. C. 449)	874	Sanalal Lalubhai	459, 460, 462
" (Unrep. Cr. C. 775)	470	Sandford v. Beal	126
" Bhau	95, 103	Sandyal v. Bhata Sundan D-14	1063
" Gann	759	Sangam Lal	510, 873
" Govind	565	Sankaralinga Kose	220, 254

Sankaralingam v. Subhan Chetti ..	1034	Savi	801
Sankaranarayana Iyer ..	797	Saya Po	461
Santa Cruz Morais ..	492	Sayed Ally	1082
Santa Singh ..	412	Sayyapureddi Chinnayya ..	80
Santaji Koer ..	468, 469	Schlesinger	394
Santaram ..	366	Schmidt	870
Santok Singh ..	1051	Schooner	6, 7
Santu bin Lakhappa Kore ..	89, 573	Schwinge v. Dowell ..	557
Sarabhdawan Singh ..	280	Scofield	1109
Sarada Prasad Chatterjee ..	443	Scott	173
Sarah Goldthorpe ..	689	" v. Director of Public Prosecu-
" Higley ..	688	tions	585
" Whiley ..	515	" v. Stansfield	1076
Saraswati ..	688	Scudder	679
" Debi v. Maharaja Durga		Scully	186
Churn ..	350	Sealy v. Ramnarain Bose ..	1075
Sarat Chandra Ghose ..	575	Seaman v. Netherclift ..	1078, 1079
" Sen v. Yakub Taluqdar		Searle	152
" ..	920	Seat Ali	149, 152, 608
" Shah Chowdhry ..	309	Seberg	24
Sarbeswar Nath Nath ..	376	Secretary of State for India v. Hari
Sarda Saran ..	894	Bhanji ..	131
Sardar Dayal Singh ..	1093	" v.
Sardarkhan Jaridkhan ..	625	Kamachee ..	130, 131
Sardar Pathu ..	350	" v. Sri
" Singh ..	920	Rajah Chilikani ..	14
Sardhari Lal ..	499	Sed Rasull	964
Sarjan Miya ..	407	Seddon v. Loane	780, 866
Sarju Mollah ..	842	Sedhu	651
" Prasad ..	853	Seeb Churn Huree	102, 879
" Sonar ..	431	Seena Haniff and Co. v. Liptons, Ltd.
Sarmukh Singh ..	16		1016, 1020
Sarna Kahmi ..	1040	Segu Baliah v. Ramasamiah ..	34, 912
Sarwan Singh ..	468	Seixo v. Provezende	1012
Sashi Bhusan Chukrabutty ..	353	Selvarajulu Naiker	590
Sasi Kumar Bose ..	542	Sellamuthu v. Pallamuthu ..	960
Sastry Velaidar v. Sombecuty		Sena Shetty	739
Vaigalie ..	1038	Sengoda Goundan	606
Sat Narain Tewari ..	859, 868	Senior	661, 1006
Satanji Koer ..	468	Sennimalai Gounden	493
Satawa ..	856	Senta	830
Satish Chandra Chakrabarti v. Ram-		Senthinathaiyar	1065, 1085
dayal De 11, 13, 34, 1073, 1074, 1076		" v. Gnanamuthu ..	1085
Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram-		Serva	25
Dayal De ..	1082, 1091	Sesha Ayyar	338
Satish Chandra Rai v. Jodu Nandan		" v. Venkatsubba Chetty
Singh ..	378, 493		55, 198, 209
Sattler (7 Cox 131) ..	24	Sesha Charlu	976
" (27 L. J. M. C. 48) ..	20, 25	Seshayya	353
Satyabodha Ramchandra ..	35	Seshayya v. Subbarayudi ..	412
Satya Deva Swami ..	703	Setti Rangayya v. Somappa ..	911
Saudeya Goundan ..	486	Setul Chunder Bagechee ..	321, 323
Saunders ..	545, 579	Sew Karan v. Corporation of Cal-
Savalda ..	836	cutta	9
Savani Virabayi ..	360	Sewa Bhogta	392
Savarkar ..	199, 233, 234	Shabuckram Bukoollee ..	384, 386

Shah Muhammad (P. R. No. 19 of 1886) ..	355	Sheik Jakir	117
" (P. R. No. 13 of 1905) ..	944	" Suffurruddeo ..	419
Shahbaz Khan v. Umrao Puri ..	542	Sheikh Alimuddin ..	1039, 1043
Shahbut Sheikh	826, 881	" Arif	793, 927, 928
Shaik Adam	793	" Bahadur	694
" Ahmad	719	" Bazu	291
" Moosa v. Shaik Essa ..	12	" Bechoo	1046
Shahn Basit	899	" Boodhoo	634
" Moinuddin	182	" Chamman	13, 109
" Muhammad Yassin ..	453	" Choollye	622, 649
" Raju	921	" Dulloo v. Zainah Bebee ..	72, 804
" Sharafat	875	" Hussain	796
Shallard v. Watkins	19	" Mooneah	97, 802
Shakur Mahomed v. Chunder Mohun	920, 922	" Mudden Ally	102
Sham Lal Lohar	920	" Mustaffa	152
" Lal	454	" Nasur	376
" Singh	114	" Oozeer	763
Shama	917	" Pyao	617, 620
" Charan Das v. Kasi Naik ..	441	" Saheb	805
" Churn Bose v. Bhola Nath Dutt	451	" Solim	609
" " Roy	363, 396, 473	Shekh Husan	789
" " Sen's case	1005	Sheo Charan	878
" Sheikh	102, 764	" Dayal	996
Shambu Dial	572	" Dial Mal	199
" Khatri	610, 716, 779	" Ghulam	455
Shamjee Nashyo	110	" Lal	550
Shamlal Jairam	720, 722	" Lalla	710
Shamlay	571	" Progash Tewari v. Bhoop Narain Prasad ..	42, 376
Shamsher Khan	183	" Saran Tato	109
Shamsoondur	842	" Shankar	653
Shamsul Huq	209, 320	" Surun Sahar v. Mohamed Fazil	69, 127, 719
Shamsunderbai	774	Sheobhajan Ahir	961
Shan Gale	465, 467	Sheobux	514, 515
Shankar (4 Bom. 657)	983	Sheodin	153, 383
" (5 Bom. 403)	738, 780, 1114	Sheodurshun Dass	890
" Balkrishna	664	Sheomesur Rai	787
" Bhagwat	812	Shoram	892
" Lal	918	Shepherd (31 L. J. M. C. 39) ..	621
" Shrikrishna Dev	248, 249	" (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 118) ..	923
Shanta (Bai) v. Umrao Amir ..	1078	Sher Ali	200
Shanmugha Mudali v. Kumaraswami Mudali	581	" Baz	188, 638
Sharfa	466	" Muhammed	430
Sharif Ahmad v. Qabul Singh ..	173	" Singh (P. R. No. 14 of 1883) ..	960
Sharina	426	" " (P. R. No. 23 of 1883) ..	1083
Sharpless	797	" " (P. R. No. 5 of 1889) ..	353, 354
Shasti Churn Napit	65, 487, 490, 492	" " (P.W.R. No. 6 of 1910) ..	1073, 1074
Shava	392	Shera (P. R. No. 18 of 1866) ..	825, 832
Sheefait Ally	53, 970, 975, 981, 992	" (P. R. No. 35 of 1879) ..	805, 945
Sheik Abdool Rahiman	28	Sherras v. De Rutzen	127, 136
" Abdul Kadir	43	Shettepa Satapa Mudenavar ..	392, 408
" Beari	412, 454	Shew Bux	20
		" Hla U.	653

Shewdhur Sukul	872	Shwe Hla U	623, 649
Shewoo	541	„ Kin	160, 166
Shiam Lal	349	„ Ko	738
Shib Chandra Das	407	„ Kun	937
„ Chunder Mundle	217	„ On	58
„ Das	788	„ Thi	872
„ Dyal	418	Shyama Churn Majumdar	489
„ Nath Bannerjee	951	Shyamanand Das Paharaj	384, 386
„ Pershad Chuckerbutty	348	Siddha v. Biligiri	21
„ Prosad Giri	393	Siddhoo	405, 407
Shibo Behara	454	Siddu bin Balnath	879
„ Koeri	151	Sidhu	43
„ Prosad Pandah	119, 1061, 1068, 1083	Sidney Smith	143
Shiboo Mundle	117	Sikandar Khan	420
Shickle	794	Sikandarkhan v. Jammu	1065
Shiddungowda	974	Silajit Mahto	281, 292
Shidlingappa	201	Simbachalam v. Rati Kanta Laha	841
Shimbhu Narain	69, 169	Simmonds	50
Shipway v. Boradwood	318	Simon Morriott	665
Shistidhur Parui	937, 944	Simons	820
Shivana	1038	Simpson	634, 661
Shivbasha	788	Simson	798
Shivbharan Ajodhyaprasad	572	Sinclair	167
Shivdas Omkar Marwadi	375, 377	Singaraju Nagabhushanam	1070
Shivgowda	1086	Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Loog	1012
Shivprasad Manilal	284	Singhara	879, 902
Shivram (15 Bom. 702)	46, 787, 792	Singleton v. Ellison	545
„ (Unrep. Cr. C. 98)	875	Sini Tevan	801
Shiya-ud-din Ahmed	984	Sinnaswamy Mudali	290
Shoma Chatur	788	Sipahi Singh	58, 628
Shonaullah	80	Sirdar Bhagwan Singh v. The Secretary of State for India	130
Shoobhagee v. Bokhori Ram	1059	Sirdar Meru v. Jothabhai Amirbhai	20
Shoshi Bhusan Mukerjee v. Walmsley	174	Siryan	610
„ Bhushan v. Gobind Chandra	921	Sirsappa	361
Shotts Iron Co. v. Inglis	544	Sit Hon	946
Shridhar Nana	652	„ Pein	789
„ Waman Nagarkar	251	Sita	843
Shripati bin Waman	368	„ Nath Mitra	93
Shriram Venkatasami	836, 837	„ Ram	549, 866
Shrudhroy Bisseshurdas v. Agama	851	„ „ Rai	211, 796, 802
„ Mistry	996	Sital Prasad	747
Shukard	728	Sitaram (5 C. P. L. R. Cr. 43)	531
Shumbhoonath Panday	207	„ (1935, O. W. N. 275)	827
Shumeeruddeen	506	Sittu Padayachi	348
Shumsodeen	658	Sivakoti Swami	587, 588, 589
Shunker Sing	178, 280	Sivaratri Guravaiya	940
„ Singh v. Burmah	879	Siva Sundari Chowdhurani	303
Shunkur	386	Sivan Chetty	446
Shunmugam Pillai	530	Sivanupandia Thevan	915
Shuroop Chunder Doss	801, 875	Skerrit	517
Shuruflooddeen	178, 187, 193	Skiner	1076
Shuruflooddin v. Kassinath	647	„ v. Orde	1036
Shwe Cho	606, 627	„ (Robert) v. (Charlotte)	1036
„ Ein		Skinner	497
		Skone v. Bason

Slater	1074	Soshi Bhushan Bose v. Gobind Chandra ..	921
Sleep	689	Soukhi Chand Sao	795, 805
Smidt v. Reddaway	1012	South	387
Smith (1 Cox 260)	143	Southey	149
" (R. & R. 417)	950	South Hetton Coal Co. v. N.E. News Association	1062
" (27 L. J. M. C. 135) ..	872, 873	South Indian Railway Co. v. Ramakrishna	173
" (27 L. J. M. C. 225) ..	53	South Staffordshire Water Co. v. Sharman	844
" (1 Den. 510)	811	Souza	661, 663
" (4 W. R. 31)	1046	Sowaroo	658
" (8 Cox 32)	970	Spencer	807
" (2 Str. 704)	545	Spier	65, 203, 1117
" (4 T. R. 414)	582	Spiller	162, 661
" (2 C. & K. 882)	812	Spooner v. Juddow	123
" (20 Cox 804)	904	Sreekant Biswas	846
" (3 F. & F. 504)	973	Sreemunt Adup	102, 879
" (L. & C. 607)	621	Sreenath Banerjee	726
" (30 C. W. N. 66)	659	" Ghose	348, 349
Snow	639	Sri Churn Chungo	788, 790
Sobeel Mahee	623	" Lal	313, 772
Sobha	148, 536	" Nawas	272
Sobrai Cowallah	99	" Vidya Sankara Narasimha ..	1058
Sobrati v. Jungli	1051		1067, 1072, 1095, 1103
Sohan Lal	807, 841	Sricharan Bauri	111
Sohoy Dome	764	Srihari Shome v. Lal Khan ..	285, 293
Sohrah	630	Srikant	985
Sohun	184, 697, 700	Srilal Chamarla	207
Soita Biswal v. Dochhi Stri ..	946	Srimonto Kotal	89
Sokhina Bibi	454	Srimotee Poddee	757, 758, 1050
Solai Kottayan	958	Srinivasa v. Annasami (15 Mad. 41)	771
Solaimuthu Pillai v. Marungath Moopan	446	"	769, 771
Solomon	1030	Srinivasaiyangar	912
Solomons (2 Cr. App. R 288). ..	1007	Srinivasa Naik	551
" (1909, 2 K. B. 980) ..	166, 748, 749	Srinivasalu v. Govinda	788
Soma	351	Srinivasan	900, 972, 1109
Somannah	988, 1001	Strish Chandra Sircar	9, 921
Somerser, Earl of	199	Stristeedhur Paroo v. Indrobbhoo-
" v. Hart	8, 10	sun Chuckerbutty	951
Somiruddin	640	Stainer	807
Somnanna	374	Stallman (38 Cal. 547)	1152
Somya Hirya Mahar	156	" (39 Cal. 164)	1151, 1152, 1153
Sona Meah	863	Stanbury	808
Sonsai Sandar v. Bukhtar Sandar ..	920	Stanger	1087
Sonoo	176	Stanton	780
Soobah Doorgah Lal v. Rajah Neela-		Steele v. Brannan	577, 1070
nund Singh	747	Stephen Ah Kyun v. James Pet-
Sooke	748	ley & Son	1011, 1014, 1021
Sookmoy Ghose	976	" .. Kyun	1011, 1021
Soonder Mohoorve	414	Stephens	9, 544
Soondur Putnaick	398, 399, 415	" v. Myers	732
Soorapararu Singaya	574, 1028	Stevens v. Boller	845
Soorut	517, 518
Soosaikannu Chetti	571
Soosai Naidu	1087
Soshi Bhushan	47, 900

Stevenson	551	Sukheswar Pukhan	492
Stewart	216	Sukhra	828
Stiles v. Nokes	1070	Suklal	544, 545
Stoddart	585	Sukratendra Thirtha Swami v. Pra-
" v. Sagar	585	bhu	1072, 1073
Stoke Fenton Gas, &c., Co. v. Long-		Sulaiman Khan	499
ton Gas Co.	564	Sulamut Russooa	702
Stokes	148, 153, 156	Suleem Sheik	635
Stratton	135	Sullivan (7 C. & P. 641)	665
Streeter	874	" (11 Cox 44) 247, 250, 256, 257
Strickland	132	" v. Norton	1076, 1077
Stroke	232	" and Pigott	243
Stuart	807	Sultan (P. R. No. 35 of 1884)	662
Suba	628	" (P. R. No. 3 of 1888)	450
Subba Channappa	62, 652	Sumanta Dhupi	428
" Naik	187, 638	Sumeshar Rai	278
" Reddi v. Munshoor Ali	793	Sunda	80
Subbalakshmi Ammal	689	Sundar Lal	254
Subbaiya	796	" Singh (P. R. 25 of 1904) 886.
Subban	84, 836	"	900
Subbanna Goundan	446, 455	" (2 O. W. N. 17)	757
Subbappa Channappa	62, 652	Sundara Dass Tevan	1050
Subbaraya Padayachi	572	Sunder	775, 945
Subbarayan	1038, 1039, 1051	" Buksh	289
Subbaya	366	" Dasadh v. Sitlal Mabto 436, 437
Subbian Servai	793	" Majhi	45
Subbramanya Pillai	428	Sundram Chetti	386
Subbroya Oodian	362, 392	Sunker Gope	869
Subdar Meeah	865	Sunku Seethaiah	592
Subha Chand	874, 875, 882	Sunna	688
Subhan (18 All. 395)	593	Sunt Lal	358, 369
" (P. R. No. 18 of 1878)	84	Supadi Lukadi	663
Subrahmania Ayyar	321	Superintendent and Remembrancer
" v. Venkata Rayar	594	of Legal Affairs v. Baroda Kanta. 494
" Ghanapati	48, 432	Suppa Tevan	395, 398
Subramaniam	386	Suppakon	433
Subramanya v. Somasundara	44	Suprosunno Ghosaul	721
Subrao Sukhal	925	Suraj Bakhsh Singh	355
Subroya Iyer v. Moulvi Kadar	1068, 1069	" Bali	163
Subudhi Rantho v. Balaram Pudi. 797,		" Pandey	216
915		Suraja	805, 946
Subun Singh	386	Suraji	357
Subrayadu	925	Surat Bahadur 209, 988, 990, 1109
Subz Ali	961	Surendra Narayan Adhucary 250, 258
Sucha Singh	946	Surendra Nath Bannerjee	498
Suffer Ally v. Golam Hyder Khan	8	Surendra Nath Bannerjee v. High
Sujal Biswas v. Samiruddin	384	Court Judges	35, 497, 498
Sujatali Nyamatalli	287	Surendra Nath Ghose 50, 972, 980
Sukar Budhia	383, 386	Surendra Prosad Lahiri	249
Sukaroo Kobiraj 69, 163, 166, 659, 662		Suresh Chandra Sanyal	250
Sukee Raur	769, 775	Suri Venkatappaya Sastri v. Mudula
Sukha	1111	Venkanna	47, 792
Sukha Singh	919	Surja	753
Sukhdeli	687	Surja Prasad v. Mahabir Prosad	1017
Sukhdeo Pathak	332	Surjanarain Dass	387
		Surji Dass	825

Surroop Chunder Paul	284, 291, 309	Tarucknath v. Prosono Coomar	.. 12
Surwan Singh	.. 938, 951	Tasadduk Husein	 408
Suryanarayanamoorthy (M. W. N. 136)	 644	Tasuduk Hossein	 965
Suryanarayana Murthy (M. L. J. 333)	 601, 644	Tate	 401
Sutherland	 350	Tatia Hari	 451
Sutton v. Sutton	 13	„ Mahadev	 739
Svami Nayudu v. Subramania Mudali	 66	Taturi Jamalaiya	 635
Sven Seberg	 24	Tatya	 383
Swami Dayal	.. 1101	Tayee	 676
Swaminathan v. Annamalai	.. 1006	Taylor	.. 35, 1061, 1068
Swindall	.. 559, 661	Taylor (L. R. 2 C. C. R. 147)	.. 200
Syed Ahmud	.. 1051	„ (1 F. & F. 511)	.. 1121
„ Batcha Sahib	.. 635	„ (1 C. & K. 213)	.. 976
„ Futteh Mohamed	.. 357	„ (25 L. T. 75)	.. 1112
„ Husain (7 All 403)	.. 995	„ (65 J. P. 457)	.. 891
„ „ (Weir, 3rd Ed. 357)	.. 1085	„ (13 Cox 77)	.. 153
„ Mahomed	.. 1098	„ (2 Str. 1167)	.. 567
„ „ v. Sarwarkhan	.. 1095	„ (R. & R. 418)	.. 806
„ Munir	.. 1052	„ (27 T. L. R. 108)	.. 797
Sypu Chinna Mangaiya	.. 927	„ v. Bleach	.. 13
Syud Ahmud	.. 211	„ v. Smetten	.. 581, 583
T		Teekai Bheer	.. 819
Taaffe v. Downes	.. 123	Teja	.. 827
Tabarak Zaman Khan	.. 455	Tek Chand	.. 748
Tabart v. Tipper	.. 1071	„ Singh	.. 626
Tabu	.. 801	Tekait Kunj Behari v. Bhiko Singh	.. 383
Tafaullah	.. 482	Telapolu Sabbadu	.. 718
Tafazzul Ahmed Chowdhry	284, 738	Teni Shah v. Bolahi Shah	.. 990
Taher Khan	.. 757, 758	Teprah Fukeer	.. 634
Taik Pyu	.. 489	Teprinessa	.. 427, 430
Taj-ud-din	.. 928	Teyen v. Ram Lall	.. 124
Tajumaddi Lahory	.. 348	Tha Byaw	.. 893
Taki Hussain	.. 1058, 1064, 1065	„ Do Hla	.. 1112
Takit Tumi	.. 795	„ La Aung	.. 199
Tamma Ghantaya	.. 46, 792	„ Mya	.. 217, 701
Tamworth	.. 335	„ Sin	.. 653
Tan Sein	.. 485	Thacoordoss Nundee v. Shunkur Roy	.. 124
Tandi Ram	.. 805	Thakar Dutt	.. 575, 576, 578
Tanfield	.. 1071	Thakri	.. 354, 427
Tankard	.. 851	Thaku	.. 753
Tannaklal Mandar	.. 378	„ bin Ira	.. 65
Tanoo Shikdar	.. 190	Thakur Das v. Adhar Chandra	.. 1030
Tapesbri Prasad	.. 317	„ Dass	.. 1064
Tapidas Durlabhdas	.. 1012, 1021	„ Prasad Singh	.. 111
Tapti Prasad	.. 663	„ Tewari	.. 451
Tara Chand	.. 428	Thallman	.. 545, 579
„ Singh	.. 372	Thandavarayudu	.. 210, 542
Tarakant Das	.. 309	Thaukra Aung	.. 571
Tarakdas Gupta	.. 1105, 1106	Thavasi	.. 524
Taraporewalla	.. 576	Thaver Issaji Boree	.. 375, 376
Tarinee Prossaud Banerjee	199, 800	The Asia	.. 25
		„ Bombay Burma &c. Co. v. Mirza Mohamed	.. 131
		„ British American Tobacco Co. v. Mahboob Buksh	.. 1010

Vazirsaheb	1155	Villensky	870
Veda Gurukkal	940	Villikkat Govinda Menon	857
Vedamuttu (A)	392, 423, 424	Vinayak Damodar Savarkar	4, 20
Veerana Nadan	175	Vinayek Narayen Bhatye 251, 252, 1116
Veeraragahva Swami Naidu v. Bha- gavatula	411, 453	Vinjamuri Subbramanya Aiyah ..	1084
Veerasami Naidu	351	Virankutti v. Chiyamu	796
Veeraswami	102	Viranna v. Nagayyah	451
Vellai Ocha Thevan	876	Viraperumal	392
Vemuri Pichhayya	386	Virappa Chetty	543, 563
Vengala Venkayya v. Thallam Ven- katarani	1061	Virasami	395
Vengala Venkayya v. Thallam ..	1076	„ Mudali	65, 358
Venkaji Bhaskar	349	„ Pillai	349
Venkappa	563	Viraswami	888, 903
„ Rai	1073	„ Naick	327
Venkaraju Venkatasami	982	Virji Bhagwan	1075
Venkata Chetti	537	Vishnu Krishna Puranik	576
„ Narasimha v. Kottaya	1074	„ Morchshwar Gadgil	454
„ Narsimma v. Venkatasub- rayudu	1081	Vithal Narayan	50
„ Reddi (1 Weir 120)	444	Vithoba	540, 1102
„ „ (1 Weir 575) 1063, 1073		Vithu	921
„ „ (36 Mad. 216)	1081	Vithu Rayaji	834
„ Row	985	Vithya	113
„ Subba Reddy	720	Vitti Chokkam	554
Venkatachala Mudali	721	Vitti Thevan v. Vitti Thevan ..	827
„ Pillai	903	Vizetelly v. Mudies' Select Library.	1060
Venkatachalam Pillai (2 M. H. C. 43)	398, 399	Vridachella Pillai	449, 452
„ „ (1 Weir 339)	719	Vujeer	951
Venkatachala Samban	486	Vullappa v. Bheema Row	940, 941
Venkatagurunatha Sastri	852, 907	Vyankatray Shrinivas	182, 375, 376
Venkatai Sheti	112	Vyapuri	919
Venkatanarasappa	355	„ Chetti	278, 283
Venkatapurnandan	918	Vyapoory Moodeliar	336
Venkataramanna	400	Vyse	151
Venkataramannu Roddy	940	W
Venkatasami (12 Mad. 459)	150
„ (14 Mad. 229)	799, 844	Wadhawa	103
„ (15 Mad. 131)	499	Wahid Baksh	500
„ (Weir 3rd Ed. 187)	208, 673	Waite	143, 777
Venkatasubbaier	287	Waithman v. Weaver	1060
Venkatasubbier	490	Wajid Hussain	119
Venkatesagadu	68, 90	Wahs	833, 834
Venkatesan	634	Wahdad	1112
Venkatigadu	45	Wali Mahammad	378
Venkatrao Rajerao	35, 499, 509	Walker	661
Vernade	803	Wallingford v. Directors of the Mutual Society	581
Verupatti Penchaluraddi	418	Wallis	799
Vijaya Fernandez Vas	920, 921	Walsh	799
Vijaya Sankara Narasimha v. Gurn- swamulu	1058, 1057, 1072, 1025, 1107	Walton (9 Cox 268)	811
Vijayaraghava Chariar	599, 591	„ (17 Ch. D. 746)	218
		Waman Dhauraj	127
		„ Lakshman	589
		Wansarapu Baladu	622
		Ward (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 356) ..	477

Ward (4 Ad. & E. 384)	..	543, 564	William	..	..	410, 780
Wardroper	..	873	" Allison	..	..	1039
Waris	..	755	" Ball	..	..	1120
Waris Ali	..	349	" Batty	..	..	807
Warner	..	604	" Burgess	..	..	797
Warrender v. Warrender	..	1033	" Cabbage	..	..	788
Wasawa Singh	..	836	" Cain	..	..	797
Wassanji Dayal	..	802	" Camplin	..	..	778
Wasudeo Hari Chapekar	..	652	" Carr	..	..	807
Watson v. Golab Khan	..	862	" Case (4 Cox 220)	..	..	779
Watts	..	544	" (1 East P. C. 164)	..	..	505
Wayde v. Lady Carr	..	557	" Dring	..	..	874
Wazeer Ali v. Kaim Ali	..	748	" Edgell	..	..	933
Wazir Jan	..	97, 101, 104	" Fitchie	..	..	996
Wazira	..	1038	" Fleet	..	..	1070
Wazirulzama Khan	..	662	" Gaylor	..	..	681, 682
Webb	..	163, 661	" Haslam	..	..	878
Webster	..	797	" Headge	..	..	861
Wedge	..	781	" Holloway (18 L. J. M. C.	..	..	60)
Weeks	..	511	"	..	..	1120
Welch (1 Den. 199)	..	855	" (1 Den. Cr. C.	..	..	370)
" (20 L. J. M. C. 101)	..	516	"	..	..	787
" (1 Q. B. D. 23)	..	925	" Ion (2 Den. Cr. C. 475)	..	..	515
Weld v. Hornby	..	544	" (6 Cox 1)	..	..	996
Wellard	..	313 545, 554, 579	" Jones	..	..	893
Welsh (1 East P. C. 164)	..	505	" Keegan	..	..	663, 690
" (11 Cox 336)	..	630	" Kirkham	..	..	639
Wennhak v. Morgan	..	1059	" Mallison	..	..	793
Wenman v. Ash	..	1059	" Mellish	..	..	807
Westbury	..	337	" Mills	..	..	887
Wheat	..	1034	" Moody	..	..	997
" v. Brown	..	553	" Murray	..	..	556
Whiley (Sarah)	..	515	" Nettleton	..	..	808
" (Samuel)	..	982	" Nicholls	..	..	877
Whitaker	..	317	" Osborne	..	..	782
Whitchurch	..	201, 681	" Proud	..	..	857
White (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 311)	..	686	" Rennie	..	..	157
" (6 Cox 213)	..	792	" Ritson	..	..	975, 976
" (1 Leach 430)	..	68	" Roberts	..	..	1118, 1121
" (1 Burr. 383)	..	556	" Robinson	..	..	950
" (22 Cox 325)	..	672	" Roebuck	..	..	897
" v. Bywater	..	552	" Rogers	..	..	519
" v. Crisp	..	560	" Snow	..	..	639
Whiteley	..	640, 641	" Spencer	..	..	807
Whitfield v. S. E. Ry.	..	1059	" Stewart	..	..	216
Whittaker	..	188	" Tayler	..	35, 1061, 1068
Wicherley	..	680	" Taylor	..	..	1121
Wigam	..	336	" Thurborn	..	..	844, 846
Wigg	..	545	" Turner	..	..	807
Wild	..	143	" Walker	..	..	661
Wild's case	..	186	" Webster	..	..	797
Wiley	..	872	" Wild	..	..	143
Wilkins	..	705	" Woolley	..	..	887
Wilkinson (R. & R. 470)	..	789	" York	..	..	143
" (2 C. W. N. 216)	..	173, 867	Williams (1893, 1 Q. B. 320)	..	..	143, 777,
" v. Gibson	..	1047		..	..	1117

TABLE OF STATUTES.

ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.		4 Geo. IV., c. 60,	s. 2	.. 590
15 Rich. II., c. 3	.. 21	5 Geo. IV., c. 113,	s. 41	.. 583
21 Hen. III.	.. 67	7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 28,	s. 9	.. 29
28 Hen. VIII., c. 15	.. 30	9 Geo. IV., c. 51,	s. 2	.. 30
1 & 3 Edw. VI.	.. 926	1 & 2 Geo. V., c. 8	s. 8	.. 30
22 & 23 Carr II., c. 2	.. 30	c. 74	..	.. 391
10 Will. III., c. 23, s. 2	.. 585		s. 1	.. 1
11 Will. III., c. 7	.. 30		s. 56	.. 26
s. 8	.. 29	5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61	..	2, 251
s. 9	.. 29		s. 109 (1)	.. 21
7 Anne, c. 12	.. 6	c. 110	..	5
4 Geo. I., c. II., s. 7	.. 30	3 & 4 Will. IV., c. 85	.. 33, 34,	329
8 Geo. I., c. 21	.. 30		s. 73	.. 16
s. 1	.. 29	7 Will. IV. & 1 Vic. c. 88, s. 2	.. 30,	416
18 Geo. II., c. 30	.. 29, 30		s. 3	.. 30
24 Geo. II., c. 23	.. 67		s. 4	.. 30
c. 25	.. 67	11 Will. IV., c. 12	..	5
12 Geo. III., c. 20	.. 30	3 & 4 Vic., c. 65	..	25
c. 24	.. 416	5 & 6 Vic., c. 28,	s. 16	.. 30
13 Geo. III., c. 63	.. 5		s. 17	.. 30
s. 17	.. 5		s. 18	.. 30
s. 23	.. 326	6 & 7 Vic., c. 96	..	1060
s. 24	.. 326		s. 7	.. 9
s. 25	.. 326		s. 34	.. 1147
s. 39	.. 5	11 & 12 Vic., c. 12,	s. 3	.. 237
18 Geo. III., c. 60	.. 234	12 & 13 Vic., c. 96	..	26, 27, 28
18 Geo. III., c. 63, s. 39	.. 5		s. 1	.. 27
21 Geo. III., c. 70,	s. 4		s. 3	.. 27
s. 5	.. 5	13 & 14 Vic., c. 26	..	.. 30
24 Geo. III., c. 25,	s. 645	16 & 17 Vic., c. 99	..	.. 72
s. 646	.. 5	21 & 22 Vic., c. 106	..	.. 1, 2,
s. 647	.. 5			3, 38
s. 648	.. 5		s. 1	.. 2
26 Geo. III., c. 57, ss. 1-28	.. 5	23 & 24 Vic., c. 88	..	27, 28
30 Geo. III., c. 48	.. 416		s. 1	.. 27
33 Geo. III., c. 52	.. 329		s. 2	.. 27
s. 62	.. 326	24 Vic., c. 10	..	.. 25
s. 63	.. 326	21 & 25 Vic., c. 67,	s. 22	16, 17
s. 64	.. 326	c. 96,	s. 51	.. 950
s. 156	.. 25		s. 60	.. 805
36 Geo. III., c. 7	.. 238		s. 88	.. 886
39 Geo. III., c. 37	.. 129		s. 91	.. 869
39 & 40 Geo. III., c. 79, s. 25	.. 26	c. 99,	s. 1	.. 510
s. 31	.. 26		s. 13	.. 505
s. 32	.. 26	c. 100,	s. 1	.. 416
43 Geo. III., c. 58, s. 1	.. 680		s. 18	.. 674
53 Geo. III., c. 155, s. 110	.. 25		s. 55	.. 750
54 Geo. III., c. 146	.. 416

24 & 25 Vic., c. 101	s. 63	.. 143	46 & 47 Vic., c. 3		.. 1132
	..	4, 14	c. 57		.. 1009
	s. 9	.. 25	ss. 62-81		.. 1009
25 & 26 Vic., c. 4	..	.. 42	ss. 85-99		.. 1009
26 & 27 Vic., c. 24	..	.. 25	s. 101		.. 1009
28 & 29 Vic., c. 15,	s. 3	.. 21	s. 102		.. 1009
c. 17,	s. 1	.. 16	s. 105		.. 1009
29 & 30 Vic., c. 109,	s. 2	.. 416	s. 108		.. 1009
	s. 3	.. 416	ss. 111-117		.. 1009
	s. 4	.. 416	47 & 48 Vic., c. 76,	s. 7	.. 533
	s. 5	.. 416		s. 7 (c)	527, 533
	s. 6	.. 416	48 & 49 Vic., c. 69,	s. 4	.. 777
	s. 7	.. 416		s. 9	.. 777
	s. 10	.. 416	50 & 51 Vic., c. 78,	s. 2 (2)	.. 9
	s. 13	.. 416	52 & 53 Vic., c. 63,	s. 18 (4)	.. 17
	s. 19	.. 416		s. 18 (5)	.. 17
29 & 30 Vic., c. 109,	s. 30	.. 416	53 Vic., c. 4,	s. 10	.. 273
	s. 34	.. 416		s. 153	.. 273
	s. 52 (1)	.. 416	53 & 54 Vic., c. 27		.. 26
32 & 33 Vic., c. 98,	s. 1	16, 17	56 & 57 Vic., c. 54		.. 107
33 & 34 Vic., c. 3	..	.. 3	c. 71,	s. 62	.. 68
	s. 1	72, 544	57 & 58 Vic., c. 60		.. 26
33 & 34 Vic., c. 23	s. 1	.. 74		s. 684	.. 26
	s. 31	.. 416		s. 685	.. 26
c. 52	..	.. 18		s. 686	.. 26
c. 90	..	261, 262		s. 687	.. 26
	s. 11	.. 261	58 & 59 Vic., c. 33,	s. 9	.. 19
	s. 12	.. 261	c. 40		.. 341
35 & 36 Vic., c. 94,	s. 16 (2)	.. 8	62 & 63 Vic., c. 22,	s. 3	.. 886
36 & 37 Vic., c. 65	..	.. 18	1 & 2 Geo. V., c. 6		.. 391
37 & 38 Vic., c. 27,	s. 3	.. 28	5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61		.. 2
38 & 39 Vic., c. 24,	s. 1	.. 1005		s. 109 (1)	.. 21
c. 63	..	.. 9		s. 130	.. 3
c. 93,	s. 3	.. 551
	s. 6	.. 552
41 Vic., c. 10,	s. 101	.. 35
c. 73	..	.. 14
c. 73,	s. 2	.. 14
	s. 3	.. 15
	s. 6	.. 30
	s. 7	.. 14
44 & 45 Vic., c. 58	..	34, 269
	s. 4	.. 416
	s. 8 (1)	.. 416
	s. 9 (1)	.. 416
	s. 10	.. 416
	s. 12 (1)	.. 416
	s. 44	.. 416
	s. 66 (1)	.. 416
	s. 77	.. 416
	s. 154	.. 267
	s. 156	.. 267
c. 69,	s. 9	.. 19
45 & 46 Vic., c. 61,	s. 90	.. 68
c. 75,	s. 12	.. 800
	s. 16	.. 800

INDIAN ACTS.

Indian Legislature.

Act—

XIV of 1827		.. 1
VII of 1837		.. 1
XIX of 1837		.. 1
XXXI of 1838		.. 1
XXII of 1839		.. 1
XXXI of 1839		.. 1
V of 1840		.. 392
VII of 1844		.. 1
X of 1844		.. 1
XV of 1846		.. 329
XVIII of 1850, s. 1		122, 124
XXXIV of 1850		.. 263
III of 1852		.. 434
XVI of 1852		.. 1
XI of 1853		.. 544
XXIV of 1855		72, 78
	s. 15	72, 78
XXIX of 1857, s. 18		.. 375

Act—				Act—
III of 1858	..	..	263	XXVII of 1870, s. 8	..	..	481
X of 1859	..	..	40		s. 9	..	491
XXIV of 1859	..	..	329		s. 10	..	580
IV of 1861, s. 17	..	..	351		s. 11	..	672
V of 1861 ..	..	..	43, 44		s. 12	..	658
	s. 8	..	45		s. 13	119, 238, 259
	s. 34	..	1195		s. 15	..	65
	s. 34 (6)	..	1107	I of 1871 ..	..	..	321
	s. 43	..	124		s. 6	..	44
VI of 1861	..	..	2		s. 19	..	330
XVII of 1862	..	..	358		s. 24	..	1195
XX of 1863	..	..	867	IV of 1871,	s. 5	..	44
III of 1864, s. 20	..	..	354		s. 8	..	403
	s. 21	..	358		s. 17	351, 352, 354
	s. 23	..	375		s. 20	..	361
VI of 1864	..	..	118	V of 1871,	s. 21	..	72
	s. 3	..	118		s. 33	..	76
	s. 4	..	118	XX of 1871	..	..	329
X of 1865,	s. 3	..	55	XXVII of 1871, s. 9	..	..	354
	s. 237	..	360, 383	XXXI of 1871, s. 2	..	..	534
	s. 277	..	354	I of 1872 ..	..	..	117
XV of 1865	..	1032, 1034, 1038			s. 3	..	53
	s. 6	..	1039		s. 6, ill. (a)	..	618
	s. 7	..	1039		s. 6, ill. (c)	..	1088
	s. 23	..	44		s. 7, ill. (a)	..	822
XXI of 1866	..	1034, 1038			s. 7, ill. (b)	..	648
	s. 11	..	351		s. 7, ill. (c)	..	648
III of 1867, s. 4	..	..	1195		s. 8, ill. (a)	..	648
	s. 10	..	360		s. 8, ill. (f)	..	822
III of 1867, s. 13	..	..	1195		s. 8, ill. (j)	..	782
	s. 15	..	1195		s. 8, ill. (k)	..	822
V of 1867	..	..	2		s. 9, ill. (b)	..	1088
XXV of 1867	..	..	249		s. 10	..	204, 239
XXV of 1867, s. 4	..	248, 249, 582			s. 14	..	249, 904
	s. 5	..	1087		s. 14, Exp. 2	..	834
	s. 7	..	248		s. 14, ill. (a)	..	877
I of 1868 ..	..	..	85		s. 14, ill. (b)	516, 845
	s. 2 (6)	..	46		s. 14, ill. (c)	..	1089
III of 1869	..	..	351		s. 14, ill. (o)	..	648
IV of 1869	..	..	1038		s. 15	..	904
V of 1869 ..	..	..	269		s. 15 (b)	..	859
XIV of 1869, s. 33	..	..	44		s. 21 (e)	..	518
XX of 1869	..	..	301		s. 30, ill. (a)	..	650
I of 1870 ..	..	..	548		s. 32, ill. (a)	..	650
XIV of 1870	..	..	35		s. 32, ill. (u)	..	1089
XXIV of 1870, s. 16	..	..	403		s. 43, ill. (u)	..	1089
	s. 22	..	44		s. 45	..	152
XXVI of 1870, s. 45	..	..	946		s. 50	..	1038
XXVII of 1870	..	..	40		s. 78	..	236
	s. 1	..	57, 60		s. 91	..	407, 411
	s. 2	..	65		s. 105	..	119
	s. 3	..	78		s. 106	..	510
	s. 4	..	237		s. 108	..	1040
	s. 5	..	244		s. 114	..	510, 801
	s. 6	..	269		s. 121	..	390

Act—

Act—

I of 1872,	s. 122	..	360	XII of 1876,	s. 22	..	8
	s. 123	..	360	XIX of 1876,	s. 6	..	257
	s. 124	..	360		s. 7	..	354
	s. 125	..	360		s. 8	..	257
	s. 126	..	360		s. 9	..	256, 257
	s. 127	..	360	XXII of 1876,	s. 14	..	44
	s. 128	..	360	III of 1877,	s. 82 (d)	..	368
	s. 129	..	360	V of 1877,	s. 39	..	45
	s. 130	..	360	XIII of 1877,	s. 14	..	44
	s. 131	..	360	I of 1878,	s. 9	..	8, 1195
	s. 132	..	360	VII of 1878	..	..	329
	s. 145	..	408		s. 25	..	386, 1195
	s. 155 (4)	..	781		s. 26	..	386
	s. 159, ill. (c)	..	997		s. 32	..	1195
	s. 162	..	327		s. 35	..	386
III of 1872	..	1032,	1038		s. 41	..	1195
	s. 21	..	424		s. 62	..	1195
IV of 1872,	s. 39	..	2		s. 72	..	44
IX of 1872	..	..	462		s. 78	..	380
	s. 108, ill. (a)	..	870	XI of 1878,	s. 19	..	1195
	s. 182	..	865		s. 20	..	1195
X of 1872 ..	..	..	104		s. 22	..	1195
	s. 90	..	380		s. 23	..	1195
	s. 91	..	380		..	..	329
	s. 454	..	97	V of 1879	..	..	44
XIV of 1872,	s. 3	..	3	XV of 1879,	s. 61	..	44
	s. 5	..	3	XVII of 1879,	s. 40	..	351
	s. 5A	..	3	XVIII of 1879,	s. 7	..	421
XV of 1872	..	45, 1032,	1038	XXI of 1879	..	..	18
	s. 17	..	44, 421	IV of 1880	..	..	19
	s. 41	..	421	VII of 1880	..	..	560
	s. 61	..	421		s. 50	..	44
	s. 67	..	434	II of 1881,	s. 14	..	44
	s. 72	..	327	V of 1881,	s. 98 (3)	..	354
	s. 80	..	1039	XVIII of 1881	..	..	329
	..	..	503		s. 137	..	355
XIX of 1872	..	..	40		s. 141	..	355
III of 1873	..	..	403	XIX of 1881	..	..	329
V of 1873,	s. 7	..	1195		s. 71	..	44
VIII of 1873,	s. 70	..	391	XXI of 1881,	s. 33	..	44
X of 1873,	s. 4	..	391, 1080		s. 34	..	403
	s. 5	..	68		s. 6	..	403
	s. 6	..	1080	II of 1882,	s. 3	..	854
	s. 13	..	392	IV of 1882,	s. 3	..	47
	s. 14	..	363		s. 5	..	436
	s. 15	..	329	V of 1882,	s. 53	..	911
XV of 1873	..	..	40	VIII of 1882	s. 60	..	44
XVIII of 1873	..	..	44		..	..	85
XIX of 1873,	s. 35	..	421		s. 1	..	65
II of 1874	s. 36	..	421		s. 2	..	85
	s. 37	..	5		s. 3	..	89
XIV of 1874	..	..	3		s. 4	..	101
	s. 3 (a)	..	403		s. 5	..	107
VI of 1876,	s. 2	..	44		s. 6	..	465
	s. 21	..	329		s. 7	..	677
XI of 1876	..	..	329		s. 8	..	713

TABLE OF STATUTES.

ci

Act—			Act—
VIII of 1882,	s. 9	14, 869, 875	I of 1889,	s. 28	.. 507
IX of 1882,	s. 2	.. 76	II of 1889,	s. 2	.. 534
X of 1882	..	101, 465		s. 7	.. 534
	s. 35	.. 104	IV of 1889,	s. 3	.. 1009
	s. 161	.. 360		s. 6	.. 1017
	s. 195 (3)	.. 211		s. 7	.. 1017
	s. 235	.. 104		s. 8	.. 1016, 1020
XII of 1882,	s. 9	.. 1195		s. 9	.. 1016, 1020,
	s. 10	.. 1195			1022
XIV of 1882,	s. 136	.. 352		s. 17	.. 1020
	s. 82	.. 736	VII of 1889,	s. 16	.. 421
	s. 235	.. 393	IX of 1889,	s. 17	.. 44
	s. 258	.. 441	XIII of 1889	..	.. 405
	s. 478	.. 124	IX of 1890,	s. 5	.. 44
	s. 181	.. 124		ss. 72-82	.. 859
	s. 651	.. 492		s. 120-A	.. 173
XV of 1882	..	329		s. 126	.. 1195
	s. 52	.. 44		s. 127	.. 1195
	s. 83	.. 352		s. 128	.. 1195
XVIII of 1882,	s. 12 (3)	.. 44		s. 129	.. 1195
V of 1883,	s. 14 (2)	.. 44		s. 130	.. 141
IX of 1883	..	40		s. 137 (1)	44, 318
XII of 1883,	s. 8 (2)	.. 44		s. 149	.. 417
XX of 1883,	s. 62	.. 329	XI of 1890,	s. 3	.. 1195
XXI of 1883,	s. 111	.. 8		s. 4	.. 1195
VI of 1884	..	118		s. 5	.. 1195
	s. 7 (3)	.. 44	II of 1891,	s. 5	.. 403
	s. 38 (2)	.. 44	IV of 1891	..	.. 716
VII of 1884,	s. 9 (3)	.. 44	X of 1891	..	.. 779
	s. 37 (3)	.. 44	XI of 1891	..	.. 201
XIII of 1885,	s. 10	.. 385	XII of 1891	..	4, 39, 119, 875
	s. 24	.. 1195	XVI of 1891,	s. 1	.. 26
	s. 25	.. 1195	XX of 1891	..	.. 329
	s. 31	.. 44	I of 1894,	s. 10	.. 65, 352
XVII of 1885,	s. 12 (2)	.. 44		s. 10 (2)	.. 354
II of 1886,	s. 19	.. 392	III of 1894,	s. 5	.. 358
VI of 1886,	s. 38	.. 327		s. 6	.. 431
	s. 14	.. 44		s. 7	.. 458
X of 1886,	s. 21	.. 65		s. 8	.. 470
	s. 21 (2)	.. 85	IX of 1894,	s. 23	.. 44
	s. 22	.. 112		s. 42	.. 1195
	s. 23	.. 469	III of 1895	..	.. 39
	s. 24 (1)	.. 491		s. 1	.. 364
II of 1887,	s. 35	.. 65		s. 2	.. 533
	s. 37	.. 65		s. 3	.. 578
X of 1887	..	560		s. 4	.. 1005
XIV of 1887,	s. 79	.. 275	XIV of 1895	..	.. 560
XVIII of 1887,	s. 18 (1)	.. 44	V of 1896,	s. 1 (2)	.. 504
	s. 18 (2)	.. 317,	VI of 1896,	s. 1	.. 503, 504
		322, 323	XII of 1896,	s. 45	.. 1195
I of 1888,	.. s. 11 (2)	.. 317		s. 46	.. 1195
I of 1889	..	.. 507		s. 48	.. 1195
	s. 3	.. 525		s. 49	.. 1195
	s. 9	.. 52, 53		s. 51	.. 1195

Act—

Act—

XX of 1896,	s. 6	403
	s. 35	44
	s. 36	403
II of 1897,	s. 6 656, 675, 676,
	699, 703, 706, 711
	s. 64	699
III of 1897		548, 823
	s. 3	385
IV of 1897,	s. 4	1195
	s. 5	1195
VIII of 1897,	s. 8	75
	s. 27	1195
	s. 28	1195
X of 1897,	s. 3 (1)	198
	s. 3 (7)	2, 17
	s. 3 (16)	53
	s. 3 (20)	68
	s. 3 (21)	39
	s. 3 (22)	38
	s. 3 (23)	39
	s. 3 (25)	83
	s. 3 (26)	72
	s. 3 (27)	17
	s. 3 (29)	39, 238
	s. 3 (36)	397
	s. 3 (39)	37
	s. 3 (40)	33
	s. 3 (44)	544
	s. 3 (57)	55
	s. 4 (1)	72
	s. 4 (2) 72, 198, 544
	s. 13	37
	s. 25	83
	s. 26	34
IV of 1898		244
	s. 3	208
	s. 4	16
	s. 5	306
V of 1898,	s. 4 (1) (i)	78
	s. 4 (h)	451, 1017
	s. 4 (m)	397
	s. 5	2
	s. 30 113, 115, 116,
	413
	s. 32	95, 113
	s. 33	88
	s. 33 (1) (a)	88
	s. 33 (b)	88
	s. 35 81, 95, 100, 103, 104, 116
	s. 35 (1)	104
	s. 35 (iii.)	103
	s. 42	121, 379
	s. 43	132
	s. 44 223, 277, 354,

V of 1898,

s. 45 277, 354, 429,	429, 430
	430
s. 45 (a)	354
s. 45 (b)	354
s. 45 (d)	354
s. 45 (f)	354
s. 54	494
s. 54 (1)	736
s. 54 (1) (6)	494
s. 54 (7)	1161
s. 55	65, 490
s. 59	132, 478
s. 60	478
s. 69	345
s. 70	345
s. 71	345
s. 72	345
s. 73	345
s. 74	345
s. 77	132, 379
s. 78	132
s. 80	374, 492
s. 89	472
s. 90	472
s. 95	865
s. 96	182
s. 99-A	259
s. 100	1037
s. 103	379
s. 106	584
s. 107	498
s. 108	257
s. 110	831
s. 114	709
s. 123	493
s. 127	284, 301
s. 128 284, 301, 379
s. 129	284, 301
s. 130	281
s. 131	284
s. 132	284
s. 133 383, 544,
545, 567
s. 134	545
s. 135	376, 545
s. 136	383, 545
s. 137	541, 545
s. 138	545
s. 139	545
s. 140	545
s. 141	545
s. 142 545, 573, 574
s. 143 545, 573, 574
s. 144 182, 383, 394,
385, 387, 567

Act—

Act—

V of 1898,

V of 1898

s. 145	..	..	45
s. 146	..	..	386
s. 147	..	386,	387
s. 153	..	..	531
s. 154	..	361,	447
s. 160	..	349,	377
s. 161	..	..	448
s. 161 (2)	..	..	393
s. 162	..	393,	448
s. 164	361,	395,	408
s. 167	..	..	484
s. 174	..	..	416
s. 179, ill. (a)	..	..	657
s. 179, ill. (c)	..	..	814
s. 179, ill. (d)	..	..	657
s. 180	..	..	211
s. 181	..	345,	487
s. 181 (4)	..	..	345
s. 182	..	..	345
s. 183	..	..	345
s. 184	..	..	345
s. 185	..	..	345
s. 186	..	..	345
s. 187	..	..	345
s. 188	17, 31, 19, 20, 31	..	..
	32, 346,	1154	..
s. 189	..	..	345
s. 190	..	..	345
s. 190 (c)	..	345,	392
s. 191	..	345,	451
s. 192	..	..	451
s. 193	..	..	345
s. 194	..	..	345
s. 195	..	345, 346,	..
	..	356, 358, 359,	..
	..	363, 370, 372,	..
	..	373, 374, 378,	..
	..	380, 387, 411,	..
	..	425, 437, 452	..
s. 195 (1)	..	211,	345
s. 195 (1) (c)	..	..	345
s. 195 (3)	..	211,	345
s. 195 (4)	..	..	345
s. 195 (7)	..	345,	411
s. 196	236, 240, 241,	..	..
	242, 243, 259,	..	..
	261, 262, 264,	..	..
	307, 340, 341,	..	..
	342, 345, 417,	..	..
	..	586	..
s. 196 (a)	..	211,	345
s. 197	..	..	320
s. 198	1010, 1042, 1043,	..	..
	1090, 1101	..	..
s. 199	..	1046, 1052	..

s. 200	..	..	361
s. 202	..	846,	992
s. 203	..	..	454
s. 221	..	..	116
s. 221 (7)	..	..	117
s. 222 (2)	846, 857, 859,	..	..
	863, 868	..	..
s. 225	..	..	259
s. 226	..	..	497
s. 233	..	299,	802
s. 234	846, 858, 859, 868	..	..
s. 235	95, 104, 507, 802	..	..
s. 235 (1)	..	95,	97
	(2)	..	95, 97
	(3)	..	95, 97
	(4)	..	95
ill. (a)	..	..	95
ill. (b)	..	..	95
ill. (c)	..	..	96
ill. (d)	..	..	96
ill. (e)	..	..	96
ill. (f)	..	..	96
ill. (g)	..	..	96
ill. (i)	..	..	96
ill. (j)	..	..	96
ill. (k)	..	..	96
ill. (l)	..	..	96
ill. (m)	96, 823,	..	..
	824	..	..
s. 236	..	106,	408
ill. (a)	..	..	106
ill. (b)	..	..	802
s. 237	..	429,	802
s. 238	..	..	1125
s. 239	..	..	211
ill. (b)	..	..	822
ill. (c)	..	..	802
s. 250	..	..	155
s. 251	..	..	736
s. 253	..	..	698
s. 254	..	..	698
s. 255	..	..	698
s. 256	..	..	698
s. 260	..	..	211
s. 261	..	..	211
s. 262	..	..	89
s. 276	..	..	501
s. 278	..	..	501
s. 310	..	117,	118
s. 311	..	..	117
s. 318	..	..	945
s. 321	..	..	501
s. 342	118, 366, 396,	..	..
	1081	..	..
s. 342 (2)	..	..	395

Act—

XX of 1896,	s. 6 103
	s. 35 44
	s. 36 103
II of 1897,	s. 6 656, 675, 676, 699, 703, 706, 711
	s. 64 629
III of 1897	 548, 823
	s. 3 585
IV of 1897,	s. 4 1195
	s. 5 1195
VIII of 1897,	s. 8 75
	s. 27 1195
	s. 28 1195
X of 1897,	s. 3 (1) 198
	s. 3 (7) 2, 17
	s. 3 (16) 53
	s. 3 (20) 68
	s. 3 (21) 39
	s. 3 (22) 34
	s. 3 (23) 39
	s. 3 (25) 83
	s. 3 (26) 72
	s. 3 (27) 17
	s. 3 (29) 39, 238
	s. 3 (36) 397
	s. 3 (39) 37
	s. 3 (40) 33
	s. 3 (44) 544
	s. 3 (57) 55
	s. 4 (1) 72
	s. 4 (2) 72, 198, 544
	s. 13 37
	s. 25 83
	s. 26 34
IV of 1898	 244
	s. 3 208
	s. 4 16
	s. 5 306
V of 1898,	s. 4 (1) (i) 78
	s. 4 (h) .. 451, 1017
	s. 4 (m) 397
	s. 5 2
	s. 30 113, 115, 116, 413
	s. 32 95, 113
	s. 33 88
	s. 33 (1) (a) 88
	s. 33 (b) 88
	s. 35 81, 95, 100, 103, 104, 116
	s. 35 (1) 104
	s. 35 (ill.) 103
	s. 42 121, 379
	s. 43 132
	s. 44 223, 277, 354,

Act .

V of 1898,	s. 15 277, 354, 429, 430
	s. 45 (a) 354
	s. 45 (b) 354
	s. 45 (c) 354
	s. 45 (f) 354
	s. 54 421
	s. 54 (1) 736
	s. 54 (1) (6) 494
	s. 54 (7) 1161
	s. 55 65, 490
	s. 59 132, 478
	s. 60 478
	s. 69 345
	s. 70 345
	s. 71 345
	s. 72 345
	s. 73 345
	s. 74 345
	s. 77 132, 379
	s. 78 132
	s. 80 371, 492
	s. 89 472
	s. 90 472
	s. 95 865
	s. 96 182
	s. 99-A 259
	s. 100 1037
	s. 103 379
	s. 106 584
	s. 107 498
	s. 108 257
	s. 110 831
	s. 114 709
	s. 123 493
	s. 127 284, 301
	s. 128 284, 301, 379
	s. 129 284, 301
	s. 130 284
	s. 131 284
	s. 132 284
	s. 133 383, 544, 545, 567
	s. 134 545
	s. 135 376, 545
	s. 136 383, 545
	s. 137 511, 545
	s. 138 545
	s. 139 545
	s. 140 545
	s. 141 545
	s. 142 545, 573, 574
	s. 143 545, 573, 574
	s. 144 182, 383, 384, 385, 387, 567

Act—

Act—

V of 1898,

V of 1898

s. 145	..	..	45
s. 146	..	..	386
s. 147	..	386,	387
s. 153	..	..	534
s. 154	..	361,	447
s. 160	..	349,	377
s. 161	..	..	448
s. 161 (2)	..	..	393
s. 162	..	393,	448
s. 164	361,	395,	408
s. 167	..	..	484
s. 174	..	..	416
s. 179, ill. (a)	..	..	657
s. 179, ill. (c)	..	..	814
s. 179, ill. (d)	..	..	657
s. 180	..	..	211
s. 181	..	345,	487
s. 181 (4)	..	..	345
s. 182	..	..	345
s. 183	..	..	345
s. 184	..	..	345
s. 185	..	..	345
s. 186	..	..	345
s. 187	..	..	345
s. 188	17, 31,	19, 20, 31
	32,	346,	1154
s. 189	..	..	345
s. 190	..	..	345
s. 190 (c)	..	345,	392
s. 191	..	345,	451
s. 192	..	..	451
s. 193	..	..	345
s. 194	..	..	345
s. 195	..	345, 346,
		356, 358, 359,
		363, 370, 372,
		373, 374, 378,
		380, 387, 411,
		425, 437, 452
s. 195 (1)	..	211,	345
s. 195 (1) (c)	..	..	345
s. 195 (3)	..	211,	345
s. 195 (4)	..	..	345
s. 195 (7)	..	345,	411
s. 196	236,	240, 241,
	242,	243, 259,
	261,	262, 264,
	307,	340, 341,
	342,	345, 417,
		586
s. 196 (a)	..	211,	345
s. 197	..	..	320
s. 198	1040,	1042, 1043,
	1090,	1101
s. 199	..	1046,	1052

s. 200	..	..	361
s. 202	..	846,	992
s. 203	..	..	454
s. 221	..	..	116
s. 221 (7)	..	..	117
s. 222 (2)	846,	857, 859,
		863, 868
s. 225	..	..	259
s. 226	..	..	497
s. 233	..	299,	802
s. 234	846,	858, 859, 868
s. 235	95,	104, 507,	802
s. 235 (1)	..	95,	97
	(2)	..	95, 97
	(3)	..	95, 97
	(4)	..	95
ill. (a)	..	..	95
ill. (b)	..	..	95
ill. (c)	..	..	96
ill. (d)	..	..	96
ill. (e)	..	..	96
ill. (f)	..	..	96
ill. (g)	..	..	96
ill. (i)	..	..	96
ill. (j)	..	..	96
ill. (k)	..	..	96
ill. (l)	..	..	96
ill. (m)	96,	823,
		824
s. 236	..	106,	408
ill. (a)	..	..	106
ill. (b)	..	..	802
s. 237	..	429,	802
s. 238	..	..	1125
s. 239	..	..	211
ill. (b)	..	..	822
ill. (c)	..	..	802
s. 250	..	..	155
s. 251	..	..	736
s. 253	..	..	698
s. 254	..	..	698
s. 255	..	..	698
s. 256	..	..	698
s. 260	..	..	211
s. 261	..	..	211
s. 262	..	..	89
s. 276	..	..	501
s. 278	..	..	501
s. 310	..	117,	118
s. 311	..	..	117
s. 318	..	..	945
s. 321	..	..	501
s. 342	118,	366, 396,
		1081
s. 342 (2)	..	..	395

LAW OF CRIMES.

iv

Act—

V of 1898.

s. 345 (1)	..	462
s. 347	..	113
s. 349	112, 113, 114, 116
	203, 512, 522
s. 349	76, 114, 116
s. 356	..	413
s. 357	..	413
s. 359	..	413
s. 360	..	413
s. 361	..	361
s. 367 (3)	..	106
s. 367 (5)	..	652
s. 368 (1)	..	75
s. 368 (2)	..	76
s. 380	..	411
s. 381	..	75
s. 382	..	76, 77
s. 386	83, 89, 90, 93, 94
	90, 93
s. 387	..	76, 91, 93
s. 388	..	91
s. 389	..	77
s. 390	..	77
s. 391	..	77
s. 392	..	77
s. 393	..	77
s. 394	..	77
s. 395	..	77
s. 396	..	77
s. 396 (2) (3)	..	487
s. 401	..	78
s. 402	..	78
s. 403	..	1091
s. 413	..	78
s. 453	..	882
s. 461	..	152
s. 471	..	156
ss. 476-478	346, 347,
	351, 353, 354, 361,
	363, 417, 437
s. 476	..	396, 448
s. 477	..	35, 346,
s. 479	..	346
s. 480	353, 356, 358,
	361, 363, 417,
	497, 500
ss. 481-482	353, 356,
	358, 361
ss. 484-485	353, 356,
	361, 363, 417
s. 485	353, 356, 358
s. 487	35, 346, 347, 351,
	356, 358, 361, 363,
	413, 417, 437
(s. 488	..	1044

Act—

V of 1893.

s. 503	..	506
s. 511	..	112
s. 517	..	803
s. 519	..	803
s. 521	549, 551, 552,
	553, 571

s. 521 (1)	..	1092
s. 532	..	276
s. 537	21, 259, 299
s. 537, cl. (a)	..	292
s. 545	..	83
s. 552	..	76

s. 555	113, 114, 354
s. 16	..	526
s. 17	..	526
s. 61	..	1195
s. 62	..	1195
s. 63	..	1195

VI of 1894.

XII of 1898.

s. 1	..	702
s. 3 (b)	..	75
s. 4	..	703, 711
s. 4 (1)	..	3
s. 4 (3) (b)	654, 656,
	675, 701, 703,
	711, 805, 815,
	817, 823, 825,
	826, 828, 831,
	832, 833, 835,
	837, 839, 933,
	936, 957, 1102

XII of 1899

XIII of 1899.

XXIV of 1899.

II of 1901

III of 1901

VI of 1901.

VIII of 1901.

I of 1903

VII of 1903.

X of 1903.

XV of 1903

s. 2	..	1026
s. 1 (2)	..	41
s. 12	..	317
s. 19 (2)	..	44
..	..	40
..	..	548
s. 4 (2)	..	41
s. 11 (2)	..	354
..	..	956, 957
s. 11	..	352, 354
s. 4	..	44
..	..	15
s. 3	..	18
s. 4	..	31
s. 7 (1)	..	18
s. 10	..	18, 31
s. 18	..	18
s. 19 (d)	..	19
..	..	329
s. 16	..	1195
s. 21 (2)	..	44
..	..	521
..	..	911
s. 43	..	912

XVI of 1903

VII of 1904.

I of 1905.

III of 1906

III of 1907

TABLE OF STATUTES.

Act—		Act—
III of 1908	 520	XXXVIII of 1920	 1148
V of 1908,	s. 115 .. 412	XXXIX of 1920	.. 43, 44, 334
O. XI,	r. 21.. 352,	XVI of 1921,	s. 2 .. 235
O. XVI,	r. 7.. 421		s. 3 .. 238
	r. 17.. 352	VII of 1922,	s. (3) (3) .. 44
	r. 18.. 352		s. 5 (1) .. 44
O. XVIII	r. 5.. 407,		s. 6 (1) .. 44
	411	XI of 1922	 354
	r. 6.. 407,		s. 37 .. 403, 500
	411		s. 52 .. 368
O. XXI,	r. 2 421,	XIII of 1922,	s. 11 .. 44
	441	V of 1923,	s. 5 .. 44
	r. 46 383,	VI of 1923,	s. 135 .. 44
	385	VIII of 1923,	s. 20 .. 44
	r. 83.. 421	XVIII of 1923	 103
	r. 91.. 421	XX of 1923	.. 758, 760, 761
O. XLV,	r. 8 .. 421	XXI of 1923,	s. 280 .. 44
VI of 1908,	s. 2 .. 568, 932	V of 1924,	s. 2 767, 772, 774,
XVI of 1908	 499		775
	s. 3 .. 46	XVIII of 1924,	s. 2 772, 768, 775
	s. 60 .. 421		s. 12 .. 85
	s. 82 .. 354, 434		s. 12 (2) .. 75
	s. 82 (d) .. 368		s. 13 (2) 82, 85
	s. 84 .. 44		s. 61 .. 82, 83
III of 1909	 911, 912	III of 1925	 1029, 1030
IV of 1909	 75, 417	VIII of 1925,	s. 2 575, 578, 770,
	s. 3 .. 117		773
	s. 4 .. 119, 823	XXIX of 1925,	s. 2 779, 780, 781
	s. 4 (a) .. 783		s. 4 .. 780
	s. 5 .. 75	Regulation—
III of 1910	 109	XIV of 1827	 1
V of 1910,	s. 4 (2) .. 44	III of 1872	 3
IX of 1910,	s. 40 .. 1195	V of 1872	 3
XVI of 1910,	s. 3 (2) .. 44	IX of 1874,	s. 3 .. 3
III of 1911,	s. 22 (i) .. 1195		s. 18 .. 83
VIII of 1911,	s. 21 .. 34, 269	X of 1874,	s. 13 .. 83
VIII of 1911,	s. 22 .. 1195	III of 1876,	s. 35 .. 83
	s. 24 .. 1195	III of 1877,	s. 29 .. 2
	s. 28 .. 275	I of 1882,	s. 5 .. 83
	s. 29 .. 272	V of 1886	 329
	s. 35 (u) .. 812	I of 1888,	s. 11 (2) .. 44
	s. 114 .. 272	V of 1890,	s. 36 .. 44
XII of 1911,	s. 4 (6) .. 44	VII of 1891,	s. 69 .. 44, 329
III of 1913	 329	III of 1892	 3
	s. 31 .. 421		s. 28 (1) .. 82
VII of 1913,	s. 244 .. 368	I of 1894,	s. 56 .. 44
	s. 262 .. 421	I of 1895	 85, 90
VIII of 1913	 65		s. 1 (3) 90, 112
VIII of 1915,	s. 116 (c) .. 44	V of 1896	 3, 85
I of 1917,	s. 39 (2) .. 44		s. 3 .. 90, 112
	s. 40 (3) .. 44	II of 1897,	s. 7 (2) .. 44
VII of 1918,	s. 40 .. 359	III of 1899	 3
XI of 1918,	s. 100 .. 1108	III of 1901,	s. 6 75, 656, 675,
XXII of 1918,	s. 2 (2) .. 504		814, 823, 825,
IV of 1920,	s. 4 (2) .. 380		826, 828, 831,

Indian Legislature—concl'd.

Bengal Legislature.

Regulation—

III of 1901

s. 6 832, 835, 837,
839, 924, 925,
926, 933, 934,
936, 952,

s. 11 .. 456

s. 11 (3) (d) 415,

417, 456,

469, 471,

654, 675,

676, 699,

706, 740,

754, 783,

817, 823,

825, 826,

828, 831,

832, 835,

837, 839,

804, 809,

815, 924,

925, 926,

933, 934,

936, 952,

1041, 1048

s. 12 .. 85,

656, 1045

s. 12 (2) .. 415,

417, 456,

469, 471,

654, 675,

676, 699,

706, 740,

754, 783,

817, 823,

825, 826,

828, 831,

832, 835,

837, 839,

804, 809,

815, 924,

925, 926,

933, 934,

952, 1048

s. 13 (2) .. 85

s. 30 .. 1045

s. 61 82, 85

s. 92 .. 329

s. 12 .. 44

s. 52 .. 44

V of 1910,

VI of 1910,

III of 1911,

I of 1913

II of 1913

III of 1913

.. 3

.. 3

s. 55 (3) .. 41

VI of 1920,

s. 8 .. 349

Act—

XXXII of 1855, s. 16 ..

s. 17 .. 1196

XXI of 1856, s. 20 ..

s. 41 .. 1195

II of 1866, s. 41 ..

s. 55 .. 534

IV of 1866, s. 68 ..

s. 4 .. 1195

II of 1867, s. 11 ..

s. 13 .. 1195

VI of 1871, s. 33 ..

s. 10 .. 44

III of 1876, s. 10 ..

s. 93 .. 352

VII of 1876, s. 42 ..

s. 56 .. 1195

s. 56 .. 396

s. 56 .. 349, 352,

s. 56 .. 383

VIII of 1876, s. 56 ..

I of 1879 .. 374

IX of 1879, s. 59 (a) ..

II of 1882, s. 77 ..

III of 1884 .. 40

V of 1884, s. 94 ..

VIII of 1885 .. 45

IV of 1887, s. 69 ..

s. 70 .. 385

IV of 1887, s. 63 ..

s. 73 .. 44, 385

II of 1888, s. 370 ..

VI of 1890 .. 329

I of 1895 .. 534

III of 1895, s. 33 ..

I of 1899, s. 26 ..

III of 1899, s. 646 ..

s. 576 .. 494

s. 577 .. 437

II of 1904, s. 7 ..

V of 1909, s. 46 ..

s. 52 .. 44

III of 1913, s. 58 ..

V of 1914, s. 106 ..

VI of 1914, s. 14 (4) ..

I of 1916 .. 436

VI of 1919, s. 19 ..

s. 7 (5) .. 44

s. 19 .. 44, 519

Regulation—

II of 1793 ..

III of 1818 ..

III of 1821 ..

.. 329

.. 263

.. 358

.. 357,

Act—

XXIV of 1859, s. 47 ..

s. 54 ..

III of 1860 ..

.. 1195

.. 124

.. 351

Madras Legislature.

Act—

XXIV of 1859, s. 47 ..

s. 54 ..

III of 1860 ..

.. 1195

.. 124

.. 351

Madras Legislature—*contd.*Madras Legislature—concl'd.

Act—

Act—

V of 1863,	s. 7 ..	922, 923
	s. 12 ..	.. 950
VIII of 1865		.. 289
	s. 26 ..	.. 915
V of 1866,	s. 3 ..	.. 45
III of 1869		.. 348
	s. 2 ..	.. 348
III of 1873
V of 1882,	s. 21 ..	.. 1195
	s. 26 ..	.. 1195
	s. 28 ..	.. 1195
	s. 35 ..	.. 1195
	s. 50 ..	.. 1195
	s. 60 ..	.. 45
I of 1884		.. 329
	s. 56 ..	.. 45
	s. 161 ..	.. 351
	s. 451 ..	.. 351
IV of 1884,	s. 41 ..	.. 45
V of 1884		.. 386
	s. 43 ..	.. 45
	s. 94 ..	.. 376
	s. 98 (2) ..	.. 386
	s. 115-A ..	.. 358
VI of 1884,	s. 19 ..	.. 375
	s. 23 ..	.. 45
I of 1886,	s. 55 ..	.. 1195
	s. 57 (d) ..	.. 1021
	s. 58 ..	.. 1195
	s. 64 ..	.. 127
II of 1886,	s. 15 ..	.. 375
	s. 76 ..	.. 329
	s. 85 ..	.. 90
III of 1888,	s. 32 ..	.. 534
	s. 46 ..	.. 1195
	s. 51 ..	.. 898
	s. 53 ..	.. 1195
	s. 64 ..	.. 1195
	s. 65 ..	.. 1195
III of 1888,	s. 67 ..	.. 1195
	s. 68 ..	.. 1195
	s. 71 ..	.. 1195
	s. 72 ..	.. 1195
	s. 75 ..	.. 1195
	s. 81 ..	.. 124
III of 1889,	s. 3 ..	.. 1195
	s. 3 (10) ..	.. 87
	s. 5 ..	.. 1195
IV of 1889,	s. 74 ..	.. 1195
II of 1890,	s. 11 ..	.. 45
I of 1891,	s. 19 ..	.. 83
VI of 1900		.. 386
I of 1904		.. 329
III of 1904,	s. 366 ..	.. 546

IV of 1914, s. 10 (3) ..	.. 45
IV of 1919, s. 359 ..	.. 330
s. 364 ..	.. 723
s. 405 ..	.. 45
Regulation—
I of 1803 ..	.. 329
II of 1803 ..	.. 329
IV of 1816, s. 15 ..	.. 350
s. 16 ..	.. 350
VII of 1816 ..	.. 40
XI of 1816, s. 10 ..	70, 173
II of 1819 ..	.. 267
IV of 1821, s. 6 ..	.. 173

Bombay Legislature.

Act—

VI of 1863, s. 28 ..	.. 65
VI of 1867, s. 3 ..	.. 544
s. 5 ..	.. 544
s. 6 ..	.. 544
s. 7 ..	.. 358
s. 8 ..	.. 544
s. 11 ..	.. 548
s. 14 ..	.. 548
VII of 1867 ..	.. 329
VIII of 1867, s. 13 ..	.. 395
s. 20 ..	.. 124
I of 1877, s. 25 ..	.. 320
V of 1878, s. 43 ..	.. 1195
s. 46 (c) ..	.. 1016
s. 46 (d) ..	.. 1021
s. 48 ..	.. 1195
IV of 1879, s. 25 ..	.. 320
V of 1879 ..	.. 329
s. 196 ..	.. 403
VI of 1879, s. 78 ..	.. 320
s. 79 ..
VI of 1886, s. 80 ..	.. 329
IV of 1887, s. 5 ..	.. 1195
s. 12 ..	.. 1195
III of 1888 ..	43, 329
s. 68-A ..	.. 354
s. 155 (1) ..	.. 354
s. 155 (2) ..	.. 354
s. 187 ..	.. 354
s. 388 (a) ..	.. 555
s. 388 (b) ..	.. 555
s. 388 (c) ..	.. 555
s. 388 (d) ..	.. 555
s. 389 ..	.. 555
s. 417B ..	.. 551
s. 418 ..	.. 531
s. 473 ..	354, 385, 555
s. 521 ..	.. 44

or agent in the ordinary course of his employment may make the master or principal criminally liable, although he was not aware of such acts or defaults, and even where they were against his orders.¹ The same view is taken in India.² The following are the exceptions to the principle that a master is not criminally liable for the acts of his servant.

1. Statutory liability.—A statute may impose criminal liability upon the master as regards the acts or omissions of his servants. But in all such cases the question is whether upon the true construction of the statute in question the master is intended to be made criminally responsible for acts done by his servants in contravention of the statute, where such acts are done within the scope or in the course of their employment.³ The master is relieved from criminal responsibility where he proves that he acted in good faith and had done all that it was reasonably possible to do to prevent the commission by his agents and servants of offences against the statute. Similarly, if a servant does that for which he is not employed⁴ or if he acts for his own personal benefit the master will not be liable.⁵

License cases form a class by themselves in which the master is generally held responsible.

Licenses to keep ale-houses are granted only to persons of good personal character, and it is obvious that the object of so restricting the grant of licenses will be defeated if the licensed person can, by delegating the control and management of the house to other persons who are altogether unfit to keep it, free themselves from the responsibility for the manner in which the house is conducted.⁶ Personal knowledge in the licensed person of the acts of his servants is not always necessary; otherwise enactments granting licenses to good persons would be of no effect. Where the servant of a licensed victualler knowingly supplied liquor to a constable on duty without the authority of his superior officer as required by a statute, it was held that the licensed victualler was liable to be convicted under 35 & 36 Vic., c. 94, s. 16, sub-s. 2, although he had no knowledge of the act of his servant.⁷ In the case of license-holders it has been again and again decided that the responsibility should be upon the licensee for acts done by an employee within the scope of his authority although contrary to the licensee's orders.⁸ The same principle is followed in India. Where, therefore, the manager of a licensed vendor of arms, ammunition and military stores, sold certain military stores without previously ascertaining that the buyer was legally authorized to possess the same, it was held that the licensee was liable to punishment under s. 22 of the Arms Act though the goods were not sold with his knowledge and consent.⁹ Similarly, where the servant of a licensed vendor of opium sold opium to a boy under the age of fourteen years the licensed vendor was held liable under s. 9 of the Opium Act.¹⁰

¹ Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. IX, p. 235. Approved of and followed in Varaj Lal, [1924] 51 Cal. 948, 951.

² Suffer Ally Khan v. Golam Hyder Khan, (1866) 6 W. R. Cr. 60.

³ Coppen v. Moore (No. 2), [1898] 2 Q. B. 306, 313. See Chundi Churn Mookerjee, (1884) 9 Cal. 819, which establishes the non-liability of the master under s. 22 of the Indian Ports Act (XII of 1876), on the ground that the provisions of that section were not meant to apply to masters. See Jeevanji, (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 967, in which it is held that under sub-s. 1 of s. 111 of the Indian Emigration Act the Legislature intended to make the master liable for his servant's acts. See also Haji Shaiik Mahomad, (1907) 9 Bom. L.R. 1059; Jaffer Haji, (1908) 10 Bom. L.R. 1052. See Zaizar Husain, (1923) 21 A.L.J.R. 481, where the accused was convicted for possessing cocaine without lawful justification.

⁴ Boyle v. Smith, [1906] 1 K. B. 432. See Behari Lal, (1911) 34 All. 146, where the servant's act in taking unauthorized tolls was outside the scope of his employment, and the master was held not responsible. See Uttam Chand, (1911) 39 Cal. 344.

⁵ Anglo-American Oil Company, Limited v. Manning, [1908] 1 K. B. 536. See also Somerret v. Hart, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 360.

⁶ Masseu v. Morris, [1894] 2 Q. B. 412. See also Brooks v. Mason, [1902] 2 K. B. 743; Emery Nolloth, [1903] 2 K. B. 264.

⁷ Mullins v. Collins, (1874) L. R. 9 Q. B. 292.

⁸ Commissioners of Police v. Cartman, [1896] 1 Q. B. 655. See Bosely v. Davies, (1875) 1 Q. B. D. 84.

⁹ Tyebah, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 52, s.c. 24 Bom. 423.

¹⁰ Babu Lal, (1912) 34 All. 319.

Where a particular intent or state of mind is not of the essence of an offence, a master is criminally liable for the act of his servant expressly prohibited by a statute, but he cannot be so made liable, if the statute provides for liability for permitting or causing a particular act, unless it is shown that such act was done with the master's knowledge and assent, express or implied.¹

Statutes passed for the benefit of the public health and sanitation are construed in the same way as licensing Acts.² Similar is the case with statutes dealing with revenue matters.³

2. Public nuisance.—The owner of works carried on for his profits by his agents is liable to be indicted for a public nuisance caused by acts of his agents, in carrying on the works, though done by them without his knowledge and contrary to his general orders.⁶ If persons for their own advantage employ servants to conduct works, they must be answerable for what is done by the servants even though they are personally ignorant of the way in which the work is carried on and proprietor, if not living in the premises, might be liable for abetment. The English cases above referred to were held to be of no authority on the construction of the provision of the Penal Code.⁶

3. Neglect of duty.—If a person neglects the performance of an act, which is likely to cause danger to others, and entrusts it to unskilful hands he will be in certain cases criminally liable. Where an engineer employed to manage a steam-engine engaged to draw up miners from a coal pit, left the engine in the charge of an ignorant boy, who told him that he was unable to manage it, and in the absence of the engineer a man was drawn up, who was killed from the want of skill in the boy to manage the engine, it was held that the engineer was guilty of manslaughter.⁷

did not apply proper precautions against its misuse.⁸ But if a skilful person is employed the employer will not be liable in the absence of express malice.⁹

The liability of a proprietor of a newspaper for acts of the editor in allowing libellous matter to be published is now restricted by statute 6 & 7 Vic., c. 96 s. 7.¹⁰ Before the passing of the statute the proprietor was considered prima facie answerable for what appeared in his paper, but this presumption arising from mere proprietorship was rebuttable.¹¹ If the master as well as the servant are made liable under a statute for a certain course of conduct the servant alone will be responsible for an act done in contravention of the statute.¹² But the master may be liable unless he shows good faith. Thus, the provisions of s. 2, sub-s. 2, of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, which make it an offence to sell goods to which a forged trade-mark or false trade-description is applied, make a master criminally

¹ Varaj Lall, (1924) 51 Cal. 948.

Prady v. Foot, (1892) 66 L. T. 649, under Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 Followed in Sew Karan v. Corporation of Calcutta, (1912) 39 Cal. 682. *Collman v.
Mills*, [1897] 1 Q. B. 396 under the Public Health Act. 1898.

* Att.-Gen. v. Siddon, (1830) 1 Cr. & J. 225. Where a trader harbours and conceals smuggled goods he is liable in penalties for the illegal act of a servant, done in the conduct of the business, with a view to protect smuggled goods, though the master be absent at the time, and the act is done by the servant upon the exigency of the occasion.

■ ■ ■

n Ram.

⁷ Loire, (1850) 3 C. & K. 123.

* Dixon, (1814) 3 M. & S. 11

* Sriish Chandra Sircar, (1918) 17 A. I. J. R. 343.

¹⁰ Holbrook, (1878) 4 Q. B. D. 42.

¹¹ Gutch Fisher, (1829) 1 M & Mal. 433.

¹² Massey v. Morris, [1894] 2 Q. B. 412.

liable for acts done by his servants in contravention of the section.¹ It was held, similarly, where gaming had taken place upon licensed premises to the knowledge of a servant of the licensed person who was in charge of the premises, but without any knowledge on the part of the licensed person.²

2 'And not otherwise.'—These words repeal all former laws for the punishment of any offence which is made punishable by the Code. On the strength of this section the Calcutta High Court has held that English precedents cannot be followed to enlarge the scope of the exceptions to s. 499 of the Penal Code, which should be regarded as exhaustive.³ The Law Commissioners⁴ say: "We do not advise the general repeal of the penal laws now existing in the Territories for which we have recommended the enactment of the Code. We think it will be more expedient to provide only that no man shall be tried or punished (except by a Court Martial) for any facts which constitute any offence defined in the Code, otherwise than according to its provisions." Acts or omissions made penal by any other statute but not by the Code will be governed by that statute. See s. 5 infra, as to the laws not affected by the Penal Code.

3. 'Act or omission.'—See s. 33 infra.

4. 'Contrary to the provisions thereof.'—All penal Statutes are to be construed strictly, that is to say, the Court must see that the thing charged as an offence is within the plain meaning of the words used, and must not strain the words on any notion that there has been a slip, that there has been a crusus om'isus, that the thing is so clearly within the mischief that it must have been intended to be included and would have been included if thought of. On the other hand, the person charged has a right to say that the thing charged, although within the words, is not within the spirit of the enactment. But where the thing is brought within the words and within the spirit, there a penal enactment is to be construed, like any other instrument, according to the fair common-sense meaning of the language used, and the Court is not to find or make any doubt or ambiguity in the language of a penal statute, where such doubt or ambiguity would clearly not be found or made in the same language in any other instrument."⁵ Criminal enactments are not to be extended by construction. When an offence against the law is alleged, and when the Court has to consider whether that alleged offence falls within the language of a criminal statute, the Court must be satisfied, not only that the spirit of the legislative enactment has been violated, but also that the language used by the legislature includes the offence in question, and makes it criminal.⁶ Nothing is to be regarded as within the meaning of the statute which is not within the letter—which is not clearly and intelligibly described in the very words of the statute itself.⁷ Also in the interpretation of Acts the elementary rule is to give full and accurate effect to every word used in them.⁸ The Courts, in the exposition of penal statutes, are not to narrow the construction. They are to look to the words in the first instance, and where the words are plain, they are to decide on them. If the words be doubtful, they are then to have recourse to the subject matter; but at all events it is only a secondary rule.⁹ The essence of a Code is to be exhaustive on the matters in respect of which it declares the law, and it is not the province of

¹ Coppen v. Moore (No. 2), [1898] 2 Q. B. 306.

² Bond v. Evans, (1888) 21 Q. B. D. 249; Redgate v. Haynes, (1876) 1 Q. B. D. 89. See Somerset v. Hart, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 360, where under similar circumstances the master was not held liable because he was not in charge of the premises.

³ Kori Siny, (1912) 17 C.W.N. 297.

⁴ Com.'s 2nd Rep. ss. 536-538 and (1866) 3 M. H. C. App. vi.

⁵ Per James, L.J., in Dyle v. Elliott: The "Gauntlet", (1872) L. R. 4 P. C. 184, 191. See also Lord Huntingtower v. Gardiner, (1823) 1 B. & C. 297, 299.

⁶ Per Willes, J., in Britt v. Robinson, (1870) L. R. 5 C. P. 503, 513, 514.

⁷ Koka Lalang, (1881) 8 Cal. 214; Musamat Kesar, (1918) 4 P. L. J. 74, r.n.

⁸ Mirchia, (1896) 18 All. 364, 365.

⁹ The Inhabitants of Hodnett, (1736) 1 T. R. 96, 101.

a Judge to disregard or go outside the letter of the enactment according to its true construction.¹

In the construction of codes the language of the statute and its natural meaning must be first examined, uninfluenced by any consideration of the previous law on the plain language of a statute the legislature not to depart

A penal statute should, when its meaning is doubtful, be construed in the manner most favourable to the liberties of the subjects, especially so when it is of an exceptional nature.³

The following principles, as laid down in Maxwell,⁴ will generally govern the construction of penal laws.

The paramount duty of the judicial interpreter is to put upon the language of the legislature, honestly and faithfully, its plain and rational meaning, and to promote its object. It is for the legislature, not the Court, to define a crime and ordain its punishment. It is unquestionably a reasonable expectation that, when strict construction does not indeed require or sanction that suspicious scrutiny of the words, or those hostile conclusions from their ambiguity or from what is left unexpressed, which characterize the judicial interpretation of affidavits in support of ex parte applications, or of Magistrate's convictions, where the ambiguity goes to the jurisdiction. Nor does it allow the imposition of a restricted meaning on the words, wherever any doubt can be suggested, for the purpose of withdrawing from the operation of the statute a case which falls both within its scope and the fair sense of its language. This would be to defeat, not to promote, the object of the legislature; to misread the statute and misunderstand its purpose. A Court is not at liberty to put limitations on general words which are not called for by the sense, or the objects, of the mischiefs of the enactment; and no construction is admissible which would sanction a fraudulent evasion of an Act. But the rule of construction requires that the language shall be so construed that no cases shall be held to fall within it which do not fall both within the reasonable meaning of its terms and within the spirit and scope of the enactment. Where an enactment may entail penal consequences, no violence must be done to its language in order to bring people within it, but rather care must be taken that no one is brought within it who is not within its express language. To determine that a case is within the intention of a statute, its language must authorize the Court to say so; but it is not admissible to carry the principle that a case which is within the mischief of a statute is within its provisions, so far as to punish a crime not specified in the statute, because it is of equal atrocity or of a kindred character with those which are enumerated. If the legislature has not used words sufficiently comprehensive to include within its prohibition all the cases which fall within the mischief intended to be prevented, it is not competent to a Court to extend them. It is immaterial, for this purpose, whether the proceedings prescribed for the enforcement of the penal law be criminal or civil.

The degree of strictness applied to the construction of a penal statute depended in great measure on the severity of the statute. When it merely imposed a pecuniary

¹ Per Lord Davey in Gokal Mandar v Padmanund, (1902) 29 Cal. 707, 715, 4 Bom. L. R. 793, 796, p. c.

² Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Dyal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 388.

³ Bhista bin Madanna, (1876) 1 Bom. 308, 311.

⁴ On the Interpretation of Statutes (5th Edn.), Ch. X, p. 425. See also Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England (4th Edn.), Vol. I, p. 62.

penalty, it was construed less strictly than where the rule was invoked in favorem vitæ.

A strict construction requires, at least, that no case shall fall within a penal statute which does not comprise all the elements which, whether morally material or not, are in fact made to constitute the offences as defined by the statute. As illustrative of the rule of strict construction, it has been said that while remedial laws may extend to new things not in esse at the time of making the statute, penal laws may not. Omissions, which are available from the text and are the result of accident, cannot be supplied in penal laws though they may probably be supplied in remedial laws.

The rule of strict construction, however, whenever invoked, comes attended with qualifications. Other rules no less important; and it is by the light which each contributes that the true sense of the statute is determined. Among them is the rule that that sense of the statute is to be ascertained by the context, and promotes in the fullest manner the objects of the legislature. The paramount objects, in construing penal as well as civil statutes, is to ascertain the legislative intent; and the rule of strict construction is not violated by permitting the words to have their full meaning, or the more extensive of two meanings, when best effectuating the intention. They are, indeed, frequently taken in the widest sense, sometimes even in a sense more wide than etymologically belongs or is popularly attached to them, in order to carry out effectually the legislative intent, or to use Lord Coke's words, to suppress the mischief and advance the remedy.

The tendency of modern decisions, upon the whole, is to narrow materially the difference between what is called a strict and a beneficial construction. All statutes are now construed with a more attentive regard to the language, and criminal statutes, with a more rational regard to the aim and intention of the legislature, than formerly. It is unquestionably right that the distinction should not be altogether erased from the judicial mind; for it is required by the spirit of our free institutions that the interpretation of all statutes should be favourable to personal liberty; and it is still preserved in a certain reluctance to supply the defects of language, or to eke out the meaning of an obscure passage by strained or doubtful inferences. The effect of the rule of strict construction might almost be summed up in the remark, that where an equivocal word or ambiguous sentence leaves a reasonable doubt of its meaning which the canons of interpretation fail to solve, the benefit of the doubt should be given to the subject, and against the legislature which has failed to explain itself. But it yields to the paramount rule that every statute is to be expounded according to its expressed or manifest intention; and that all cases within the mischiefs aimed at are, if the language permits, to be held to fall within its remedial influence.

The phrase 'intention of the legislature' is, says Lord Watson in Solomon v. Sa'mon & Co.,¹ a common but very slippery phrase, which, popularly understood, may signify anything from intention embodied in positive enactment to speculative opinion as to what the legislature probably would have meant, although there has been an omission to enact it. In a Court of Law or Equity, what the Legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from that which it has chosen to enact, either in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication.

Reports of the Indian Law Commissioners.—Reference is permissible to these reports.²

¹ [1897] A. C. 22, 38.

² In re Mew, (1862) 31 L. J. Bankers, 57; Shaik Moosa v. Shaik Eusa, (1884) 8 Bom. 211; Chandulv. Monistankar, (1893) 18 Bom.

516, 625; Ghulet, (1884) 7 All. 44; Ramesh Chander Sannyal v. Hira Mondal, (1890) 17 Cal. 552; contra, Tarucknath Sircar v. Praonno Coomar Ghose, (1873) 10 W. R. 48, 53.

Proceedings of the Legislative Council.—Reference to these is not permissible,¹ but in England these are referred to.²

Reports of Select Committees of the Legislative Council.—The Privy Council has disapproved of any reference to these reports,³ but in England they are referred to.⁴ They have been referred to by the Madras High Court in a case after the Privy Council decision.⁵

Statements of Objects and Reasons.—The Privy Council has disapproved of any reference to these⁶ but they were referred to by the Bombay High Court in a case⁷ after the Privy Council decision.

Headings.—The headings of different portions of a statute can be referred to, to determine the sense of any doubtful expression in a section ranged under any particular heading.⁸ In cases of doubt Courts may be guided by the position in an Act of a particular section.

Marginal Notes.—The marginal notes to sections of an Act cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the Act.⁹ They are no part of the Act.¹⁰ A marginal note is merely an abstract of the clause intended to catch the eye.¹¹

Provisos.—In construing a section full and natural meaning should be given to a proviso if any.¹²

Illustrations.—Illustrations do not, in legal strictness, form part of an Act, and are not binding on the Court.¹³ They furnish some indication of the presumable intention of the legislature. They are not binding when inconsistent with the language of the section.¹⁴ They ought not to be construed as limiting the right given by the section.¹⁵ They may be useful so far as they explain the meaning of the section, but must never be allowed to control its plain meaning, especially when the effect would be to curtail a right, which it would, in its ordinary sense, confer.¹⁶ But the Privy Council has laid down that illustrations to an Indian statute are to be taken as part of the statute.¹⁷

Punctuation.—Punctuation is to be taken into consideration in interpreting an Act.¹⁸

5. 'Within the said territories.'—That is, the territories mentioned in 21 & 22 Vic., c. 106. If the offence is committed outside these territories it is

¹ Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 125, 128; The Administrator-General of Bengal v. Prem Lal Mullick, (1895) 22 Cal. 788, F.C.; Krishna Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal Pillai, (1919) 22 Bom. L.R. 568, F.C.; Dina Nath Pal v. Raja Sati Prasad, (1922) 36 C. L. J. 220.

² In re Meir, (1862) 31 L. J. Bankes 87; Hebbert v. Purches, (1871) L. R. 3 P. C. 648, 649; Bishop of Oxford, (1879) 4 Q. B. D. 535.

³ The Administrator-General of Bengal v. Prem Lal Mullick, sup.; Krishna Ayyangar v. Nallaperumal Pillai, sup.; Dina Nath Pal v. Raja Sati Prasad, sup.

⁴ Drummond v. Drummond, (1866) L. R. 2 Ch. App. 32, 45.

⁵ Assam v. Pathkuma, (1897) 22 Mad. 491, 504.

⁶ Chunilal v. Manishankar, (1893) 18 Bom. 616.

⁷ The Directors, etc., of the Hammersmith & City Ry. v. Brand, (1869) L. R. 4 H. L. 171.

⁸ Balraj Kunwar v. Jagatpal Singh, (1904) 26 All. 393, 406, s.c. 11 Bom. L. R. 516, F.C.; Mahomed Ayood, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 918; Sheikh Chamman, (1919) 1 P. L. T. 11.

⁹ Dulhi Mullah v. Halway, (1895) 23 Cal. 55, 59; Clayton v. Green, (1868) L. R. 3 C. P. 511; Sutton v. Sutton, (1882) 22 Ch. D. 511.

¹⁰ Attorney-General v. Great Eastern Railway Co., (1879) 11 Ch. D. 449, 465.

¹¹ Alangamonjori Dabee v. Sonamoni Dabee, (1882) 8 Cal. 637.

¹² Dubey Sahai v. Ganesh Lal, (1875) 1 All. 34, 36, F.B.

¹³ Fakirapa, (1890) 15 Bom. 491, 496; Satis Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Dayal De, (1920) 48 Cal. 390; Nga Mya, (1915) 8 L. B. R. 306, 311, F.B.

¹⁴ Govinda Pillai v. Thayammal, (1904) 28 Mad. 57.

¹⁵ Koylash Chunder Ghose v. Sonatum Chung Barooie, (1881) 7 Cal. 132, 135; Mahomed Syedol v. Yeoh Ooi, (1916) 19 Bom. L. R. 157, F.C.

¹⁶ Lala Balla Mal v. Ahad Shah, (1918) 21 Bom. L. R. 558, F.C.

¹⁷ Taylor v. Bleach, (1914) 17 Bom. L. R. 56; Anantapur v. Kalekhan, (1912) 12 M. L. T. 224.

not punishable under the Penal Code,¹ unless it has been made so by means of special provisions such as ss. 3, 4, 108-A, etc., of the Penal Code.

By the terms of the Statute 24 & 25 Vic., c. 101, the exercise of jurisdiction in any part of His Majesty's Indian territories by the High Courts was meant to be subject to, and not exclusive of, the general legislative power of the Governor-General in Council. An exercise of legislative authority by the Governor-General in Council, whereby any place or territory is removed from the jurisdiction of the High Courts, is one expressly contemplated by the Statute 24 & 25 Vic., c. 101, and by the Letters Patent issued under that statute.²

Territorial Jurisdiction.—The general territorial jurisdiction of a State extends into the sea as far as a cannon shot will reach, which is usually calculated to be a marine league, or three miles. The territories, strictly speaking, of a State include, therefore, not only the compass of land, in the ordinary acceptance of the term, belonging to such State, but also that portion of the sea lying along and washing its coast, which is commonly called its 'maritime territory.' It is by the assent of nations that the three-mile belt of sea has been brought under the dominion of every State. In the *Franconia case*³ the question arose whether the British Courts had jurisdiction over a foreigner in command of a foreign ship, who whilst passing within three miles of English shores, ran into a British ship and caused loss of life. It was held by seven out of thirteen judges that in the absence of statutory enactment the central criminal Court had no power to try such an offence. This decision led to the passing of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act,⁴ which has been extended to India.

Prior to this decision and before the enactment of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, the Bombay High Court had held that an offence committed on the high seas but within three miles from the coast of British India was punishable under the Penal Code as being committed within the territorial limits of British India. In this case certain of the inhabitants of a village sallied out in boats and pulled up and removed a number of fishing-stakes lawfully fixed in the sea within three miles from the shore by the villagers of a neighbouring village and it was held that the local criminal Court had jurisdiction over the offenders, and that the Penal Code was the substantive law applicable to the case.⁵

Section 2 of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act says: "An offence committed by a person, whether he is or is not a subject of His Majesty, on the open sea, within the territorial waters of His Majesty's dominions, is an offence within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, although it may have been committed on board or by means of a foreign ship, and the person who committed such offence may be arrested, tried, and punished accordingly."

"Offence," as used in this Act, means, "an act, neglect, or default of such a description as would, if committed within the body of a county in England, be punishable according to the law of England" (s. 7). The "jurisdiction of the Admiral" includes the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England and Ireland, or either of such jurisdictions as used in any Act of Parliament; and for the purpose of arresting any person, the territorial waters shall be deemed to be within the jurisdiction of any Judge, Magistrate, or Officer having power to issue warrants for arresting persons charged with offences committed within the jurisdiction of such Judge, Magistrate, or Officer (ibid). "Territorial water" means "such part of the sea adjacent to the coast as is deemed by international law to be within the territorial sovereignty of His Majesty; and for the purpose of any offence under ¹ See Moorga Chetty, (1851) 5 Bom. 338, F.N. Act VIII of 1882, s. 9, was passed to nullify the effect of this decision in respect of stolen property.

² Durak, (1878) 4 Cal. 172, P.C.

³ Or Keyn, (1876) L. R. 2 Ex. D. 63. See Att.-Gen. for British Columbia v. Al-

Gen for Canada, [1914] A. C. 153, 174; *Secretary of State for India v. Sri Rajah Chelikan*¹ Rama Rao, (1916) 18 Bom. L. R. 1007, P.C.

¹ 41 & 42 Vic., c. 73.

² Kalya Rama, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 63

this Act it means any part of the open sea within one marine league of the coast measured from low-water mark" (ibid).

"Proceedings for the trial and punishment of a person, who is not a subject of His Majesty, and who is charged with any such offence as is declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, shall not be instituted in any Court of the United Kingdom, except with the consent of one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and on his certificate that the institution of such proceedings is in his opinion expedient, and shall not be instituted in any of the

be instituted." (s. 3.)

It has been acknowledged by all nations that the Courts of a State have jurisdiction over its ports and harbours, the mouths of its rivers, and its land locked bays. This principle has been followed in an old Bombay case.¹ A foreigner committing an offence in any such place will be amenable to the jurisdiction of British Courts, whether or not his act amounted to an offence in his country. The accused was indicted for an unnatural offence committed on board of an East India ship, lying in St. Katherine's Docks. It was argued that he was a native of Bagdad where his act would not have amounted to an offence. But the Court held that that was not a legal defence.²

Amendment.—After the word 'territories' there was the clause "on or after the said first day of January, 1862," but it was omitted by Act XII of 1891, Schedule I.

PRACTICE.

Jurisdiction.—Where it is doubtful whether the offence is committed in British or foreign territory, the question of jurisdiction cannot be fully determined unless the Magistrate proceeds with the investigation and states what in his opinion is proved by the evidence of the witnesses.³

3. Any person liable by any law passed by the Governor General of India in Council,¹ to be tried for an offence committed beyond the limits of the said territories shall be dealt with according to the provisions of this Code for any act² committed beyond the said territories in the same manner as if such act had been committed within the said territories.

COMMENT.

This section only applies to the case of a person who, at the time of committing the offence charged, was amenable to British Courts.⁴ This and the following section relate to the extra-territorial operation of the Code.

1. 'By any law passed by the Governor General of India in Council.'—The effect of these words is apparently to restrict the operation of the section to the cases specified in the Indian Extradition Act⁵ and ss 186 and 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If an Indian commits an act in England which is not an offence in that country (e.g., adultery) but is punishable under the Penal Code, he may be prosecuted in India. A native Indian subject of His Majesty, being a soldier in

¹ Erub Ibrahim, (1815) Perry's Oriental Cases, 577. See arguments in De Sylva, (1909) 11 Bom. L. R. 221.

(1868) 9 W. R. 29.

² Pertzi, (1873) 10 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 256.

³ Ests, (1889) P. R. No. 29 of 1889; Reid, (1893) P. R. No. 7 of 1894.

⁴ XV of 1903.

⁵ Fayy, (1836) 7 C. & P. 456.

⁶ McClelland v. McLeod, Holder, (1868) 9 W. R. 29.

the Indian Army, committed a murder in Cyprus while on service in such army, and was charged with this offence at Agra. It was held that he might be dealt with in respect of such offence by the criminal Court at Agra.¹

Legislative Power.—The Government of India, says Ilbert,² is the creation of statute. Its powers are derived wholly from Acts of Parliament, with reference to persons, places, and subjects by which they are conferred. The power of the Government was conferred :

(a) As to servants of Government in allied Native States by s. 22 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861³;

(b) As to all British subjects of His Majesty within the territories of Native Princes whether in the service of the Government of India or otherwise by s. 1 of the Government of India Act⁴;

(c) As to all persons being native Indian subjects of His Majesty, without and beyond, as well as within, the Indian territories under the dominion of His Majesty by s. 1 of the Indian Councils Act, 1869⁵;

(d) As to His Majesty's Indian Army serving anywhere by s. 73 of the Government of India Act,⁶ save by the Indian Councils Act, 1861.⁷

2. 'Act.'—It includes omission as well (s. 32 infra).

Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences.

4. The provisions of this Code apply also to any offence committed by—

(1) Any native Indian subject¹ of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India²;

(2) Any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India :

(3) Any servant of the Queen,³ whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

Explanation.—In this section the word 'offence' includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, a coolie, who is a native Indian subject, commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found

(b) B, a European British subject, commits a murder in Kashmir. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(c) C, a foreigner, who is in the service of the Punjab Government, commits a murder in Jhind. He can be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found

(d) D, a British subject living in Indore, instigates E to commit a murder in Bombay. D is guilty of abetting murder.

COMMENT.

Object.—The present section 4 (introduced by Act IV of 1898) shows the extent to which the Code now applies to offences committed outside British India. "At the time the Indian Penal Code was passed, that is to say, in 1860, Parliament had conferred on the Indian Legislature the power of dealing with extra-territorial

¹ Sermak's Sisiz, (1879) 2 All. 218, r.v.

² Government of India, Ch. VII, p. 412.

³ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67.

⁴ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 17.

⁵ 32 & 33 Vic., c. 54.

⁶ 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85.

⁷ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22.

offences in one particular case, namely, where the offence was committed by a servant of Government But since 1860 Parliament has conferred various extra-territorial powers on the Indian Legislature..... We think it is right and convenient, in the case of the Code like the Indian Penal Code, that the extent of its extra-territorial operation should appear on the face of the Code itself."¹

Principle.—Under the first clause Native Indian subjects of His Majesty the King-Emperor will be triable in British India for offences committed by them at any place out of British India. Under the second clause any European British subject who commits an offence within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India will be triable in British India. If such person commits an offence within the French or Portuguese territory in India he cannot be tried in British India. Clause 3 gives jurisdiction to try servants of His Majesty, whether British or Indian, for offences committed by them in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

1. 'Native Indian subject.'—These words mean only native subjects de jure and not de facto. Occasional residences in British territory cannot be taken to render a person who is not de jure a subject, a subject for the purpose of criminal jurisdiction being exercised over him for an act committed in a foreign territory, which, if committed within British territory, would have been an offence cognizable by British Courts.² The term 'Native Indian subject of His Majesty' does not include 'servants of His Majesty.'³ It has been so held by the Bombay High Court in a case in which the accused was a Talati in the British territory but his family belonged to a village in the Baroda State and he was born there. His services were lent by the British Government to the Cambay State. While serving there he took bribes and was convicted by the First Class Magistrate of Ahmedabad within whose jurisdiction he was found and arrested. It was held that the accused was not a 'Native Indian subject of His Majesty' within the meaning of s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that as 'servant of the Queen' the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try him for an offence committed in a foreign state.

The legislative authority of the Government of India is expressly declared to extend to all native Indian subjects by s. 1 of the Indian Councils Act, 1869.⁴

2. 'British India.'—See s. 15, infra, as to the definition of this term. The General Clauses Act says that 'British India' shall mean all territories and places within His Majesty's dominions which are for the Majesty through the Governor-General of India or officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India.⁵

The word 'India' means British India, together with any territories of any Native Prince or Chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty exercised through the Governor-General of India, or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India.⁶

3. 'Servant of the Queen.'—See s. 14, infra. The legislative authority of the Government of India is expressly declared to extend to "all servants of the Government of India within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with His Majesty."⁷ The servant may be a Native Indian subject or a European British subject or a foreigner.

Crimes committed outside British India.—Where an offence is committed beyond the limits of British India but the offender is found within its limits two contingencies arise:—

¹ G. L., (1897) Part VI, p. 238.

² Fakir, (1884) P. R. No. 1 of 1885.

³ Natwarai, (1891) 16 Bom. 178.

⁴ 32 & 33 Vic., c. 98, s. 1.

⁵ Act X of 1897, s. 3 (7); The Interpretation

Act, 52 & 53 Vic., c. 63, s. 18 (4).

⁶ The General Clauses Act, s. 3 (27);

The Interpretation Act, s. 18 (5).

⁷ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22

(I) The offender may be given up for trial in the country where the offence was committed (Extradition).

(II) The offender may be tried in British India (Extra-territorial or Ex-territorial jurisdiction).

(I) Extradition.—The scene of offence committed outside British India may be—

(1) Any of the Native States in which the Governor-General or Governor has a power and jurisdiction through a Political Agent;

(2) a foreign state; or

(3) some part of His Majesty's Dominions.

(1) Before the passing of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act (XXI of 1879), extradition, as between the British Government and some of the Native States, was governed by virtue of special treaties.¹ "But such treaties have become obsolete owing to the passing of the above Act which afforded a much quicker remedy." Many of the Native States have by subsequent agreements given up their rights under treaties after the Act came into operation. This Act has been substituted by the Indian Extradition Act of 1903, s. 7 (1) of which says: "Where an extradition offence (i.e., any such offence as is described in the first schedule of the Indian Extradition Act) has been committed or is supposed to have been committed by a person, not being a European British subject, in the territories of any state not being a foreign state and such person escapes into or is in British India and the Political Agent in or for such state issues a warrant, addressed to the District Magistrate of any district in which such person is believed to be, or if such person is believed to be in any Presidency Town to the Chief Presidency Magistrate of such town, for his arrest and delivery at a place and to a person or authority indicated in the warrant, such Magistrate shall act in pursuance of such warrant and may give directions accordingly."² The Political Agent is not empowered by this Act to demand the extradition of a European British subject. Such a person will be dealt with under s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Such requisition must come through the Political Agent for such state if there is any.

Magistrates in British India may issue warrants to arrest persons having committed offences in Native States on such information or complaint and on such evidence as would justify the issue of a warrant if the offence had been committed within the local limits of his jurisdiction, and surrender them to the states within whose limits the offences are committed even without a requisition (s. 10).

But the provisions of the Act shall not derogate from the provisions of any treaty for the extradition of offenders, and the procedure provided by any treaty shall be followed (s. 18).

(2) Where the scene of offence is some foreign state (i.e., a state to which, for the time being, the Extradition Acts 1870³ and 1873⁴ apply) the fugitive criminal may, if the Government of India or the Local Government thinks fit and the offence is one of the offences mentioned in the first schedule of the Indian Extradition Act and is not of a political character, be surrendered on a requisition.⁵

In order to constitute an offence of a political character, there must be two or more parties in the State, each seeking to impose the Government of their own

¹ See Aitchison's Treaties and Sanads, and Lee Warner's Native States of India, p. 337.

² A District Magistrate who is addressed with a view to execution of a warrant issued by a Political Agent of a Native State under this section must act in pursuance of such warrant and has no authority to ascertain whether a prima facie case exists against the accused or not: Glyan Chand, (1909) P. R. No. 3 of 1909.

³ 33 & 34 Vic., c. 52.

⁴ 36 & 37 Vic., c. 65.

⁵ The Indian Extradition Act, s. 3. See the procedure laid down in this section.

section refers to offences said to have been committed in any territory and not to offences committed on the high seas.¹

The word 'found' in the section must be taken to mean, not where a person is discovered, but where he is actually present.² A man brought into a place against his will can be said to be found there.³ In the Nasik Conspiracy case the question arose whether the Special Tribunal had power to try one of the accused who had escaped at Marseilles from the custody of Police Officers, charged with the duty of bringing him from London to Bombay, but was re-arrested there and brought to Bombay and committed for trial by the Special Magistrate at Nasik. It was held that where the accused was in the country and was charged with an offence under the Penal Code it would not avail him to say that he was brought there illegally from a foreign country.⁴

Cases.—Where a certificate under s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code is granted.—A Native Indian subject of His Majesty committed theft in the territory of a Native State, and was discovered in the territory of another Native State, and from there brought down or came of his own accord to Ahmedabad. A certificate was granted by the Political Agent that the offence ought to be inquired into in British India. It was held that the Sessions Court at Ahmedabad was competent to try the accused.⁵

Where no certificate is obtained under s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—The accused, Native Indian subjects of His Majesty, were charged with committing criminal breach of trust in respect of certain property entrusted to them as carriers. The offence was alleged to have been committed in the Portuguese territory, and they were found at a place in British India. It was held that they could be tried, where found, under s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the proviso to that section had no application as there was no Political Agent in the Portuguese territory.⁶ A minor girl (under sixteen years) was taken by the accused from Sholapur to Tuljapur (foreign territory), and there dedicated to the goddess Amba, with intent or knowing it to be likely that she would be used for purposes of prostitution. The accused was convicted of an offence under s. 372 by the District Magistrate of Sholapur. It was held that as the offence of the disposal of the minor took place out of British India, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the offence in the absence of a certificate of the Political Agent or the sanction of the Local Government as required by s. 188, Criminal Procedure Code.⁷ Where a District Magistrate instituted criminal proceedings in British India against a Native Indian subject, in respect of certain offences committed by him in French territory, without a certificate under s. 188, Criminal Procedure Code, it was held that although the Magistrate was the Political Agent who might have certified under that section, the proceedings were void for want of such certificate.⁸ The Allahabad High Court has similarly held that the absence of the certificate of the Political Agent is an absolute bar to the trial.⁹

The accused enticed away a married girl, under sixteen years, from the house of her father, where she was temporarily staying, in the territory of the Maharaja of Kashmir. The girl was made to leave her home on a deceitful message, and was subsequently persuaded to go away with the accused. The accused induced her to file a petition at Gujarat, in the British territory, to the effect that she was without a guardian and was going to settle there to practise prostitution. He also

¹ Manuel Philip, (1917) 19 Bom. L. R. 527, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 111.

² Maganaia, (1882) 6 Bom. 622.

³ Sattler, (1858) 27 L. J. (M. C.) 46.

⁴ Vinayal Damodar Savarkar, (1910) 13 Bom. L. R. 296, 304; 1 Bom. Cr. C. 26, 34. See Shew Bur, (1901) 7 Burma L. R. 83, 85, in which the Chief Court of Burma has taken a different view of the Privy Council decision in Muhammad Yusuf-ud-din, (1897) 24 L. A. 137 referred to in this case.

⁵ Daya Bhima, (1888) 13 Bom. 147.

⁶ Daku Tukaram, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 678, 24 Bom. 287; Sirdar Meru v. Jethabhai Amirbhai, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 513.

⁷ Kathaperumal, (1889) 13 Mad. 423; Bapu Dadd, (1882) 5 Mad. 23.

⁸ Ram Sundar, (1896) 19 All. 109.

rented a shop for her to carry on the said profession. No certificate was obtained from the Political Agent, but no objection was taken on behalf of the accused in the lower Court. The Chief Court of the Punjab held (1) that, as the girl was induced to leave her home in consequence of a deceitful message and persuaded to go away with the accused, who actually seduced her with an intent to illicit intercourse, the offence committed was covered by s. 366 of the Code; (2) that the objection to the defect arising from the want of a certificate was made too late and the trial of the case without a certificate was, therefore, an irregularity which was cured by s. 537. Criminal Procedure Code, no prejudice having been alleged or proved.¹

—Subsequent annexation or transfer of the territory where the offence is committed.—A person, after having committed dacoity attended with murder, absconded to Bhootan, which was subsequently annexed by the British Government. It was held that he could be tried and convicted for the offence by the British Courts.² Similarly, where certain persons were charged with committing an offence at a place in British India and committed to a Court of Session and the place where the offence was committed became part of a Native State subsequently, it was held that the British Courts were not deprived of jurisdiction inasmuch as at the time of the transfer of the place where the offence had been committed the accused were in British India in custody, in point of law, of a Court of competent jurisdiction.³

Breach of contract under Act XIII of 1859.—The accused, having contracted in a foreign territory to labour for the complainant in the British territory, broke his contract. He was arrested in the foreign territory, brought into the British territory and tried there. It was held that the British Court had no jurisdiction, "both the contract and the breach having taken place in foreign territory."⁴ The accused having received an advance of money from the complainant, contracted to labour for him in a foreign territory. The accused broke the contract, for which he was prosecuted in British India. It was held that the British Court could not entertain the case.⁵

Jurisdiction over Christian British subjects in Native States.—The Governor-General in Council can by order authorize and empower any High Court to exercise all or any portion of the jurisdiction and powers, conferred or to be conferred on it by His Majesty's Letters Patent, in respect of Christian subjects of His Majesty resident within the dominions of Princes and States of India in alliance with His Majesty. In exercise of the powers thus conferred by the Indian High Courts Act, s. 3 (23 & 29 Vic., c. 15), which corresponds to s. 103, sub-s.(1), of the Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61), the Governor-General in Council has issued the following three Notifications:—

I. In supersession of the notification of the Government of India in the Foreign Department, No. 178-J., dated the 23rd September 1874, as subsequently amended, except in so far as it relates to Berar and to the parganas of Todgarh, Dewair, Saroth, Chang and Kot Karana in Merwara, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct that original and appellate criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects of His Majesty, being Christians, resident within the territories, save the portions aforesaid, of the States of India named below shall, until the Governor-General in Council otherwise orders, be exercised by the High Courts of Judicature established at Fort William, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively, as follows:—

¹ Fateh Din, (1901) P. R. No. 4 of 1902, F.S. See also Mahmudbakh Karimbukh, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 507.

² Rozza, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

³ Ram Naresh Singh, (1911) 34 All. 118. See Mahabir, (1911) 33 All. 578; Saleh Din, (1911) 6 A. L. J. R. 705; Ganga, (1912) 34 All. 451.

⁴ Siddha v. Bilgiri, (1884) 7 Mad. 354.

⁵ Gregory v. Vadikani Kanjani, (1896) 10 Mad. 21.

By the High Court at Fort William in—Nepal. Sikkim.

 The States in the political control of the Government of Fort William in Bengal
 The States in the political control of the Chief Commissioner of Assam.

By the High Court at Madras in—Mysore. Banganipalle.

 Pudukkottai. Sandur.
 The portions of the Kalahandi State occupied by the Raipur-Vizianagram section of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway.

By the High Court at Bombay in—Baroda. Hyderabad.

 The States in the political control of the Government of Bombay.
 The Makrai State.

By the High Court at Allahabad in—

The States in Central India in the Baghelkhand and Bundelkhand Agencies :—

BAGHELKHAND.

BUNDELKHAND.

Baraundha.	Ajaigarh.	Garrauli.
Bhaisaunda.	Alipura.	Gaurihar.
Jaso.	Banka Pahari.	Jigni.
Kamta Rajaula.	Baoni.	Lughasi.
Kothi.	Beri.	Naigawan Rebai.
Maihar.	Bihat.	Orchha.
Nagod.	Bijawar.	Panna.
Pahra.	Bijna.	Samthar.
Paldeo.	Charkhari.	Sarila.
Rova.	Chhatarpur.	Tori-Fatehpur.
Sohawal.	Datia.	The Alampur Pargana of
Taraon.	Dhurwai.	Indore.

The portions of the Bharatpur State occupied by the Agra-Delhi Chord Railway and by the Cawnpur-Achnera section of the Rajputana-Malwa Railway.
 The portions of the Patna State occupied by the Raipur-Vizianagram section of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway.
 The States in the political control of the Government of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh.
 The States in the political control of the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces other than the Makrai State.
 Provided that all proceedings pending at the date of this notification shall be carried on as if this notification had not been issued.¹

By the High Court at Patna in—

Th.

By the Chief Court of the Punjab³ in—

Patiala.	Loharu.	Bhajji.
Jind.	Dujana.	Maulog.
Nabha.	Chamba.	Balsan.
Kapurthala.	Bilaspur.	Dhami.
Mandi.	Bashahr.	Kothar.
Maler Kotla.	Nalagarh (Hindaur)	Kumhar.
Faridkot.	Keonthal.	Mangal.
Suket.	Baghal.	Bija.
Nahan (Sirmur)	Baghat.	Darkuti.
Kalsia.	Jubal.	Taroch.
Pataudi.	Kumharsain.	Sangri.

¹ Notification No. 853 I. B., dated 10th April 1913, G. L., 1913, Part I, p. 406.
² Notification No. 1589 I. B., dated 2nd

August 1916, G. L., 1916, Part I, p. 1121.
³ Notification No. 639 I. A., dated 14th February 1902, G. L. 1902, Part I, p. 135.

Kaneti.
Dalti.
Koti.
Theog.

Madhan.
Ghond.
Ratesh.
Rawin.

Dhadi.
Bahawalpur.

II. In supersession of so much of the notification of the Government of India in the Foreign Department, No. 178-J., dated the 23rd September, 1874, as has not been cancelled, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct that, until further orders, original and appellate criminal jurisdiction shall be exercised by the High Court of Judicature at Bombay over European British subjects of His Majesty, being Christians, resident in Berar, and by the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad over European British subjects of His Majesty, being Christians, resident in the parganas of Todgarh, Dewair, Saroth, Chang and Kot Karana in Merwara.¹

III. Original and appellate criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects of His Majesty shall be exercised by the High Courts of Judicature established at Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively, as herein provided, that is to say,

(1) By the High Court of Judicature at Madras in— Coorg.

(2) By the High Court of Judicature at Bombay² in—
The Pargana of Manpur in Central India.

(3) By the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad in— Ajmer-Merwara.³

Appeal from criminal jurisdiction exercised by Political Agents—The Revenue Commissioner shall exercise the jurisdiction of a High Court, as described in the Code of Criminal Procedure, in respect of offences over which the jurisdiction of a Court of Session is exercised by the Political Agent, subject to the following limitations :—

(a) In the case of every appeal by a person convicted of an offence punishable with death or by a co-accused of such convict, the said jurisdiction shall be exercised by the Governor in Council,

(b) In every case decided by the Commissioner the Governor-in-Council reserves jurisdiction to call for the record and pass orders as he thinks fit.⁴

Acts done within British as well as foreign territory.—A person who is a British subject is liable to be tried by the Courts of this country for acts done by him, partly within and partly without the British territories, provided the acts amount together to an offence under the Code.⁵

(B) High Seas—Admiralty Jurisdiction.—The jurisdiction to try offences committed on the high seas is known as admiralty jurisdiction. It is founded on the principle that a ship on the high seas is a floating island belonging to the nation whose flag she is flying. It extends over British vessels, not only when they are on the high seas, but also when they are in the rivers of a foreign territory where great ships go.⁶ It extends to the bottom of the river by anchor and cable, or to its side by ropes from the quay.⁷ The admiralty jurisdiction extends over British ships although they may be at a spot where the

¹ Notification No. 854 I B., dated 16th April 1913, G. I., 1913, Part I., p. 407.

² In Emp. v. Price, Cr. Rev. 257 of 1910, decided on 6th October 1910, the Bombay High Court enhanced sentence on an application by the Administration of the Central Provinces.

³ Notification No. F. 593 23, dated September 1, 1923 (G. I., Part I, September 1, 1923, p. 1114), cancelling the notification

No. 457, dated April 21, 1913, G. I., Part I., p. 424.

⁴ Notification No. 2567, dated 7th June 1905, Bombay Govt. Gaz., 1905, Part I., p. 671.

⁵ Moulvie Ahmudollah, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 60.

⁶ Anderson, (1868) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161

⁷ Ibid

municipal authorities of a foreign country might exercise concurrent jurisdiction, if invoked. Ever since the time of Richard II., this jurisdiction has extended to where great ships go as part of their voyage for the purposes of trading, and to all persons, whether British subjects or foreigners, who happen to be on board such ships, so as to be entitled to the protection of English Law.¹ It makes no difference whether the offender comes voluntarily on board the British ship or is brought and detained there against his will; nor whether he comes voluntarily within the jurisdiction of the particular Court by which he is tried, or is brought within that jurisdiction against his will.² If the ship is a British ship and sailing under the British flag the Court will have jurisdiction, and no proof of the register of the vessel is necessary.³ It is sufficient to show orally that she belongs to British owners, and carries the British flag.⁴ If a ship is registered as a British ship and sailing under the British flag, but the owner is not a natural born British subject, the admiralty jurisdiction will not extend to offences committed on board such ship.⁵ If the owner is a British subject the jurisdiction will extend to all offences committed thereon, whether the offenders be British subjects or foreigners. If one foreigner inflicts a blow on another foreigner in a foreign vessel on the high seas, and the person so struck in a few days afterwards lands in England and dies there, the homicide is not cognizable by English Courts.⁶

As to the limits of the admiralty jurisdiction, East, in his treatise on the Pleas of the Crown,⁷ says that this jurisdiction does not extend to any river, creek, or port within the body of a county. "The only difficulty which ever occurs is with respect to what shall be considered as the line of demarcation between the county and the high sea. Upon the open sea-shore it is past dispute that the common law and the admiralty have alternate jurisdiction between high and low water mark. But in harbours or below the bridges in great rivers near the sea, which are partly inclosed by the land, the question is often more a matter of fact than of law, and determinable by local evidence. There are, however, some general rules laid down upon this point, which it would be improper altogether to omit. It is plain that the admiral can have no jurisdiction in any rivers or arms or creeks of the sea within the bodies of counties, though within the flux and reflux of the tide: except in the particular instances before shewn, of mayhem and homicide done in great rivers beneath the bridges near the sea; which depend on the Stat. 15 Ric. 2, c. 3. In general, it is said that such parts of the rivers, arms, or creeks, are deemed to be within the bodies of counties, where persons can see from one side to the other. Lord Hale, in his treatise De Jure Maris, says, 'That arm or branch of the sea which lies within the fauces terrae, where a man may reasonably discern between shore and shore, is, or at least may be, within the body of a county.' Hawkins, however, considers the line more accurately confined by other authorities to such parts of the sea where a man standing on the side of the land may see what is done on the other." When the haven, creek or river, is within the body of a county the common law tribunals have a concurrent jurisdiction in case of murder.⁸

With regard to the sea-shore, the ordinary criminal Courts and the Court of Admiralty have concurrent jurisdiction between high and low water-mark.⁹

Cases.—The accused, an English sailor, stole three chests of tea out of a British vessel, when it was lying in a river in China. It was urged that as the vessel was twenty or thirty miles from the sea, the offence was not committed on the high seas. It was held that the offence was committed within the Admiralty jurisdiction.¹⁰

¹ Anderson, (1863) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161; Carr and Wilson, (1832) 10 Q. B. D. 76, 86; Leiley, (1860) 29 L. J. (M. C.) 97.

² Benito Lopez, Christian Settler, (1858) 7 Cox 431.

³ Sven Seberg, (1870) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264; Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 106.

⁴ Frank Allen, (1866) 10 Cox 403.

⁵ Bjornsen, (1865) 10 Cox 74.

⁶ John Lewis, (1857) 26 L. J. (M. C.) 104.

⁷ Vol. II, pp. 803, 804.

⁸ John Bruce, (1812) R. & R. 213, 2 Leach 1003.

⁹ 3 Coke 113.

¹⁰ Thomas Allen, (1837) 1 Mood. C. C. 494.

below bridges where the tide ebbed and flowed and great ships went. It was held that the ship was within the Admiralty jurisdiction, and that the prisoner was rightly tried and convicted at the Central Criminal Court.¹ A foreigner, having committed larceny in England, was followed to Hamburg by an English police-officer, who arrested him without a warrant, and brought him against his will on board an English steamer trading between Hamburg and London, and there kept him in custody in order that he might be tried for the larceny in England. During the voyage, whilst the steamer was on the high seas, he shot the officer out of malice prepense and not with a view to escape. It was held that he was guilty of murder within the admiralty jurisdiction.² Certain bonds were stolen from a British ship, whilst she was lying afloat in the river at Rotterdam, moored to the quay, and were afterwards wrongfully received in England by the prisoners with a knowledge that they had been stolen. The place where the ship lay at the time of the theft was in the open river, sixteen or eighteen miles from the sea, but within the ebb and flow of the tide, and where large vessels usually lay. It did not appear who the thief was or under what circumstances he was on board the ship. It was held that the larceny took place within the admiralty jurisdiction.³

The prisoner and the deceased were foreigners, and the latter died at Liverpool from injuries inflicted by the prisoner on board a foreign ship on the high seas. It was held that the offence was not cognizable by English Courts.⁴ It was held, similarly, where an alien enemy, who had been a prisoner of war, and was acting as a mariner on board an English merchant ship, killed an Englishman.⁵ Where the officers and crew of a foreign vessel which was unlawfully captured as a slave-ship killed their capturers who were English, it was held that the English Courts had no jurisdiction to try them for murder.⁶

Jurisdiction of Indian High Courts.—The admiralty jurisdiction of the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, is the same as that of the late Supreme Courts. The admiralty jurisdiction was conferred on the Supreme Courts by their respective Charters and by 33 Geo. III., c. 52, s. 156, and 53 Geo. III., c. 155, s. 110. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Bombay was that of the High Court of admiralty side is the same as that exercised in the Court of Admiralty in England prior to the passing of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 65, and 24 Vic., c. 10, both of which enlarged the admiralty jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty in England but which did not apply to India.⁷ The Act for establishing High Courts in India (21 & 25 Vic., c. 104, s. 9) provided that the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, shall exercise all such Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction as may be vested in

¹ Anderson, (1868) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161.

² Satler, (1858) 27 L. J. (M. C.) 48.

³ "The Asia," (1868) 5 B. H. C. (O. C. J.)

⁴ Beng. L. R. 323, 330, 331.

is charged with the commission of any offence in respect of which jurisdiction is given by the said Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 96), or where any person charged with the commission of any such offence is brought for trial under the said Act to any place in India, if at any time before his trial he make it appear to the Court exercising criminal jurisdiction in the place where he is so charged or brought for trial, that in case the offence charged had been committed in such place he could have been tried only in the Supreme Court of one of the three Presidencies in India, and claimed to be tried by such a Supreme Court accordingly, the said Court exercising criminal jurisdiction as aforesaid shall certify the fact and claim to the Governor of such place or chief Local Authority thereof, and such Governor or chief Local Authority thereupon shall order and cause the person charged to be sent in custody to such one of the Presidencies as such Governor shall think fit for trial before the Supreme Court of such Presidency, and the said Supreme Court and all public officers and other persons in the Presidency shall have the same jurisdiction and authorities, and proceed in the same manner in relation to the person charged with such offence, as if the same had been committed or originally charged to have been committed within the limits of the ordinary jurisdiction of such Supreme Court."

The procedure to be followed in cases where offences are committed on the high seas is the ordinary Criminal Procedure.¹ Three things are essential in cases of trial of offences committed on the high seas:—

- (1) The offence charged must be an offence under the English law according to the Calcutta High Court though not according to the Bombay High Court.
- (2) The trial must be conducted under the Code of Criminal Procedure.
- (3) The punishment must be regulated by the Penal Code.

Piracy.—Piracy is of two kinds, viz., piracy jure gentium and piracy by the statute law of England. Piracy jure gentium is an offence against all nations. "Piracy is only a sea-term for robbery, piracy being a robbery committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty. If any man be assaulted within that jurisdiction, and his ship or goods violently taken away without legal authority, this is robbery and piracy. If the mariners of any ship shall violently dispossess the master, and afterwards carry away the ship itself, for any of the goods, or tackle, apparel or furniture, with a felonious intention, in any place where the Lord Admiral hath, or pretends to have jurisdiction, this is also robbery and piracy. The intention will, in these cases, appear by considering the end for which the act was committed; and the end will be known, if the evidence shall shew you what hath been done."² "The offence of piracy, by common law," according to Blackstone,³ "consists in committing those acts of robbery and depredation upon the high seas which, if committed upon land, would have amounted to felony there." To whatever country the pirate may have originally belonged, he is justifical everywhere, his detestable occupation has made him hostis humani generis, and he cannot upon any ground claim immunity from the tribunal of his captor.⁴ "The King of England hath not only an empire and sovereignty over the British seas, but also an undoubted jurisdiction and power, in concurrency with other princes and states, for the punishment of all piracies and robberies at sea, in the most remote parts of the world; so that if any person, whatsoever, native or foreigner, Christian or Infidel, Turk or Pagan, with whose country we have no war, with whom we hold trade and correspondence, and are in amity, shall be robbed or spoiled in the Narrow Seas, the Mediterranean, Atlantic, Southern, or any other seas, or the branches thereof, either on this or the other side of the line, it is piracy within the limits of your enquiry, and the cognizance of this Court."⁵ A pirate is one who is a source of danger to the vessels of all nations.

If the subjects of the same state commit robbery upon each other upon the high sea it is piracy. If the subjects of different states commit robbery upon each other, upon the high sea, if their respective state be in amity, it is piracy; if at enmity, it is not; for it is a general rule, that enemies can never commit piracy on each other, their depredations being deemed mere acts of hostility.⁶

By statutes passed at various times and still in force, many artificial offences have been created, which are to be deemed to amount to piracy.⁷

Thus by 11 Will. III., c. 7, ss. 8 & 9, 8 Geo. I., c. 24, s. 1, and 18 Geo. II., c. 30, British subjects committing hostilities against British subjects under a commission from a foreign prince or adhering to an enemy, shall be deemed to be away from the place where the offence was committed, and shall be treated as pirates.

¹ Elmstone, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 89; Thompson, (1867) 1 Beng. L. R. (O. Cr. J.) 1; Barton, (1889) 16 Cal. 238; Gunning, (1894) 21 Cal. 782.

² Per Sir Charles Hedges in Joseph Dawson, (1696) 13 St. Tr. 451, 454, confirmed in Att. Gen. for Hong Kong v. Kwok-a-Sing, (1873) L. R. 5 P. C. 179, 199, which further holds that there can be no difference between mariners and passengers.

³ Kerr on Blackstone, Vol. IV, p. 584, (4th Edn.).

⁴ Phillimore, Vol. I, p. 488 (3rd Edn.).

⁵ Per Sir Charles Hedges in his charge to the jury in Joseph Dawson, supra, p. 455.

⁶ Coke 154, vide Archbold, 23rd Edn., 451.

⁷ Report of Comms. of Crim. Law.

as a slave, or being sold or dealt with as such, or the embarking or receiving on board any person for such purpose, is made piracy.

Piracy is dealt with in several statutes, dating from 1536.¹

The admiralty jurisdiction extends to pirates who are foreigners in the case of piracy jure gentium only.

Cases.—Several mariners on board a ship seized the captain, he not agreeing with them, and after putting him on shore, carried away the ship, and committed several piracies. It was held that the force upon the captain and the carrying away of the ship was piracy.² But where the master of a vessel loaded goods on board at Rotterdam, consigned to Malaga, which he caused to be insured, and after he had run the goods on shore in England, the ship was burnt with intent to defraud the owners and insurers, it was held that no piracy had been committed but only a breach of trust, and that it could not be piracy to convert the goods in a fraudulent manner until the special trust was determined.³

Liability of foreigners in British India for offences committed outside its limits.—There is no express enactment by which the Indian Legislature can assume to render foreigners subject to the criminal law of British India with reference to acts committed by them beyond the limits of British India. In the words of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn "no proposition of law can be more incontestible or more universally admitted than that according to the general law of nations, a foreigner cannot be held criminally responsible to the law of a nation not his own for acts done beyond the limits of its territory."⁴ The acts of a foreigner committed by him in the territory beyond the limits of British India do not, therefore, constitute an offence against the Penal Code of British India, and, consequently, a foreigner cannot be held criminally responsible under that Code by the tribunals of that country for acts committed by him beyond its territorial limits. It is only for acts done when the person doing them is within the territory over which the authority of the British law extends, that the subjects of a foreign state owe obedience to that law and can be made amenable to its jurisdiction. Thus, when it is sought to punish a person, who is not a British subject, as an offender in respect of a certain act, the question is not 'where was the act committed,' but 'was the person at the time, when the act was done, within the territory of British India.' For if he was not, the act is not an offence, the doer of it is not liable to be punished as an offender, and he is, therefore, not subject to the jurisdiction of criminal Courts.⁵ A foreign subject, resident in a foreign territory, instigating the commission of an offence which, in consequence, is committed in British territory is not amenable to the jurisdiction of a British Court if the instigation has not taken place in British India.⁶

But if a foreigner in a foreign territory initiates an offence which is completed within British territory, he is, if found within British territory, liable to be tried by the British Court within whose jurisdiction the offence was completed.⁷

¹ 28 Hen. VIII., c. 15, 22 & 23 Carr. II., c. 2; 11 Will. III., c. 7, 4 Geo. I., c. 2, s. 7; 8 Geo. I., c. 24; 18 Geo. II., c. 30; 12 Geo. III., c. 21; 7 & 6 Geo. IV., c. 28, s. 2; 9 Geo. IV., c. 51, s. 8; 7 Will. IV. and 1 Vic., c. 28, ss. 2-4; 5 & 6 Vic., c. 28, ss. 16-18; 13 & 14 Vic., c. 26; 41 & 42 Vic., c. 73, s. 6.

² Mog, (1806) 2 East P. C. 796.

³ Mason, (1722) 2 East P. C. 706, s. Mod. 71. See Edwards Carling, (1897) L. & B. 123.

⁴ Francis case vs Key, (1876) 5 Ex. D. 13. See Parthasarathy, (1917) 20 Bom. L. R. 48, 4 Bom. Cr. C. 192.

⁵ Per Fielding J., in Mussummat Kishan Koor, (1878) P. R. No. 29 of 1878. See also Roda, (1889) P. R. No. 30 of 1889. Baldwin, (1906) 28 All. 372.

⁶ Patil, (1873) 10 B. H. C. 356, followed in Raj Bahadur, (1918) P. R. No. 27 of 1918, Balwant Singh, (1918) P. R. No. 31 of 1918. The Chief Court of the Punjab has held that the subject of a Native State is not liable to be punished under the Penal Code by a Court in British India for acts committed in British India, he being at the time of such commission in foreign territory, even if he afterwards be in British India. Mussummat Kishan Koor, (1878) P. R. No. 29 of 1878.

⁷ Chakralal Babar, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 147, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 84, 36 Bom. 521.

There is nothing in s. 188, Criminal Procedure Code, which contravenes the general rule of international law that no Court has jurisdiction over foreigners in respect by t foreigners in respect of acts done power enacting. That is a rule based on international law, by which one sovereign power is bound to respect the subjects and the rights of all other sovereign powers outside its own territory.²

Cases.—Dacoity in a foreign territory.—Where the accused had committed dacoity in the Patiala State but were found in British territory where they had stayed for three years, it was held that they were not liable to be tried by a British Court as they were foreign subjects and the offence had been committed in foreign territory.³

Kidnapping in a foreign territory.—A girl was enticed away in the Faridkot State from the lawful guardianship of her husband by the accused, who were foreign subjects, and was found being conveyed by them by rail from that State to a station in the Bhawalpur State at the railway station of Abdhar in the British territory. It was held that, as the act of kidnapping was complete outside British India, the British Courts had no jurisdiction to try and convict the accused.⁴

Murder on the High Seas.—The accused, a subject of a Native State, was charged with the offence of attempt to murder, on board a ship belonging to him on the high seas some eighteen miles off the coast of Kanara, British territory. He was tried for the offence by a Magistrate in the British territory. It was held that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the accused as the accused was not a British subject and the offence was committed on a non-British ship on the high seas outside the territorial limits.⁵

Abetment in a foreign territory of forgery committed in British India.—The accused who lived at Cambay, a Native State, conspired with his partner A, at Cambay, to get a valuable security forged by a professional forger at Umreth, a place within British territory. To facilitate forgery, the accused sent an account book with A, who proceeded to Umreth and had the book forged there accordingly. The accused was committed for trial to the Sessions Court on a charge of abetment of forgery of a valuable security (ss. 467 and 109). The Sessions Judge, being of opinion that the British Court had no jurisdiction to try the accused, referred the case to the High Court for an order quashing the commitment. It was held that the British Court had jurisdiction to try the accused, inasmuch as his offence was not wholly committed within Cambay territory but having been initiated there was continued and completed within British territory.⁶

Jurisdiction.—Over non-British subjects who have committed offences beyond the limits of British India, the criminal Courts of British India have no jurisdiction, except that conferred by s. 4 (3) of the Code and by ss. 4 and 10 of the Indian Extradition Act. These sections only empower Magistrates to arrest, and, if so ordered by Government, to inquire into the truth of the accusation made.

PRACTICE.

Evidence in cases of piracy.—Prove (1) that the accused has committed acts which amount to robbery (see s. 390, infra)

(2) That such acts have been committed within the jurisdiction of admiralty

Procedure.—The Punjab Rules.—It appears that the law on the subject of the trial by British Courts of offenders for offences committed beyond the limits of British India is either not known to the criminal Courts or is not understood.

² See State of Punjab v. Jai Singh, 1901, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 88.

³ Jaimil Singh, sup

⁴ Punjab Gani, (1917) 20 Bom. L. R. 88.

⁵ Chhotatal Balar, (1912) 14 Bom. L.R. 147, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 88.

⁶ 1881.

2. The locality in which an act alleged to be an offence was committed is always of some importance, and is of special importance when the act was not committed within the limits of British India, as the jurisdiction of the Courts over the person accused may be affected.

3. Consequently, in all criminal cases in which a charge is drawn up, the place where the offence is alleged to have been committed should be described in such a manner as to show whether it is within or beyond the limits of British India.

4. But it is often necessary to ascertain the place of commission of an act alleged to be an offence before any charge is drawn up, in order to determine whether the Court has jurisdiction.

5. The locality of an act alleged to be an offence varies in importance according as the person charged with having committed the act is or is not a British subject, and in the former case, according as he is a European British subject or a Native Indian subject of His Majesty.

6. When the act has been committed in British territory the nationality of the offender does not, of itself, prevent him from being subject to the law of India and the jurisdiction of its Courts, and the locality of the act is comparatively unimportant.

7. When the act has been committed beyond the limits of British India, it is necessary to ascertain whether the accused is or is not a British subject.

8. A person not a British subject is ordinarily not bound by the law of India and not subject to the jurisdiction of its Courts in respect of an act done by him outside British India. Whenever it appears to the Court that an alien is liable to its jurisdiction for an act done by him beyond the limits of British India, the special provision of the law which is held to give jurisdiction to the Court should be expressly stated.

9. But by s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, an Indian British subject or a servant of the Crown (whether a British subject or not) is liable to be dealt with by the British Courts in India for any offence committed by him in any place whatever beyond the limits of British India as if it had been committed at any place in British India at which he may be found; and he is liable to be punished for it, if it is an offence under the Indian Penal Code, by force of s. 3 of that Code.

10. A European British subject is, by force of the same provision, similarly liable in respect of any offence committed by him in any place in the dominions of a Prince or State in India in alliance with His Majesty.

11. But in both the instances last mentioned the proviso to s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure requires that no charge as to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India without the certificate of the Political Agent, if there be one, for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

12. This proviso does not merely prohibit a trial upon a charge framed after an inquiry, but even an inquiry into the accusation in the absence of a certificate, when requisite. The section itself, however, still leaves a Court competent to issue process, such as a summons or a warrant, or to take any other step which is mere preliminary to an inquiry.

13. It follows from what has been said that it is the duty of every Court, dealing with an accusation of an act alleged to be an offence and to have been committed in a place near the limits of British territory, to inquire and ascertain and record a clear finding as to whether it has been committed within or beyond those limits.

14. It is also the duty of every Court, dealing with an act alleged or found to have been committed beyond the limits of British India, to inquire and ascertain and record a clear finding as to whether the accused is or is not a British subject, and if he is, whether an Indian or a European British subject. In every formal charge of an offence alleged to have been committed beyond the limits of British India, it should be explicitly stated either that the accused is not a British subject, or that he is a British subject, Indian or European, as the case may be.

15. It seems expedient to add (1) that a Magistrate is not at liberty to shirk an inquiry into the nationality of an accused person merely because it may appear to him a question of nicety or difficulty; and (2) that a Magistrate is not competent to dispense with enforcement of the law and absolve a British subject from the penal consequences of an offence, prima facie established against him, merely because the offence was not committed within the limits of British India. Both these mistakes were found to have been committed in (1893) P. R. No. 9 (Cr.).

16. In cases in which a question of nationality arises the rulings¹ of the Chief Court may be consulted.

17. The term 'Political Agent' is defined in s. 3 (40) of the General Clauses Act, X of 1897, and a list of the Political Agents for the smaller States having political relations with the Punjab Government is given in Part VI of Order No. 23, Vol. III. The Resident in Kashmir is the Political Agent for the Kashmir State.

18. The special attention of all criminal Courts is directed to the contents of this Order in order that they may not, on the one hand, omit to exercise their jurisdiction over offences committed by British subjects in foreign territory, and, on the other hand, may not exceed their jurisdiction by exercising it over persons who are not subject to it. Particular attention is drawn to the instructions conveyed in paragraphs 3, 13, 14 and 15, as an omission to comply therewith may give rise to serious difficulties.²

Charge.—When a person is tried before a Court which would not have jurisdiction but for special circumstances, the Court should specify in the charge those circumstances.

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate) hereby charge you—as follows—

That you, being a Native Indian subject (or British subject or servant) of His Majesty, the King-Emperor, on or about the—day of—, at—, without and beyond British India, did—and thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 4 and—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

If the accused is a British subject or servant of the King-Emperor and has committed an offence within the dominions of a Native Prince, the second paragraph in the above charge would run thus :—

That you, being a British subject (or a servant) of His Majesty the King-Emperor, on or about the—day of—, at—, within the dominions of—did, etc.

If the offence comes under the Admiralty jurisdiction, the second paragraph of the above charge would generally be as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, then being a British subject (omit these words if the accused is a foreigner) on board the British ship—, on the High Seas, did—, and thereby committed an offence punishable, etc

5. Nothing in this Act is intended to repeal, vary, suspend or affect any of the provisions of the Statute 3 & 4 William IV, Chapter 85, or of any Act of Parliament passed after that Statute in any wise affecting the East India Company, or the said territories, or the inhabitants thereof; or any of the provisions of Certain laws not to be affected by this Act.

¹ Fakir, (1883) P. R. No. 22 of 1883; Ali, (1893) P. R. No. 9 of 1893.
² Fakir, (1884) P. R. No. 1 of 1885; Fazal P. C. C. R. & O., Vol. II, No. 10.

any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers and soldiers,¹ in the service of Her Majesty, or of any special or local law.²

COMMENT.

This section acts as a saving clause to s. 2. Though the Code was intended to be a general one, it was not thought desirable to make it exhaustive, and hence offences defined by local and special laws were left out of the Code, and merely declared to be punishable as theretofore.² Section 2 repealed all existing penal enactments in force on the date from which the Code was to come into operation. The effect of s. 5 was to qualify this general repeal and to declare that, notwithstanding it, offences defined by special and local laws should continue to be punishable as theretofore. If, therefore, a person were required to ascertain from the Penal Code what acts and omissions are punishable in British India as offences, he would properly answer that it appeared from s. 2 and s. 5 that all acts or omissions contrary to the provisions of the Code itself, or of the provisions of special and local laws and some other laws enumerated in s. 5 and these alone and none others were punishable as offences.² The preamble to the Code and ss. 1 and 2, read with this section, prescribe that all acts or omissions contrary to the provisions of the Code, or of special and local laws enumerated in this section and none others are punishable as offences.³

¹ Statute 3 & 4 William IV, Chapter 85 'is the Government of India Act, 1833.

1. 'Officers and soldiers.'—The laws relating to Army and Navy here referred to are the several Acts and Articles of War, passed from time to time to punish offences committed by military and naval men. The Code does not affect their provisions. See the Army Act, 44 & 45 Vic., c. 58, as continued and amended by subsequent Annual Army Acts, which provides a special procedure for the trial of offenders by a court-martial, and which gives a list of persons subject to military law; and the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911).

2. 'Special or local law.'—No special or local law (see ss. 41 and 42) is repealed, varied, suspended, or affected by the enactment of the Code. Although an offence is expressly made punishable by a special or local law, yet it will be punishable under the Penal Code, if the facts come within the definitions of the Code.⁴ No such prosecution is admissible, if it appears upon the whole frame of the special Act that it was intended to be complete in itself, and to be enforced only by the penalties created by it⁵; but in the absence of any thing in the special Act to exclude the operation of the Code, an intention on the part of the legislature to exclude it should not be inferred.⁶ However, a person cannot be punished under both the Penal Code and a special law for the same offence,⁷ and it is ordinarily desirable that the sentence should be passed under the special Act.⁸ For, it is presumed that the legislature intends that the special form of punishment is appropriate to special cases. The General Clauses Act⁹ provides that "where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more enactments, then the offender shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished under any of those enactments, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence." Where the accused is guilty of a specific offence under the Indian Penal Code he should

¹ (1866) 3 M. H. C. App. 11, 16.

² (1866) 3 M. H. C. App. 11, 17.

³ Satish Chandra Chakravarti v. Ram Doyal De, (1923) 48 Cal. 389.

⁴ Ramakrishna, (1893) 6 Mad. 219; Satish Chandra, (1863) 1 Weir 26; Dayne, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 411. A police constable punished departmentally under the Police Act is liable to be punished under the Penal Code; Gal Mahomed, (1913) P. R. No. 27 of 1913.

⁵ Chandra Prasad v. Abdul Basim, (1924)

22 Cal. 131, 133; Anon., (1876) 1 Mad. 55.

⁶ Imam Baksh, (1894) P. R. No. 10 of 1895; Sagu Dillah v. N. Ramaswami, (1917)

6 L. W. 253.

⁷ Hussein Ali, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 42. Section 26 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897) makes a similar provision.

⁸ Kulada Prasad Majumdar, (1906) 11 C. W. N. 169; 5 C. L. J. 47; Rup Deo, (1913)

11 A. L. J. R. 349.

⁹ X of 1907, s. 25.

be convicted under the Code if the punishment under the special Act is not adequate.¹

Common law rights.—This section does not affect the common law principles introduced into the Presidency towns when the late Supreme Courts were established. The High Courts in the Presidencies have power to punish the offence of contempt on a summary proceeding in relation to proceedings before them not by virtue of the Penal Code but by virtue of the common law of England.² The Court has power to punish, by commitment for contempt, a libel published while the Court is not sitting.³ But the Calcutta High Court has decided that it has no jurisdiction to commit a person for contempt of a criminal Court in the mofussil.⁴ There is a difference of opinion on the point so far as the Bombay High Court is concerned.⁵ All other Courts including the Judicial Commissioners' Courts can only take action for contempt of Court under s. 228 of the Penal Code and ss. 477 and 487 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁶

Amendment.—After the words "Her Majesty" were the words "or of the East India Company, or of any Act for the Government of the East India Company"; but they were repealed by Act XIV of 1870.

PRACTICE.

Jurisdiction.—Section 101 of the Mutiny Act (41 Vic., c. 10) does not deprive the Civil (as opposed to Military) Courts of jurisdiction over British soldiers committing offences within the territorial limits of those Courts, nor render the exercise of their jurisdiction dependent upon the sanction of the Commander-in-Chief.⁷

Conviction under special Act not to be quashed.—The circumstance that the act proved would also constitute an offence under a section of the Code, is no reason for quashing a conviction under a special law.⁸

¹ Futteh Khan, (1874) P. R. No. 11 of 1874.

² Legal Remembrancer v. Matilal Ghose, (1913) 41 Cal. 173; Surendra Nath Banerjee v. High Court Judges, (1883) 10 Cal. 109, p.c.; Moti Lal Ghose, (1917) 45 Cal. 169; M. K. Gandhi, (1920) 22 Bom. L. R. 369; Satyabodha Ramchandra, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 928, s.c. 6 Bom. Cr. C. 252; Marmaduke Pickthall, (1922) 25 Bom. L. R. 15, s.c. 7 Bom. Cr. C. 1; Marmaduke Pickthall (No. 2), (1922) 25 Bom. L. R. 107, s.c. 7 Bom. Cr. C.

43; Ponnuswami Iyer v. Ganapathi Iyer, (1923) 45 M. L. J. R. 742.

³ William Tayler, (1869) 26 C. L. J. 345; In re Banks, (1869) 26 C. L. J. 401.

⁴ In re the Amrita Bazar Patrika, (1913) 17 C. W. N. 1253, 1282.

⁵ Balkrishna Govind Kulkarni, (1921) 24 Bom. L. R. 16, s.c. 6 Bom. Cr. C. 130.

⁶ Venkat Rao Raj Rao, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 386, s.c. 6 Bom. Cr. C. 186.

⁷ Maguire, (1879) 5 Cal. 124.

⁸ Kassimuddin, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr) 85.

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL EXPLANATIONS.

This Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and the meanings thus announced are steadily adhered to through Sir James Stephen suggests that the object of the Code and its explanations for all cases in which it may arise, when it will be necessary to refer to the meaning of the Code is.¹

It does not provide cases where difficulty may arise, when it will be necessary to refer to the meaning of the Code is.¹

6. Throughout this Code every definition of an offence, every penal provision and every illustration of every such definition or penal provision, shall be understood subject to the exceptions contained in the Chapter entitled "General Exceptions," though those exceptions are not repeated in such definition, penal provision or illustration.

Definitions in the Code to be understood subject to exceptions.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) The sections in this Code, which contain definitions of offences, do not express that a child under seven years of age cannot commit such offences; but the definitions are to be understood subject to the general exception which provides that nothing shall be an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

(b) A, a Police Officer, without warrant, apprehends Z, who has committed murder. Here A is not guilty of the offence of wrongful confinement; for he was bound by law to apprehend Z, and therefore the case falls within the general exception which provides that "nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is bound by law to do it."

COMMENT

The proper place for this section would be Chapter IV as it refers to exceptions mentioned in that Chapter.

Illustrations are very useful so far as they serve to explain the meaning of the section. But it has been decided that they ought never to be allowed to control the plain meaning of the section itself, when the effect would be to curtail a right which the section in its ordinary sense would confer.²

Illustration (a) is based on s. 82 infra and (b) on s. 76 infra.

Sense of expression once explained.

7. Every expression which is explained in any part of this Code, is used in every part of this Code in conformity with the explanation.

COMMENT.

The maxim inclusio unius est exclusio alterius (the inclusion of one is the exclusion of another) or expressio unius est exclusio alterius (the mention of one

¹ P. L. C. (1860), p. 1261.

² Koylash Chunder Ghose v. Sonakun

Chung Barooie, (1881) 7 Cal. 132.

is the exclusion of another) is the basis of this section. "To say that it shall have a particular meaning everywhere is to say that it shall have no other meaning anywhere...If the words taken grammatically have a definite, certain, and unequivocal meaning, if they constitute a perfectly complete expression susceptible grammatically of that one unequivocal meaning, and of that only, then, however absurd and pernicious the consequences, that meaning is to be followed. If, however, the expression does not include the complete thought of the Legislature, or if the words are equally susceptible of several meanings, we are to seek in other parts of the same statute, or in other statutes, certainly in those in pari materia with this, the one of the several possible meanings which ought to be put upon the words."¹

8. The pronoun "he" and its derivatives are
 "Gender." used of any person, whether male or female.

9. Unless the contrary appears from the context, words
 "Number." importing the singular number include the plural number, and words importing the plural number include the singular number.

COMMENT.

The General Clauses Act similarly says that unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context words in the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa.²

10. The word "man" denotes a male human
 "Man."
 "Woman." being of any age: the word "woman" denotes a female human being of any age.

COMMENT.

The word 'man,' in a scientific treatise on zoology or fossil organic remains, would include men, women, and children as constituting the highest order of vertebrate animals. It is also used in an abstract and general sense in philosophical or religious disquisitions. But, in almost every other connection, the word 'man' is used in contradistinction to 'woman.' This restricted sense is its ordinary and popular sense.³

11. The word "person" includes any Company or Associ-
 "Person." ation, or body of persons, whether incorporated or not.

COMMENT.

The word 'person' includes both a natural person (a human being) and an artificial person (a corporation).⁴ It is, however, used frequently in the Code in a sense in which it is clear from the context that corporate bodies, etc., are not included.⁵

The General Clauses Act says that "person" shall include any company or association or body of individuals, whether incorporated or not.⁶ But a limited

¹ Per Holloway, J., in (1866) 3 M. H. C. App. 11, 12.

² Act X of 1897, s. 13.

³ Per Byles, J., in Chorlton v. Lings, (1868) L. R. 4 C. P. 374, 392.

⁴ See Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association, (1830)

5 App. Cas. 857.

⁵ See ss. 56, 73, 84-87, 100, 105, 114, 137, 139, 141, 149-151, 153, 157, 159, 170, 191, 216, 220-225, 278, 282, 295, 297, 298, 491, 492, 497 and Ch. XVI.

⁶ Act X of 1897, s. 3 (39).

liability company cannot be committed for trial on an indictment.¹ But persons who abet or aid the company would be liable.²

The word 'person' is sufficiently wide to include the Government as representative of the whole community.³ Thus, possession of wood by a Forest Inspector, a servant of Government, is held to be possession of the Government itself; and a dishonest removal of it, without payment of the necessary fees, from his possession, albeit with his actual consent, constitutes theft if that consent was unauthorized or fraudulent.⁴

1. 'Incorporated.'—Incorporation is the formation of a legal body, with the quality of perpetual existence and succession, except as limited by the Royal Charter or Act of Parliament effecting the incorporation.⁵

12. The word "public" includes any class
"Public." of the public or any community.

13. The word "Queen" denotes the Sovereign for the time
"Queen." being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

COMMENT.

In the General Clauses Act it is also provided that 'Her Majesty' or 'the Queen' shall include Her successors.⁶

14. The words "servant of the Queen" denote all officers "Servant of the Queen." or servants continued, appointed or employed in India by or under the authority of the said Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the better Government of India,"¹ or by or under the authority of the Government of India or any Government.²

COMMENT.

The Statute referred to is the Government of India Act which lays down regulations for the conduct of the Government of India.

1. 'Government of India.'—See s. 16, infra.

2. 'Government.'—See s. 17, infra.

15. The words "British India" denote the territories which "British India" are or may become vested in Her Majesty by the said Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the better Government of India"....

COMMENT.

This definition is the same as that in the General Clauses Act of 1868. The definition of 'British India,' as given in the General Clauses Act of 1897, is much wider. According to this Act 'British India' "shall mean all territories and places within Her Majesty's dominions which are for the time being governed by Her Majesty through the Governor-General of India or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India."³ But this definition will not affect the meaning to be given to the term 'British India' in Acts amending the Penal Code subsequent to 1897 in view of s. 7 of the Penal Code.

¹ Daily Mirror Newspaper, L11, [1922]
² K. B. 530.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Wharton, 12th Ed., p. 437.

⁵ Act X of 1897, s. 3 (22).

⁶ Ibid., s. 3 (7).

⁷ Hearnshaw, (1877) 1 Dom. 610, 622.

Amendment.—This section ended with the clause “except Settlement of the Prince of Wales’ Island, Singapore and Malacca”; but that clause was repealed by Act XII of 1891, Sch. I.

16. The words “Government of India” denote the Governor General of India in Council, or, during the absence of the Governor General of India from his Council, the President in Council, or the Governor General of India alone, as regards the powers which may be lawfully exercised by them or him respectively.

COMMENT.

The General Clauses Act¹ similarly defines this term. The definition here indicates the high officers whose duty it is to carry on the Government of India.

17. The word “Government” denotes the person or persons authorized by law to administer executive Government in any part of British India.

COMMENT.

According to this definition ‘Government’ means the local Government

Clauses Act, however, says that ‘Government’ or ‘the Government’ shall include the local Government as well as the Government of India²; and ‘Local Government’ shall mean the person authorized by law to administer executive government in the part of British India in which the Act or Regulation containing the expression operates, and shall include a Chief Commissioner³. Act III of 1895 has varied the definition given here so far as ss. 255 to 263-A are concerned. Section 263-A defines what ‘government’ means in those sections.

18. The word “Presidency” denotes the territories subject to the Government of a Presidency.

COMMENT.

The General Clauses Act defines “Presidency town.” The part of India under the East India Company was divided into three Presidencies: Bengal, Madras and Bombay. The Presidency of Bengal was done away with in 1854, though it has been revived in 1912. Calcutta is a Presidency town under the General Clauses Act.

19. The word “Judge” denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if not appealed against, would be definitive, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive, or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such a judgment.

¹ X of 1897, s. 3 (23).

² Bajoo Singh, (1898) 26 Cal. 158.

³ Act X of 1897, s. 3 (21).

⁴ Ibid, s. 3 (29).

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(2) A Collector exercising jurisdiction in a suit under Act X of 1859,¹ is a Judge.

(b) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power to sentence to fine or imprisonment with or without appeal, is a Judge.

(c) A member of a panchayat which has power, under Reg. VII, 1816,² of the Madras Code, to try and determine suits, is a Judge.

(d) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power only to commit for trial to another Court, is not a Judge.

COMMENT.

Arbitrators.—Arbitrators empowered by law to give a definite judgment are included in the term 'Judge.'¹

1. 'Act X of 1859.'—This Act has been repealed in the Chota Nagpur Division of Bengal (except as to the District of Manbhum and the Tributary Mahals) by Bengal Act I of 1879, and in the rest of Bengal (except as to Calcutta, Orissa and the Scheduled Districts) by the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885). It is now in force in the district of Manbhum, in the Darjeeling District and in parts of the Jalpaiguri District in Bengal; and such parts of it as are not inconsistent with the portions of Act VIII of 1885 which have been extended to the Orissa Division are in force in that Division.

'Act X of 1859' has also been repealed in the Province of Agra (except as to Scheduled Districts) by the North-Western Provinces Rent Act (XVIII of 1873), and in the Central Provinces by the Central Provinces Tenancy Act (IX of 1883). In the province of Agra read now "the North-Western Provinces Tenancy Act (II of 1901)" for 'Act X of 1859.'

2. 'Reg. VII, 1816, of the Madras Code.'—This has been repealed by the Madras Civil Courts Act (III of 1873).

20. The words "Court of Justice" denote a Judge who is empowered by law to act judicially alone, or a body of Judges which is empowered by law to act judicially as a body, when such Judge or body of Judges is acting judicially.

ILLUSTRATION.

A panchayat acting under Reg. VII, 1816,¹ of the Madras Code, having power to try and determine suits, is a Court of Justice.

COMMENT.

"Court of Justice" does not mean here the place or building where justice is administered, but the judge or judges who conduct judicial proceedings in the due administration of justice. When the judges are transacting merely administrative business, they are not a Court of Justice.²

1. 'Regulation VII of 1816.'—This has been repealed by the Madras Civil Courts Act (III of 1873).

21. The words "public servant" denote a person falling under any of the descriptions hereinafter following, namely:—

First.—Every Covenanted servant of the Queen;

¹ First Rep., s. 76.

² Royal Aquarium and Summer and

Winter Garden Society v. Parkinson, [1882]
1 Q. B. 431.

Second.—Every Commissioned Officer in the Military or Naval forces of the Queen while serving under the Government of India or any Government ;

Third.—Every Judge ;

Fourth.—Every officer of a Court of Justice whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate, or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order in the Court ; and every person specially authorized by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties ;

Fifth.—Every juryman, assessor, or member of a panchayat assisting a Court of Justice or public servant ;

Sixth.—Every arbitrator or other person to whom any cause or matter has been referred for decision or report by any Court of Justice, or by any other competent public authority ;

Seventh.—Every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement ;

Eighth.—Every officer of Government whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience ;

Ninth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of Government, or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of Government, or to execute any revenue-process, or to investigate, or to report, on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of Government, or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of Government, and every officer in the service or pay of Government or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty ;

Tenth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property, to make any survey or assessment, or to levy any rate or tax for any secular common purpose of any village, town or district, or to make, authenticate or keep any document for the ascertaining of the rights of the people of any village, town or district.

ILLUSTRATION.

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Eleventh.—Every person who holds any office in virtue of which he is empowered to prepare, publish, maintain or revise an electoral roll or to conduct an election or part of an election.

Explanation 1.—Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2.—Wherever the words "public servant" occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

Explanation 3.—The word "election" denotes an election for the purpose of selecting members of any legislative, municipal or other public authority, of whatever character, the method of selection to which is by, or under, any law prescribed as by election.

COMMENT.

A line is drawn between the great mass of the community and certain classes of persons in the service and pay of Government, or exercising various public functions, who are here included in the words "public servant." Those offences which are common between public servants and other members of the community are left to the general provisions of the Code. But there are several offences which can only be committed by public servants; and on the other hand public servants in the discharge of their duties have many privileges peculiar to themselves.¹ Public servants are dealt with more strictly than other persons for offences committed by them as they enjoy various privileges and possess power and authority. The offences peculiar to them are classed separately in Chapter IX.

The word 'servant' shall be deemed to signify any person duly appointed and invested with authority to administer any part of the executive power of the Crown, or to execute any other public duty imposed by law, whether it be judicial, ministerial, or mixed. This section does not define what a "public servant" means but enumerates the various functionaries who will be designated as public servants. A public servant is one who has to discharge some public duty. All Government servants are not public servants.

Clause 1.—'Covenanted servant.'—The members of the Indian Civil Service were known as covenanted servants as they had to sign a covenant by which they bound themselves to contribute for their pension and not to trade or to receive presents. This covenant was entered into after they were selected by the Board of Directors of the East India Company. Such a covenant is still, as a matter of form, signed by those who are successful in the Civil Service competitive examination.

Clause 2.—Statute 25 & 26 Vic., c. 4, enables His Majesty the King to issue Commissions to officers of the regular Army and Navy. Every officer holding a Commission in the Military or Naval forces of the King—Regular, Auxiliary or Volunteer—will be deemed to be a public servant, while serving under the Government of India or any Government.

Clause 3.—The word "Judge" is defined in s. 19. A member of a Village Panchayat Court is a Judge.²

Clause 4.—Peons executing any judicial process³ or warrants of arrest⁴ come under this clause.

Clause 6.—'Referred for decision or report.'—To bring a case within the sub-section, there must be some cause or matter existing in dispute or controversy, in regard to which a competent public authority is desirous of a report to enable it to deal with the matter in dispute between the parties.⁵

¹ M. & M. 20.

² Ponnusamy Thevar, (1921) 30 M. L. T. 351.

³ Bhagai Dafadar, (1868) 2 Beng. L. R. 21, p. 2.

⁴ Sheo Prakash Tewari v. Bhoop Narain Prasad Pathak, (1895) 22 Cal. 759; Dharam Chand Lal, (1895) 22 Cal. 596.

⁵ Debi Din, (1886) 6 A. W. N. 295.

Clause 7.—Convict-warders¹ come under this clause.

Clause 8.—Persons appointed by a Government Solicitor to conduct prosecutions²; Revenue and Police Patels³; the gorait of a village⁴; officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, appointed under the Bengal Police Act V of 1861⁵ or the Madras City Police Act (III of 1888)⁶ fall under this clause.

Clause 9.—‘Officer.’—This word means a person employed to exercise to some extent a delegated function of Government; he must be either himself armed with some authority or representative character, or his duties must be immediately auxiliary to those of some one who is so armed.⁷ It means a functionary or holder of some officium or office however humble, to whom in some degree are delegated certain functions of Government.⁸

‘Officer in the service or pay of Government.’—This expression means one who is appointed to some office for the performance of some public duty.⁹

Cases.—A surveyor employed by the Collector in the Khas Mehal department¹⁰; a peon in the service and pay of Government and attached to the office of a Superintendent of the Salt Department¹¹; a Putwarce¹²; a supernumerary peon of the Collector’s Court, who received no fixed pay, but was remunerated by fees¹³; and a lascar in the service of the Public Works Department distributing water from public irrigation channels¹⁴ are public servants. A manager of an estate employed under the Court of Wards is a public servant according to the Allahabad High Court¹⁵ but not according to the Calcutta High Court¹⁶. A peon employed by such a manager is not a public servant.¹⁷

Clause 10.—Municipal engineers¹⁸; municipal servants under the City of Bombay Municipal Act, III of 1888¹⁹; a clerk in the Cess-collection Department of a Municipality constituted under the Bombay District Municipal Act²⁰, a Municipal tax collector²¹; a Local Board Sircar²²; a Union Karnam²³; and a Chairman of a Union Panchayat²⁴ are held to be public servants falling under this clause.

Clause 11.—This clause was added by the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act (XXXIX of 1920).

Explanation 1.—This explanation shows that persons who hold offices under local laws, if their duties fall within any of the descriptions here given are public servants.

Explanation 2.—Public servant pro confesso.—Any person, whether receiving pay or not, who chooses to take upon himself duties and responsibilities belonging to the position of a public servant, and performs those duties, and accepts those responsibilities and is recognized as filling the position of a public servant, must

¹ Kallachand Mootree, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr) 99; Muhammada, (1908) P. R. No. 22 of 1908; Saifin Rasul, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 267, s.c. 7 Bom. Cr. C. 146.

² Butto Kristo Doss, (1878) 3 Cal. 497.

³ Appaji bin Yadvavao, (1896) 21 Bom. 517.

⁴ Sidku, (1904) 26 All. 542.

⁵ Upendra Kumar Ghose, (1906) 3 C. L. J. 475.

⁶ Nataraja Pillai, (1922) 46 Mad. 60.

⁷ Ramayirav Jicbajirav, (1875) 12 B. H. C. 1.

⁸ Ahad Shah, (1917) P. R. No. 18 of 1918.

⁹ Nazamuddin, (1900) 28 Cal. 344.

¹⁰ Bajoo Singh, (1898) 26 Cal. 158.

¹¹ Nazamuddin, sup.

¹² Muds-ood-deen, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 148.

¹³ Ramkrishna Das, (1871) 7 Beng. L. R. 446.

¹⁴ Public Prosecutor of Madras v. Kimidi Annam Naidu, (1924) 21 L. W. 704.

¹⁵ Mathura Prasad, (1898) 21 All. 127.

¹⁶ Nazamuddin, sup.

¹⁷ Arayi, (1883) 7 Mad. 17.

¹⁸ Nantamram Uttamram, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 64.

¹⁹ Ezekiel, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 54.

²⁰ Babulal Kanaiyalal, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 761.

²¹ Government Advocate Bihar and Orissa v. Ganga Prasad, (1922) 1 Pat. 423.

²² Addaita Bhuia v. Kali Das De, (1907) 12 C. W. N. 96.

²³ Gopalasamintha Aiyar, (1893) 1 Weir 128.

²⁴ Sheik Abdul Kadir, [1916] 1 M. W. N. 384.

be regarded as one, and it does not lie in his mouth to say subsequently that, notwithstanding his performance of public duties and the recognition by others of such performance, he is not a "public servant." "If such a contention were allowed, and the question whether a man was a public servant were to depend wholly upon the test of his receiving or not receiving a salary, very great mischief and difficulty might arise in a country like this, where numerous persons are engaged in the performance of public duties without pay."¹

According to this explanation the person who in fact discharges the duties of the office which brings him under some one of the descriptions of public servant, is for all the purposes of the Code rightfully a public servant, whatever legal defects there may be in his right to hold the office.²

A person serving as a volunteer in a Tahsildar's office³ and a Zemindari Karnam⁴ are held to be public servants.

Explanation 3.—This explanation was added by the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act (XXXIX of 1920).

Statutory public servants.—Some functionaries have been, by local and special Acts, declared to be 'public servants' for the purpose of the Indian Penal Code.⁵

¹ Per Straight, J., in Parmeshar Das, (1886) 8 All. 201.

² Ramkrishna Das, (1871) 7 Beng. L. R. 446, 448, 16 W. R. (Cr.) 27.

³ Parmeshar Das, sup.

⁴ Subramanya v. Somasundara, (1891) 15 Mad. 127.

⁵ See the Police Act (V of 1861), s. 8; the Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (XV of 1865), s. 23; the Oudh Taluqdars' Relief Act (XXIV of 1870), s. 22; the Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871), s. 6; the Coroners Act (IV of 1871), s. 5; Broach Thakurs' Relief Act (XV of 1872), s. 17; the Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), s. 35; the Chota Nagpur Incumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876), s. 21; the Indian Museum Act (XXII of 1876), s. 14; the Embankment Act (XIII of 1877), s. 14; the Indian Forest Act (VII of 1878), s. 72; the Rangoon Port Commissioners' Act (XV of 1879), s. 64; the Pegu and Sittang Canal Act (II of 1881), s. 14; the Burma Forest Act (XIX of 1881), s. 71; the Broach and Kaira Incumbered Estates Act (XXI of 1881), s. 33; the Madras Forest Act (V of 1882), s. 60; the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 52; the Burma Steam Boilers and Prime Movers Act (XVIII of 1882), s. 12 (3); the British Burma Pilots Act (XII of 1883), s. 8 (2); the Merchant Shipping Act (VII of 1880), s. 50, (V of 1883), s. 14 (2); the Inland Steam Vessels Act (VI of 1884), s. 7 (3), 38 (2); the Inland Steamships Act (VII of 1884), s. 9 (3), 37 (3); the Indian Telegraph Act (XIII of 1885), s. 31; the Central Provinces Government Wards Act (XVII of 1885), s. 12 (2); the Births, Deaths and Marriage Registration Act (VI of 1886), s. 14; the Allahabad University Act (XVIII of 1887), s. 18 (1); the Kanungos and Patwaris Act (IX of 1889), s. 17; the Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 6, 137 (1); the Prisons Act (IX of 1894), s. 23; the Sindh Incumbered Estates Act (XX of 1896), s. 35; the Glanders and Parcy Act (XIII of 1899), s. 4 (2); the Central Provinces Court of Wards Act (XXIV of 1899), s. 19 (2); the Assam Labour and Emigration Act (VI of 1901), s. 4 (2); Act VIII of 1915, s. 116 C; the Indian Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 84; the Victoria Memorial Act (X of 1903), s. 4; the Indian Census Act (XVI of 1910), s. 3 (2); the Dourne Act (V of 1910), s. 4 (2); the Indian Factories Act (XII of 1911), s. 4 (6); the Inland Steam Vessels Act (I of 1917), ss. 39 (2), 44 (3); the Indian Emigration Act (VII of 1922), ss. 3 (3), 5 (1), 6 (1); the Ranchi Mental Hospital Act (XIII of 1922), s. 11; the Indian Boilers Act (V of 1923), s. 5; the Workmen's Compensation Act (VIII of 1923), s. 20; the Indian Merchant Shipping Act (XXI of 1923), s. 280.

The Ajmere Government Wards Regulation (I of 1888), s. 11 (2). The British Baluchistan Forest Regulation (V of 1890), s. 36; the Assam Forest Regulation (VII of 1891), s. 69; the Angul District Regulation (I of 1894), s. 56, III of 1913, s. 55 (3); the Upper Burma Forest Registration Regulation (II of 1897), s. 7 (2); the Upper Burma Oil-fields Regulation (VI of 1910), s. 12; the Hazare Forest Regulation (III of 1911), s. 52.

The Bombay Civil Courts Act (Bom. Act XIV of 1869), s. 33; the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom. Act III of 1888), s. 521; the Bombay Court of Wards Act (Bom. Act I of 1905), s. 21 (2); the Bombay Local Boards Act (VI of 1923), s. 135.

The Civil Courts Act (Beng. Act VI of 1871), s. 33; the Bengal Court of Wards Act (Beng. Act IX of 1879), s. 59 A; the Chittagong Port Commissioner's Act (Beng. Act IV of 1887), s. 63; the Land Records Maintenance Act (Beng. Act III of 1895), s. 33; the Calcutta Municipal Act (Beng. Act III of 1899), s. 616; the Bengal Public Parks Act (II of 1904), s. 7; the Chittagong Port Act (Beng. Act V of 1914), s. 106; the Bengal Medical Act (Beng. Act VI of 1914), s. 14 (4); the Bengal Smoke-nuisances Act (Beng. Act I of 1916); the Bengal Food Adulteration Act (Beng. Act VI of 1919), s. 19.

The following are held to be statutory public servants.—A Municipal Inspector within the meaning of Madras District Municipal Act¹; a Sanitary Inspector within the meaning of the Local Boards Act²; a Karkun employed to execute revenue processes and receive rent by a manager appointed under Act XV of 1872.³

The following are held to be not statutory public servants.—A police-officer under suspension within the meaning of s. 8 of Act V of 1861⁴; a Municipal Corporation within the meaning of s. 39 of Act V of 1877⁵; a person nominated by a Collector under s. 69 of the Bengal Tenancy Act⁶; a Goods Clerk of a railway company for the purpose of Chapter IX of the Penal Code⁷; a person assisting, in virtue of s. 11 of the Burma Village Act, the headman of a village in arresting a person.⁸

Not public servants.—A lessee of a village who has undertaken to keep an account of its forest revenues and pay a certain proportion to the Government, keeping the remainder for himself⁹; a Poddar of the Bank of Bengal¹⁰; a Mysore Policeman¹¹; a peon employed by the manager of an estate under the charge of the Court of Wards¹²; a carter employed by Government¹³; an arbitrator appointed by the parties to a proceeding under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code¹⁴; a clerk appointed by a Sub-Registrar and paid out of an allowance given to the latter¹⁵; a Municipal Water-Tax Collector¹⁶; a villager required to bring an accused person into a police-station in arrest under s. 11 of the Burma Village Act.¹⁷

The Madras Labour and Emigration Act (Mad. Act V of 1866), s. 3; the Madras Forest Act (Mad. Act V of 1882), s. 60; the City of Madras Municipal Act (Mad. Act I of 1884), s. 56; the Madras District Municipal Act (Mad. Act IV of 1884), s. 41; the Madras Local Boards Act (Mad. Act V of 1884), s. 43; the Madras Rivers Conservancy Act (Mad. Act VI of 1884), s. 23; the Madras Canals and Public Ferries Act (Mad. Act II of 1890), s. 11; the Madras Medical Registration Act (Mad. Act IV of 1914), s. 10 (3); the Madras City Municipal Act (Mad. Act IV of 1919), s. 405.

The U. P. Land Revenue Act (U. P. Act III of 1901), s. 27; the Bundelkhand Encumbered Estates Act (U. P. Act I of 1901), s. 33; the U. P. District Boards Act (U. P. Act III of 1906), s. 41; the U. P. Court of Wards Act (U. P. Act IV of 1912), s. 33; the U. P. Town Areas Act (U. P. Act II of 1914), s. 13; the U. P. Steam Boilers Act (U. P. Act III of 1915), s. 32 (1); the U. P. Municipalities Act (U. P. Act II of 1916), s. 81; the U. P. Towns Improvement Act (U. P. Act VIII of 1919), s. 92.

The Punjab Steam Boilers and Prime Movers Act (Punj. Act II of 1902), s. 12 (3); the Punjab Military Transport, etc. Act (Punj. Act I of 1903), s. 4 (2).

The Burma Municipalities Act (Burma Act III of 1898), ss. 44, 139 (4); the Burma Forest Act (IV of 1907), s. 73; the Burma Canal Act (Burma Act II of 1908), s. 667; the Rangoon Port Act (Burma Act IV of 1908), s. 10; Rangoon Victoria Memorial Act (Burma Act I of 1908), s. 4; the Burma Embarkment Act (Burma Act IV of 1909), s. 12; the Burma Medical Act (Burma Act I of 1916), s. 11 (3); the Burma Oil fields Act (Burma Act I of 1918), s. 10; the Burma Rural Self-Government Act (Burma Act IV of 1921), s. 74; the City of Rangoon Municipal Act (Burma Act VI of 1922), s. 237.

The Orissa Tenancy Act (Beh. and O. Act II of 1913), s. 79 (4); the Bihar Orissa Medical Act (Beh. and O. Act II of 1916), s. 14 (4); the Assam Medical Act (Assam Act I of 1916), s. 14 (4).

The C. P. Slaughter of Animals Act (C. P. Act IV of 1915), s. 3 (3).

¹ Ramassami, (1883) 13 Mad. 131.

² Tiruvengudi Municipality, (1898) 21 Mad. 428.

³ Irb Musa, (1876) Unrep. Cr. C. 117.

⁴ Dinana's Conspiracy, (1872) 8 Beng. L. R. App. 58.

⁵ The Municipal Corporation of the Town of Calcutta, (1878) 3 Cal. 758.

⁶ Chatter Lal v. Thakoor Pershad, (1901) 18 Cal. 518.

⁷ Zakaria, (1898) P. R. No. 9 of 1898.

⁸ Nga Pow E., (1916) 10 B. L. T. 170, a.c. (1914-1916) 2 U. B. R. 122.

⁹ Ramajayaram Juthayam, (1875) 12 B. H. C. 1.

¹⁰ Madan Mohan, (1878) 4 Cal. 376.

¹¹ Iskenderpasha, (1879) 1 Weir 312.

¹² Arya, (1883) 7 Mad. 17.

¹³ Narayanan, (1883) 7 Mad. 18.

¹⁴ Sunder Mehta, (1903) 31 Cal. 1684.

¹⁵ Flourentz Sakin, (1904) 22 Cal. 664.

¹⁶ Gahlot, (1904) 1 A. L. J. R. 123 (a.c.).

¹⁷ Nga Pow E., (1914-1916) 2 U. B. R. 122, a.c. 10 B. L. T. 170.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Where the offence concerns any ‘public servant’ to show “actual possession of the situation,” and this is sufficient proof that the duties or functions are actually discharged by to be such servant.

22. The words “moveable property” are intended to include corporeal property¹ of every description of land and things attached to the earth, and things not fastened to anything which is attached to the earth.

“Moveable property.”

COMMENT.

The term ‘property’ conveys a compound idea composed of subject, and of the right to be exercised over it. It is everywhere defined in the Penal Code so as to be applicable exclusively to “that which is its subject-matter.”

The General Clauses Act of 1868 says that “moveable property” means property of every description except “immoveable property.” The Registration Act says that “moveable property” includes standing crops and grass, fruit upon and juice in trees, and property of every other description, except “immoveable property.”²

The definition in the Penal Code is restricted to corporeal property, and all choses in action. It differs from the definitions given in the two Acts as it excludes incorporeal rights.

1. ‘Corporeal property’ is property which may be perceived by the senses in contradistinction to incorporeal rights, which are not so perceivable. Thus, salt produced on a swamp,³ and papers found in the possession of all kinds. Thus, salt produced on a swamp,⁴ and papers found in the possession of the record of a case,⁵ are property within the meaning of this section.

In a recent case the question arose, but was not decided, whether property received by post could be considered “moveable property” of the receiver. In the case, a letter addressed to W was handed by a postman to W, who was at the time in the occupation of H. W read the letter, and put it on a table in the room; H left it there. H took the letter, and subsequently attempted to file it as an affidavit attached to an affidavit made by him in a suit for judicial separation between him and his wife, for the purpose, as he afterwards stated, “of strengthening his case and of improving his own position.” The Court, however, refused to grant the letter. It was held that in the circumstances H could not be convicted of dishonest misappropriation of property with respect to his retention of the letter.

2. ‘Land and things attached to the earth.’—This section does not extend to “earth and things attached to the earth,” but “land and things attached to the earth”; “land” and “earth” are not synonymous terms, and there is a clear distinction between “the earth” and “earth.” By severance things that are immovable become moveable, and it is perfectly correct to call those things attached to the earth, which can be severed; and undoubtedly it is possible to sever earth from the earth, and attach it again thereto. Earth, that is soil and all its component parts of the soil, inclusive of stones and minerals, when severed from the earth or land to which it was attached, is moveable property capable of being the subject of theft.⁷ Any part of “the earth” whether it be stones or sand

¹ 1st Rep., s. 82.

² Act I of 1868, s. 2 (6)

³ Act XVI of 1903, s. 3.

⁴ Tamra Chantay, (1881) 4 Mad. 228.

⁵ Ramaswami Aiyar v. Vaithilinga Mudaliar, (1882) 1 Weir 28.

⁶ Harris, (1917) 40 All. 119.

⁷ Skirram, (1891) 15 Bom. 702.

the ultimate end, good or bad, which a person hopes to secure; his intention is concerned with the immediate effects of his acts. End cannot justify the means, in other language, the motive does not justify the intention. Take the case of a scoundrel or a man of bad character, whom it might be desirable to destroy on the spot, but if a person takes the law into his own hands and kills him, none the less he is guilty of murder.

25. A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does "Fraudulently," that thing with intent to defraud,¹ but not otherwise.

COMMENT.

"As a definition this provision is obviously imperfect, and perhaps introduces an element of doubt, which did not previously exist; for it leaves it to be determined, ... whether the word 'defraud' ... implies the deprivation or intended deprivation of property as a part or result of the fraud."¹

The word 'fraudulently' should not be confined to transactions of which deprivation of property forms a part.²

1. 'Intent to defraud.'—The word 'intent,' by its etymology, seems to have metaphorical allusion to archery, and implies 'aim' and thus connotes not a casual or merely possible result—foreseen perhaps as a not improbable incident, but not desired—but rather connotes the one object for which the effort is made—and thus has reference to what has been called the dominant motive, without which the action would not have been taken.³ The terms 'fraud' and 'defraud' are not defined in the Penal Code. The word 'defraud' is of double meaning in the sense that it either may or may not imply deprivation, and, as it is not defined, its meaning must be sought by a consideration of the context in which the word 'fraudulently' is found.⁴ Sir James Stephen, in his History of the Criminal Law of England,⁵ observes: "There has always been a great reluctance amongst lawyers to attempt to define fraud, and this is not unnatural when we consider the number of different kinds of conduct to which the word is applied in connection with different branches of law, and especially in connection with the equitable branch of it. I shall not attempt to construct a definition which will meet every case which might be suggested, but there is little danger in saying that whenever the words 'fraud' or 'intent to defraud' or 'fraudulently' occur in the definition of a crime two elements at least are essential to the commission of the crime: namely, first, deceit or intention to deceive; and secondly, some gain or some loss to the person deceived. The word 'deceit' is not defined, but it is understood to mean a deceit or intention to deceive; and the word 'gain' or 'loss' is understood to mean a gain or loss to the person deceived. This intent, I may add, is very seldom the only or the principal intention entertained by the fraudulent person, whose principal object in nearly every case is his own advantage. The injurious deception is usually intended only as a means to an end, though this, as I have already explained, does not prevent it from being intentional. A practically conclusive test as to the fraudulent character of a deception for criminal purposes is this: Did the author of the deceit derive any advantage from it which he could not have had if the truth had been known? If so, it is hardly possible that that advantage should not have had an equivalent in loss, or risk of loss, to some one else; and if so, there was fraud. In practice people hardly ever intentionally deceive each other in matters of business for a purpose which is not fraudulent."

¹ Per Maclean, C. J., in Abbas Ali, (1896) 25 Cal. 512, 521, F.B.

² Ibid.

³ Per Batty, J., in Bhagwant v. Kedari, (1900) 25 Bom. 202, 226, s.c. 2 Bom. L. R.

956, 1000

⁴ Abbas Ali, sup., 521.

⁵ Vol. II., p. 121. Balkrishna Vaman, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R. 708, 713, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 115, 120.

loss,"¹ but not the illegal seizure and impounding of cattle, even though it was effected with the malicious intent of subjecting the owners to additional expense, inconvenience, and annoyance.² Merely permitting cattle to stray does not establish any intention of causing 'wrongful loss' to the public or any person.³

Secreting a document.—Where the plaintiff, in a suit referred to arbitration, with a view to prevent a witness from referring to an endorsement on a bond, snatched up the bond which was lying beside the arbitrator, ran away, and refused to produce it, it was held that it could hardly be inferred from those circumstances that the act of the accused was prompted by any desire to cause 'wrongful loss' or 'wrongful gain.'⁴

Breach of a condition does not amount to 'wrongful loss.'—Where a person who purchased rice from a famine-relief officer at a certain rate, on condition that he should sell it at a pound the rupee less did not sell it at the rate agreed upon, but at four pounds the rupee less, it was held that no wrongful gain or wrongful loss had been caused to anyone within the meaning of this section. The rice having been sold to the accused, and he having paid for it, it was not unlawful for him to sell it again at such prices as he thought fit.⁵

24. Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing "dishonestly."

COMMENT.

From this definition it will appear that the term 'dishonestly' is not used in the Code in its popular significance. Unless there is wrongful gain to one person, or wrongful loss to another, an act would not be 'dishonest.' The word 'dishonestly' is used as bearing relation with property. The 'intention' under the section must be to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to a person. "The word 'intent,' by its etymology, seems to have metaphorical allusion to archery, and implies 'aim' and thus connotes not a casual or merely possible result—foreseen perhaps as a not improbable incident, but not desired—but rather connotes the one object for which the effort is made—and thus has reference to what has been called the dominant motive, without which the action would not have been taken."⁶

The word 'dishonestly' occurs alone in the definition of theft (s. 378), extortion (s. 383), robbery (s. 390), criminal misappropriation (s. 403), criminal breach of trust (s. 405), and receiving stolen property (s. 411). It occurs with the word 'fraudulently,' defined in the next section, in several offences such as cheating (s. 415), forgery (s. 463), and counterfeit coins (ss. 246, 247).

The word 'fraudulently' occurs alone in the definition of many offences, chief of which are offences against public justice (ss. 206-208, 210), weights and measures (ss. 264-266), and counterfeit coins and stamps (ss. 242, 243, 252, 253, 261-263).

The law takes into account the primary or immediate intention and not the secondary or remote. Thus, if A takes an article belonging to Z out of Z's possession, without Z's consent, with the intention of keeping it until he obtains money from Z as a reward for its restoration, he takes it dishonestly and commits theft.⁷ As every man is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act, it is from the consequences that the Court has often to presume the intention of the accused in doing a particular act. The law does not look to the motive: it looks only to the intention. Motive and intention are two different things. Motive is directed to

¹ Freonath Banerjee, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 68.

² Aradhun Mundul v. Myan Khan Takadger, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

³ Toorebaikhan, (1868) Unrep. Cr. C. 11.

⁴ Subramania Ghanapali, (1881) 3 Mad.

261.

⁵ Lal Mahomed, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 82.

⁶ Per Batty, J., in Bhagwant v. Kedari, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 986, 1009, 25 Bom. 202, 226.

⁷ Section 378, ill. (3).

the ultimate end, good or bad, which a person hopes to secure; his intention is concerned with the immediate effects of his acts. End cannot justify the means, in other language, the motive does not justify the intention. Take the case of a scoundrel or a man of bad character, whom it might be desirable to destroy on the spot, but if a person takes the law into his own hands and kills him, none the less he is guilty of murder.

25. A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does "Fraudulently," that thing with intent to defraud.¹ but not otherwise.

COMMENT.

"As a definition this provision is obviously imperfect, and perhaps introduces an element of doubt, which did not previously exist; for it leaves it to be determined,....whether the word 'defraud'...implies the deprivation or intended deprivation of property as a part or result of the fraud."¹

The word 'fraudulently' should not be confined to transactions of which deprivation of property forms a part.²

1. 'Intent to defraud.'—The word 'intent,' by its etymology, seems to have metaphorical allusion to archery, and implies 'aim' and thus connotes not a casual or merely possible result—foreseen perhaps as a not improbable incident, but not desired—but rather connotes the one object for which the effort is made—and thus has reference to what has been called the dominant motive, without which the action would not have been taken.³ The terms 'fraud' and 'defraud' are not defined in the Penal Code. The word 'defraud' is of double meaning in the sense that it either may or may not imply deprivation, and, as it is not defined, its meaning must be sought by a consideration of the context in which the word 'fraudulently' is found.⁴ Sir James Stephen, in his History of the Criminal Law of England,⁵ observes: "There has always been a great reluctance amongst lawyers to attempt to define fraud, and this is not unnatural when we consider the number of different kinds of conduct to which the word is applied in connection with different branches of law, and especially in connection with the equitable branch of it. I shall not attempt to construct a definition which will meet every case which might be suggested, but there is little danger in saying that whenever the words 'fraud' or 'intend to defraud' or 'fraudulently' occur in the definition of a crime two elements at least are essential to the commission of the crime: namely, first, deceit or an intention to deceive or in some cases mere secrecy; and, secondly, either actual injury or possible injury or an intent to expose some person either to actual injury or to a risk of possible injury by means of that deceit of secrecy. This intent, I may add, is very seldom the only or the principal intention entertained by the fraudulent person, whose principal object in nearly every case is tion for criminal purposes is this: Did the author of the deceit derive any advantage from it which he could not have had if the truth had been known? If so, it is hardly possible that that advantage should not have had an equivalent in loss, or risk of loss, to some one else; and if so, there was fraud. In practice people hardly ever intentionally deceive each other in matters of business for a purpose which is not fraudulent."

¹ Per Maclean, C. J., in Abbas Ali, (1896) 25 Cal. 512, 521, r.b.

986, 1009.

⁴ Abbas Ali, sup., 521.

² Ibid.

³ Per Batty, J., in Bhagwant v. Kedari, (1900) 25 Bom. 202, 226, s.c. 2 Bom. L. R.

⁵ Vol. II., p. 121; BalKrishna Yaman, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R. 708, 713, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 115, 120.

Approving these observations, the Allahabad High Court has laid down that where there is an intention to deceive and by means of the deceit to obtain an advantage there is fraud.¹ A somewhat wider interpretation has been placed on the word 'fraud' in Haycraft v. Creasy,² which is expressly followed by the Bombay High Court.³ Le Blanc, J., in the judgment, says:—"By fraud, I understand an intention to deceive; whether it be from any expectation of advantage to the party himself, or from ill-will towards the other is immaterial."

The expression 'intent to defraud' implies conduct coupled with intention to deceive and thereby to injure; in other words, 'defraud' involves two conceptions, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived, that is, infringement of some legal right possessed by him but not necessarily deprivation of property.⁴ Where the accused, after the execution and registration of a document which was not required by law to be attested, added his name to the document as an attesting witness, but without putting a date or alleging actual presence at the time of its execution, it was held that this act was neither fraudulent nor dishonest and that the accused was therefore not guilty of forgery.⁵ Similarly, where the accused attested a document, without the authority of the executant, after its execution, to prevent other people from setting up a claim to the property in the possession of the accused under the document, it was held that he was not guilty of forgery for there was no intention to defraud where no wrongful result was intended or could have arisen from the act of the accused.⁶ The accused, in order to obtain recognition from a Settlement Officer that they were entitled to the title of "Loskur," filed a sannad before that Officer purporting to grant that title. This document was found not to be genuine and they were convicted under ss. 471 and 464 by the Sessions Judge. It was held that they could not be found guilty as their intention was not to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one, but to produce a false belief in the mind of the Settlement Officer that they were entitled to the dignity of "Loskur" and that this could not be said to constitute an intention to 'defraud.'⁷

A general intention to defraud, without the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another, would be sufficient to support a conviction.⁸ In order to prove an intent to defraud it is not at all necessary that there should have been some person defrauded, or who might possibly have been defrauded. A man may have an intent to defraud, and yet there may not be any person who could be defrauded by his act. Suppose a person with a good account at his bankers, and a friend, with his knowledge, forges his name to a cheque either to try his credit, or to imitate his handwriting, there would be no intent to defraud, though there would be parties who might be defrauded; but where another person has no account at his bankers, but a man supposes that he has, and on that supposition forges his name, there would be an intent to defraud in that case, although no person could be defrauded.⁹ When it is material to prove an intent to defraud, evidence may be given of similar offences by the defendant.¹⁰

'Fraudulently': 'Dishonestly'.—There is a real distinction between the meaning of the terms 'fraudulently' and 'dishonestly'; the former denotes an intent to deceive. The production of a forged bond by a person in a suit with the intent to make the Court believe that he was entitled to recover money upon the basis of the particular document produced, though may not be dishonest within the meaning of s. 24, may yet be fraudulent within the meaning of s. 471.¹¹

¹ Muhammad Saeed Khan, (1893) 21 All. 113, 115.

² (1801) 2 East 92, 108.

³ Vithal Narayan, (1886) 13 Bom. 515a.; followed in Lalit Mohan Sarkar, (1894) 22 Cal. 313, 322, and in Khandusingh, (1896) 22 Bom. 768.

⁴ Surendra Nath Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 75, 82, s.c. 14 C. W. N. 1076.

⁵ Surendra Nath Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 75, s.c. 14 C. W. N. 1076.

⁶ Manika Aarti, [1915] M. W. N. 278.

⁷ Jan Mahomed, (1884) 10 Cal. 581.

⁸ Dhanum Kaze, (1882) 9 Cal. 53, 60.

⁹ Per Manle, J., in Charles Naeff, (1852) 1 Den. C. C. 493, 499.

¹⁰ Simmonds, (1909) 2 Cr. App. R. 307.

¹¹ Kedar Nath Chatterjee, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 807.

"Reason to believe."

26. A person is said to have "reason to believe" a thing if he has sufficient cause to believe that thing, but not otherwise.

COMMENT.

The expression "reason to believe" occurs in ss. 411 to 414.

See Comment on s. 414 where the word 'believe' is distinguished from 'suspect.'

27. When property is in the possession of a person's wife,¹ clerk or servant on account of that person, it is in that person's possession within the meaning of this Code.

"Property in possession of wife, clerk or servant."

Explanation.—A person employed temporarily or on a particular occasion in the capacity of a clerk or servant, is a clerk or servant within the meaning of this section.

COMMENT.

Object.—The object of the framers of the Code in the Explanation is to lay down a few rules, in accordance with the general sense of mankind, for the purpose of preventing any difference of opinion arising in cases likely to occur very often. The possession by a clerk or servant of that which belongs to the master, or of that which, whether it belongs absolutely to his master, or to another person, the clerk or servant holds for his master and on his account, is the master's possession. The possession of the servant must be on account of his master to make the master liable. A pistol was discovered lying on the floor of a shop which could not reasonably be expected to be dealing in such articles. At the time of the discovery the shop was in charge of a servant and there was no proof that he was holding the pistol for his master. It was held that the master could not be convicted.¹

Principle.—This section abrogates the distinction made by the English law between 'possession' and 'custody.' But it does not express the complete thought of the legislature on the question of possession.²

According to English law 'possession' is used as regards the owner, whereas 'custody' is used to mean "such a relation towards the thing as would constitute possession if the person having custody had it on his own account."³ What would be a mere 'custody' under English law would be 'possession' under the Code.

Corporeal property is in a person's possession when he has such power over it that he can exclude others from it, and intends to exercise, if necessary, that power on behalf of himself or of some person for whom he is a trustee. But a wife, a clerk, or a servant, has not this power or intention to deal with things in their charge as owners. They are, therefore, said to have custody merely according to English law. The word 'custody' means "such a relation towards a thing as would constitute possession if the person having custody had it on his own account."⁴

A man's goods are in his possession, not only while they are in his house or on his premises, but also when they are in a place where he may usually send them (as when horses and cattle feed on common land), or in a place where they may be lawfully deposited by him, as if he buries money or ornaments in his own land, or puts them in any other secret place of deposit.

1. 'Wife.'—A permanent mistress may be regarded as a 'wife.' When a man furnishes a house for his mistress' occupation, he may reasonably be presumed to be in possession of all articles therein which can reasonably be inferred to belong to him or to be in the possession of his mistress on his behalf. But the

¹ Chhotey, (1922) 20 A. L. J. R. 855;

² Fateh Chand, (1916) 44 Cal. 477.

³ Stephen's Criminal Law, 210, 211.

⁴ Ibid.

inference must be inapplicable to articles of which the mistress is in possession illegally or contrary to the provisions of law, especially when the article in question is such that he might well remain in ignorance that it was in his mistress' possession.¹

28. A person is said to "counterfeit" who causes one thing¹ to resemble another thing, intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact.

Explanation 2.—When a person causes one thing to resemble another thing, and the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that the person so causing the one thing to resemble the other thing intended by means of that resemblance to practise deception or knew it to be likely that deception would thereby be practised.

COMMENT.

The word 'counterfeit' occurs in offences relating to coin provided in Chapter XII.

Under this section it is not necessary to show that deception actually took place. Intention to practise deception by causing one thing to resemble another is quite sufficient.

1. "Thing."—The thing may be a coin or a piece of metal. Its value is immaterial. The counterfeit coin may be more valuable so far as money value is considered than the coin for which it is intended to pass.

When the coins counterfeited are such imitations of the genuine coin as might deceive people on account of the resemblance, the presumption referred to in Explanation 2 arises.²

Amendment.—Explanations 1 and 2 were substituted for the original explanation by Act I of 1889, s. 9.

29. The word "document" denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used.¹ or which may be used, as evidence of that matter.

Explanation 1.—It is immaterial by what means or upon what substance the letters, figures or marks are formed, or whether the evidence is intended for, or may be used in, a Court of Justice, or not.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

A writing expressing the terms of a contract, which may be used as evidence of the contract, is a document.

A cheque upon a banker is a document.

A power-of-attorney is a document.

A map or plan which is intended to be used or which may be used as evidence, is a document.

A writing containing directions or instructions is a document.

Explanation 2.—Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures or marks as explained by mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures or marks within the meaning of this section, although the same may not be actually expressed.

ILLUSTRATION.

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange payable to his order. The meaning of the endorsement, as explained by mercantile usage, is that the bill is to be paid to the holder. The endorsement is a document, and must be construed in the same manner as if the words "pay to the holder" or words to that effect had been written over the signature.

COMMENT.

The term 'document' seems to include everything done by the pen, by engraving, by printing, or otherwise, whereby is made on paper, parchment, wood, or other substance a representation of words or other equivalents addressed to the eye. This word occurs in ss. 167, 175, 192, 201, 461 and 479.

The definition here given seems to be faulty; because the "matter described" is manifestly not the "document." According to English law the material on which words are written is said to be a 'document.' Under the Code it is the matter written and not the material that is called a 'document.' But the matter should be intended to be used as evidence of that matter. A writing is a document. Words printed, lithographed, or photographed are documents. A map or plan is a document. An inscription on a metal plate or stone is a document. A caricature is a document. Letters or marks imprinted on trees and intended to be used as evidence that the trees had been passed for removal by the Ranger of a forest, are a document.¹ A hammer for marking sleepers is a document.²

An avouchment, whether written or printed, of the character or quality of a chattel, is not a document which, if false, would be a forgery, e.g., the false signature of an artist's name to a picture,³ or enclosing spurious goods in a wrapper imitating a trade mark.⁴ But an instrument, though not signed by all parties thereto, fulfils the requirements of the definition of "document."⁵

Section 3 of the Indian Evidence Act says that 'document' means any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter.

Section 3 (16) of the General Clauses Act says that 'document' shall include any matter written, expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means which is intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter.

1 'Intended to be used.'—A writing which is not legal evidence of the matter expressed, may yet be a document, if the parties framing it believed it to be, and intended it to be, evidence of such matter.⁶

Amendment.—The present explanations were substituted by Act I of 1889, s. 9.

30. The words "valuable security" denote a document which is, or purports to be, a document whereby any legal right is created, extended, transferred, restricted, extinguished or released, or whereby

"Valuable security."

¹ Krishappa Khandappa, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 599.

² A. V. Joseph, (1924) 3 Rang. 11.

³ Thomas Cross, (1858) Dears. & B. 460.

⁴ John Smith, (1858) 27 L. J. (M. C.) 225.

⁵ Ramaswami Ayyar, (1917) 41 Mad. 589.

⁶ Sheefait Ally, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 61, 2 Beng. L. R. 12.

any person acknowledges that he lies under legal liability, or has not a certain legal right.

ILLUSTRATION.

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange. As the effect of this endorsement is to transfer the right to the bill to any person who may become the lawful holder of it, the endorsement is a "valuable security."

COMMENT.

The words "valuable security" denote a particular class of documents, viz., such documents as create or extinguish legal rights. This expression occurs in ss. 329-331, 347, 348, 420, 467 and 477.

Copy.—The term "valuable security" applies to the original document, and not to a copy.

Cancelled instrument.—A cancelled instrument is not a valuable security, "for an instrument available for the purpose for which it was made is clearly what the clause intended; a cancelled instrument, therefore, though by the cancelling of it a legal right may be 'extinguished,' inasmuch as the instrument upon which such right depended is thereby avoided, does not fall within its scope."¹

Unstamped document.—The fact that a document has not been stamped or not properly stamped, and is not, therefore, receivable in evidence, does not prevent its being a valuable security.² This is so because such a document "purports to be" a valuable security. A document whereby a person acknowledges himself to be under a legal liability is a valuable security.³

Unregistered document.—An unregistered document, though it may not be a valuable security until the registration is completed still "purports" to be a valuable security.⁴

Valuable securities.—A settlement of accounts in writing, though not signed by any person, and containing no promise to pay⁵; a *kabulayat*⁶; a deed of divorce⁷; a *hund*⁸; and a counterfoil of a paying-in slip purporting to be an acknowledgment of receipt of a sum of money by a Bank⁹ are valuable securities.

A signature purporting to be that of B was forged on each of two printed forms, one intended to be used as a promissory note and the other as a receipt. The blank spaces left for entering particulars of the amount, the name of the person in whose favour the document was executed, the date and place of execution and the rate of interest, were not filled in; a one-anna stamp was affixed on the top of each paper, but the stamp was neither signed across nor cancelled in any way. It was held that the documents, as they stood, were valuable securities.¹⁰ A document, though not signed by all the parties thereto, is a valuable security if it imposes an obligation on the actual executants and an option on the others and there is no condition precedent to be found in the document that the document is to be inoperative against the executants until all the parties executed it.¹¹

Not valuable securities.—The copy of a lease,¹² a sannad purporting to confer a personal title,¹³ a postal receipt for an insured parcel,¹⁴ and a copy of a decree passed by a Court,¹⁵ are not valuable securities.

¹ 1st Rep., s. 89.

² (1873) 7 M. H. C. App. 26; Ramasami, (1888) 12 Mad. 143.

³ Idu Joksha, (1917) 3 P. L. J. 386.

⁴ Kashi Nath Nark, (1897) 25 Cal. 207.

⁵ Kapalaraya Saraya, (1864) 2 M. H. C. 247.

⁶ (1868) 6 W. R. Cr. L. 2; Nasiruddin,

1883) 3 A. W. N. 32.

⁷ Asimooddeen, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 15.

⁸ Lekhrj, (1910) P. W. R. No. 65 of 1910.

⁹ Turner, (1924) 20 C. W. N. 868.

¹⁰ Jawahir Thakur, (1916) 38 All. 430.

¹¹ Ramaswami Ayyar, (1917) 41 Mad. 639.

¹² Kaushal Hiranman, (1867) 4 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 28; Naro Gopal, (1869) 6 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 56.

¹³ Jan Mahomed, (1894) 10 Cal. 531.

¹⁴ Arora, (1912) P. L. R. No. 299 of 1913; Setho Lal, (1916) 3 P. L. W. 99.

¹⁵ Charn Chandra Ghose, (1927) 39 O.L.J. 12.

"A will."

31. The words "a will" denote any testamentary document.

COMMENT:

A "will" is a disposition or declaration by which the person making it provides for the distribution or administration of property after his death. It does not take effect until the testator's death, and is always revocable by him.

The Indian Succession Act¹ defines 'will' as "the legal declaration of the intentions of the testator with respect to his property, which he desires to be carried into effect after his death." The General Clauses Act² says that 'will' "shall include a codicil and every writing making a voluntary posthumous disposition of property." This term occurs in ss. 467 and 477 of the Code.

Words referring to acts include illegal omissions.

32. In every part of this Code, except where a contrary intention appears from the context, words which refer to acts¹ done extend also to illegal² omissions.³

COMMENT:

This section simply says that acts include illegal omissions.

1. 'Acts.'—An 'act' generally means something voluntarily done by a person. 'Act' is a determination of the will, producing an effect in the sensible world. This word includes writing and speaking, or, in short, any external manifestation. In the Code, the term 'act' is not confined to its ordinary meaning of positive conduct of doing something, but includes also illegal omissions.

2. 'Illegal.'—See post, s. 43.

3. 'Omission.'—This word is used in the sense of intentional non-doing. Thus, according to this section, 'act' includes intentional doing as well as intentional non-doing. The omission or neglect must no doubt be such as to have an active effect conducing to the result, as a link in the chain of facts from which an intention to bring about the result may be inferred.⁴ The Code makes punishable omissions which have caused, which have been intended to cause, or which have been known to be likely to cause, a certain evil effect in the same manner as it punishes acts, provided they were illegal. And when the law imposes a duty to act on a person, his illegal omission to act renders him liable to punishment.⁵

"Act."
"Omission."

33. The word "act" denotes as well a series of acts as a single act: the word "omission" denotes as well a series of omissions as a single omission.

COMMENT:

The effect of s. 32 and this section taken together is that the term 'act' comprises one or more acts or one or more illegal omissions.

An act may constitute an offence under two or more enactments.⁶

Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention.

34. When a criminal act is done by several persons,¹ in furtherance of the common intention of all,² each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.³

¹ X of 1865, s. 3.

² X of 1897, s. 3 (57).

³ Thornhill Madathil

Poker, (1886) 1

Weir 495.

⁴ Lati/Ilhan, (1895) 20 Bom. 294.

⁵ Sesha Ayyar v. Venkataradda Chetty, (1923) 33 M. L. T. 263.

COMMENT.

This section deals with the doing of separate acts, similar or diverse, by several persons; if all are done in furtherance of a common intention, each person is liable for the result of them all as if he had done them himself.¹ The section does not create a distinct offence; it lays down only a principle of liability.²

Object.—This section is framed to meet a case in which it may be difficult or to prove exactly are deemed guilty unguilt, support, and protection to the person actually committing the act.

This section has no application in the construction of ss. 397 and 398, though it may be read with ss. 392 and 395 to determine the substantive offence which is created.⁴ It cannot be used to make a co-accused liable to the minimum punishment laid down in s. 397 because one accused is so liable.⁵

Principle.—Where parties go with a common purpose to execute a common object, each and every one becomes responsible for the acts of each and every other in execution and furtherance of their common purpose; as the purpose is common, so must be the responsibility.⁶ It is a well recognized canon of criminal jurisprudence that the Courts cannot distinguish between co-conspirators, nor can it inquire, even if it were possible, as to the part taken by each in the crime.⁷ All are guilty of the principal offence, not of abetment.⁸ If two or more persons combined in injuring another in such a manner that each person engaged in causing the injury must know that the result of such injury may be the death of the injured probable and natural results of the combination of acts in which he joined.⁹ But a party not cognizant of the intention of his companion to commit murder is not liable, though in his company, to do an unlawful act.¹⁰ For instance, if three persons go out to commit a felony, and one of them unknown to the others, puts a pistol in his pocket and commits a felony of another kind, such as murder, the two who did not concur in this second felony will not be guilty thereof, notwithstanding it happened while they were engaged with him in the felonious act for which they went out.¹¹

Scope.—This section does not require proof that any particular accused was responsible for the commission of the actual offence.¹²

The section provides not only for liability to punishment, but also for subjecting a foreigner in foreign territory initiates an offence territory, he is, if found within British territory, Court within whose jurisdiction the offence was completed.¹³

1. 'Criminal act is done by several persons.'—The section contemplates the case where more persons than one share in the doing of the act, and it is necessary to bear in mind the definition of 'act' given in s. 33 and also the provisions of

¹ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1921) 27 Bom. L. R. 148, 168, 53 Cal. 197, r.c.

² Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1923) 23 G. W. N. 170, 33 C. L. J. 412.

³ Nga Po Sein, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 233.

⁴ Ali Mirza, (1923) 51 Cal. 265.

⁵ Po Myaing, (1920) 10 L. B. R. 269; Dulli, (1924) 47 All. 59.

⁶ Ganesh Singh v. Ram Raja, (1860) 3 Beng. L. R. (P. C.) 44, 45.

⁷ Ibid.

⁸ Pho Laung, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 264; but see Po Ya, (1919) 13 B. L. T. 44.

⁹ See id.

41 Cal.

751.

¹⁰ Chhotalal Babar, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 147, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 83.

ss. 35, 37 and 38.¹ A 'criminal act' means that unity of criminal behaviour which results in something, for which an individual would be punishable, if it were all done by himself alone, that is, in a criminal offence.²

The section only comes into operation when there is a substantive charge of an offence having been committed.³

2. 'In furtherance of the common intention of all.'—Acts done in furtherance of common intention make all equally liable for the results of all the acts of others. Mahmood, J., in *Dharam Rai's case*⁴ said: "This section was the subject of consideration impliedly in the case of The Queen v. Gora Chand Gopee.⁵ At p 456, Sir Barnes Peacock clearly laid down the rule of law that mere presence of persons at the scene of an offence is not, ipso facto, sufficient to render them liable to any rule such as s. 34 enunciates, and that 'the furtherance of a common design' was an essential condition before such a rule applied to the case of an individual person. It was probably in consequence of this expression of view from such a high authority that the Legislature by s. 1 of Act XXVII of 1870, repealed the original s. 34; and in substituting another section therefor, inserted the important words 'in furtherance of the common intention of all,' as representing the condition precedent to each of such persons being held liable for the crime in the same manner as if it were committed by him alone. This change in the law is very significant, and it indicates to my mind that the original section having been found to be somewhat imperfectly worded, these additional words were introduced to draw a clear distinction that unpremeditated acts done by a particular individual, and which go beyond the object and intention of the original offence, should not implicate persons who take no part in that particular act. We have the opinion of an American jurist on the point, whom Mr. Mayne, in his Commentary on the Indian Penal Code, quotes (Bishop, s. 439), where that learned author, laying down the rule, goes on to say:—'But if the wrong done was a fresh and independent wrong, springing wholly from the mind of the doer, the other is not criminal therein, merely because when it was done he was intending to be a partaker with the doer in a different wrong.' This seems to me to be the right interpretation of the words in 'furtherance of the common intention of all,' as they occur in s. 34 of the Indian Penal Code. There is another section in that Code which is somewhat similarly worded, and seems to turn upon the same principle, so far as this particular point is concerned. That section is 149, which, instead of using the words quoted above, uses the words 'in prosecution of the common object of that assembly, or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object.' It will be observed that while s. 34 limits itself to the furtherance of the common intention, s. 149 goes further, inasmuch as it renders every member of an unlawful assembly guilty of the offence when it is likely that such an offence might have been committed in prosecution of the common object. I have referred to this section to show that it is not the case that the words 'in furtherance of the common intention of all,' in s. 34; and even upon *n. v. Sabed Ali*⁶ held that an unlawful assembly would not render all the other members liable therefor, unless it was shown that the assembly did understand and realize either that such offence would be committed or was likely to be necessary for the common object." Thus to establish guilt under s. 34 it is necessary to prove a common intention as distinguished from a common object as in s. 149 and it must be shown that the criminal act was committed in furtherance of that intention.⁷

¹ Nga Tun Baw, (1907) 14 Burma L. R. 264.

² Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 148, 162, 52 Cal. 197, r. c., overruling Nirmal Kanta Roy, (1914) 41 Cal. 1072 and Profulla Kumar Mazumdar, (1922) 60 Cal. 41.

³ Reazuddi, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1077.

⁴ (1887) 7 A. W. N. 236, 237.

⁵ (1866) Beng. L. R., Sup. Vol. 443, 6 W. R. (Cr.) 45.

⁶ (1873) 11 Beng. L. R. 347, r. b.

⁷ Ritbaran Singh, (1917) 4 P. L. W. 120.

Recently the Privy Council observed that the words 'in furtherance of the common intention of all' introduced as an essential part of the section the element of a common intention prescribing the condition under which each might be criminally liable when there are several actors.¹

A furtherance of a common design is a condition precedent for convicting each of the persons who take part in the commission of a crime, and the mere fact that several persons took part in a crime in the absence of a common intention is not sufficient to convict them of that crime. Thus, where several persons joined together in striking another but there was no evidence to show that the common intention of all was to cause grievous hurt, the conviction of all of them for the same offence was held to be bad in law.² It is not sufficient for joint responsibility for an offence under this section that the offence actually committed was likely to occur as a result of the several persons acting together; but that the existence of a common intention being the sole test of joint responsibility it must be proved what the common intention was and that the common act for which the accused were to be made responsible was acted upon in furtherance of that common intention.³ Where there is no direct evidence of common intention it must be judged and decided by a consideration of all the facts proved and the circumstances surrounding the case.

It is essential to consider, first, the common intention of all, and, secondly, the individual intention of each accused as disclosed by the circumstances.⁴ The fact that a criminal act done in furtherance of the common intention of several persons was the act of a single individual does not render the provisions of this section inapplicable.⁵

Cases.—Where each of several persons took part in beating a person so as to break eighteen ribs and cause his death, each of them was convicted of murder.⁶ Where several persons join in beating another with lathis (sticks), and inflict such injuries on him that he dies shortly after the beating, all are guilty of murder without distinction.⁷ But where three persons assaulted the deceased and gave him a beating, in the course of which one struck him a blow on the head, which resulted in death, it was held that, in the absence of proof that the prisoners had the common intention to inflict injury likely to cause death, they could not be convicted of murder but of voluntarily causing grievous hurt.⁸ In a fight which ensued over the division of property between three persons, one of them was hit by a lathi (stick) and died. It did not appear which of the other two had struck the blow which caused his death. It was held that the accused were not acting in concert and none of them could be convicted of murder.⁹ A and B conspired to waylay and attack C. At a signal from A, B struck C. The blow happened to fall on D who was close by. A then joined with B in attacking C. D afterwards died as a result of the blow struck by B. It was held that this section did not apply until A actually joined in attacking C. Up to then A could be treated only as an abettor, and he could not be held responsible for the killing of D, as the act done was different from the act abetted and not a probable consequence of the abetment.¹⁰ The common intention must cover the act done by all the several persons.¹¹ During the course of a political trial police were posted in different places in the

¹ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 162, 52 Cal. 197, r.c.

² Dalia Singh, (1912) 9 A. J. R. 180; Kalcora Theras, (1923) 26 M. L. J. R. 311. See Jakiri Chamar, (1912) 16 C. L. J. 440.

³ Mauzy Gyi, (1923) 1 Rang. 50; Nys Po Sein, (1922) 1 L. B. R. 233, disapproved.

⁴ Slack On, (1919) 10 L. B. R. 117; Forst, (1920) 25 C. W. N. 21.

⁵ Ram Lal Suresh, (1924) 26 Bom. L. R. 334, 49 Bom. 81.

⁶ Gur Chander Das, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.)

5; Rajya v. Arjan, (1896) P. R. No. 2 of 1897. See Jamiruddi Bureas, (1912) 18 Q. W. N. 909.

⁷ Sipahi Singh, (1922) 45 All. 139; Umed, (1922) 45 All. 727; Allah Ditta, (1920) 4 L. L. J. 276.

⁸ Duma Baidya, (1826) 19 Mad. 483; Mala Singh, (1922) 5 L. L. J. 121.

⁹ Bhagwanrao, (1919) 17 A. L. J. R. 1005.

¹⁰ Po Ye, (1919) 13 B. L. T. 44, s.c. 10 L. B. R. 99.

¹¹ Nga Tan Bwa, (1907) 1 U. B. R. (P. G.)

5. See Salmon, (1940) C. Q. B. D. 79.

Court to keep order. Large crowds gathered, and some men who were not permitted to go in the Court room, had some sort of melée with the police. Several men were seen assaulting individual policemen in different parts of the premises. It was held that each assault was independent of other similar assaults and this section had no application as the assaults on individual policemen were not the accused were thereupon tried for the offence of murder. It was held that the accused were not guilty of murder, for the separation of the two accused from the gang having been prior to the murder, there could be no common object.² Four men joined in committing a robbery. Two of them went from house to house bullying and ill-treating the inmates and making them give up their valuables while the other two kept guard on the house tops. Of the latter pair one was armed with a gun, which he fired off several times. When the villagers began to make it unpleasant for the robbers by throwing stones, he shot and killed one of them who took a prominent part in the stone throwing. It was held that those who went on bullying were not liable for the act of the one who shot the villager as the act which caused the death was not done by several persons but only by one.³ One D was killed by one blow on his head with some sharp weapon. The accused B and M with others armed with gandas had invaded the compound where D was sleeping, and had immediately assaulted D and that one of their number struck him on the head and killed him. The accused's intention was to insult and disgrace one K. The accused M, who gave the fatal blow, was convicted under s. 302 and B was convicted of abetment of grievous hurt under s. 325 read with s. 109. As both the accused had armed themselves with deadly weapons B must have known that in case of opposition the weapons would be used and in all probability grievous hurt would be caused.⁴

The appellant was charged under s. 302 with the murder of a Post-master. At the trial the evidence showed that while the Post-master was in his office counting money, three men, of whom the appellant was one, entered the office and called upon him to hand over the money; he refused. The trial Judge directed the jury that if they were satisfied that the Post-master was killed in furtherance of common intention of all three men, then the appellant was guilty of murder, whether he fired the fatal shot or not. It was held that upon the true construction of this section especially having regard to ss 33, 37 and 38, the direction was correct.⁵ Where five persons armed with big sticks or clubs joined together to forcibly carry off a girl and grievous hurt was caused to persons attempting to prevent the girl being carried off by any one of them it was held that all must be regarded as being responsible for the hurt caused.⁶

Where both master and servant were present at the sale of ganja in contravention of the terms of his licence and the servant received the money paid for the ganja, it was held that the servant was guilty of the offence of selling ganja without a licence by the operation of this section.⁷

English cases.—Where Lord Dacre agreed with several persons to hunt in another's park for deer, and to kill all who might resist, one of the party having killed the keeper, all were held to be guilty of the murder, though Lord Dacre was a quarter of a mile distant, and knew nothing of the individual blow.⁸

¹ Fateh Chand, (1922) 20 A. L. J. R. 706.

² Hari Bijal, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 906, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 118.

³ Harnam Singh, (1919) P. R. No. 21 of 1919.

⁴ Bahal Singh, (1918) P. R. No. 24 of 1919.

⁵ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 148, 162, 52 Cal. 197, P.C.; Said Nur, (1925) 1 L. C. 531, 536.

⁶ Allah Rakha, (1925) 2 L. C. 34.

⁷ Keahwar Lal Shaha v. Girish Chunder Dutt, (1902) 29 Cal. 496.

⁸ Dacre's case, Palm. 35, 1 Hale P. C. 439.

Three soldiers went together to rob an orchard, two got upon a pear tree and the third stood at the gate with a drawn sword in his hand. The owner's son coming by collared the man at the gate and asked him what business he had there, and thereupon the soldier stabbed him. It was held that he had committed murder, but not those on the tree. It would have been otherwise if they had all come thither with a general resolution against all opposers.¹ Two soldiers came at eleven o'clock at night to a publican's, and demanded beer, which he refused, alleging the unreasonableness of the hour; whereupon they went away uttering imprecations. Some time after one of them rushed in, the other remaining out, and renewed his demand for beer. On his refusing to depart the landlord pushed him towards the outer door where the other soldier gave the landlord a violent blow with a sharp instrument on the head. The landlord died after a few days. It was held that both the soldiers had committed murder, notwithstanding the previous struggle between the landlord and one of them.²

3. 'Each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.'—All who participate in the commission of an offence are severally responsible as though the offence had been committed by each of them acting alone; consequently each must be separately punished.³

Mere presence does not raise a presumption of complicity.—Although a man is present when a felony is committed, if he takes no part in it, and does not act in concert with those who commit it, he will not be a principal merely because he did not endeavour to prevent it, or to apprehend the felon. All who are present do not necessarily assist by their presence every act that is done in their presence, nor are consequently liable to be punished as principals.⁴ The mere circumstance of a person being present on a lawful occasion does not, therefore, raise a presumption of that person's complicity in an offence then committed.⁵

Amendment.—The words "in furtherance of the common intention of all" were introduced by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 1.

PRACTICE.

Calcutta Rule.—When several persons are accused of the commission of the same offence, it would be obviously inconvenient if a Magistrate were to punish some and commit others to the Court of Session; and, as the Code does not seem to contemplate such procedure, the Magistrate should, if he considers the case to be one for the Sessions, commit all those concerned for trial before that tribunal.⁶

35. Whenever an act, which is criminal only by reason of

When such an act is criminal by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention, its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention, is done by several persons, each of such persons who joins in the act with such knowledge or intention is liable for the act in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone with that knowledge or intention.

COMMENT.

This section follows as a corollary from s. 32. The legal consequences of an 'act' and of an 'omission' being the same, if an act is committed partly by an act and partly by an omission the consequences will be the same as if the offence was committed by an 'act' or by an 'omission' alone.

¹ Foster, 353.

² Willoughby, (1791) 1 East P. C. 233.

³ Amrita Lal Bose v. Corporation of Calcutta, (1917) 44 Cal. 1025.

⁴ Gora Chand Gopee, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 45, Beng. L. R., Sup. Vol., 443. See Conroy, (1882) 8 Q. B. D. 534.

⁵ Maganal and Motilal, (1889) 14 Bom. 115; Ganapathi Sarma, (1922) 17 L. W. 197; [1923] M. W. N. 104.

⁶ C. H. R. and O., Vol. I, Ch. 1, s. 40, p. 14.

The preceding section provided for a case in which a criminal act was done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all. Under this section a person assisting the accused, who actually performs the act, must be shown to have the particular intent or knowledge if the act is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention.

If several persons, having one and the same criminal intention or knowledge, jointly commit murder or an assault, each is liable for the offence as if he had acted alone; but if several persons join in an act, each having a different intention or knowledge from the others, each is liable according to his own criminal intention or knowledge, and he is not liable further.

If an act which is an offence in itself and without reference to any criminal knowledge or intention on the part of the doers is done by several persons, each of such persons is liable for the offence.

36. Wherever the causing of a certain effect, or an attempt to cause that effect, by an act or by an omission, is an offence, it is to be understood that the causing of that effect partly by an act and partly by an omission is the same offence.

Effect caused partly by act and partly by omission.

ILLUSTRATION.

A intentionally causes Z's death, partly by illegally omitting to give Z food, and partly by beating Z. A has committed murder.

37. When an offence is committed by means of several acts, whoever intentionally co-operates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of those acts, either singly or jointly with any other person, commits that offence.

Co-operation by doing one of several acts constituting an offence.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A and B agree to murder Z by severally and at different times giving him small doses of poison. A and B administer the poison according to the agreement with intent to murder Z. Z dies from the effects of the several doses of poison so administered to him. Here A and B intentionally co-operate in the commission of murder, and as each of them does an act by which the death is caused, they are both guilty of the offence though their acts are separate.

(b) A and B are joint jailors, and, as such, have the charge of Z, a prisoner, alternately for six hours at a time. A and B, intending to cause Z's death, knowingly omit to supply Z with food for the time Z dies of hunger. Both A and B are guilty of the murder of Z.

(c) A, a jailor, has the charge of Z, a prisoner. A, intending to cause Z's death, illegally omits to supply Z with food; in consequence of which Z is much weakened, but the omission is not sufficient to cause his death. A is not guilty of murder. B, without collusion or co-operation with A, knowing that he is likely thereby to cause Z's death, omits to supply Z with food, and is guilty of murder; but as A did not co-operate with B, A is guilty only of an attempt to commit murder.

COMMENT.

This section provides that, when several acts are done so as to result together in the commission of an offence, the doing of any one of them, with an intention to co-operate in the offence (which may not be the same as an intention common to all), makes the actor liable to be punished for the commission of the offence.¹

¹ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 118, 158, 52 Cal. 197, F.C.

This section follows as a corollary from s. 35 as will appear from the illustrations.

We have seen that if several persons combine both in intent and act, each is answerable for the joint criminal act just as if he alone had done it; and so it is if each person has his several part to do, the whole contributing to one result. It is immaterial what particular share is allotted to each, or whether the object be accomplished jointly by all present at the same time and place, or each performs his own part separately. Where all concur in effecting the criminal result, each does the act so far as his own part extends, and, as to the residue, may be regarded as causing it to be done by means of a guilty agent. All the persons concerned stand in the mutual relation of principals and agents to each other. If, for instance, several persons combine to forge an instrument and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are nevertheless all guilty as principals.¹ Where two persons are acting in concert in the sense that their attack on the deceased (with a heavy stick by the one, and with a heavy stone by the other) is a single indivisible thing, both of them are liable for the resultant murder.² Three persons, brothers, attacked with heavy sticks a fourth, against whom they bore a grudge, and beat him with great severity, so that he died shortly afterwards. His skull was badly fractured, and numerous other injuries were inflicted upon him. It did not appear which injuries were caused by which of the assailants, but the evidence showed that they were acting in concert and intended to cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death. It was held that all the three assailants were guilty of murder.³

Persons concerned in criminal act may be guilty of different offences.

38. Where several persons are engaged or concerned in the commission of a criminal act, they may be guilty of different offences by means of that act.

ILLUSTRATION.

A attacks Z under such circumstances of grave provocation that his killing of Z would be only culpable homicide not amounting to murder. B having ill-will towards Z and intending to kill him, and not having been subject to the provocation, assists A in killing Z. Here, though A and B are both engaged in causing Z's death, B is guilty of murder, and A is guilty only of culpable homicide.

COMMENT.

This section provides for different punishments for different offences as an alternative to one punishment for one offence, whether the persons engaged or concerned in the commission of a criminal act are set in motion by the one intention or by the other.⁴

Sections 34, 35 and 38 deal with the same subject and should be read together. Section 34 treats of acts done with a 'common intention,' s. 38 of acts done with different intentions. Thus it is the converse of s. 34. Under this section the act is not supposed to be done with a 'common intention.' A quarrel arose between C on the one side and A and B on the other. C abused A, whereupon A struck him with a stick, and B struck him down with an axe on the head. He also received two other wounds with the axe on other parts of the body. Any one of the three axe-wounds was sufficient to cause death, more especially that on the head. It was held that B was guilty of culpable homicide, while A was guilty of voluntarily causing hurt.⁵

¹ John Bingley, (1821) R. & R. 446.

² Subbappa Channappa, (1912) 15 Bom. L. R. 303, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 64.

³ Ram Newaz, (1913) 35 All. 506.

⁴ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 148, 158, 52 Cal. 197, F.C.

⁵ Indar, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 23.

Sections 34 to 38 lay down principles similar to the English law of "principals in the first and second degrees" See Comment on s. 107, infra.

39. A person is said to cause an effect "voluntarily" when he causes it by means¹ whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it.

ILLUSTRATION.

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating robbery, and thus causes the death of a person. Here, A may not have intended to cause death, and may even be sorry that death has been caused by his act; yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily.

COMMENT.

The word 'voluntarily' is defined in relation to the causation of effects and not to the doing of acts from which those effects result. It has been given a peculiar meaning, differing widely from its ordinary meaning, in the Code.

In general, the Code makes no distinction between cases in which a man causes an effect designedly and cases in which he causes it knowingly or having reason to believe that he is likely to cause it. If the effect is a probable consequence of the means used by him he causes it 'voluntarily,' whether he really meant to cause it or not. He is not allowed to urge that he did not know or was not sure that the consequence would follow; but he must answer for it just as if he had intended to cause it. The English law by means of an artificial presumption, viz., that a man is presumed to intend the natural or probable consequences of his own act, gives to the words which denote intention the meaning here annexed to 'voluntarily'.¹ See s 81, infra.

The definition of the term 'voluntarily' bears resemblance to the definition of 'wilfully,' current in the English law.

An injury shall be deemed to be 'wilfully' caused whensoever the person from whose act or omission such injury results, either directly intended it to result from his act or omission, or believing that it was in any degree probable that such injury would result from his act or omission, incurred the risk of causing such injury.²

"The principle of exemption from criminal responsibility in respect of a hurtful consequence is that of bona fide ignorance of the connexion existing between the mere mechanical act and its consequence. That principle ceases to operate where the connexion is known to be either certain or probable. If the doer of an act know or believe that a noxious consequence will result from that act, he is just as culpable both in law and morals as if he had acted with the most direct intention to hurt. Let it however be supposed that the consequence is not certain, but that it is a likely or probable consequence, and that the likelihood or probability is known to the doer of the act. Here again it is clear that the principle of exemption above mentioned is unavailable to exempt the offender from liability in respect of the consequence. All he can urge is, that he was not sure that the hurtful consequence would follow; but he had no right to incur the risk and danger of producing the mischief, and he is liable for it; the penalty may justly, after due notification, doom such an offender to the penalties inflicted on those who accomplished their purposes by more certain or direct means; the safety of society is inconsistent with any distinction in this respect, and the offender in truth acted wilfully, in wilfully incurring the risk and danger of causing the injurious result."³

¹ M. & M. 21.
² 10th P. R. 16

³ English Law Commissioners' 7th Rep. p. 23, cited in First Rep., s. 106.

1. "Means."—This word signifies acts as well as omissions.

40. Except in the chapter and sections mentioned in clauses two and three of this section the word "offence"¹ denotes a thing made punishable² by this Code.

In Chapter IV, Chapter V-A and in the following sections, namely:—sections 64, 65, 66, 67, 71, 109, 110, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 187, 194, 195, 203, 211, 213, 214, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 347, 348, 388, 389 and 445 the word "offence" denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law as hereinafter defined:

And in sections 141, 176, 177, 201, 202, 212, 216 and 441 the word "offence" has the same meaning when the thing punishable under the special or local law is punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine.

COMMENT.

The word 'offence' as defined in this section has three sets of meaning, as explained in the three clauses of this section.

1. 'Offence.'—This word does not extend to acts punishable under the law of England. Stokes says that the Code is defective in not declaring that in certain sections (e.g., 216, 221, 224, 225), 'offence' shall include acts and omissions punishable by the law of England.

2. 'A thing made punishable.'—In Moorga Chetty's case,¹ West, J., remarked: "If verbal criticism is to have a preponderating influence, I may observe that there is an inaccuracy in section 40 'A thing,' meaning an act or omission, is not susceptible of punishment. What is meant is 'a thing for which he who is guilty of it is punishable.'" The term 'a thing' is a rather unhappy substitute for what it seems to mean—"an aggregate of acts and omissions."² A 'thing' must be an act, or a series of illegal acts, or an illegal omission, or a series of illegal omissions; or, to use the words of Mr. Bentham "we give the name of offence to every act which we think ought to be prohibited by reason of some evil which it produces or tends to produce."

'Punishable' must mean that the commission or omission of the act, the commission or omission of which is prohibited, renders the person who commits or omits it liable to the sanction of the law, i.e., to punishment.³ This word is here used according to a common idiom for "rendering a person liable to punishment"; for it is obvious that in the strict and primary usage of the word nothing is punishable; and no person since Xerxes, except a child with his doll, has ever supposed otherwise. The expression, therefore, is incomplete.⁴ The words 'made punishable' must be interpreted as meaning recognized as or "declared punishable."⁵ 'A thing made punishable' is no doubt an inaccurate expression; but 'punishable' is here used in a sense which is popularly familiar in the expression "a punishable offence," that is, "an offence to which a punishment is attached"; and the words 'a thing made punishable' mean an act or omission; which by this Code is constituted one to which a punishment is attached.⁶

¹ (1851) 5 Bom. 338, 333.

² Per Collett, J., (1866) 3 M. H. C. App.

11, 17.

³ Per Duthoit, J., in Kandkai, (1884) 7 All. 67, 71.

⁴ Per Holloway, J., (1866) 3 M. H. C. App. 11, 12.

⁵ Per Collett, J., in ibid. 15.

⁶ Per Innes, J., in ibid. 20, 21.

Order under s 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code—Such an order does not come within the definition of an offence.¹

Maintenance order.—An order for payment of maintenance is not a conviction for an offence.²

Proceeding under s 23 of the Public Conveyances Act.—A proceeding to recover legal fare under s 28 of the Bombay Public Conveyances Act 1867, is not a complaint for an offence.³

Attempt.—An attempt to commit an offence is itself an offence within the definition of 'offence' as given in this section.⁴

Abetment.—The abetment of an offence is in itself an offence within the meaning of this section.⁵

Amendment.—This section was substituted for the original s. 40 by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 2. The figures 64, 65, 66 and 71 were inserted by Act VIII of 1882, s. 1; and the figure 67 by Act X of 1886, s. 21. The term 'offence' is thus, under any special or local law. The word, figure and letter 41. A "special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject.

COMMENT.

Whenever there is an intention to apply the provisions of the criminal law to acts authorized or required by particular statutes, that intention is always made clear by express words to that effect, e.g., the Income-tax Act,⁶ the Land Acquisition Act,⁷ etc.⁸

The special laws contemplated in s. 40 and this section are only laws, such as the Excise, Opium, and Cattle Trespass Acts, creating fresh offences, that is, laws making punishable certain things which are not already punishable under the Penal Code. The Whipping Act is not a special law in this sense; it creates no fresh offences, but merely provides a supplementary or alternative form of punishment for offences which are already punishable primarily under the Penal Code.⁹

42. A "local law" is a law applicable only to a particular part of British India.

COMMENT.

Laws applicable to particular localities are termed local laws. e.g., Port Trust Acts. A local law does not necessarily include all rules made under the provisions of a local law.¹⁰

43. The word "illegal" is applicable to everything which is an offence or which is prohibited by law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action¹; and a person is said to be "legally bound to do" whatever it is illegal in him to omit.

¹ Kandhava, (1884) 7 All. 67, 69; Shasti Churn Napti, (1882) 8 Cal. 331.

² Ponnammal, (1892) 16 Mad. 234; Golam Hossain Chowdhry, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr) 10; Thaku bin Ira, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 81.

³ Vallu Mitha, (1919) 22 Bom. L. R. 195.

⁴ Ajudhia, (1895) 17 All. 120.

⁵ Spier, (1897) P. R. No. 49 of 1887.

⁶ II of 1887, ss. 35, 37.

⁷ I of 1894, s. 10.

⁸ Chandi Perahad v. Abdur Rahman, (1894) 22 Cal. 131, 139.

⁹ Po Han, (1913) 7 L. B. R. 63.

¹⁰ Ganda Shah, (1894) P. R. No. 23 of 1894.

COMMENT.

The word "illegal" has been given a very wide meaning as it includes (1) everything which is an offence; (2) everything which is prohibited by law; and (3) everything which furnishes ground for a civil action. The prohibition in the second case must be legal. The accused submitted to his official superior a false 'nil' return of lands in his enjoyment, and also made a false statement to the same effect in a revenue inquiry. It was held that no offence had been committed as the act of the accused was not 'illegal'.¹ He was doubtless guilty of a breach of a departmental order, but he was not legally bound to furnish such information within the meaning of this section. Suppose an official is bound by the rules of his superior to be at his office at 10 A.M., and to enter his name in a book kept for that purpose: he falsely enters his arrival at 10 when he in fact arrived at 11 o'clock; can it be said that he has committed an offence? Certainly not. A breach of a departmental order is not a criminal offence.

The words 'illegal' and 'unlawful' have the same meaning under the Code.*

1. 'Which furnishes ground for a civil action.'—"These appear wide words, but we think it would be difficult to restrict them without the risk of excluding something that ought to be included. Generally we apprehend it will be found unobjectionable to designate as illegal any thing done or omitted to be done by a man for which he is liable to a civil action."²

44. The word "injury" denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person, in body, mind, reputation or property.¹

COMMENT.

"Injury" is an act contrary to law.⁴ Thus an unlawful detention of a cart at a toll-gate caused by an illegal demand for payment of toll amounts to injury.⁵ Threat of a decree which can never be given effect to is a threat of harm to an individual in his person, reputation, or property.⁶ The word 'injury' has been given a wide meaning in this section. It will include every tortious act.

1. 'Property.'—This word here means something in existence and it cannot, with any propriety, be applied to the reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit for the loss of which an action is maintainable by the representatives of a deceased person.⁷ Where the accused took away the complainant's cattle and declined to release them until he was paid a certain sum and on the receipt of that sum he released them, it was held that he caused 'injury' to the complainant.⁸

Death of husband is not an 'injury' to wife.—A Magistrate imposed a fine in addition to a sentence of imprisonment on a conviction for the offence of causing death by a rash and negligent act and gave compensation to the widow of the deceased out of the fine imposed. It was held that compensation could not be given to her for she did not suffer any injury as here defined.⁹ The Court said: "If the claim of the widow in such a case as the present is maintainable, it must follow that the master of a servant, who has been disabled or put in wrongful confinement, may equally apply for compensation to be paid out of the fine inflicted on the offender." It may, however, be argued that nothing could be more harmful to the mind of a woman than the death of her husband and the section speaks of

¹ Appayya, (1891) 14 Mad. 484. Vira-sami Mudali, (1881) 4 Mad. 144, dissented from.

² See 1st Rep., s. 658.

³ Ibid., s. 91.

⁴ Srami Nayudu v. Subramania Mudali, (1894) 2 M. H. C. 158.

⁵ Appalasami, (1892) 1 Weir 441.

⁶ Priyanath Gupta, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 479.

⁷ Yalla Gangulu v. Mamidi Dali, (1897) 21 Mad. 74, 76, re re.

⁸ Habibul Razzak, (1923) 21 A.L.J.R. 860.

⁹ Yalla Gangulu v. Mamidi Dali, sup.; Lutchmaka, (1889) 12 Mad. 352; Abdul Rahiman, (1895) Cr. R. No. 26 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 763.

harm to the mind as 'injury.' And it has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab that loss of her husband's support affects a widow prejudicially in a legal right, and is therefore an injury as defined in the Penal Code.¹

'False charge is an injury.'—A false charge laid before the Police, and never intended to be prosecuted in a Court, may subject the accused to very substantial injury, as here defined.²

45. The word "life" denotes the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

46. The word "death" denotes the death of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

47. The word "animal" denotes any living creature, other than a human being.

COMMENT.

This definition is, according to Sir James Stephen, not only superfluous but of doubtful correctness. It will include an angel, frog-spawn, and probably a tree.

48. The word "vessel" denotes anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or of property.

49. Wherever the word "year" or the word "month" is used, it is to be understood that the year or the month is to be reckoned according to the British Calendar.

COMMENT.

A year is the time wherein the sun goes around his compass through the twelve signs, or the period in which the revolution of the earth round the sun is completed, viz, 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 51.6 seconds. For ordinary purposes the average length of a year is taken to be 365 days. But every fourth year the extra hours are taken into account and the statute 24 Geo. II., c. 25, enacts that the year shall consist of 366 days. The fourth year is called the leap year. By statute 31 Hen. III., the increasing day in the leap year, as well as the preceding day, are counted for one day only. The 1st January is the first day of the year by statute 24 Geo. II., c. 23; before that enactment the 25th March was the first day of the year.

The day on which a sentence is passed on a prisoner is calculated as a whole day. A person sentenced to imprisonment for the space of one calendar month is entitled to be discharged on the day in the succeeding month immediately preceding the day corresponding to that from which his sentence takes effect.³ On the 31st October the prisoner was sentenced to be imprisoned for one offence for one calendar month, and for a second offence for a period of fourteen days, commencing after the expiration of the calendar month. Pursuant to his sentence, he was detained in custody until the 14th of December. It was held that the detention was lawful, for as the calendar month did not expire until the 30th of November, he was not entitled to be discharged from the second term of imprisonment until

¹ Saif Ali, (1898) P. R. No. 17 of 1898, F.R.

² Ashraf Ali, (1879) 5 Cal. 281, 282

³ Micotti v. Coltell, (1879) 4 C. P. D. 233.

the full period of fourteen days computed from the 1st of December had expired. Denman, J., said: "I am of opinion that a sentence of imprisonment for one calendar month, passed on any given day of any given month, is to be held to begin to run from the first moment of that day, and to expire upon arriving at the first moment of the corresponding day in the succeeding month. If there be no such corresponding day by reason of the succeeding month not having so many days as the preceding month, then by analogy to the law established in the case of bills of exchange, I think the calendar month should be held to have expired at the last moment of its last day, but as long as there is a day in the calendar numerically corresponding from which the sentence begins to run, so that it is unnecessary to trench upon the succeeding month, I see no ground for anticipating the expiration of the sentence."¹

50. The word "section" denotes one of those portions of a chapter of this Code which are distinguished by prefixed numeral figures.

51. The word "oath" includes a solemn affirmation substituted by law for an oath, and any declaration required or authorized by law to be made before a public servant or to be used for the purpose of proof, whether in a Court of Justice or not.

COMMENT.

An 'oath' is a religious asseveration, by which a person renounces the mercy, and imprecates the vengeance of Heaven if he do not speak the truth.²

The Indian Oaths Act substitutes affirmation for an oath in the case of Hindus and Mahomedans. If oath is objected to then affirmation is admissible in other cases.³

52. Nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith which is done or believed without due care and attention.

COMMENT.

The definition of good faith given here is merely a negative one. It does not define 'good faith.' It says that an act is only done in good faith if it is done with due care and attention.

According to the General Clauses Act,⁴ "A thing shall be deemed to be done in 'good faith' where it is in fact done honestly whether it is done negligently or not." This definition is borrowed from an English statute,⁵ and it differs materially from that contained in the Penal Code. Under the Code definition the question of honesty is immaterial.

Good faith requires not logical infallibility, but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed to want of due care and caution must, in each case, be considered with reference to the general circum-

¹ Migotti v. Colvill, (1879) 4 C. P. D. 233, 236.

² White, (1786) 1 Leach 430.

³ Act X of 1873, s. 6.

⁴ X of 1897, s. 3 (20).

⁵ The definition corresponds exactly with s. 90 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1832, 45 & 46 Vic., c. 61, which is founded on the distinction pointed out in Jones v. Gordon, (1877) 47 L. J. Bank. 1, 2 App. Cas. 818, by Lord

Blackburn, between the case of a person who was honestly blundering and careless, and the case of a person who has acted not honestly, that is, not necessarily with the intention to defraud, but not with an honest belief that the transaction was a valid one, and that he was dealing with a good Bill. The Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vic., c. 71), s. 62, gives a similar definition.

stances and the capacity and intelligence of the person, whose conduct is in question.¹

The question of good faith must be considered with reference to the position of the accused and the circumstances under which he acted. The law does not exact the same care and attention from all persons regardless of the position they occupy.²

Where a Police constable after questioning a person, who was carrying three bundles of cloth under his arms, and receiving unsatisfactory replies, arrested him, stolen the horse, or had purchased it from the thief. He found that B had bought the animal from one S; so he sent for S and charged him with the theft without taking the trouble of getting any credible information as to whether it was his father's horse or not. It was held that he had acted without exercising due care and attention.³ The accused who was an educated man living in a town where medical assistance was available chained up his brother, who was subject to fits of violent insanity with lucid intervals, for over three months in an unnecessarily cruel way, it was held that he did not act with due care and attention.⁴

Mere good faith in the sense of simple belief, actual belief, with any grounds for believing, is not sufficient: the belief must be a reasonable, not an absurd, belief, that is, there must be some reasonable ground for it. Good faith in act or belief requires due care and attention to the matter in hand. The law cannot mark, except in this vague way, the amount of care and attention requisite; but if a man takes upon himself an office or duty requiring skill or care, and a question arises whether he has acted therein in good faith, he must show not merely a good intention, but such care and skill as the duty reasonably demands for its due discharge. The degree of care requisite will vary with the degree of danger which may result from the want of care. Where the peril is the greatest the greatest caution is necessary.⁵

Where a person, uneducated in matters of surgery, operated on a man for internal piles by cutting them out with an ordinary knife, and the man died from hæmorrhage, it was held that he had not acted in good faith although he had performed similar operations on previous occasions.⁶

he discovered a section that is,

¹ Abdool Wadood Ahmed, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 230, 31 Bom 293.

² Bhawoo Jivaji v. Mulji Dayal, (1888) 12 Bom. 377, 393.

³ Sheo Surun Sahai v. Mohomed Fazil Khan, (1868) 10 W. R. 20.

⁴ Shimkhu Narain, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 391.

⁵ M. & M.

⁶ Sukaroo Kobiraj, (1887) 14 Cal. 568.

⁷ Hayat, (1887) F. R. No. 11 of 1888.

CHAPTER III.

OF PUNISHMENTS.

Punishments. 53. The punishments to which offenders are liable under the provisions of this Code are,—

First,—Death ;

Secondly,—Transportation ;

Thirdly,—Penal servitude ;

Fourthly,—Imprisonment, which is of two descriptions, namely :—

(1) Rigorous, that is, with hard labour.

(2) Simple.

Fifthly,—Forfeiture of property ;

Sixthly,—Fine.

COMMENT.

“The determination of the right measure of punishment is often a point of great difficulty. Hard-and-fast rules cannot be laid down, but the decision must be left to discretion, and discretion has to be guided by a variety of considerations.

There is the element of vindictiveness, which cannot be left out of sight, notwithstanding what has been said by Plato on the subject. Both personal and public sentiment demand that the person who has made others suffer unjustly, should himself be made to suffer in return. This is quite distinct from the moral side of an act with which properly the Courts have nothing to do. Their concern is solely with the nature of the act viewed as a crime or breach of the law. The law indicates the gravity of the act by the maximum penalty provided for its punishment and the Courts have to judge whether the act committed falls short of the maximum degree of gravity, and, if so, by how much.

The principal object of punishment, however, is the prevention of offences, and the measure of punishment must, consequently, vary from time to time according to the prevalence of a particular form of crime and other circumstances. An amount of severity may be very appropriate at one time which would be quite uncalled for at another.

It may generally be taken as a safe principle to follow, that punishments should be made as moderate as is consistent with the object aimed at. Punishment in excess is apt to defeat its own object, and to produce a reaction of popular feeling, as experience shows. To shut a man up in prison longer than is really necessary is not only bad for the man himself, but is a useless piece of cruelty, and economically wasteful and a source of loss to the community.”¹

To the six kinds of punishments mentioned in the section two more are added by subsequent enactments, viz., whipping and detention in reformatories. In the Madras Presidency the punishment of stocks is inflicted on offenders of lower castes.²

1. Death.—The authors of the Code say : “We are convinced that it ought to be very sparingly inflicted, and we propose to employ it only in cases where either murder or the highest offence against the State has been committed...To the great majority of mankind nothing is so dear as life. And we are of opinion that to put robbers, ravishers and mutilators on the same footing with murderers is an arrangement which diminishes the security of life... Those offences are almost always committed under such circumstances that the offender has it in his power to add murder to his guilt... As he has almost always the power to murder, he will often have a strong motive to murder, inasmuch as by murder he may often hope to remove the only witness of the crime which he has already committed. If the punishment of the crime which he has already committed be exactly the same with the punishment of murder, he will have no restraining motive. A law which imprisons for rape and robbery, and hangs for murder, holds out to ravishers and robbers a strong inducement to spare the lives of those whom they have injured. A law which hangs for rape and robbery, and which only hangs for murder, holds out no inducement, if it be rigorously applied into effect, a strong motive to deter men from Death is the punishment that must be awarded for murder by a person under sentence of transportation (s. 303). It may be awarded as punishment for the following offences only :—(1) Waging war against the King (s. 121). (2) Abetting mutiny actually committed (s. 132). (3) Giving or fabricating false evidence upon which an innocent person suffers death (s. 191). (4) Murder (s. 302). (5) Abetment of suicide of a minor or insane, or intoxicated person (s. 305) (6) Dacoity accompanied with murder (s. 396). (7) Attempt to murder by a person under sentence of transportation, if hurt is caused (s. 307).

¹ Per Burgess, J. C., in Nga Ku, (1897) * Mad. Reg. XI of 1816, s. 10.
² I U. B. R. (1897-1901) 330, 335.

2. Transportation.—The authors of the Code observe: “The consideration which has chiefly determined us to retain that mode of punishment is our persuasion that it is regarded by the Natives of India, particularly by those who live at a distance from the sea, with peculiar fear. The pain which is caused by punishment is unmixed evil. It is by the terror which it inspires that it produces good; and perhaps no punishment inspires so much terror in proportion to the actual pain which it causes as the punishment of transportation in this country. Prolonged imprisonment may be more painful in the actual endurance; but it is not so much dreaded beforehand; nor does a sentence of imprisonment strike either the offender or the bystanders with so much horror as a sentence of exile beyond what they call the Black Water. This feeling, we believe, arises chiefly from the mystery which overhangs the fate of the transported convict. The separation resembles that which takes place at the moment of death. The criminal is taken for ever from the society of all who are acquainted with him, and conveyed by means of which the Natives have but an indistinct notion over an element which they regard with extreme awe, to a distant country of which they know nothing, and from which he is never to return. It is natural that his fate should impress them with a deep feeling of terror. It is on this feeling that the efficacy of the punishment depends, and this feeling would be greatly weakened if transported convicts should frequently return, after an exile of seven or fourteen years, to the scene of their offences, and to the society of their former friends.”² any term under ss. 121-A (conspiracy to wage war) and 124-A (sedition). Except in the case of these two offences transportation prescribed is for life.

Age, sex and infirmities, combined with various other circumstances and considerations may frequently render the exercise of a discretion in substituting a moderate sentence of imprisonment for one of transportation.³

The Government of Bombay in virtue of a resolution of the Government of India have issued a resolution saying “Instructions should be issued to the prison authorities and the Court should be informed that as far as possible deportation to the Andamans will cease."¹

¹ Note A, p. 93.

² Ibid., p. 94.

³ 7 Parl. Rep. p. 93.

3. Penal servitude.—The punishment of penal servitude, which is a substitute for transportation, is applicable only to Europeans and Americans² under Act XXIV of 1855 which is based on 16 & 17 Vic., c. 99. The word 'European,' as used in this Act, shall be understood to include any person usually designated a European British subject.³ "By reason of the difficulty of providing a place to which Europeans or Americans can, with safety to their health, be sent for the purpose of undergoing sentences of transportation or of imprisonment for long terms, it has become expedient to substitute other punishment for that of transportation."⁴

Penal servitude is a punishment which consists in keeping an offender in confinement and compelling him to labour. Persons sentenced to penal servitude are, during the term of the sentence, confined in such prison within British India as the Government of India directs, and kept to hard labour.⁵

See the Penal Servitude Act (XXIV of 1855) set out in the Appendix.

4. Imprisonment.—Imprisonment is of two kinds: rigorous and simple. In the case of rigorous imprisonment the offender is put to hard labour, such as grinding corn, digging earth, drawing water, cutting fire-wood, bowing wool, etc. In the case of simple imprisonment the offender is confined to jail and is not put to any kind of work. Where the Code provides that an offender shall be punished with imprisonment "and shall also be liable to fine," the sentence should include some period of imprisonment, whatever it may be.⁶ The definition of 'imprisonment' applies in the case of all Acts of the Governor-General in Council made after the 3rd January 1868, and of all Regulations under the Government of India Act, 1870,⁷ made after the 14th January 1887.⁸

The authors of the Code had, in many cases not heinous, fixed a minimum as well as a maximum punishment. The Committee were of opinion that, considering the general terms in which offences were defined, it would be inexpedient, in most cases, to fix a minimum punishment; and they had accordingly so altered the Code as to leave the minimum punishment for all offences, except those of the gravest nature, to the discretion of the Judge who would have the means in each case of forming an opinion as to the character of the offender, and the circumstances whether aggravating or mitigating, under which the offence had been committed. But with respect to some heinous offences—such as offences against the State, murder, attempt to commit murder, and the like—they had thought it right to fix a minimum punishment.⁹ Circumstances which are properly and expressly recognized by the law as aggravations calling for increased severity of punishment are principally such as consist in the manner in which the offence is perpetrated; whether it be by forcible or fraudulent means, or by aid of accomplices, or in the malicious motive by which the offender was actuated, or the consequences to the public or to individual sufferers, or the special necessity which exists in particular cases for counteracting the temptation to offend, arising from the degree of expected gratification, or the facility of perpetration peculiar to the case. These considerations naturally include a number of particulars, as of time, place, persons and things, varying according to the nature of the case.¹⁰

¹ Government of Bombay Resolution H.D. No. 4568, dated May 7, 1921. Government of India Resolution, Home Department (Jails), No. 101, dated March 30, 1921.

² Duma Baidya, (1896) 19 Mad. 483, 485.

³ Act XXIV of 1855, s. 15.

⁴ Ibid. Preamble.

⁵ The Prisoners Act (V of 1871), s. 21.

⁶ Chanvova Shidram, (1863) 1 B. H. O. 4; Rama bin Rabbaji, (1863) 1 B. H. C. 34;

Bakirji bin Krishnaji, (1863) 1 B. H. C. 39; Menazoodin, (1864) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 33; Sheikh Dullao v. Zainah Bebee, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 17; Bayne, (1896) 8 Bom. L. R. 414, 416.

⁷ 33 Vic., c. 3, s. 1.

⁸ See the General Clauses Act, X of 1897, ss. 3 (26) and 4 (1) and (2).

⁹ P. L. C. (1856), p. 718.

¹⁰ 7 Parl. Rep. p. 93.

10

(11) Uttering any word, or making any sound or gesture, with an intention to insult the modesty of a woman (s. 509).

(12) Misconduct in a public place by a drunken person (s. 510).

5. Forfeiture.—Absolute forfeiture of property was a punishment inflicted on persons guilty of high political offences. It could also be inflicted on persons guilty of offences punishable with death. It has now been abolished by Act XVI of 1921.

In England this punishment was abolished by 33 & 34 Vic., c. 23, s. 1. In America too it was done away with.

Forfeiture of specific property is still retained as a punishment in the following cases:—

(1) Whoever commits, or prepares to commit, depredation on the territories of any power at peace with the King, shall be liable, in addition to other punishments, to forfeiture of any property used, or intended to be used, in depredation, or acquired thereby (s. 126).

(2) Whoever knowingly receives property taken as above mentioned or in waging war against any Asiatic power at peace with the King, shall be liable to forfeit such property (s. 127).

(3) A public servant, who improperly purchases property, which, by virtue of his office, he is legally prohibited from purchasing, forfeits such property (s. 169).

6. Fine.—"Death, imprisonment, transportation, banishment, solitude, compelled labour, are not, indeed, equally disagreeable to all men. But they are so disagreeable to all men that the legislature, in assigning these punishments to offences, may safely neglect the differences produced by temper and situation. With fine, the case is different. In imposing a fine, it is always necessary to have as much regard to the pecuniary circumstances of the offender as to the character and magnitude of the offence. The mulct which is ruinous to a labourer is easily borne by a tradesman, and is absolutely unfelt by a rich zemindar...Punishment of fine is a peculiarly appropriate punishment for all offences to which men are prompted by cupidity; for it is a punishment which operates directly on the very feeling which impels men to such offences. A man who has been guilty of...forging a bill of exchange, for example, of keeping a receptacle for stolen goods, or of extensive embezzlement, ought...to be so fined as to reduce him to poverty."¹

Fine is the only punishment in the following cases:—

(1) Unlimited—

(a) The person for whose benefit a riot has been committed, not having duly endeavoured to prevent it (s. 155).

(b) The agent or manager of such person under the like circumstances (s. 156).

(c) False statement in connection with an election (s. 171-G).

(2) Limited to Rs. 1,000—

(a) The owner or occupier of land on which a riot or unlawful assembly is held, and any person having or claiming any interest in such land, and not using all lawful means to prevent such riot or unlawful assembly, is punishable with fine not exceeding Rs. 1,000 (s. 154).

(b) Whoever publishes any proposal to pay any sum or to deliver any thing to any person for doing anything for the benefit of any such lottery, shall be punished with fine not exceeding Rs. 1,000 (s. 294-A).

¹ Note A., pp. 97, 98.

(3) Limited to Rs. 500—

(a) A person in charge of a merchant vessel, negligently allowing a deserter from the Army or Navy to obtain concealment in such

(b)

(c) Illegal payments in connection with an election (s. 171-II).

(d) Failure to keep election accounts (s. 171-I).

(4) Limited to Rs. 200—

(a) Offences relating to fictitious statements

(b)

(c) Committing of a public nuisance, not otherwise punishable, is punishable with fine not exceeding Rs. 200 (s. 290).

When payment of a fine or fee is ordered to be made jointly by several persons convicted together, it may be recovered from all or any of them, and, if payment made by one is nullified by the reversal of the order as to him, the liability of all and each of the others revives, as what was done subject to appeal was but provisional or subject to a condition subsequent.¹

7. Whipping.—This form of punishment is added by the Whipping Act² under which offenders are liable to whipping—

(a) As an alternative punishment when offences under ss. 378, 380, 382, 443, 444, 445 and 446 of the Penal Code are committed.

(b) As an alternative or additional punishment when offences under ss. 375, 377, 390 and 391 of the Penal Code are committed.

(c) When they are juvenile offenders and commit certain offences specified in s. 5 of the Whipping Act.

It should be employed at the discretion of the Judge in all cases in which the offence involves cruelty in the way of inflicting pain, or in which the offender's motive is lust. The man who cruelly inflicts pain on another should be made to feel what it is like. The man who gratifies his own passions at the expense of a cruel and humiliating insult inflicted on another should be himself shamefully and painfully humiliated.

Whipping should be inflicted in cases where there is a certain amount of aggravation in the commission of the offence.³

Concurrent sentences of whipping are illegal.⁴

In France, Germany, and the United States corporal punishment has been abolished.

8. Detention in Reformatories.—Juvenile offenders sentenced to transportation or imprisonment may be sentenced to, and detained in, a Reformatory School for a period of three to seven years.⁵

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Death.—When any person is sentenced to death, the sentence shall direct that he be hanged by the neck till he is dead.⁶ When a sentence of death passed by a Court of Session is submitted to the High Court for confirmation, such Court of Session shall, on receiving the order of confirmation or other order of the High Court thereon, cause such order to be carried into effect by issuing a warrant or taking such other steps as may be necessary.⁷ If a woman sentenced to death is before pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the ¹ Rathnagiri Magistrate's Letter, (1875) Unrep. Cr. C. 90.

² Act IV of 1909. See the Appendix where it is set out in full. In Upper Burma, see the Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. 3 (b) and the second Schedule; in the Punjab Frontier Districts, in the North-West Frontier Province and Baluchistan, see the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6 and 12 (2).

³ Pr. Cr. R. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

⁷ Id., s. 381.

sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life.¹

Transportation.—No sentence of transportation shall specify the place to which the person sentenced is to be transported.² The Governor-General in Council is empowered to fix places in British India to which persons sentenced to transportation may be sent. It is the duty of the local Government to make arrangements for the removal of such person.³

Imprisonment.—A sentence of imprisonment cannot be suspended to take effect at a future period, but must commence from the time that the sentence is passed. Where a Deputy Magistrate postponed the execution of a sentence of imprisonment for a stated period at the request of the accused, to allow him to appeal, it was held that the sentence was bad in law and could not be carried into execution.⁴

Bombay Circular.—When any person serving in the Military Department is convicted in a criminal Court, such Court shall inform the Officer Commanding the Regiment or Corps to which the convict belongs.⁵

When a Military pensioner is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment in a criminal Court, the facts of the case should be reported, without delay, to the Controller of Military Accounts of the Circle to which the pensioner belongs.⁶

When a reservist of the Native Army is sentenced by a criminal Court to transportation or imprisonment for any term exceeding three months, the facts of the case should be reported, without delay, by such Court to the Adjutant-General in India (vide Bom. Gov. Gaz. for 1895, Part I, p. 853).⁷

Patna Circular.—(a) Sessions Judges and Magistrates will forward to the Military Department of the Government of India a copy of the conviction and sentence in all cases in which persons serving under the Government of India in that Department are convicted in a criminal Court.

(b) In the case of a reservist of the Native Army who may be sentenced by a criminal Court to transportation or imprisonment for any term exceeding three months, a report should be made to the Adjutant-General, India (Home Department letter No. 220, Judicial, dated 18th—25th February 1910).⁸

Burma Rule.—Imprisonment for a fraction of a day should not be awarded unless it is the only period that can legally be imposed. There is, however, no objection to a sentence of imprisonment until the rising of the Court, where only a nominal sentence is called for. Whilst it is recognized that in a certain number of cases no other method of punishment than a short term of imprisonment can be imposed and although it is not desired to infringe in any way upon the discretionary powers possessed by Magistrates in sentencing offenders, upon Magistrates are impressed the evils arising from sentencing offenders to short terms of imprisonment. As the moral effect of prison life is generally bad while the associations are degrading and the loss of character and self-respect involved in even the shortest term of incarceration is difficult to recover and often tends to create a criminal, other orders, such as the imposing of a fine or whipping, the taking of security under s. 562, Code of Criminal Procedure, or the allowing of offenders under s. 358 to collect the amount of the fines imposed upon them, may suitably be passed. Second and Third Class Magistrates should make use of the provisions of s. 349 by sending the accused before the District Magistrate or the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to receive a punishment different in kind from or more severe than that which can be imposed by them.⁹

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 332.

² Ibid., s. 368 (2).

³ Section 33 of the Prisoners Act V of 1871, as substituted by s. 2 of Act IX of 1882.

⁴ Kishen Soonder Bhattacharye, (1860) 12

W. R. (Cr.) 47.

⁵ B. H. C. Cr. C., Ch. V, s. 97, p. 60.

⁶ B. H. C. Cr. C., Ch. V, s. 98, p. 60.

⁷ B. H. C. Cr. C., Ch. V, s. 99, p. 60.

⁸ Pat. H. C. Cr. C., para 59, p. 22.

⁹ L. B. C. M. Vol. I, s. 283, p. 59.

To assist the Courts in deciding when sentences of simple imprisonment may fitly be passed, the following orders of the Government of India are reproduced:—

"It has been brought to notice that in one province at least it is a common practice for the Courts to pass a sentence of simple imprisonment, not because a minor degree of moral turpitude is involved in the crime committed, but in view of the prisoner's presumed unfitness for labour. The Government of India believe that it is not the practice for the Courts to take into consideration any question of the physical fitness of a convict to labour. It is for the jail authorities to ascertain what labour is appropriate to a prisoner's strength and to put him to that only; the Courts have merely to consider the amount and nature of the imprisonment appropriate to the offence, and the character and status of the offender, and they should realize that by selecting simple instead of rigorous imprisonment they make a very essential difference in the way in which a prisoner will be treated on his admission to jail."¹

Fine.—A sentence of fine where more prisoners than one prisoner are punished by fine must define by a specific sum the individual liability of each prisoner.²

Whipping.—As to the mode of executing this sentence, see ss. 390-396 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

54. In every case in which sentence of death shall have been passed, the Government of India or the Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for any other punishment provided by this Code.

Commutation of sentence of death.

COMMENT.

See the observations of the authors of the Code set out under the next section. This section empowers the Government to commute the sentence of death "for any other punishment provided by this Code," but s. 402 of the Criminal Procedure Code limits this power as it says that the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government may, without the consent of the person sentenced, commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it:—death, transportation, penal servitude, rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding that to which he might have been sentenced, simple imprisonment for a like term, fine.

Postponement of capital sentence on a pregnant woman.—Section 382 of the Criminal Procedure Code says: "If a woman sentenced to death is found to be pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life."

55. In every case in which sentence of transportation for life shall have been passed, the Government of India or the Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding fourteen years.

Commutation of sentence of transportation for life.

COMMENT.

The authors of the Code say: "It is evidently fit that the Government should be empowered to commute the sentence of death for any other punishment provided by the Code. It seems to us also very desirable that the Government should have ¹ Home Department Resolution No. 4 C. M., Vol. I, s. 283, p. 80 (Jade), 183-194, dated 4th April 1839; L. R. ² 5 M. H. C. App. 5, 1 Weir 30.

the power of commuting perpetual transportation for perpetual imprisonment. Many circumstances of which the executive authorities ought to be accurately informed, but which must often be unknown to the ablest judge, may, at particular times, render it highly inconvenient to carry a sentence of transportation into effect. The state of those remote provinces of the Empire in which convict settlements are established, and the way in which the interest of those provinces may be affected by any addition to the convict population, are matters which lie altogether out of the cognizance of the tribunals by which those sentences are passed, and which the Government only is competent to decide."¹

PRACTICE:

Procedure.—See ss. 401 and 402 of the Criminal Procedure Code which provide for suspensions, remissions, and commutations of sentences.

56. Whenever any person being an European¹ or American is convicted of an offence punishable under this Code with transportation, the Court shall sentence the offender to penal servitude instead of transportation according to the provisions of Act XXIV of 1855:

Provided that, where an European or American offender would, but for such Act, be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be transported for a term exceeding ten years, but not for life, he shall be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be kept in penal servitude for such term exceeding six years as to the Court seems fit, but not for life.

COMMENT.

The punishment of penal servitude is only applicable to Europeans and Americans.²

1. 'European.'—This word, as used in Act XXIV of 1855, shall be understood to include any person usually designated an European British subject (s. 15). 'European British subject' means (i) any subject of His Majesty of European descent in the male line born, naturalized or domiciled in the British islands or any colony, or (ii) any subject of His Majesty who is the child or grand-child of any such person by legitimate descent.³

Proviso.—This was added by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 3.

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—For the special procedure for the trial of European British subjects, Europeans or Americans, see the Code of Criminal Procedure, Ch. XXXIII, s. 413 et seq.

57. In calculating fractions of terms of punishment transportation for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to transportation for twenty years.

COMMENT.

For calculating fractions of terms of punishment this section provides that transportation for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to transportation for twenty years. But transportation for life has come to mean for the purpose of duration of the sentence as transportation for twenty years. After the period of twenty years is over the convict may come back if he likes.

¹ Note A, p. 85.

² Dumas Esquisse, (1896) 19 Mad. 453.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 4 (1) (i).

58. In every case in which a sentence of transportation is passed, the offender, until he is transported, shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, and shall be held to have been undergoing his sentence of transportation during the term of his imprisonment.

Offenders sentenced to transportation how dealt with until transported.

59. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards,¹ it shall be competent to the Court which sentences² such offender, instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment,³ to sentence the offender to transportation for a term not less than seven years, and not exceeding the term for which by this Code such offender is liable to imprisonment.⁴

Transportation instead of imprisonment.

COMMENT.

Object.—Under the Penal Code as originally prepared, the power of passing sentence of transportation instead of imprisonment was vested in the Government, and not in the Courts. "At the time when the Penal Code was prepared by the Indian Law Commissioners, it was a rule of the Court of Directors of the East India Company that no native should be sentenced to transportation for a period less than for life, it being the opinion at that time that a native of India, if once transported, should never be allowed to return to this country. The Indian Penal Code, as prepared by the Law Commissioners, did not provide transportation as a punishment for any period short of life, and it did not give power to the Government to commute a sentence of imprisonment for seven years into transportation, except in cases where the prisoner was not of Asiatic blood and of Asiatic birth. But, when the Penal Code came to be altered, a different rule was thought necessary. It was thought reasonable that natives of India as well as Europeans and others should be sentenced to transportation for periods less than for life, and that the transported, to return to India, Code as prepared by the Indian on as a punishment for any less period than for life, it was thought advisable, when the Code was altered, to enact this section" as a general clause.¹

Though this section was introduced when the Bill was before the Council, yet no alteration appears to have been made in the language of the several sections which prescribed transportation as a punishment. Thus, in the majority of instances, the words used are:—"shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment which may extend, etc." While the Court has an option in determining the duration of the term of imprisonment it has no option in determining the duration of the term of transportation.² In no section of the Code which prescribes transportation as a punishment, with the exception of this section and ss. 121-A and 124-A is the language used such as to leave the Court any option regarding the duration of the term

Principle.—This section only enacts a general rule to the effect that in the case of offences for which no transportation is specially mentioned as a punishment.

¹ Per Peacock, C. J., in Boddhoo, (1868) ² Naiada, (1875) 1 All. 43, 45, F.B.
9 W. R. (Cr.) 6 Beng. L. R., Sup. Vol., 869.

and which are punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, it is competent to the Judge to substitute a sentence of transportation as a substantive sentence for that of imprisonment.¹ The term of transportation under it cannot exceed the term of imprisonment provided by the section under which a conviction is had.² It cannot be less than seven years.

Scope.—This section applies exclusively to cases in which the offender may legally be sentenced by the Court trying him to imprisonment for seven years.³ It necessarily gives powers to a Court which could sentence a prisoner to seven years' imprisonment to sentence him to seven years' transportation in lieu of it: but it does not intend to give this power to a Court, which could not sentence to imprisonment for that period. The section, no doubt, goes out of the ordinary course adopted in other parts of the Code, and instead of defining the punishment, gives a certain power to the Court, which passes the sentence, to award a different kind of punishment from that specified in the Code.⁴

1. 'In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards.'—The punishment awarded for one offence alone must be imprisonment for seven years or upwards. It cannot be made up by adding two sentences together and then commuting the amalgamated period to transportation.⁵ A general sentence of transportation for two or more offences, when only one of the punishments awarded is seven years' imprisonment, is illegal.⁶

2. 'It shall be competent to the Court which sentences.'—That is, it shall be competent to the Court, which has power to sentence the prisoner to imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, to sentence him to transportation instead of imprisonment. If the Court passing sentence has jurisdiction to sentence to imprisonment for seven years, then it has also jurisdiction, under this section, to pass a sentence of transportation for seven years.⁷

3. 'Instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment.'—The proper procedure is to pass a sentence of imprisonment for the term fixed by law for the particular offence and then, under this section, direct that the prisoner be transported for that period.⁸ The Court may, in passing sentence for the offence, commute the imprisonment to transportation; but it cannot commute the sentence after the sentence of imprisonment has been passed.⁹

4. 'Transportation for a term not less than seven years, and not exceeding ...imprisonment.'—A transportation awarded under this section cannot exceed the imprisonment for which the prisoner might have been sentenced, even though it would have been open to the Court to award a longer period of transportation under the section appropriate to the crime. Thus, where the law gives the alternative punishments of death, transportation for life, and rigorous imprisonment extending to ten years, and the Court does not inflict the extreme penalty, it cannot award more than ten years' transportation.¹⁰ No sentence of transportation for a

¹ Kunhussa, (1882) 5 Mad. 29.

² Per Reid, J., in Arura, (1903) P. R. No. 31 of 1903.

³ Per Macpherson, J., in Boothooa, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 6.

⁴ Per Peacock, C. J., in ibid., p. 10.

⁵ Prem Chand Ousoural, (1864) W. R. (Gap. No.) Cr. 35; Mootkee Kora, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 1; Tonooram Malie, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 44; Salur Billa, (1901) P. R. No. 27 of 1901; Sunda, (1896) P. R. No. 68 of 1896; Bakalar, (1896) P. R. No. 14 of 1896; Musammal Malho, (1895) P. R. No. 4 of 1895; Nga Mel, (1905) U. B. R. (P. C.) 11.

⁶ Shonsullah, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 44.

⁷ Boothooa, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 6, 8, 11; Nuran, (1880) P. R. No. 17 of 1880.

⁸ Rughoo, (1864) W. R. (Gap. No.) Cr. 30.

⁹ Prem Chand Ousoural, sup.

¹⁰ Rughoo, sup.; Keifa Singh, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 16; Mohanundo Bhundary, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 16; Joseph Meriam, (1868) 1 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 5, 10 W. R. (Cr.) 10; Naiada, (1875) 1 All. 43, 44; Arura, (1903) P. R. No. 31 of 1903; Muham-mad Sharif, (1915) P. R. No. 14 of 1915; Sayyapureddi Chinnappa Dhora, (1920) 22 Bom. L. R. 763, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 58, &c.

shorter period than seven years can be passed on any charge.¹ Where a prisoner was convicted of an offence under s. 111 of the Indian Penal Code, and a special proceeding was taken for three years for the second offence, the second conviction was quashed as illegal.²

Where a person was convicted of an attempt to rape and sentenced, under this section, to seven years' transportation, the sentence was set aside on the ground that as rape was only punishable with ten years' imprisonment under s. 511 only five years' imprisonment could be awarded for an attempt to commit such an offence. At the same time it was held that as rape was punishable with transportation for life—transportation for twenty years (s. 57)—the sentence of seven years' transportation being less than one half of twenty years would have been legal if passed independently of this section.³

Sentence under a special or local law.—The section does not apply to sentences under a special or local law and transportation cannot, therefore, be ordered in the case of offences punishable under such law.⁴

Transportation cannot be substituted for imprisonment in default of fine.—This section does not authorise the substitution of transportation for the imprisonment to which a Court can sentence an offender in default of payment of fine.⁵

P R A C T I C E .

s. 35
Code

The Punjab Rule.—Section 59 of the Indian Penal Code empowers Courts to award transportation instead of imprisonment in cases in which offenders are punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, and Sessions Judges and Magistrates of Districts, exercising enhanced powers, are informed that, in order to bring this section into operation, the punishment awarded for one offence alone must be seven years or upwards. The term of seven years cannot be made up by adding two sentences together and then commuting the amalgamated period of imprisonment to one of transportation. The correct mode of proceeding is to sentence the offender to transportation, mentioning at the same time that, under s. 59 of the Indian Penal Code, such transportation is awarded instead of imprisonment, simple or rigorous, as the case may be.⁷

Bengal Rule.—The correct mode of proceeding is to sentence the offender to transportation, mentioning at the same time that, under s. 59 of the Indian Penal Code, such transportation is awarded instead of imprisonment, simple or rigorous, as the case may be.⁸

The Central Provinces Circular.—When term-transportation is allowed, Sessions Judges and Magistrates with special powers should pass term-sentences of transportation in cases in which such sentence may legally and suitably be passed. The correct procedure is to sentence the offender to transportation under the section under which the offence is punishable read with s. 59 of the Indian Penal Code.⁹

¹ Gour Chunder Roy, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 2; San Da, (1906) 4 L. B. R. 65.
² Gour Chunder Roy, sup. See to the same effect; San Da, sup., where a sentence of three years' transportation was passed under s. 440 of the Penal Code but was held to be illegal.
³ Joseph Meriam, (1868) 1 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 5, 10 W. R. (Cr.) 10.
⁴ Muthuramalingam, (1901) 11 M. L. J. R. 127, 1 Weir 30.

⁵ Kunhussa, (1882) 5 Mad. 28; Nuran, (1880) P. R. No. 17 of 1880; Yuseuf, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 116; Nga Tha Zan, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 292, overruling Nga Shwe Lan, (1899) P. J. L. B. 492.
⁷ Q. P. Cr. C. No. 23 (4), p. 37.

Burma Rule.—When a sentence of seven years or more is necessary, it is usually desirable that the sentence should be one of transportation, not of imprisonment, in which case s. 59 of the Penal Code should be quoted in the finding unless the sentence be for life.¹

A certain number of term-convicts are annually transported from Burma. It is, therefore, expedient in most cases to leave it to the jail authorities to decide whether a particular convict shall be transported or not, and this can best be done by making use of s. 59 of the Penal Code.²

Mode of sentencing.—The sentence should run thus:—"The Court directs, under the provisions of section—and s. 59 of the Indian Penal Code, that the said—be" (sentence).

60. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment which may be of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple.

COMMENT.

As to the application of ss. 60 and 63-74 to sentences passed in the Punjab Frontier District, in the North-West Frontier Province, or in Baluchistan, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation.³

As to the application of ss. 60, 63, 64, 65, 68 and 74 to the Sindh Frontier, see the Sindh Frontier Regulation.⁴

61. [Repealed by Act XVI of 1921.]

62. [Repealed by Act XVI of 1921.]

63. Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited, but shall not be excessive.

Amount of fine.

COMMENT.

The authors of the Code observe: "It is impossible to fix any limit to the amount of a fine which will not either be so high as to be ruinous to the poor, or so low as to be no object of terror to the rich. There are many millions in India who would be utterly unable to pay a fine of fifty rupees; there are hundreds of thousands from whom such a fine might be levied, but whom it would reduce to extreme distress; there are thousands to whom it would give very little uneasiness; there are hundreds to whom it would be a matter of perfect indifference, poor criminal it is a matter of absolute indifference whether the fine to which he is liable be limited or not, unless it be so limited as to render it quite inefficient as a mode of punishing the rich. To a man who has no capital, who has laid by nothing, whose monthly wages are just sufficient to provide himself and his family with their monthly rice, it matters not whether the fine for assault be left to be settled by the discretion of the Courts, or whether a hundred rupees be fixed as the maximum. There are no degrees in impossibility. He is no more able to pay a hundred rupees than to pay a lac. A just and wise judge, even if intrusted with a boundless discretion, will not, under ordinary circumstances,

¹ L. R. C. M., Vol. I, s. 220, p. 81.

² L. R. C. M., Vol. I, s. 220, p. 81.

³ III of 1901, ss. 13 (2), 61.

⁴ III of 1892, s. 23 (1).

sentence such an offender to a fine of a hundred rupees. And the limit of a hundred rupees would leave it quite in the power of an unjust or inconsiderate judge to inflict on such an offender all the evil which can be inflicted on him by means of fine.

"It appears to us that the punishment of fine is a peculiarly appropriate punishment for all offences to which men are prompted by cupidity; for it is a punishment which operates directly on the very feeling which impels men to such offences. A man who has been guilty of great offences arising from cupidity; of forging a bill of exchange, for example, of keeping a receptacle for stolen goods, or of extensive embezzlement, ought, we conceive, to be so fined as to reduce him to poverty. That such a man should, when his imprisonment is over, return to the enjoyment of three-fourths of his property, a property which may be very large and which may have been accumulated by his offences, appears to us highly objectionable. Those persons who are most likely to commit such offences would often be less deterred by knowing that the offender had passed several years in imprisonment, than encouraged by seeing him, after his liberation, enjoying the far larger part of his wealth."¹

The description of fine which it was the object of this section to prohibit, was a fine which it would be impossible or very difficult for the accused person to pay, or wholly disproportioned to the character of the offence.² The maximum fine to be imposed upon any individual should depend in every case upon his position in life.³

Magisterial fines.—In a Calcutta case it has been doubted whether this section applies to fines inflicted by a Magistrate, as the power of a Magistrate to fine is, in all cases, under the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code, limited to Rs 1,000, and it is only the Court of Session and the High Court that can inflict fines to an unlimited extent.⁴

Statutory application of ss. 63-70.—The provisions of ss. 63 to 70 apply to all fines imposed under the authority of any Act, Regulation, rule or bye-law, unless the Act, Regulation, rule or bye-law contains an express provision to the contrary.⁵

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Whenever a fine is imposed, the Court may issue a warrant for levy of fine as provided in the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁶ The whole or any part of the fine recovered is to be applied—(a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution; (b) in the payment to any person of compensation for any loss or injury caused by the offence, when substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by such person in a Civil Court; and (c) in compensating any bona fide purchaser of property acquired in the commission of certain offences for the loss if such property is restored to its owner.⁷

¹ Note A, pp 97, 98.

² Abdoor Rahman, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 37; Pratt, (1865) D. P. No. 20 of 1865.

³ Pratt, (1865) D. P. No. 20 of 1865.

⁴ Pratt, (1865) D. P. No. 20 of 1865.

⁵ Pratt, (1865) D. P. No. 20 of 1865.

⁶ Pratt, (1865) D. P. No. 20 of 1865.

⁷ Pratt, (1865) D. P. No. 20 of 1865.

General Clauses Act (I of 1904), s. 25 and the Punjab General Clauses Act (I of 1898), s. 23, make ss. 63-70 applicable to all fines under any local Acts. The Burma General Clauses Act (I of 1898) s. 25 and the Assam General Clauses Act (Assam Act II of 1915), s. 23, make ss. 63-70 applicable to all fines under any local Acts.

to all fines imposed under the authority of any Madras Act. The United Provinces

1904, s. 240.

Burma Rule.—When a sentence of seven years or more is necessary, it is usually desirable that the sentence should be one of transportation, not of imprisonment, in which case s. 59 of the Penal Code should be quoted in the finding unless the sentence be for life.¹

A certain number of term-convicts are annually transported from Burma. It is, therefore, expedient in most cases to leave it to the jail authorities to decide whether a particular convict shall be transported or not, and this can best be done by making use of s. 59 of the Penal Code.²

Mode of sentencing.—The sentence should run thus:—"The Court directs, under the provisions of section—and s. 59 of the Indian Penal Code, that the said—be" (sentence).

60. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment which may be of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple.

COMMENT.

As to the application of ss. 60 and 63-74 to sentences passed in the Punjab Frontier District, in the North-West Frontier Province, or in Baluchistan, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation.³

As to the application of ss. 60, 63, 64, 65, 68 and 74 to the Sindh Frontier, see the Sindh Frontier Regulation.⁴

61. [Repealed by Act XVI of 1921.]

62. [Repealed by Act XVI of 1921.]

63. Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited, but shall not be excessive.

Amount of fine.

COMMENT.

The authors of the Code observe: "It is impossible to fix any limit to the amount of a fine which will not either be so high as to be ruinous to the poor, or so low as to be no object of terror to the rich. There are many millions in India who would be utterly unable to pay a fine of fifty rupees; there are hundreds of thousands from whom such a fine might be levied, but whom it would reduce to extreme distress; there are thousands to whom it would give very little uneasiness; there are hundreds to whom it would be a matter of perfect indifference, and who would not cross a room to avoid it. The number of the poor in every

And to the which he is efficient as a has laid by and his family
nothing, whose monthly wages are just sufficient to provide with their monthly rice, it matters not whether the fine for assault be left to be settled by the discretion of the Courts, or whether a hundred rupees be fixed as the maximum. There are no degrees in impossibility. He is no more able to pay a hundred rupees than to pay a lac. A just and wise judge, even if intrusted with a boundless discretion, will not, under ordinary circumstances,

¹ I. B. C. M., Vol. I, s. 289, p. 81.

² I. B. C. M., Vol. I, s. 290, p. 81.

³ III of 1901, ss. 13 (2), 61.

⁴ III of 1902, s. 28 (1).

sentence such an offender to a fine of a hundred rupees. And the limit of a hundred rupees would leave it quite in the power of an unjust or inconsiderate judge to inflict on such an offender all the evil which can be inflicted on him by means of fine.

"It appears to us that the punishment of fine is a peculiarly appropriate punishment for all offences to which men are prompted by cupidity; for it is a punishment which operates directly on the very feeling which impels men to such offences. A man who has been guilty of great offences arising from cupidity; of forging a bill of exchange, for example, of keeping a receptacle for stolen goods, or of extensive embezzlement, ought, we conceive, to be so fined as to reduce him to poverty. That such a man should, when his imprisonment is over, return to the enjoyment of three-fourths of his property, a property which may be very large and which may have been accumulated by his offences, appears to us highly objectionable. Those persons who are most likely to commit such offences would often be less deterred by knowing that the offender had passed several years in imprisonment, than encouraged by seeing him, after his liberation, enjoying the far larger part of his wealth."¹

The description of fine which it was the object of this section to prohibit, was a fine which it would be impossible or very difficult for the accused person to pay, or wholly disproportioned to the character of the offence.² The maximum fine to be imposed upon any individual should depend in every case upon his position in life.³

Magisterial fines.—In a Calcutta case it has been doubted whether this section applies to fines inflicted by a Magistrate, as the power of a Magistrate to fine is, in all cases, under the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code, limited to Rs 1,000, and it is only the Court of Session and the High Court that can inflict fines to an unlimited extent.⁴

Statutory application of ss. 63-70.—The provisions of ss. 63 to 70 apply to all fines imposed under the authority of any Act, Regulation, rule or bye-law, unless the Act, Regulation, rule or bye-law contains an express provision to the contrary.⁵

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Whenever a fine is imposed, the Court may issue a warrant for levy of fine as provided in the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁶ The whole or any part of the fine recovered is to be applied—(a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution; (b) in the payment to any person of compensation for any loss or injury caused by the offence, when substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by such person in a Civil Court; and (c) in compensating any bona fide purchaser of property acquired in the commission of certain offences for the loss if such property is restored to its owner.⁷

¹ Note A, pp 97, 98.

² Abdoor Rahman, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 37; Mohna, (1895) F. R. No. 20 of 1895.

³ Abdullah, (1922) 5 L. L. J. 271.

⁴ Abdoor Rahman, sup.

⁵ General Clauses Act, X of 1897, s. 25. Under s. 26 of the Bombay General Clauses Act, I of 1904, the provisions of ss. 63-70 "apply to every fine imposed under any enactment of the Governor of Bombay in Council." (See Puna Lazman Bhir, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 357.) The Bengal General

Cl. Act of 1897, s. 25 and the Act of 1898), all fines under any local Acts. The Burma General Clauses Act (I of 1898) s. 25 and the Assam General Clauses Act (Assam Act II of 1915), s. 23, the Bihar and Orissa General Clauses Act, 1897; and the Central Provinces General Clauses Act (C.P. Act I of 1914), s. 24, contain similar provisions. These sections are also to all fines imposed under the authority of any Madras Act. The United Provinces

⁷ Ibid, s. 545.

imprisonment in default of payment will not exceed one-fourth of the longest term of imprisonment fixed by the Code for the offence. If the offence be one which by the Code is punishable only with fine, the term of imprisonment for default of payment will in no case exceed seven days.

"But we do not mean that this imprisonment shall be taken in full satisfaction of the fine. We cannot consent to permit the offender to choose whether he will suffer in his person or in his property. To adopt such a course would be to grant exemption from the punishment of fine to those very persons on whom it is peculiarly desirable that the punishment of fine should be inflicted, to those very persons who dislike that punishment most, and whom the apprehension of that punishment would be most likely to restrain. We therefore propose that the imprisonment which an offender has undergone shall not release him from the pecuniary obligation under which he lies. His person will, indeed, cease to be answerable for the fine; but his property will for a time continue to be so. What we recommend is, that at any time during a certain limited period the fine may be levied on his effects by distress. If the fine is paid or levied while he is imprisoned for default of payment, his imprisonment will immediately terminate, and if a portion of the fine be paid during the imprisonment, a proportional abatement of the imprisonment will take place.

"It may perhaps appear to some persons harsh to imprison a man for non-payment of a fine, and yet to release him on payment of the fine, and to take his property."

desirable that the fine should be levied, and he is the very convict who has least claim to indulgence. The confinement which he has undergone may be regarded as no more than a reasonable punishment for his obstinate resistance to the due execution of his sentence. If the offender has not the means of paying the fine while he continues liable to it, he will be quit for his imprisonment. There remains another case; that of an offender who, being really unable to pay his fine, lies in prison for a term, and with his property attached, and then, on payment of the fine, is released.

both laws imprisonment is inflicted, under both a fine is exacted. But the one law liberates the offender on payment of the fine, and also fixes a limit beyond which he cannot be detained in gaol, whether the fine be paid or no. The other law keeps him in confinement till the money is actually paid. It is therefore, at least as severe as ours on his property, and is immeasurably more severe on his person."¹

Scops.—This section does not include punishment inflicted under s. 75 of the Code.² Similarly it does not affect several sections of certain local Acts.³

1. "The term...shall not exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment...fixed for the offence."—Where the accused was convicted under s. 310 of the Penal Code and sentenced to pay a fine of two annas or in default to suffer imprisonment for a day, it was held that the maximum sentence of imprisonment legally awardable was six hours.⁴ Accused having been found guilty of an offence under s. 3, cl. 10, of the Towns Nuisance Act (Madras Act III of 1889) punishable with a "fine not exceeding Rs. 50" or "imprisonment of either description not exceeding eight

¹ Note A, pp. 88, 89, 100. These views were generally approved of by the Law Commissioners in their 2nd Rep., ss. 489-491.

² Klug, O. S. C. 175.

³ See Burma Act IV of 1907, s. 43 D; Burma Vaccination Act (Burma Act I of 1909), s. 15.

⁴ Tirumalai, (1904) 1 W.L.R. 31.

the imprisonment which the Court impuls of payment of a fine may be of any to which the offender might have been,
Prior the offence.¹

COMMENT

... default of payment of a fine may be of any kind
... as imprisonment with rigorous imprisonment the additional
... of fine, must be rigorous.³
... denotes here anything punishable under the Penal
... law (s. 40).

[illegible]

COMMENT.

COMMENT.

The offence provides for the maximum term of imprisonment which may be imposed on a person convicted of the offence, and the maximum amount of fine which may be imposed on a person convicted of the offence. It has no application to offences punishable either by imprisonment or by fine. Such sentences are governed by s. 65 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which is affected by Ch. XXII of the Criminal Procedure Code, limiting the period of imprisonment which may be imposed on a person convicted of an offence. The Magistrate acts under this section, and the maximum term of imprisonment which may be imposed on a person convicted of an offence cannot exceed three months. The alternative punishment it can exceed three months.

Penal Code, if first was held special or local law (a. 40).

421
422
423
424
425
426
427
428
429
430
431
432
433
434
435
436
437
438
439
440
441
442
443
444
445
446
447
448
449
450
451
452
453
454
455
456
457
458
459
460
461
462
463
464
465
466
467
468
469
470
471
472
473
474
475
476
477
478
479
480
481
482
483
484
485
486
487
488
489
490
491
492
493
494
495
496
497
498
499
500
501 502
503
504
505
506
507
508
509
510
511
512
513
514
515
516
517
518
519
520
521
522
523
524
525
526
527
528
529
530
531
532
533
534
535
536
537
538
539
540
541
542
543
544
545
546
547
548
549
550
551
552
553
554
555
556
557
558
559
560
561
562
563
564
565
566
567
568
569
570
571
572
573
574
575
576
577
578
579
580
581
582
583
584
585
586
587
588
589
590
591
592
593
594
595
596
597
598
599
600
601
602
603
604
605
606
607
608
609
610
611
612
613
614
615
616
617
618
619
620
621
622
623
624
625
626
627
628
629
630
631
632
633
634
635
636
637
638
639
640
641
642
643
644
645
646
647
648
649
650
651
652
653
654
655
656
657
658
659
660
661
662
663
664
665
666
667
668
669
670
671
672
673
674
675
676
677
678
679
680
681
682
683
684
685
686
687
688
689
690
691
692
693
694
695
696
697
698
699
700
701
702
703
704
705
706
707
708
709
710
711
712
713
714
715
716
717
718
719
720
721
722
723
724
725
726
727
728
729
730
731
732
733 734
735
736 737
738
739
740
741
742
743
744
745
746
747
748
749
750
751
752
753
754
755
756
757
758
759
760
761
762
763
764
765
766
767
768
769
770
771
772
773
774
775
776
777
778
779
780
781
782
783
784
785
786
787
788
789
790
791
792
793
794
795
796
797
798
799
800
801
802
803
804
805
806
807
808
809
810
811
812
813
814
815
816
817
818
819
820
821
822
823
824
825
826
827
828
829
830
831
832
833
834
835
836
837
838
839
840
841
842
843
844
845
846
847
848
849
850
851
852
853
854
855
856
857
858
859
860
861
862
863
864
865
866
867
868
869
870
871
872
873
874
875
876
877
878
879
880
881
882
883
884
885
886
887
888
889
890
891
892
893
894
895
896
897
898
899
900
901
902
903
904
905
906
907
908 909
910
911
912
913
914
915
916
917
918
919
920
921
922
923
924
925
926
927
928
929
930
931
932
933
934
935
936
937
938
939
940
941
942
943
944
945
946
947
948
949
950
951
952
953
954
955
956
957
958
959
960
961 962
963
964
965
966
967
968
969
970
971
972
973
974
975
976
977
978
979
980
981
982
983
984
985
986
987
988
989
990
991
992
993
994
995
996
997
998
999
1000
1001
1002
1003
1004
1005
1006
1007
1008
1009
1010
1011
1012
1013
1014
1015
1016
1017
1018
1019
1020
1021
1022
1023
1024
1025
1026
1027
1028
1029
1030
1031
1032
1033
1034
1035
1036
1037
1038
1039
1040
1041
1042
1043
1044
1045
1046
1047
1048
1049
1050
1051
1052
1053
1054
1055
1056
1057
1058
1059
1060
1061
1062
1063
1064
1065
1066
1067
1068
1069
1070
1071
1072
1073
1074
1075
1076
1077
1078
1079
1080
1081
1082
1083
1084
1085
1086
1087
1088
1089
1090
1091
1092
1093
1094
1095
1096
1097
1098
1099
1100
1101
1102
1103
1104 1105
1106
1107 1108
1109
1110
1111
1112
1113
1114
1115
1116
1117
1118
1119
1120
1121
1122
1123
1124
1125
1126
1127
1128
1129
1130
1131
1132
1133
1134
1135
1136
1137
1138
1139
1140
1141
1142
1143
1144
1145
1146
1147
1148
1149
1150
1151
1152
1153
1154
1155
1156
1157
1158
1159
1160
1161
1162
1163
1164
1165
1166
1167
1168
1169
1170
1171
1172
1173
1174
1175
1176
1177
1178
1179
1180
1181
1182
1183
1184
1185
1186
1187
1188
1189
1190
1191
1192
1193
1194
1195
1196
1197
1198
1199

On the case of rail-trikes to which the National Labor Relations Board has ruled.

6 W. R. (Gr.) 517-
Pat. H. C.
Pat. H. C.

U.B.C.M.E. 1917
M. a. 1918
M. a. 1919
W. R. (Gr) 31.
S. M. a. 1920

Chander Prasad Singh (1906) W. R. (Gr) 31.
* Daphn. 1917 (1917) & A. C. L.
* Free South Sea Islands (1912) &
R. H. C. (Gr. C) 61.

may be awarded and the money is not paid forthwith ; and, if the person against whom the order has been made on being required to enter into a bond such as is referred to in that sub-section, fails to do so, the Court may at once pass sentence of imprisonment.¹ Every warrant for the execution of any sentence may be issued either by the Judge or Magistrate who passed the sentence, or by his successor in office.²

The successor in office of a Judge or Magistrate may levy a fine imposed by his predecessor. But the Court which levies the fine must be the same as the Court which imposed it.³

69. If, before the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed in default of payment, such a proportion of the fine be paid or levied that the term of imprisonment suffered in default of payment is not less than proportional to the part of the fine still unpaid, the imprisonment shall terminate.

Termination of imprisonment on payment of proportional part of fine.

ILLUSTRATION.

A is sentenced to a fine of one hundred rupees and to four months' imprisonment in default of payment. Here, if seventy-five rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of one month of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the first month has expired. If seventy-five rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of the first month, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged. If fifty rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of two months of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the two months are completed. If fifty rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of those two months, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged.

COMMENT.

If the fine imposed on an accused is paid or levied while he is imprisoned for default of payment, his imprisonment will immediately terminate ; and if a proportion of the fine be paid during the imprisonment, a proportional abatement of the imprisonment will take place.

PRACTICE.

Court has no power to refund fine.—Where a prisoner paid a portion of his fine, but that fact not having been communicated to the jailor, he underwent the full term of imprisonment, it was held that, under those circumstances, the Court had no power to order the fine to be refunded.⁴ The accused must apply in such a case to the Government.

Calcutta Rule.—Magistrates and sub-divisional officers should be very careful, in all cases in which a person is sentenced to imprisonment in default of fine, to see that if the fine or a proportional part of it be paid or levied, immediate information be given to the officer in charge of the jail so that the prisoner may not be kept in illegal confinement.⁵

When a fine is imposed in addition to transportation, and the whole or part of the fine is levied, it is the duty of the sentencing Judge to inform the authorities at Port Blair of the fact.⁶

¹ Ibid. Criminal Procedure Code, s. 388.

² Ibid. s. 389.

³ Chunder Coomar Mitter v. Modhoooodun Dey, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 50, per A.

⁴ Benril Govt. Letter, No. 1060 T. 1864.

⁵ 5 M. H. C. App. 44.

⁶ Nalks Mills, (1867) 4 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 37.

70. The fine, or any part thereof which remains unpaid, may be levied at any time within six years¹ after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender be liable to imprisonment for a longer period than six years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period; and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.²

Fine leviable within six years, or during imprisonment.

Death not to discharge property from liability.

COMMENT.

Imprisonment in default of payment of fine does not liberate the offender from his liability to pay the full amount of fine imposed on him. Such imprisonment is not a discharge or satisfaction of the fine, but is imposed as a punishment for non-payment¹ or contempt or resistance to the due execution of the sentence. The authors of the Code observe: "We do not mean that this imprisonment shall be taken in full satisfaction of the fine. We cannot consent to permit the offender to choose whether he will suffer in his person or in his property. To adopt such a course would be to grant exemption from the punishment of fine to those very persons on whom it is peculiarly desirable that the punishment of fine should be inflicted, to those very persons who dislike that punishment most, and whom the apprehension of that punishment would be most likely to restrain. We therefore propose that the imprisonment which an offender has undergone shall not release him from the pecuniary obligation under which he lies. His person will, indeed, cease to be answerable for the fine; but his property will for a time continue to be so. What we recommend is, that at any time during a certain limited period the fine may be levied on his effects by distress. If the fine is paid or levied while he is imprisoned for default of payment, his imprisonment will immediately terminate, and if a portion of the fine be paid during the imprisonment, a proportional abatement of the imprisonment will take place. It may perhaps appear to some persons harsh to imprison a man for non-payment of a fine, and, after he has endured his imprisonment, to take his property by distress in order to realize the fine. But this harshness is rather apparent than real; if the offender, having the means of paying the fine, chooses rather to lie in prison than to part with his money, his case is the very case in which the law should be lenient, and he is the very convict whose case the law should be severe. If the offender, after he has undergone may be a long imprisonment, for his obstinate resistance to the due execution of his sentence. If the offender has not the means of paying the fine while he continues liable to it, he will be quit for his imprisonment. There remains another case; that of an offender who, being really unable to pay his fine, lies in prison for a term, and within six years after his sentence acquires property. This case is the only case in which it can, with any plausibility, be maintained that the law, as we have framed it, would operate harshly. Even in this case, it is evident that our law will operate far less harshly than a law which should provide that an offender sentenced to a fine should be imprisoned till the fine should be paid. Under both laws imprisonment is inflicted, under both a fine is exacted. But the one law liberates the offender on payment of the fine, and also fixes a limit beyond which he cannot be detained in gaol, whether the fine be paid or no. The other law keeps him in confinement till the money is actually paid. It is, therefore, at least as severe as ours on his property, and is immeasurably more severe on his person. The offender who has been sentenced to fine must be considered as a debtor, and, as a debtor, not entitled to any peculiar lenity. It will be difficult to show on what principles a creditor ought to be allowed to employ, for the purpose of recovering a debt from a person who is perhaps only unfortunate, a more stringent mode of procedure than that which the State employs for the purpose of realizing a fine from the property of a criminal. If a temporary imprisonment for debt ought not to cancel the claim of the private creditor, neither ought a temporary imprisonment in default of payment of a fine to cancel the claims of public justice."¹

1. 'Within six years.'—The bar of six years may save the property of the accused but not his personal arrest. The liability for any sentence of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine continues after the expiration of six years.²

2. 'Death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which...would be liable for his debts.'—Under the new provisions of s. 386, Criminal Procedure Code, moveable as well as immoveable property of the offender can be sold for realising the fine. The cases of *Lallu Karwar*³ and *Sita Nath Mitra*⁴ are no longer of any authority.

Fine once irrecoverable may be recovered if the offender obtains property subsequently.—The mere fact that a Magistrate having written off a fine as irrecoverable, is no bar to his taking action to levy the fine within the time allowed by law, if it subsequently appears that the person from whom it was due has acquired the means of paying it.⁵

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—An offender, who has undergone the full term of imprisonment to which he was sentenced in default of the payment of a fine, is still liable to have the amount levied by distress and sale of his property if the Court for special reasons to be recorded in writing considers it necessary to do so. The Court must act in accordance with the provisions of s. 386 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Bombay Circular.—The attention of Sessions Judges and Magistrates is called to s. 70 of the Indian Penal Code, and ss. 386, 387 and 388 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and to the fact that the proviso to s. 386 (1) directs that after the whole of the imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine has been undergone, no further steps should be taken for the recovery of the fine unless the Court for special reasons to be recorded considers it necessary to do so. In cases where further steps are required, if at any time subsequent to the return of the original warrant and within a period of six years from the passing of the sentence, the fine or any part of it, remains unpaid, and the Court, from information gained, has reason to think that there is any moveable property belonging to the offender, it should issue a fresh warrant for the attachment and sale of that property within a specified period, returnable within a certain time.⁶ When any Court recovers a fine, or any portion thereof, inflicted upon a prisoner who is already in jail, or who is liable to be further detained in gaol, in default of payment of that fine, such Court shall be held responsible for the immediate communication to the jailor of the amount of the fine so recovered.⁷

Calcutta Rule.—A warrant issued under s. 386, Criminal Procedure Code, for the levy of a fine should ordinarily be directed to a Police Officer (see Form No. XXXVII, Schedule V, Criminal Procedure Code); and the authority issuing it should set a time for the sale and for the return of the warrant. If no one claims the property distrained, the Police have the power of selling it within the time

¹ Note A, pp. 99, 100.

² Ganu Sakharani, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C.

207.

³ (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 63.

⁴ (1892) 20 Cal. 478.

⁵ Latif-ul-Hasan v. Mumtaz Ali Khan, (1906) 26 A. W. N. 275, 3 A. L. J. R. 818.

⁶ B. H. C. Cr. C. Ch. IX, s. 136, p. 94.

⁷ B. H. C. Cr. C. Ch. IX, s. 137, p. 94.

specified in the warrant, without any previous reference to the claimant come forward, then the ownership of the property distributed by the Magistrate, and not by the Police. If at any time to the return of the warrant, and within the period of six years from the sentence, the fine, or any part thereof, remains unpaid (s. 70 of the Code) and the Magistrate has, from information gained in any way, reason to believe that any moveable property belonging to the offender is within his jurisdiction, he may issue a fresh warrant for the attachment and sale of such property. Such warrant should be made returnable within a time to be definitely fixed therein.¹

When a Court of Session realizes a fine imposed by it on an accused person, it shall prepare the usual warrant for the realization of the fine, and shall forward it to the Magistrate of the district concerned with an endorsement thereon to the effect that the fine has been realized.²

Patna Circular.—In any case when, under any special or local law, imprisonment in lieu of fine is to be taken as a full satisfaction of the penalty, if the convicted person is sentenced to undergo the imprisonment, the clerk in charge of the Fine Register shall at once obtain a certificate from the Court imposing the sentence that the fine is not to be realised, and the amount of the fine shall, if entered, be struck out of the Register of criminal fines. Nothing here laid down shall interfere with any special directions of law for the attempted realization of fine by distress or otherwise before carrying out any sentence of imprisonment upon the offender.³

Oudh Circular.—If at any time subsequent to the return of the warrant and within the period of six years from the passing of the sentence, or within the period of imprisonment to which the offender is liable under the sentence when such period exceeds six years, the fine or any part thereof remains unpaid, the Magistrate, if he has reason to think that there is any moveable property belonging to the offender liable to attachment and sale, may, even though the offender has completed the term of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine (s. 70, Indian Penal Code), issue a fresh warrant, returnable within a certain time, for levy of the unpaid amount by distress and sale of such property.⁴

71. Where anything which is an offence¹ is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such his offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

Where² anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, or where³ several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence, the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences.

¹ C. H. C. R. & O., Ch. I, r. 117, p. 41. This rule will have to be modified in the light of the new s. 336 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

² Ibid., r. 118, p. 42.

³ Pat. H. C. Cr. C., para 11, p. 145.

⁴ O. C. D. 127. This circular will have to be modified in the light of the new s. 336 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The combined effect of this clause and clause (1) of s. 235, Criminal Procedure Code, is exemplified in Nilmoy Poddar's case,¹ discussed hereafter.

The word 'offence' denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under special or local law (s. 40).

2. Second clause.—First provision.—This clause has two provisions. The first to cases mentioned in cl. (2) of s. 235, Criminal Procedure Code, and the second to cases covered by cl. (3) of that section. The first provision provides for which suggests different aspects according to the view which may be taken and which therefore fall within there are two provisions, one specific and the other general, the specific ought to be applied in preference to the general one. The applicant was having abetted the personation of a voter at a municipal election in being himself acquainted with the person who came forward to vote, he advice of others, put his name to a "signature sheet" in token that mark made by the voter was that of the person entitled to vote under a on the electoral roll. It was held that, inasmuch as the acts done ant constituted the specific offence provided for by s. 171-F he could for that offence and could not be tried for abetment of the general d for by s. 465.²

revision.—The second provision refers to cases falling under cl. (3) of iminal Procedure Code. Illustration (m) is an example of such

'ence.'—This phrase must be understood to refer to the nces as enunciated in the Code itself, irrespective of the iden- of the evidence whereby the several acts are proved.³

Penal Code and s. 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code.— these sections and gives the result, which nearly corresponds Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872):—

stitution of several offences constitutes one offence of exactly he instances taken together can only be treated as making he greater or lesser number of instances may add to or of the offence [e.g., s. 71, ill. (a)].

w belonging to two persons.—Where the accused stole pro- to two different persons from the same room of a ould not be sentenced separately as for two offences of ts at the same time belonging to two different owners, art, was held to constitute only one offence of charge of a goods train, stole articles parate bags in a truck, it was held that enced separately for two distinct offences of erty belonging to two persons.—Where a gang of dacoits, object, viz., robbery, attacked at the same time two ifferent owners in the same village, it was held that d separately on separate charges of dacoiting each nished for one offence of dacoity.⁴

nsaction or connected series of events gives rise to character, or to several offences of the same character of 1897, Unrep. Cr. G. 927; Nga Po, (1882) S. J. L. B. 168; San Hla, (1889) S. J. L. B. 475.

⁴ Har Dial, (1905) P. R. No. 58 of 1905. ⁵ Nga San Dun, (1889) S. J. L. B. 444.

Jan, (1887)

2 (Cr.) 38.
R. No. 33

affecting different persons, each such offence is separately indictable and punishable [e.g., s. 71, ill. (b), and Criminal Procedure Code, s. 235, ill. (a), (f) and (g)].

Where different persons are injured, grievous hurt being caused in one case and simple hurt in others, it is competent for the Court to impose separate and accumulative sentences.¹

Cases.—House-breaking to commit mischief and assault, and mischief and assault.—An accused person was convicted under s. 457 of the Penal Code of house-breaking by night in order to commit an offence (mischief and assault) and also under ss. 426 and 352 for the offences of mischief and assault, and punished separately for each offence. These offences formed part of one transaction. It was held that the sentences were legal.²

House breaking after making preparation for causing hurt or assault and committing of rape.—Where the accused committed house-breaking by night after making preparation to cause hurt or assault (s. 458) and then committed rape (s. 376), it was held that separate sentences for both the offences were legal.³

Criminal intimidation to three persons at one time.—An accused person, who threatened three witnesses, was convicted and sentenced to four months' imprisonment for the threat to each witness. It was held that if a person at one time criminally intimidates three different persons, and each of those persons brings a separate charge against him, he may be convicted for an offence as against each person, and be punished separately for each offence.⁴

Resistance to the taking of property by a public servant, and assaulting him.—Where the accused objected to accompany a constable who had been directed to produce him before the Court, seized the constable by the arm, and resisted his carrying away a pony which the accused was charged with having misappropriated, it was held that he was guilty of separate offences under ss. 353 and 183, and the infliction of separate sentences for each offence was not prevented by this section.⁵

Rioting and hurt, and rescuing from custody.—The accused were charged with, and convicted of, rioting and causing hurt, the common object of the unlawful assembly being the rescue of the first accused. The first accused was further convicted to those for rioting and hurt were proper, escape and rescue were distinct offences, the meaning of this hurt also, it was held in hurt (s. 323) and separate sentences could be passed.⁷

Theft and receiving gift to recover stolen property.—Where a person was proved to have committed a theft and also the offence under s. 215, it was held that he might be convicted and sentenced for each of such offences, for the offences were distinct transactions capable of being proved independently of each other. But where the theft is proved not by direct evidence but by inference drawn from the facts which prove the commission of the offence under s. 215, separate convictions and sentences should not be passed.⁸

Wrongful confinement and assault.—The accused were convicted under ss. 352 and 312 and sentenced separately for each of the offences, the acts found

¹ Balshar, (1915) 38 All. 628.

² Nirichan, (1838) 12 Mad. 36. In this case. Nowjan, (1874) 7 M. H. C. 375, was not followed. But so far as the question of punishment goes these two cases can be of the

Arjun, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 142, 23 Bom. 706, s.b. distinguished.

³ Goolzar Khan, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 30.

⁴ Joyah Mohun Chunder, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 19.

⁵ Anon., (1894) 1 Weir 34.

⁶ Katwaru Bai, (1917) 39 All. 623.

⁷ Nga Shein, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 203, s.b.

⁸ Malu

against them being that they seized, dragged, and pushed the complainant to a certain place in order to punish him. It was held that what the accused had been punished for was the whole series of acts, and that series of acts came within the definition both of wrongful confinement and of using criminal force, and, accordingly, the case fell within the second paragraph of this section.¹ Separate sentences may be passed for making a false charge under s. 211 and for giving false evidence under s. 193²; or for kidnapping (s. 363) and for selling for purposes of prostitution (s. 372).³

Rioting and grievous hurt—The question as to whether a member of an unlawful assembly, some members of which have caused grievous hurt, can be hurt, separate sentences may be passed for each of the two offences without regard to the limit of the combined sentences. In such a case the total punishment can be any one of the offences.⁴ which he has not himself difference of opinion.

A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has ruled that separate sentences passed upon persons for the offences of rioting and grievous hurt are not legal where it is found that such persons individually did not commit any act which amounted to voluntarily causing hurt, but were guilty of that offence under s. 149 of the Penal Code.⁵ In this case their lordships solved the difficulty by considering the separate sentences passed under ss. 147, 353 and 225 as one consolidated sentence so as to meet the offence of which the accused were convicted. Recently, in a case in which the accused was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 147 and a further sentence of three years' imprisonment under s. 325 read with s. 149, both sentences being directed to run concurrently, Sanderson, C. J., held that the infliction of separate punishments for the two offences was illegal under para 1 of this section and it did not make any difference that the sentences were directed to run concurrently. Cuming, J., expressed the opinion judgments of Oldfield and Duthoit, JJ., in Ram Sarup, (1885) 7 All. 757, F.R.

¹ Fakira Khan, (1905) 4 C. L. J. 90.

² Devi Lal, (1888) 17 Bom. 260, F.R.

³ Nilmoney Poddar, (1889) 16 Cal. 442, F.R., overruling Lole Nath Sarkar, (1885) 11 Cal. 349, and approving Ram Parab, (1883) 6 All. 121. See Hansa Pathak v. Bansi Lal Das, (1901) 8 C. W. N. 519, where an effort is made to distinguish Nilmoney's case, and an opinion is expressed that the latter decision does not apply to the case of separate sentences for unlawful assembly and theft. This is opposed to the ruling in Mithoo Singh v. Gopal Lal, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 761.

⁴ Hriday Mondal v. Jagananda Das, (1899) 4 C. W. N. 245.

Roy, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 60; Sobrai Cowallah, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 70.

⁵ Bana Punja, (1892) 17 Bom. 260, F.R.; Chandra Kant Bhattacharjee, (1885) 12 Cal. 495; Mohur Mir, (1889) 16 Cal. 725; Ferasat, (1891) 19 Cal. 105; Dungar Singh, (1884) 7 All. 29; Pershad, (1884) 7 All. 414, F.R.;

that the prohibition in this section against punishing an accused with the punishment of more than one of the offences was obviously met by making all the sentences which had been imposed run concurrently and that where two separate sentences had been passed the illegality did not necessarily attach to the sentence which was passed second in point of time.¹

The Patna High Court has adopted the same view. It has laid down that it is illegal to record separate convictions for offences under ss. 147 and 325 read with s. 149 and that separate sentences in respect of the two offences are illegal.² It has also held that separate sentences under ss. 147 and 325 are not per se illegal, but the sentences imposed ought not to be heavier than are justifiable upon the particular facts and circumstances of the case.³ If the common object of the accused is to commit an assault, but, in prosecution of that object, grievous hurt or death is caused by the members thereof, this section will not apply and separate sentences under s. 147 or s. 148 and s. 324 or s. 325 read with s. 149 will not be illegal.⁴

The Madras High Court has taken a similar view. When the object of an unlawful assembly is to cause hurt, then a member of that unlawful assembly, if he is convicted under s. 147, cannot be convicted also under s. 323 or s. 325 read with s. 149, unless he is himself proved to have caused hurt in the course of the riot.⁵

A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has decided that where a prisoner is convicted of rioting and of hurt, and the conviction for hurt depends upon the application of s. 149, it is not illegal to pass two sentences, one for riot, and another for hurt; provided the total punishment does not exceed the maximum which the Court might pass for any one of the offences.⁶ Under the amended s. 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is competent to a Court to pass separate sentences for offences punishable under ss. 148 and 326, provided the sentences so passed could be passed under any of the two sections, and provided they are not in excess of the powers of the Court passing them.⁷ In this case the application of s. 149 did not arise.

The several decisions of the Allahabad High Court are not unanimous on this question. In an early case Straight, J., decided that a member of an unlawful assembly, some members of which had caused grievous hurt, could not lawfully be punished for the offence of rioting as well as for the offence of causing grievous hurt.⁸ This point was not decided in the Full Bench case of Ram Sarup,⁹ but the judgment of Broadhurst, J., in this case expresses a contrary opinion. In two subsequent cases, however, the ruling in Ram Partab's case was not approved of. In the first case, the facts were that one M, in prosecution of the common object of an unlawful assembly, caused grievous hurt with his own hand. M and other members of the assembly, as to whom it did not appear whether or not any of them ment did not exceed the maximum punishment which could have been awarded under s. 325. Edge, C. J., said: "The object of s. 149, as I think, in such a case as the present, is to make it clear that an accused who comes within that section, cannot put forward as a defence that it was not his hand which inflicted the grievous hurt."¹⁰ In the second case, Mahmood, J., said: "It seems to me that where certain acts constitute more than one offence, whether such offences do or do not fall under the purview of s. 71 of the Indian Penal Code, and the accused is charged

¹ Kiamuddin Karim, (1923) 51 Cal. 79.

² Pattu Singh, (1918) 3 P. L. J. 641;

Nemidhari Singh, (1920) 2 P. L. T. 91.

³ Kamath Rao, (1921) 2 P. L. T. 549.

⁴ Halkara Rai, (1921) 2 P. L. T. 316.

⁵ Krishna Ayyar, (1914) 24 M. L. T. 60, [1915] M. W. N. 522.

⁶ Baxa Punja, (1892) 17 Bom. 260, F.B.;
Tekla, (1895) P. R. No. 8 of 1895.

⁷ Puru Rama, (1925) 27 Bom. L. R. 1373, 8
Bom. Cr. C. 137.

⁸ Ram Partab, (1883) 6 All. 121.

⁹ (1885) 7 All. 757, F.B.

¹⁰ Bisheshkar, (1887) 9 All. 645, C50.

and tried for more than one offence and the evidence establishes those offences, the Court is bound to convict him of those offences, though in awarding punishment the provisions of s. 71 of the Indian Penal Code and of s. 35 of the Code of Criminal Procedure would of course have to be duly kept in view."¹ Recently, in a case, Walsb, J., observed: "Whether there are different definitions of the same offence, or whether the same offence is provided for in different sections or by separate and different provisions in the Code, care should be taken that under no circumstances should the accused be sentenced to a greater punishment than the highest penalty contained in one of the provisions under which he may be convicted. He may be convicted of rioting and also of causing grievous hurt by mere membership of an unlawful assembly, provided the sentence ultimately passed on him does not exceed that provided in s. 325."²

The former Chief Court of the Punjab distinguished the Calcutta Full Bench case of Nilmoy Poddar in Nur Khan,³ in which it held that separate sentences under ss. 147 and 325 were legal inasmuch as each of the offenders might have been convicted individually under s. 325, and further under ss. 149 and 325. It also held that this section was inapplicable to the case of conviction and separate sentences under s. 147 and ss. 149 and 325.⁴ On the question going before a Full Bench, the following two propositions were laid down: (1) Separate sentences for the offence of rioting and grievous hurt cannot be legally imposed upon a member of an unlawful assembly where the offence of rioting was not itself complete until the grievous hurt was actually inflicted, that is to say, where the causing of the hurt was itself the form of force or violence which constituted the offence of rioting (2) Separate sentences cannot be awarded where the first clause of this section applies, and the offence committed is made up of parts, any of which part is itself an offence, but they can be legally awarded where distinct offences not made up of parts are proved to have been committed by one member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of that assembly, or where the members of it knew that such offences were likely to be committed in prosecution of that object.⁵

The Rangoon High Court adopting the Bombay view has held that in cases of rioting under s. 147, resulting in grievous hurt, convictions and separate sentences under s. 325 are legal against all the accused who actually joined in the assault. Some of these assaults may have resulted in simple hurt, others in grievous hurt, but all the actual assailants are, under s. 149, liable for all the results.⁶

III. Where the same facts will constitute different offences, the indictment may, and ought to, charge each such offence so as to meet every possible view of the case. But only one offence has been committed, and the punishment must not exceed that applicable to the graver offence (s. 71, cl. 2).

"It is a general rule that when, in the same penal statute, there are two clauses applicable to the same act of an accused, the punishments are not to be regarded as cumulative, unless it be so expressly provided."⁷

Cases.—An accused cannot be punished at the same time for committing an offence by fire with intent to destroy a warehouse (s. 436) and for the offence of mischief by fire (s. 435).⁸ Where a mother abandoned her child, with the intention of wholly abandoning it, and knowing that such abandonment was likely to cause its death, and the child died in consequence of the abandonment, it was held

¹ Wazir Jan, (1887) 10 All. 58.

² Dharamdeo Singh, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 738, 740

³ (1893) P. R. No. 31 of 1894.

⁴ Tokla, (1895) P. R. No. 8 of 1895.

⁵ Bhagwan Singh, (1900) P. R. No. 4 of 1901, r.a.; Mangal Singh, (1916) P. R. No. 31

of 1916.

⁶ Nga Son Min, (1923) 3 B. L. J. 49.

⁷ Per West, J., in Dod Basaya, (1874) 11 B. H. C. 13, 15; Francis Xavier, (1890) Unrep. Cr. C. 506

⁸ Dod Basaya, sup.

In *Queen Empress v. Malu Arjun*¹ a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court held: (1) that a person, who has committed house-breaking in order to commit theft (s. 457) and theft (s. 380), can be charged with, and convicted of, each of these offences; (2) that a Court, in awarding punishment (under this section), should pass one sentence for either of the offences in question, and not a separate one for each offence; (3) that if two sentences are nevertheless passed, and the aggregate of these does not exceed the punishment provided by law for any one of the offences, or the jurisdiction of the Court, that would be an irregularity only and not an illegality. The Court said: "The provisions of s. 35 of the Code, which require the Court to pass one sentence for either of the offences in question, and not a separate one for each offence." The illustration in s. 35 is also deleted. The Statement of Objects and Existing Explanation and Illustration to s. 35 have occasioned considerable misunderstanding. It is therefore proposed to omit them and state definitely that s. 35 must be read subject to s. 71." The decision in Malu Arjun is therefore considerably modified in view of the amended section. The Court may award separate sentences for offences under s. 457 and s. 380.²

The Calcutta High Court has held that house-breaking by night and theft form a single and an entire offence and cannot be punished separately.³ In one case, however, it has held that a person may be convicted of theft in a building and of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, though, if the Judge considers the punishment for the first sufficient, he need not award any additional sentence for the second.⁴ But it has held that the infliction of separate punishment does not violate the law, provided that the aggregate punishment awarded is not in excess of what the Court could inflict for either of the offences.⁵ These decisions are no longer of any authority in view of the amended s. 35 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The Madras High Court has held that a prisoner convicted under s. 369 for abducting a child with intent dishonestly to take moveable property, cannot also be punished for the theft of a part of the moveable property which he intended dishonestly to take through means of the abduction.⁶ Under the present law he can be punished separately.

The Allahabad High Court has held that where a person committed a trespass with the intention of committing mischief, thereby committing criminal trespass, and at the same time committed mischief, that such person could not receive a punishment more severe than what might have been awarded for either of such offences. But Turner, J., in this case, said: "The law does not...prohibit the Court from passing sentence in respect of each offence established, but it declares that the offender must not receive for such offence collectively a punishment more severe than might have been awarded for any one of them, or for the offence formed by their combination."⁷ This view was approved of by the same High Court in a later case in which it laid down that where more offences than one are proved in respect of which the accused has been charged and tried,

¹ (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 142, 23 Bom. 706, F. B., followed in Wadhawa, (1917) P. R. No. 46 of 1917. See Anvarkhan, (1872) 9 B. H. C. 172, F. B., Gulam Abbas, (1875) 12 B. H. C. 147; Tukaya bin Tamana, (1875) 1 Bom. 214; Sakharam Bhau, (1886) 10 Bom. 493.
² Dhond Bapu Bhaskar, (1908) 8 Bom. L. R. 850, is no longer of any authority.
³ Tonaokoch, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 63; Ohytun Bowra, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 49;

Jogeen Pullee v. Nobo Pullee, (1865) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 49; Mussahur Daoudh, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 92; Sahrae, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 31.

⁴ Tincouree, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) (Cr.) 31.

⁵ Fakira Khan, (1905) 4 C. L. J. 90.

⁶ Noujan, (1874) 7 M. H. C. 375.

⁷ Budh Singh, (1879) 2 All. 101.

a conviction for each offence must follow, whether this section applies to the case or not; and, subject to the provisions of this section, a separate sentence must be passed in respect of each such conviction. In this case the accused were tried for offences under ss. 170 and 383, committed in the same transaction, and it appeared that but for personating a public servant the accused would not have been in a position to commit the act of extortion. It was held that the former offence was completed before the latter. ¹ The view ² was not approved of in this case. ³ Where in the course of one and the same transaction an accused person appears to have perpetrated several acts, directed to one end and object, which together amount to a more serious offence than each of them taken individually by itself would constitute, although for purposes of trial it may be convenient to vary the form of charge and to designate not only the principal but the subsidiary crimes alleged to have been committed, yet in the interests of simplicity and convenience it is best to concentrate the conviction and sentence on the gravest offence proved." In this case a person who broke into a house by night and committed theft therein was charged and tried for offences under ss. 380 and 457, and was convicted of both those offences, and punished for each with rigorous imprisonment for eighteen months. The High Court convicted him of the offence under s. 457 and sentenced him to rigorous imprisonment for three years, and acquitted him of the offence under s. 380. This case was decided when Act X of 1872 was the Code of Criminal Procedure. In a case decided under the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882 (Act X of 1882) by Straight and Broadhurst, JJ., it was held that, under ss. 35 and 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate might legally pass a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment and fine under each of the sections 379 or 380 and 454 of the Penal Code, for house-breaking in order to the commission of theft, and theft, the two offences forming part of the same transaction, and being tried together. But a Sessions Judge trying such a case would under no circumstances be justified in passing a sentence of ten years' imprisonment under the latter part of s. 454, and of four years' imprisonment under s. 380. The latter portions of ss. 454 and 457 were framed to include the cases of house-trespassers and house-breakers who had not only intended to commit but had actually committed theft. ⁴ These decisions will also undergo modification in view of the amended s. 35 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Amendment.—The last three clauses of this section were added by Act VIII of 1882, s. 4.

Attempt and abetment.—A person cannot be separately punished for attempting as well as for abetting the same offence. ⁵

PRACTICE.

¹ Wazir Jan, (1857) 10 All. 52.
² (1880) 2 All. 614, 616.
³ Zor Singh, (1857) 10 All. 146.
⁴ Fateh Khan Bahadur Khan, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 855.
⁵ Dharam Das, (1910) 7 A. L. J. P. 910.
⁶ U. B. C. M., s. 138.

Upper Burma Rule.—When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more offences, it is not necessary for the Court to pass a sentence for each offence, the first sentence of paragraph 1 of s. 35 of the Code of Criminal Procedure being permissive, not mandatory. ⁶

72. In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful¹ of which of these offences he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.

Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences, the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which.

COMMENT.

The authors of the Code observe: "This provision is intended to prevent an offender whose guilt is fully established from eluding punishment, on the ground that the evidence does not enable the tribunals to pronounce with certainty under what penal provision his case falls.

Where the doubt is merely between an aggravated and mitigated form of the same offence, the difficulty will not be great. In such cases the offender ought always to be convicted of the minor offence. But the doubt may be between two offences, neither of which is a mitigated form of the other. The doubt, for example, may lie between murder and the aiding of murder. It may be certain, for example, that either A or B murdered Z, and that whichever was the murderer was aided by the other in the commission of the murder; but which committed the murder, and which aided the commission, it may be impossible to ascertain. To suffer both to go unpunished, though it is certain that both are guilty of capital crimes, merely because it is doubtful under what clause each of them is punishable, would be most unreasonable. It appears to us that a conviction in the alternative has this recommendation, that it is altogether free from fiction, that it is exactly consonant to the truth of the facts. If the Court find both A and B guilty of murder, or of aiding murder, the Court affirms that which is not literally true; and on all occasions, but especially in judicial proceedings, there is a strong presumption in favour of literal truth. If the Court finds that A has either murdered Z or aided B to murder Z, and that B has either murdered Z or aided A to murder Z, the Court finds that which is the literal truth; nor will there, under the rule which we have laid down, be the smallest difficulty in prescribing the punishment.

It is chiefly in cases where property has been fraudulently appropriated that the necessity for

It will often be c and the only doubt will be, whether this fraudulent appropriation was a theft or a criminal breach of trust. To allow the offender to escape unpunished on account of such a doubt would be absurd. To subject him to the punishment of theft, which is the higher of the two crimes, between which the doubt lies, would be grossly unjust. The punishment to which he ought to be liable is evidently that of criminal breach of trust; but that a Court should convict an offender of a criminal breach of trust, when the opinion of the Court perhaps is, that it is an even chance, which, though literally false, are conventionally true. Yet we presume that the presumption is always strongly in favour of that form of offence which accurately sets forth the real state of the facts. In the case supposed, the real state of the facts is, that the offender committed either theft or criminal breach of trust, and that the Court is equally doubtful of which. This ought, therefore, in our opinion, to be the rule.

1. 'Doubtful.'—This section does not apply to cases in which the doubt is only as to the existence of particular facts.

applicable to a certain set of facts is doubtful, by reason of the nature of the single act or series of acts done, and in which it is charged, or found proved, that the act or series of acts constitutes one or more or some one of several offences, the doubt being on a matter of law only.¹ To authorize a conviction under this section the doubt must, therefore, be as to which of the offences the accused has committed, not whether he has committed either.

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—The Criminal Procedure Code² says: "If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once; or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences." The illustrations clearly bring out the purport of this section. A is accused of an act which may amount to theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating. He may be charged with theft, receiving stolen property, criminal breach of trust and cheating, or he may be charged with having committed theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating. A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club. Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

When the conviction is under the Penal Code and it is doubtful under which of two sections, or under which of two parts of the same section, of that Code the offence falls, the Court shall distinctly express the same and pass judgments in the alternative.³

Punishment.—When an accused person is convicted in the alternative, one of the offences of which he might be guilty being murder, punishable under s. 302, this section so far overrides s. 302 as to admit in such a case of a less punishment than transportation for life being inflicted.⁴

73. Whenever any person is convicted of an offence for which under this Code the Court has power to sentence him to rigorous imprisonment, the Court may, by its sentence, order that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion¹ or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced, not exceeding three months² in the whole, according to the following scale, that is to say—a time not exceeding one month³ if the term of imprisonment shall not exceed six months:

a time not exceeding two months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed six months and shall not exceed one year:

a time not exceeding three months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed one year.

COMMENT.

Solitary confinement means such confinement with or without labour as entirely secludes the prisoner both from sight of, and communication with, other prisoners.

¹ Khan Muhammad, (1887) P. R. No. 11 of 1897; Jamurha, (1876) 7 N. W. P. 137.
² Section 236.

³ Section 367 (3), Criminal Procedure Code.
⁴ Sahel Singh, (1906) 28 A. W. N. 93.

This section gives the scale according to which solitary confinement may be inflicted. In England the power to impose solitary punishment, though it was very rarely exercised by a criminal Court as part of its sentence, has been done away with by 56 & 57 Vic, c. 51. Under the section solitary confinement can only be inflicted where the Court has power to sentence an offender to rigorous imprisonment.

1. 'Any portion.'—These words imply that the solitary confinement if inflicted for the whole term of imprisonment is illegal.¹ A prisoner was convicted of hurt and sentenced to fourteen days' rigorous imprisonment, the whole of which was ordered to be passed in solitary confinement. The High Court quashed the order as illegal.²

2. 'Not exceeding three months.'—In the case of simultaneous convictions, the award of separate terms of solitary confinement, which in the aggregate exceed three months, is legal³; but, as a matter of practice, a sentence of more than three months' solitary confinement should not be passed on a person convicted at one trial of more than one offence. And, in a later case,⁴ in which none of these cases was referred to, it was held that such a sentence should not be passed.⁵ The Rangoon High Court has laid down that cumulative sentences of solitary confinement are contrary to the intention of this section.⁶

3. 'One month.'—One month signifies thirty days.⁷

Summary trial.—It is not illegal to impose solitary confinement as a part of the sentence in a case tried summarily.⁸

Solitary confinement not to be awarded for offences under special or local Acts.—It is only for offences under the Penal Code that solitary confinement can be awarded.⁹

Solitary confinement for imprisonment in lieu of fine.—Where imprisonment does not form part of the substantive sentence, solitary confinement cannot be awarded¹⁰; so also, it cannot be awarded as part of the imprisonment in lieu of fine.¹¹

Solitary confinement as part of imprisonment in default of furnishing security for good behaviour.—The imprisonment which a person may be ordered to undergo in default of furnishing security for good behaviour cannot be made to include solitary confinement.¹²

Amendment.—The words "shall not exceed one year" were substituted for "be less than a" by Act VIII of 1882, s. 5.

PRACTICE.

Though it is not illegal, yet, as a matter of practice, a sentence of more than three months' solitary confinement should not be passed on a person convicted at one trial of more than one offence.¹³

A Magistrate has no power to direct that solitary confinement should be executed in the first week of every month.¹⁴

¹ Nayan Suk Mether, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 49.

² Ibid.

³ Nihala, (1877) P. R. No. 11 of 1877; Khushal, (1877) P. R. No. 13 of 1877.

⁴ Ibrahim, (1897) P. R. No. 7 of 1897; Dangar Khan, (1922) 5 L. L. J. 224.

⁵ Umr Singh, (1869) P. R. No. 20 of 1869; Bunns, (1882) P. R. No. 9 of 1882.

⁶ Jata, (1873) P. R. No. 26 of 1873; Jamdad, (1887) P. R. No. 53 of 1887.

⁷ Kundan, (1914) 36 All. 495.

⁸ Ibrahim, sup.

⁹ Jaman, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 17.

1866; Hurnarain, (1870) P. R. No. 20 of 1870; Munawar, (1874) P. R. No. 4 of 1875; Mulh Ram, (1879) P. R. No. 24 of 1879; Gurdat Singh, (1889) P. R. No. 17 of 1889; Nga Kun Ba, (1899) P. J. L. B. 554; Baldeo Brahmin, (1901) 14 C. P. L. R. 39; Bidha, (1923) 46 All. 114.

¹⁰ Umr Singh, (1869) P. R. No. 20 of 1869; Bunns, (1882) P. R. No. 9 of 1882.

¹¹ Jata, (1873) P. R. No. 26 of 1873; Jamdad, (1887) P. R. No. 53 of 1887.

¹² Kundan, (1914) 36 All. 495.

¹³ Ibrahim, sup.

¹⁴ Jaman, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 17.

Scope.—This section is not to be employed to enhance enormously the heinousness of petty offences.¹ A person found guilty of theft having one previous conviction of theft of old date is not a habitual offender.²

The previous offence must have been committed since the Penal Code came into operation.³

Principle.—This section does not constitute a separate offence, but only imposes a liability to enhanced punishment. The meaning of the section is that when an offender, being punished,

(a) by a Court in British India, or

(b) by a Court in the territory of a Native State acting under the authority of Government for an offence under Chapter XII (offences relating to coin and Government stamp) or Chapter XVII (offences against property) of the Code, punishable with three years' imprisonment, commits a similar description of offence after his release from prison, he is liable to increased punishment, on the ground that the punishment undergone has had no effect in preventing a repetition of the crime.

To bring an offence within the terms of this section—

(1) the offence must be one under either Chapter XII or XVII of the Code;

(2) the previous conviction must have been for an offence therein punishable with imprisonment for not less than three years; and

(3) the subsequent offence must also be punishable with imprisonment for not less than three years.

1. 'Having been convicted.'—The section declares that if any person, having been convicted of any offence punishable under certain chapters, shall be guilty of any offence punishable under those chapters, he shall for every such subsequent offence be liable to the penalties therein declared. Where, therefore, a person committed an offence punishable under Chapter XII or XVII with imprisonment of three years, and, previously to his being convicted of such offence, committed another such offence, it was held that he was not subject, on being convicted of the second offence, to the enhanced punishment provided by this section.⁴ Similarly, the section is held not to apply to offences committed at one and the same time⁵, because it postulates the commission of the offence which forms the subject of the subsequent charge at a period subsequent to the date of the offence of which the accused was before convicted. The accused cannot be charged with a conviction for an offence committed subsequent to the date of the offence for which he is on his trial.⁶

In one case the Calcutta High Court gave a very liberal construction to the expression 'having been convicted.' It said: "The meaning of the law appears to us to be that, when an offender, after having been punished with imprisonment for a crime under Ch. XVII, again, after his release from prison, commits a similar description of crime or a crime punishable under the same chapter, he is liable under s. 75 to enhanced punishment, on the ground that the sentence already borne has had no effect in preventing a repetition of his crime, and has been, therefore, insufficient as a warning. But where the prisoner's conviction has taken place a very short time before, and where no imprisonment under it has yet been undergone, and no time has been given for reformation, it cannot be said that a prisoner has had any opportunity of shewing what the effect of the first sentence

¹ Shamjee Nathoo, (1878) 1 C. L. R. 481; Gulki Jena, (1908) 12 C. W. N. (xxiii); Jovan-Air Singh, (1913) P. L. R. No. 4 of 1914, P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 3 of 1914.

² Nga Lu Gye, (1884) S. J. L. B. 291.

³ Kalyan Sen Yau, (1867) 4 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 11; Mohd. Abdul Kader, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 17; Harpal, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.)

9; Fudon, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 66.

⁴ Megha, (1878) 1 AIL 637; Sakya Lalad Karji, (1883) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 26; Beni Chamar, (1894) 8 C. P. L. R. 17.

⁵ Jhoomul Chamar, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.)

60.

⁶ Anon., (1875) 1 Weir 29.

would have been upon him, and it would not be just to punish him as though he were an incorrigible offender whom no comparatively light punishment could wean from evil courses."¹ It is submitted that this interpretation is too wide and is hardly in consonance with the spirit and letter of the section.

2. Clause (a).—The offence need not only be an offence under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII but it should also be punishable with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards.² It is not necessary that the punishment actually awarded for the first offence should have been imprisonment for three years. But both the previous and subsequent offences shall be offences of the class punishable with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards.³

3. Clause (b).—Under this clause the Court or tribunal in the territory of a Native Prince or State in India must be acting under the general or special authority of the Local or Supreme Government. Conviction by a Court in a Native State which is not under such authority cannot, therefore, be taken into consideration in enhancing punishment under this section.⁴

4. 'Subsequent offence.'—These words mean an offence committed subsequently to the previous conviction. A person is not liable to enhanced punishment under this section unless the subsequent conviction is for an offence committed after the previous conviction.⁵

5. 'Transportation for life.'—Under this section if a sentence of transportation is awarded it must be for life. The Court can, however, under this section, sentence the offender, in the alternative, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years and thereafter under the provisions of s. 59 the Court can, instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment, sentence the offender to transportation for a term not less than seven years and not exceeding the term for which under the Code such offender is liable to imprisonment.⁶

Value of property stolen is no test.—"Too much importance is very generally attached to the value of the property stolen in awarding sentences. The value of the property stolen is very often a mere accident, and the important question is the intention of the man, and his character and attitude towards society."⁷

Attempt.—This section does not apply to cases of attempts not specially made offences in Chapters XII and XVII of the Code.⁸ Penal statutes are construed strictly; so Chapter XXIII relating to attempts cannot be included within the purview of this section when it specially mentions Chapters XII and XVII. This section does not, therefore, apply to cases which are confined to s. 511 of the Code. The offences which fall under s. 511 must be punished entirely irrespective of this section.⁹

Abetment.—The previous conviction of an accused for an offence under Chapters XII and XVII cannot be taken into consideration at a subsequent

¹ Pubon, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 66.

² Chandaria, (1911) P. L. R. No. 235 of 1911, (1911) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 36 of 1911; Thakur Prasad Singh, (1924) 2 Pat. L. R. 203, Fattu, (1922) 6 L. L. J. 110.

³ Anon., (1874) 1 Weir 38.

⁴ See Bahawal, (1913) P. R. No. 17 of 1913, in which a conviction by a Court in the Bikaner State was not taken into account in imposing enhanced sentence under this section as it was not shown that the Court was acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council or of any local Government. Followed in Bhanwar, (1919) 42 All. 136.

⁵ Po So, (1917) 9 L. B. R. 77.

⁶ Muhammad Sharif, (1915) P. R. No. 14

of 1915.

⁷ Per Clark, C. J., in Nur Din, (1903) P. R. No. 28 of 1903.

⁸ Dattu Harce, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 35, Nana Ekim, (1880) 5 Bom. 140, Ram Dyal, (1881) 3 All. 773, Sricharan Bhan, (1887) 14 Cal. 357, (1868) 1 Weir 36; Motawal Pakuran, (1888) 1 Weir 37, Dera Singh, (1871) P. R. No. 27 of 1872; Nihal Singh, (1882) P. R. No. 37 of 1882, Fattu, (1884) P. R. No. 34 of 1884, Harram, (1907) P. R. No. 17 of 1907, Ramkath Bhan, (1901) 14 C. P. L. R. 72.

⁹ Bharosa, (1895) 17 All. 123, Ajadhia, (1905) 17 All. 120; Motawal Pakuran, supra; Jasman Lal, (1906) P. R. No. 14 of 1906; Gharisa, (1918) P. R. No. 13 of 1918.

offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of that Code, with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, or

(b) by a Court or Tribunal in the territories of any Prince or State in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council, or of any Local Government, of any offence which would, if committed in British India, have been punishable under any of the aforesaid sections or Chapters of the Indian Penal Code with like imprisonment for a like term, is again convicted of any offence punishable under any of those sections or Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards by a High Court, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, such Court or Magistrate may, if it or he thinks fit, at the time of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment on such person, also order that his residence and any change of or absence from such residence after release be notified as hereinafter provided for a term not exceeding five years from the date of the expiration of such sentence.

(2) If such conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order shall become void.

(3) The Local Government may make rules to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence or change of or absence from residence by released convicts.

(4) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

(5) Any person against whom an order has been made under this section and who refuses or neglects to comply with any rule so made shall be deemed within the meaning of s. 176 of the Indian Penal Code to have omitted to give a notice required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence.

(6) Any person charged with a breach of any such rule may be tried by a Magistrate of competent jurisdiction in the district in which the place last notified by him as his place of residence is situated.¹

Jurisdiction.—A Magistrate cannot award punishment beyond his powers (as specified in s. 32, Criminal Procedure Code) because the offender has been previously convicted.² If he considers that a more severe sentence than he is empowered to pass is necessary, he should commit the prisoner to the Court of Session.³

The Punjab Rule.—2. Under s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, a person convicted a second time of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Code, with three years' imprisonment and upwards, is liable to a greatly enhanced sentence.

3. This, of course, does not increase the competence of the Court trying the offender; but s. 348 of the Code of Criminal Procedure gives the Magistrate a discretion to try the case himself, if, in his opinion, an adequate sentence can be passed by him. If the Magistrate is unable to adequately punish the accused person, he should commit such person to the Court of Session, or Chief Court; or transfer the case for trial to the Magistrate of the District invested with powers under s. 30. A provision is also contained in s. 317 that, if it appears to any Magistrate at any stage of the proceedings that the case ought to be tried by a Court of Session (or a District Magistrate empowered under s. 30) he should make over the case for trial to the Court of Session or to the District Magistrate.

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 563.

² Fithya, (1871) Unrep. Cr. C. 49; David Naray., (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 548; (1870) 6 M. H. C. App. 2; (1865) 1 Weir 36; Galab Hamir, (1894) Unrep. Cr. C. 688; Bahadur

Khan, (1872) P. R. No. 31 of 1872; Nga Tun Tka, (1894) P. J. L. B. 78

³ Gowd Lodu, (1864) 2 B. H. C. 126; Khalak, (1889) 11 All. 393.

Action may be taken under these two sections of the Code of Criminal Procedure by Magistrates of all classes.

4. Every case in which the accused person is liable to enhanced punishment should be seen, in the first instance, by the Magistrate of the District, and, in the event of his not considering it necessary to try it himself, he should send it to a specially selected Magistrate for trial, if possible to one with powers under s. 565, Criminal Procedure Code, and should direct the Magistrate's attention to s. 318 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code.

5. Where a Magistrate of the first class finds he is unable to punish any offender adequately, he should submit the case to the District Magistrate with a view to its transfer for trial by a Magistrate with powers under s. 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Cases in which a Magistrate with powers under s. 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot pass an adequate sentence should be committed to the Court of Session.

6. Ordinarily, every case in which there are two previous convictions should be tried by a Magistrate with powers under s. 30, and also those cases of single previous convictions where the previous conviction was of a serious offence such as burglary, or where in the previous case there was a sentence of more than one year's rigorous imprisonment.

Where there have been four or five previous convictions of offences against property, or where the aggregate of previous sentences amounts to four or five years' imprisonment, the case should ordinarily be committed to the Court of Session. Sessions Judges should keep in view the necessity of transporting for life incorrigible offenders, men whose previous convictions show that they are preying on society, and of whose reform there is no reasonable expectation.

In determining what sentences should be passed on previous convicts, Courts should freely refer to the judgments in their previous convictions, the facts in which will often help to ascertain the characters of the convicts and whether there is any reasonable probability of their reform.

7. In continuation of the remarks contained in Order No. 36 of this volume, it is pointed out that cases are rare in which whipping alone is sufficient on a second conviction, while a sentence of whipping only is never suitable in cases in which the Court is satisfied that an offender is leading a life of crime.

8. In awarding sentences of transportation in lieu of imprisonment under s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, Magistrates should bear in mind that the provisions of this section are subject to those of s. 59, and sentences of transportation in lieu of imprisonment may be passed on conviction under s. 75, but the sentence of transportation can never exceed the maximum term of imprisonment, which under s. 75 is 10 years. If a longer period of imprisonment is provided for the substantive offence (e.g., 14 years under s. 457, Indian Penal Code), it would not be illegal to sentence to transportation for 14 years, whether the conviction was under s. 457, Indian Penal Code, alone, or under s. 457, Indian Penal Code, combined with s. 75.

9. Section 349 gives a Magistrate of the second or third class the means of securing the proper punishment of an accused when he finds, in the course of the trial, that the maximum sentence which he is empowered to inflict would be insufficient. At the same time, in resorting to this section, it must be remembered that, when the accused appears to be an habitual offender he must ordinarily be dealt with under the provisions of s. 318, and be sent to the District Magistrate for trial under s. 30, or be committed to the Court of Session.

10. It is the duty of the Police, in conducting the investigation, to take proper steps to establish the identity of an accused person and to obtain and produce evidence of previous convictions against him. The attention of Criminal Courts is directed to the decision of the Chief Court in the case of *Empress v. Sham Singh*¹ and especially to the remarks of Mr. Justice Plowden at page 70 of the Record, with regard to the duties of the Magistrate and of the Police in this matter. It will be seen that the discovery, subsequent to sentence, that the prisoner has been previously convicted, but that this has escaped notice on account of a change of name, is not in itself a good ground for interference on revision.

11. In Punjab Government Circular No. 43-1077, dated the 29th July 1870, the criminal Courts of the Province were instructed to enter any previous conviction or convictions of a prisoner upon the warrant committing him to jail, and the attention of all Magistrates is directed to these instructions. In the form of warrant of commitment prescribed for use under the Code of Criminal Procedure, provision has been made for mention of the fact that the convict has been previously convicted, when one or more previous convictions have been proved against him at his trial, and for the entry of the particulars of the previous convictions in a separate statement, which should be attached to the warrant of commitment in such cases.¹

Upper Burma Rule.—Apart from the question whether a previous conviction affects the punishment which a Court is competent to award, it is the duty of a Court, whenever a previous conviction is brought to its notice, to consider the nature of the conviction and, if it is of opinion that it constitutes a proper ground for passing a severer sentence than the Court would otherwise pass for the offence for which the accused is being tried, it should take evidence as to the previous conviction, and it may enter the previous conviction in the charge in order that the accused may understand that it will be taken into consideration in passing sentence, but the charge should not refer to the special provisions under which enhanced punishment can be awarded unless the Court trying the accused is competent to award such punishment.²

Accused persons who have been previously convicted of offences punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for three years or more, and who are again prosecuted for any such offence, should not be tried by a Magistrate of the second or third class without the permission of the District or the Sub-divisional Magistrate.³

Lower Burma Rule.—Accused persons who have been previously convicted of offences punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for three years or more, and who are again prosecuted for any such offence, should not be tried by a Magistrate of the second or third class without the permission of the District or the Sub-divisional Magistrate.⁴

In considering whether such permission should be given or not, District and Sub-divisional Magistrates should remember that these cases must, under s. 318, be either committed to the Court of Session or tried throughout by the Magistrate who is empowered to dispose of them; and that they cannot be referred for if the accused has been previously convicted twice or oftener of such an offence, the case should ordinarily be tried by a Magistrate invested with special powers under s. 30, or committed to the Court of Session.⁵

If an habitual criminal who is convicted of an offence punishable under Chapters XII and XVII of the Penal Code with three years' imprisonment and upwards after three previous convictions of similar offences is not sentenced to transportation, the reason should be stated.⁷

Oudh Rule.—The Government of India has noticed the comparatively small extent to which the provisions of s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code are used in the case of habitual convicts. It has been remarked that the sentence of transportation for life is peculiarly appropriate in the case of persons habitually guilty

¹ P. C. C. R. & O., Vol. II, No. 39, p. 223.

² U. B. C. M., s. 310.

³ Ibid., s. 238.

⁴ L. B. C. M., Vol. I, s. 234.

⁵ Ibid., s. 235.

⁶ Ibid., s. 236.

⁷ Ibid., s. 237.

of offences against property, for whom jail-life in India appears to have no terrors, but who might possibly be reformed if removed from the scene of their crimes. The Judicial Commissioner therefore suggests a more extensive use of the power conferred by s. 75 of the Penal Code.¹

In order to render s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code effective, it has been provided (s. 348, Code of Criminal Procedure) that persons coming within its provisions shall, if the Magistrate considers them habitual offenders, ordinarily be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, or placed on their trial before the District Magistrate who is invested with powers under s. 30, Criminal Procedure Code. It is obvious that the sentence to be passed on such an offender ought in some measure to depend upon the nature of his previous convictions and sentences. Magistrates, therefore, will be expected to use a discretion in making commitments of such offenders.²

Bengal Rule.—Date of previous conviction and sentence to be stated in the judgment.—Whenever an enhanced sentence is passed on conviction on a charge within the terms of s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, the Sessions Judge or Magistrate shall state in his judgment the date of each previous conviction and the sentence passed, as well as the particular offence charged.³

Allahabad Rule.—In a case to which the provisions of s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code apply, the Court, if it convicts the accused, shall set forth in its judgment each previous conviction proved against or admitted by the accused, specifying the date of the conviction, the section under which it was had, and the sentence imposed.⁴

Patna Circular.—Whenever an enhanced sentence is passed upon an accused on conviction on a charge within the terms of s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, the Sessions Judge should enter in the column for remarks the date of each previous conviction, the offence charged, and the sentence passed on each occasion.⁵

Punishment.—No distinct sentence of imprisonment is awardable on account of a previous conviction as it is not in itself an offence. It is merely a circumstance rendering the offender, convicted of a subsequent offence, liable to a larger measure of punishment.⁶ The appellant, after four previous convictions for theft, was sentenced for a fifth theft of property of no great value to seven years' transportation. It was held that the sentence was not excessive.⁷ A sentence should never be heavier than is necessary to deter the criminal from committing the offence again. In the case of men with previous convictions, regard should be had to their career and to the time that has elapsed between the convictions had against them. This section and s. 221 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are not intended for the purpose of automatically enhancing by a kind of geometrical progression the sentence to be passed after a previous conviction.⁸ This section gives no authority for passing a sentence of whipping in addition to any other punishment.⁹

A Sessions Judge cannot (under this section, or otherwise), by amalgamating a sentence which he is competent to pass upon a prisoner with a sentence under which such prisoner is already undergoing imprisonment, and commuting the latter sentence, condemn such prisoner to a longer period of transportation than he is liable to suffer for the crime of which he has last been convicted.¹⁰

Where a previous conviction is proved, the prisoner cannot be dealt with under s. 35, Criminal Procedure Code, as if he had been convicted of two offences.¹¹

¹ O. C. D., s. 68.

² Ibid., s. 62.

³ C. H. C. R. & O., Vol. I, Ch. 1, s. 99.

⁴ A. H. C. G. R. (Cr.) Ch. 8, s. 2.

⁵ Pat. H. C. Cr. C., para 40, p. 18.

⁶ (1868) 1 Weir 36; (1878) 1 Weir 37;

Culob Hamir, (1894) Unrep. Cr. C. 695; (1870) 6 M. H. C. App. 2.

⁷ Nga Kan Tha, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 147.

⁸ Po Nyern, (1917) 9 L. B. R. 167.

⁹ Nga Tun Tha, (1894) P. J. L. B. 78.

¹⁰ Sakya v. Kari, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 36.

¹¹ Khalaf, (1889) 11 All. 393.

Record of previous conviction.—Records of previous conviction should not be put in until the close of the trial as they can only be used after conviction in determining the measure of punishment.¹ In the case of a trial by a jury or with the aid of assessors when the accused is charged with an offence and further charged that he is by reason of a previous conviction liable to enhanced punishment or to punishment of a different kind for such subsequent offence, the procedure shall be as follows, namely :—

(a) Such further charge shall not be read out in Court and the accused shall not be asked to plead thereto, nor shall the same be referred to by the prosecution, or any evidence adduced thereon unless and until,

(i) he has been convicted of the subsequent offence, or

(ii) the jury have delivered their verdict, or the opinions of the assessors have been recorded, on the charge of the subsequent offence.

(b) In the case of a trial held with the aid of assessors, the Court may, in its discretion, proceed or refrain from proceeding with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous conviction.²

But evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.³

Charge.—If the accused having been previously convicted of any offence, is liable, by reason of such previous conviction, to enhanced punishment, or to punishment of a different kind, for a subsequent offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court may think fit to award for the subsequent offence, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement has been omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.⁴ But it cannot do so after it is passed.⁵ The fact, date and place, of the previous conviction must be stated severally, otherwise the accused is not amenable to the terms of this section.⁶ A charge of having committed the offence after a previous conviction, therefore, should contain an allegation that the offence has been committed after a previous conviction. A statement in account that, at the time when the prisoner committed the offence (no offence having been mentioned specifically in the count), he had been previously convicted of offences punishable under Chapter XVII of the Penal Code, is not sufficient.⁷ A separate charge under s. 75 of the Penal Code must be framed and recorded if the prisoner is to be tried for an offence punishable under it.⁸

Charge after a previous conviction should run thus :—

I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you—as follows :

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, committed—and thereby committed an offence punishable under section—of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance [or within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or the High Court)].

And you, the said—, stand further charged that you, before the committing of the said offence, had been convicted on the—day of—in Calendar No.—of —on the file of—of an offence punishable under Chapter XII (or XVII) of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years, to wit, the offence of—, which conviction is still in full force and effect, and that you are thereby liable to enhanced punishment under s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code.

¹ Shiboo Mundle, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 38, Jehan Mullick, (1865) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 67.

² Section 310, Criminal Procedure Code.

³ Section 311, ibid.

⁴ Section 221 (7), ibid.

⁵ Rajcoomar Bose, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

⁶ Haider, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 110; Abbulu, (1909) 7 M. L. T. 77.

⁷ Sheik Jakir, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 39.

⁸ Dorasami, (1886) 9 Mad. 284; Dungri, (1911) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 40 of 1911.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said High Court (or the Court of Session) on the said charge.

In all cases in which a previous conviction of any offence would render an accused person liable, if convicted on the charges for which he is under trial, to the penalty of whipping as an additional punishment, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment to be awarded, the Court trying the accused person shall draw up a distinct charge specifying the liability to whipping as an additional punishment and how it arises.

The charge should be to the following effect:—

That at a date previous to the date of the offence of—now charged against you—viz. on the—~~you~~—were convicted by the Court of—~~of the offence~~ of—specified in s. 3 or 4 of the Whipping Act (IV of 1909) and that this conviction of—is still in full force and effect and being a conviction for the same specific offence as that now charged against you, renders you liable in case you should now be again convicted of—to the punishment of whipping in addition to the punishment provided for the said offence by the Indian Penal Code.

Madras Rule.—If it is proposed to prove several previous convictions against an accused person for the purpose of affecting his punishment, they should not be lumped in one head of charge, but should be set forth separately, each under a distinct head of charge.¹

The Central Provinces Circular.—It seems necessary to point out that all convictions on record at the date of the charge are not always to be reckoned as previous convictions for the purposes of s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code or ss. 3 and 4 of Act VI of 1861. A previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which a Court is competent to award is a conviction the penalty following which had been undergone by the accused (in whole or in part) at the time when he committed the offence for which he is being tried.

When a person has been committed at or about the same time of more offences than one and after undergoing the accumulated penalties for those offences commits another offence and is again convicted, each of the previous convictions is a separate conviction in relation to the present conviction.

It is not necessary to state previous convictions in the charge unless it is intended to prove them for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award, that is, in order to render the accused liable to a sentence which could not otherwise have been passed under the law, such as an enhanced sentence under the provisions of s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, or a sentence of whipping, in addition to other punishment under Act VI of 1861.

Where previous convictions are used, not for the purpose of affecting the punishment to which the accused is legally liable, but merely to influence the Court in determining the amount of punishment which it shall award, though they need not be stated in the charge, they should be formally proved if they are not admitted. In using them for this limited purpose the Magistrate should be guided by the analogy of s. 310, Criminal Procedure Code. The judgment should be temporarily closed as soon as the conclusion that the accused is guilty has been arrived at therein. The order sheet should then show that the accused is questioned as to certain previous convictions alleged but not up to that stage admissible in evidence, the actual questions and answers being recorded as a postscript to the examination made under s. 312, Criminal Procedure Code. Whether these convictions are admitted or denied, the documents constituting legal proof of them will of course be filed with the record. Finally, the judgment will be completed and the printed sheet for finding and sentence will then be filled up.²

¹ M. R. C. R. P., s. 162.

² C. P. (Cr. C.) No. 17, ss. 4, 5, 6 and 7.

CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

" This chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations. Some limitations relate only to a single provision, or to a very small class of provisions. . . Every such exception evidently ought to be appended to the rule which it is intended to modify. But there are other exceptions which are common to all the penal clauses of the Code, or to a great variety of clauses dispersed over many chapters . . . It would obviously be inconvenient to repeat these exceptions several times in every page. We have, therefore, placed them in a separate chapter, and we have provided that every definition of an offence, every penal provision, and every illustration of a definition or penal provision, shall be construed subject to the provisions contained in that chapter."¹

The word ' offence ' in this Chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code, or under any special or local law (s. 40).

This Chapter applies to offences punishable under ss. 121-A, 124-A, 225-A, 225-B, 294-A. and 304-A.²

Onus of proving an exception lies on the accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.³

Where an accused person has raised pleas inconsistent with a defence which would bring his case within c . . . up a case, upon the evidence exception, the circumstance . . . within any of the general exceptions can and may be proved from the evidence given for the prosecution or to be found elsewhere in the record. In the absence of such evidence the Court is not competent to assume the existence of those circumstances, more particularly when the pleas taken are inconsistent with the assumption that such circumstances might have existed or that doubt may arise in consequence of such assumption and the accused ought to be given the benefit of the doubt.⁴

Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound by law

76. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is, or who by reason of a mistake of fact¹ and not by reason of a mistake of law² in good faith believes himself to be, bound by law³ to do it.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, a soldier, fires on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law. A has committed no offence.

¹ Note B, p. 104.

² Act XXVII of 1870, s. 13, as amended by Act XII of 1891.

³ The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872,

s. 105; Shibo Prasad Pandah, (1878) 4 Cal. 124; Dwijendra Chandra, (1915) 19 C. W. N. 1013.

⁴ Wajid Hussin, (1910) 7 A. L. J. R. 433.

(b) A, an officer of a Court of Justice, being ordered by that Court to arrest Y, and, after due enquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

COMMENT.

No more is meant by this section than to excuse a person who has done what by law is an offence, under a misconception of facts, leading him to believe in good faith that he was commanded by law to do it. It is based on the maxim ignorantia facti excusat. See Comment on s. 79, infra.

Scope.—This and the following three sections leave untouched the liability in a civil suit of the persons who claim their benefit.

1. 'Mistake of fact.'—See Comment under s. 79, infra.

2. 'Mistake of law.'—See Comment under s. 79, infra.

3. 'In good faith believes himself to be, bound by law.'—In reference to this section, Rattigan, J., has observed: "To entitle a person to claim the benefit of that section (s. 76) it is necessary to show the existence of a state of facts which would justify the belief in good faith, interpreting the latter expression with reference to s. 52,... that the person to whom the order was given was bound by law to obey it. Thus in the case of a soldier, the Penal Code does not recognize the mere duty of blind obedience to the commands of a superior as sufficient to protect him from the penal consequences of his act. Difficult as the position may appear to be, the law requires that the soldier should exercise his own judgment, and unless the actual circumstances are of such a character that he may have reasonably entertained the belief that the order was one which he was bound to obey, he will be responsible like any other sane person for his act although he may have committed it under the erroneous supposition that his superior was by law authorized to issue the order. His mistake in short must be a mistake entertained in good faith on a question of fact. Such a construction of the law, may indeed subject the soldier to military penalties, and, in certain cases place him in the serious dilemma of either refusing to obey an order which he believed to be unjustifiable in fact, thereby rendering himself liable to military law, or, by obeying it, to subject himself to the penal consequences of his act."

But on a balance of considerations the Legislature of the community that no special exemption commits what would ordinarily be a penal offence from that enjoyed by any other person, who does the same act believing in good faith that he is bound by law to do it. A mistake of law in either case would afford no protection, though it might go in mitigation of punishment, and thus military discipline, while it regulates the conduct of the soldier in military matters, is made subject to a higher law in favour of public safety, when the act which the military discipline attempts to enforce or to justify is one which affects the person or property of another. In such a case the civil law looks to the surrounding circumstances to see whether they are of such a character as would lead a man of ordinary intelligence to entertain a reasonable belief that he is bound by law to obey the command of his superior."¹ Alison, in his Principles of the Criminal Law of Scotland,² says: "The express command of a Magistrate or officer will exonerate an inferior officer or soldier, unless the command be to do something plainly illegal, or beyond his known duty. If through gross ignorance, or neglect, or design, a Judge or Magistrate pronounce an unlawful sentence, what shall be said of the officers or others who carry it into execution?... If the order or warrant was plainly illegal, as, for example, to strangle a prisoner in jail, or to poison him, or the like, certainly the mere possession of such a warrant will not prevent the officer who wickedly yields it obedience from being held as art and part in the legal murder, and suffering for its commission. But, on the other hand, if the error was in such a part of the proceedings, as the officer entrusted with its execution has no opportunity of seeing, and is not called upon in duty to examine, and if the warrant put into his hands be fair and in ordinary form, certainly he will not be answerable for any illegality or vice in the previous and to him inscrutable proceedings.

¹ Naimat Khan, (1883) P. R. No. 17 of 1883.

² First edition, p. 673.

"The same distinction is applicable to the case of a soldier acting in obedience to the orders of his superior officer, with this additional circumstance in his favour, that he is not only in a much humbler station, and trained to more implicit obedience than a legal functionary, but subject to a peculiar and peremptory Code of laws, armed with powers of extraordinary severity, for the express purpose of enforcing on his part the most implicit obedience to command. It will require, therefore, the very strongest case to subject a soldier to punishment for what he does in obedience to the distinct commands of his commanding officer. But still this privilege must have its limits; it is confined to what is commanded in the course of official duty, and which plainly and evidently does not transgress its limits. For what if an officer command a private soldier to commit murder or to steal, or to aid him in a rape, or if he order a file of soldiers to fire on an inoffensive multitude, certainly in none of these cases will the privates be exempt from punishment if they yield obedience to such criminal mandates."

For illegal acts, however, neither the orders of a parent nor those of a master will furnish any defence.

Liability of private persons to assist the Police.—Private persons bound to assist the Police under s. 42 of the Code of Criminal Procedure would be protected under this section.

C A S E S .

Lawful arrest of a wrong person.—A police-officer came to Bombay from Kanara with a warrant to arrest a person. After reasonable inquiries he arrested the complainant believing in good faith that he was the person to be arrested. The complainant prosecuted the police-officer for wrongful confinement. It was held that the police-officer was protected by this section and was guilty of no offence.¹

Act done under a superior's order.—Nothing but fear of instant death is the defence for a policeman who tortures any one by the order of a superior. The maxim respondet superior has no application in such a case.² Where a Naik and three sepoys of a Regiment were found on the facts to be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, in that they fired upon a mob which was threatening them under circumstances which did not render the act excusable under s. 96, and two men were shot dead, it was held that the sepoys, who had fired in obedience to the Naik's order, were not protected by this section, as they were cognizant of all the circumstances of the quarrel, and, there being no room for a mistake of fact, they must be taken to have known that the Naik was wrong in law in firing upon the mob, and that they were not bound to obey his illegal order.³ A constable verbally ordered two other police constables to arrest bad characters on a road and to fire if resisted. The accused challenged two men and then fired as one of them did not stop and killed one man. It was held that the accused acted unlawfully and should not have been acquitted on a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. A police-officer who commits a wrongful act under the order of his superior officer is liable to punishment as his mistake of law in supposing himself authorized cannot be accepted as a good defence though it may be a ground for mitigation of punishment.⁴

¹ Gopala Kallaiya, (1923) 26 Bom. L. R. 138, 7 Bom. Cr. C. 128.

² Latifkhan, (1895) 20 Bom. 394.

³ Gurdit Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 16 of 1883.

⁴ Nga Myat Tha, (1882) S. J. L. B. 164. The detention by a Mungar of certain persons under the order of a District Magistrate was held to be illegal: Kampai Gowda, (1911) 5 Cri. L. Rep. 34.

English cases.—A gun discharged in the ordinary and regular course of ball practice by an artillery man in a garrison town missed the mark, and killed a man who was lawfully passing near the spot in a boat, the place being a public one and open to all people. The artillery man who fired the gun was acting under the command of a superior officer, who was acting in obedience to the general orders of the Major-General. It was held that the Major-General was not guilty of manslaughter.¹ A sailor was ordered by his superior officer on board a man-of-war to prevent boats from approaching the ship, and had ammunition given him for that purpose. Boats having persisted, after repeated warnings, in approaching the ship, he fired at one and killed a person. It was held that this was murder although he fired under the impression that it was his duty to do so, as the act was not necessary for the preservation of the ship.² A soldier, who commanded the Guards at the trial and execution of Charles I., pleaded at his trial that all he did was as a soldier by the command of his superior officer whom he must obey or die. It was resolved that that was no excuse, for his superior was a traitor, and all who joined with him in that act were traitors and where the command is traitorous the obedience to that command is also traitorous.³

Bound by law.—Where a defamatory statement was made by a person as a witness in a case, but the person was not bound by law to go into the witness box and make it, it was held that this section did not apply.⁴ On an indictment against the engine driver and fireman of a railway train for the manslaughter of persons killed while travelling in a preceding train running into it, it appeared that on the day in question special instructions had been issued to them, which altered the signal for danger so as to make it mean not 'stop' but proceed with caution. It was held that if the prisoners honestly believed that they were observing them, and they were not obviously illegal, they were not criminally responsible.⁵

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Punishment.—Though ignorance of law is not a defence in law, yet it is a matter to be considered in mitigation of punishment.⁶

77. Nothing is an offence which is done by a Judge¹ when acting judicially² in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith³ he believes to be, given to him by law.

COMMENT.

This section protects Judges from criminal process just as the Judicial Officers' Protection Act⁷ saves them from civil suits. Section 1 of that Act says: "No Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Collector or other person acting judicially shall be liable to be sued in any Civil Court for any act done or ordered to be done by him in the discharge of his judicial duties, whether or not within the limits of his jurisdiction. Provided that he at the time, in good faith, believed himself to have jurisdiction to do or order the act complained of."

"a Judge only; whereas the Judicial e, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace,

Under this section a Judge is exempted not only in those cases in which he proceeds irregularly in the exercise of a power which the law gives him, but also in cases where he in good faith exceeds his jurisdiction and has no lawful powers.

¹ Hutchinson, (1864) 9 Cox 555.

² Thomas, (1815) 4 M. & S. 442.

³ Axtell, (1861) Keyling 13

⁴ Bhagwan Singh v. Arjun Datt, (1920) 18

A. L. J. R. 810.

⁵ Trainer, (1864) 4 F. & F. 105.

⁶ Esop, (1836) 7 C. & P. 456.

⁷ Act XVIII of 1850, s. 1.

In a Calcutta case Markby, J., said : " The duties which he (a Magistrate) usually performs are of such a nature as to render it absolutely necessary for their due performance that he should have that protection. He has generally either to punish an offence or to vindicate the rights of a private individual ; and if he were hampered by fear of the consequences which might arise from a mistaken conclusion, he could not have that independence of mind which is essential to the discharge of such functions as these. This protection is not confined to persons holding and exercising a regular judicial office, but it extends to any persons whose duty it is to adjudicate upon the rights or punish the misconduct of any given person, whatever form their proceedings may take, or however informal they may be. This has been so held in England¹—and I do not see any reason to doubt that the same would be held here."²

1. ' Judge.'—See s. 19, supra.

2. ' Judicially '—" The word ' judicial ' has two meanings : it may refer to the discharge of duties exercisable by a Judge or by justices in court, or to administrative duties which need not be performed in court, but in respect of which it is necessary to bring to bear a judicial mind,—i.e., a mind to determine what is fair and just in respect of the matters under consideration. Justices, for instance, act judicially when administering the law in court, and they also act judicially when determining in their private room what is right and fair in some administrative matter brought before them, as, for instance, levying a rate."³ It is not in respect of acts in Court, acts sedente curia, that a Judge has an immunity, but in respect of all acts of a judicial nature.⁴ An order under the seal of a criminal Court to bring a native in that Court, to be there dealt with on a criminal charge, is an act of a judicial nature, and whether there was any irregularity or error in it, or not, would be dispunishable by ordinary process at law.⁵ If it be once established, that the act in question emanated from, and was appropriate to, the legal duties of the office of a Judge, it must stand as an act purely judicial. Whether such act be done by the Judge in chamber or sedente curia, the privileges connected with the duties of the Judge's situation, and which are given for the public safety and advantage, in which the security and independence of the Judge are interwoven, must necessarily await upon such acts, as if they are judicial.⁶

If a party bona fide, and not absurdly, believes that he is acting in pursuance of a statute, he is entitled to the special protection which the legislature intended for him although he has done an illegal act.⁷

When there is jurisdiction, but the jurisdiction is exercised under a misapprehension, either with reference to a person not within it or in excess of the power of the tribunal, in such cases the persons acting with judicial authority would not be criminally responsible ; but supposing there is no jurisdiction at all, that the whole proceeding is coram non iudice, that the judicial functions are exercised by persons who have no judicial authority or power, and a man's life is taken, that is murder.⁸

3. ' Good faith.'—See s. 52, supra. Where a criminal information is applied for against a Magistrate, the question for the Court is not whether the act done be found on investigation to be strictly right or not, but whether it proceeded from an unjust, oppressive, or corrupt motive or from mistake or error only.⁹

¹ Tozer v. Child, (1857) 7 E. & B. 377

² Chunder Narain v. Bryo Bullub, (1874) 14 Beng. L. R. 254, 257.

³ Per Lopez, L. J., in Royal Aquarium, etc., Society v. Parkinson, [1892] 1 Q. B. 431, 452

⁴ Calder v. Halket, (1840) 2 M. L. A. 293, 308.

⁵ Ibid, p. 308.

⁶ Vide the judgment of Lord Norbury in Taaffe v. Downes, (1814). This judgment was separately published at Dublin, but is not reported in any series of Reports.

⁷ Spooner v. Juddow, (1850) 4 M. L. A. 353, 379

⁸ Vide the judgment of Cockburn, C. J., in Nelson and Brand, (1867). This case is not reported in any series of Reports, but the Lord Chief Justice's charge to the jury is published in the form of a book.

⁹ Borron, (1820) 3 B. & Ald. 432.

78. Nothing which is done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order¹ of, a Court of Justice,² if done whilst such judgment or order remains in force, is an offence, notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction³ to pass such judgment or order, provided the person doing the act in good faith⁴ believes that the Court had such jurisdiction.

COMMENT.

This section is merely a corollary to s. 77. It affords protection to officers acting under the authority of a judgment or order of a Court of Justice. It differs from s. 77 on the question of jurisdiction. Under it the officer is protected in carrying out an order of a Court which may have no jurisdiction at all, if he believed that the Court had jurisdiction; whereas under s. 77 the Judge must be acting within his jurisdiction to be protected by it. It was Lord Hale's opinion that the order of a Court, having a colour of jurisdiction, though acting erroneously, is enough to justify the ministerial officer.

Mistake of law can be pleaded as a defence under this section.

1. 'Order.'—If the form of the order is not in accordance with law, for example, an oral order for a written one, the persons executing such order will not be protected under this section. A person was arrested under s. 478 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On his being brought before the Court, the Judge orally ordered the bailiff to keep him in custody. The bailiff in turn orally ordered a process-server to take charge of him. It was held that the bailiff and the process-server were liable for wrongful confinement as s. 481 of the Civil Procedure Code only authorized a Judge to commit persons to jail under a particular form of order.¹

2. 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

3. 'Jurisdiction.'—'Jurisdiction,' means authority or power to act in a matter, and not authority or power to do an act in a particular manner or form.² A judicial officer, for instance, who, in the discharge of his judicial duties, issues a warrant which he has authority to issue, though the particular form or manner in which he issues it is contrary to law, acts within and not without the limits of his jurisdiction in this sense.³

4. 'Good faith.'—See s. 52, supra. The arrest under civil process of a judgment-debtor going to a Court in obedience to a citation to give evidence, and made within the precincts of that Court, and with some show of violence and contempt of Court, was held not to entitle the officers making the arrest to protection under this section.⁴

Protection from civil liability.—The Judicial Officers' Protection Act⁵ says that "no officer of any Court or other person, bound to execute the lawful warrants or orders of any such Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Collector or other person acting judicially shall be liable to be sued in any Civil Court, for the execution of any warrant or order, which he would be bound to execute, if within the jurisdiction of the person issuing the same."

Protection of police-officers from prosecution or action.—The Police Act⁶ says: "When any action or prosecution shall be brought or any proceedings

¹ Maung Pu, (1908) 4 L. B. R. 253.

² Teyen v. Ram Lal, (1890) 12 All. 115; Calder v. Hallett, (1849) 2 M. L. A. 293.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Thakoordeo Nundee v. Shunkur Roy, (1863) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 53.

⁵ Act XVIII of 1850, s. 1.

⁶ Act V of 1861, s. 43, and The Madras

District Police Act (Mad. Act XXIV of 1859), s. 54. But see The Madras City Police Act (Mad. Act III of 1883), s. 81; the Bombay City Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1902), s. 140 (3); the Bombay District Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1890), s. 60 (3); and the Bombay Village Police Act (Bom. Act VIII of 1867), s. 20.

held against any police-officer for any act done by him in such capacity, it shall be lawful for him to plead that such act was done by him under the authority of a warrant issued by a Magistrate.

"Such plea shall be proved by the production of the warrant directing the act, and purporting to be signed by such Magistrate, and the defendant shall thereupon be entitled to a decree in his favour, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in such Magistrate. No proof of the signature of such Magistrate shall be necessary, unless the Court shall see reason to doubt its being genuine :

"Provided always that any remedy which the party may have against the authority issuing such warrant shall not be affected by anything contained in this section."

79. Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law,¹ or who by reason of a mistake of fact² and not by reason of a mistake of law³ in good faith,⁴ believes himself to be justified by law in doing it.

Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified, by law

ILLUSTRATION.

A sees Z commit what appears to A to be a murder. A, in the exercise, to the best of his judgment, exerted in good faith, of the power which the law gives to all persons of apprehending murderers in the fact, seizes Z, in order to bring Z before the proper authorities. A has committed no offence, though it may turn out that Z was acting in self-defence.

COMMENT.

Distinction between ss. 76 and 79.—The distinction between s. 76 and this section is that in the former a person is assumed to be bound, and in the latter to be justified by law, in other words the distinction is between a real or supposed legal obligation and a real or supposed legal justification, in doing the particular act

"Under both (these sections) there must be a bona fide intention to advance the Law, manifested by the circumstances attending the act which is the subject of charge ; and the party accused cannot allege generally that he had a good motive, but must allege specially that he believed in good faith that he was bound by Law (s. 76) to do as he did, or that being empowered by law (s. 79) to act in the matter, he had acted to the best of his judgment exerted in good faith."¹

Application of the section to special or local law.—The Madras High Court has held that the plea of justification provided by this section is available only for an offence punishable by the Code and not for offences punishable by any special or local law and hence the belief of the accused that he was justified in his act does not exculpate him from punishment for his guilt under the Forest Act.² The Bombay High Court has held otherwise in a case in which the accused, a contractor engaged by the Public Works Department, quarried stones required for a public road, from a place which was pointed out to him by the officers of that department. The place in question was in a protected forest and no permission was taken of the Forest Department for quarrying. The accused was convicted under the Indian Forest Act, but the High Court quashed the conviction on the ground that the accused was entitled to the protection under this section.³

1. 'Justified by law.'—This phrase is used in its proper and strict sense in reference to something needing to be vindicated as being in conformity with law.

¹ 1st Rep., s. 114.

² Lewis, (1913) 15 Cr. L. J. 171.

³ Kasim Jevab Sah, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 365.

2. 'Mistake of fact.'—'Mistake' is not mere forgetfulness.¹ It is a slip "made, not by design, but by mischance."² Mistake, as the term is used in jurisprudence, is an erroneous mental condition, conception, or conviction induced by ignorance, misapprehension, or misunderstanding of the truth, and resulting in some act or omission done or suffered erroneously by one or both of the parties to a transaction, but without its erroneous character being intended or known at the time. It may concern either the law or the facts involved.

A mistake of fact consists in an unconsciousness, ignorance, or forgetfulness of a fact past or present, material to the transaction, or in the belief of the present existence of a thing material to the transaction, which does not exist, or in the past existence of a thing which has not existed.

Under s. 76 and this section the mistake must be one of fact and not of law. At common law an honest and reasonable belief in the existence of circumstances, which, if true, would make the act for which a prisoner is indicted an innocent act, has always been held to be a good defence. Honest and reasonable mistake stands in fact on the same footing as absence of the reasoning faculty, as in insanity, or perversion of that faculty as in lunacy.³ If a man, for instance, intending to kill a thief in his own house, kills a member of his family, he will be guilty of no offence.⁴ "It may be laid down as a general rule that an alleged offender is deemed to have acted under that state of facts which he in good faith and on reasonable grounds believed to exist when he did the act alleged to be an offence."⁵ Where, through mistake, a man, intending to do a lawful act, does that which is unlawful, here the deed and the will act separately, there is not that conjunction between them which is necessary to form a criminal act. "Ignorantia facti doth excuse, for such an ignorance many times makes the act itself morally involuntary. . . It is known in war, that it is the greatest offence for a soldier to kill, or so much as to assault his general: suppose then the inferior officer sets his watch, or sentinels, and the general to try the vigilance or courage of his sentinels comes upon them in the night in the posture of an enemy, . . . the sentinel strikes, or shoots him, taking him to be an enemy; his ignorance of the person excuseth his offence."⁶ Similarly, where a man made a thrust with a sword at a place where, upon reasonable grounds, he supposed a burglar to be, and killed a person who was not a burglar, it was held that he had committed no offence.⁷ In other words, he was in the same situation as far as regarded the homicide as if he had killed a burglar.

But where an act is clearly a wrong in itself, and a person, under a mistaken impression as to facts which render it criminal, commits the act, then, according to the ratio decidendi in Prince's case,⁸ he will be guilty of a criminal offence.

Cases.—Mistake of fact.—Good defence.—The accused, a police constable, saw the complainant, early one morning, carrying under his arm three pieces of cloth. Suspecting that the cloth was stolen, he went up to the complainant and questioned him. The complainant gave answers that were not satisfactory and refused to allow the constable to inspect the cloth, and a scuffle thereupon ensued between the two. The complainant was arrested by the constable, but was released by the Inspector of Police. The complainant then prosecuted the constable for wrongful restraint and confinement, and the Magistrate convicted the constable of the said offence. The High Court held that the conviction was wrong as the constable acted under a bona fide belief that he was legally justified in detaining what he suspected to be stolen property. The putting of questions to the complainant to clear up his suspicions was an indication of good faith and he was,

¹ Per Escher, M. R., in Barrow v. Isaacs & Son, [1890] 1 Q. B. 417.

² Per Lord Russell, C. J., in Sandford v. Beal, (1895) 65 L. J. Q. B. 73, 74, 73 L. T. 408.

³ Per Cave, J., in Tolson, (1889) 23 Q. B. D. 168, 181, 16 Cox 629.

⁴ 1 Hale P. C. 42, 43; Levett, (1639) Cro. Car. 538.

⁵ Per Stephen, J., in Tolson, sup., p. 188.

⁶ 1 Hale P. C. 42.

⁷ Levett sup.

⁸ (1875) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 151. See Tolson, sup., p. 180.

therefore, protected by this section.¹ A Chowkidar in good faith took the complainant for a thief, and captured him. It was held that he was entitled to the benefit of s. 76 and this section. The Court said: "If there was any mistake regarding the fact of complainant's being a thief, it was a mistake of fact, and not a mistake of law."² Where certain persons went to execute a warrant of arrest against their judgment-debtor, and a palanquin with closed doors was noticed to be coming out of the male apartments of the house, and they believing that the judgment-debtor was effecting his escape in it, stopped it and examined it, although the persons accompanying it protested and said there was a lady in it and there turned out to be in it a pardanishin lady of rank, it was held that the accused were protected by this section.³

Where the act of conveying liquor without a permit was made penal by the Madras Abkari Act⁴ and the onus of proving that the act was not an offence was thrown by the Act upon the accused, it was held that the accused had discharged the onus by proving that they believed in good faith that they were not transporting liquor.⁵

English cases—The prisoner was convicted of bigamy, having gone through the ceremony of marriage within seven years after she had been deserted by her husband. She believed in good faith and on reasonable grounds that her husband was dead. It was held that a bona fide belief in the death of the husband at the time of the ceremony was a defence to the indictment, and that the conviction was not illegal. It was held that a licensed victualler from supplying liquor to a police constable on duty, and a victualler did supply liquor to a constable bona fide believing that he was off duty, it was held that he had committed no offence.⁷

Bad defence—A police-officer saw a horse tied up in B's premises, and because it happened to resemble one which his father had lost a short time previously, he jumped at once to the conclusion that B had either stolen the horse himself, or had purchased it from the thief, and compelled B to account for his possession.

It was held that the police-officer had not acted in good faith, that is, with due care and attention, and that this section did not protect him.⁸

English cases.—It is no defence to an indictment for unlawfully taking an unmarried girl under the age of sixteen years out of the possession, and against the will of her father, that the accused bona fide and reasonably believed that the girl was older than sixteen.⁹ One of the grounds for this decision was that, notwithstanding such belief, the prisoner intended to do and did a wrongful or immoral act, and not an innocent act, when he took the girl away. This case may be thus distinguished from Tolson's case, in which the conduct of the woman was not in the smallest degree immoral, but was, on the other hand, perfectly natural and legitimate. The accused was convicted under a statute of receiving lunatics into her house, not being a house duly licensed under the statute, but it was found that though the persons so received were lunatics, the defendant honestly, and on reasonable grounds, believed that they were not lunatics. It was held that such belief was immaterial and that the conviction was right.¹⁰ It is not easy to draw

¹ Bhawoo Jivaji v. Mulji Dayal, (1888) 12 Bom. 377. See Laurence v. Hedger, (1810) 3 Taunt. 14.

² Per Campbell, J., in Protab Chowkeedar, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 9.

³ Kanai Lal Gowla, (1897) 24 Cal. 885.

⁴ Madras Act I of 1886, s. 64.

⁵ Kandan, (1894) 1 Weir 40. See Waman

Dhanraj, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 171.

⁶ Tolson, (1859) 23 Q. B. D. 168.

⁷ Sherras v. De Rutzen, [1895] 1 Q. B. 918.

⁸ Sheo Surun Sahas v. Mahomed Fazil Khan, (1868) 10 W. R. 20.

⁹ Prince, (1875) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154.

¹⁰ Bishop, (1879) 5 Q. B. D. 59.

certain knowledge, the offence is not committed by one who acts without that knowledge, and it is immaterial whether the absence of the knowledge required to constitute the offence proceeded from ignorance of law or ignorance of fact. For, though ignorance of law is no ground of defence, it is evidence of mental condition.¹

The maxim ignorantia juris non excusat, in its application to criminal offences, admits of no exception, not even in the case of a foreigner who cannot reasonably be supposed in fact to know the law of the land.² In a case two Frenchmen were charged with wilful murder because they had acted as seconds in a duel in which one man had met his death. They alleged that they were ignorant of the fact that by the law of England killing an adversary in a fair duel amounted to murder. Coleridge, J., said: "We are told to lay down a different rule to what we should apply to native born subjects, because these persons are foreigners and . . . Lord Chief Justice, . . . with in the same . . . of a native, be received as an excuse for a crime, nor can it any more be urged in favour of a foreigner"³

Ignorance of a statute newly passed.—Although a person commits an act which is made an offence for the first time by a statute so recently passed as to render it impossible that any notice of the passing of the statute could have reached the place where the offence has been committed, yet his ignorance of the statute will not save him from punishment. In the case in which this principle has been laid down, the accused, a captain of a vessel, was indicted for maliciously shooting a mariner of another vessel. The latter vessel was sailing without colours and was so conducting herself as to give the accused reasonable ground to think that she was an enemy. However, on boarding her, he found that she was an English vessel, but for some reason he and the captain of the vessel quarrelled. The accused left her and when he got on board his own vessel he ordered three guns to be fired, one of which wounded the mariner. It was insisted on behalf of the accused that he had a right to fire upon the vessel, because the captain did not produce her papers, that he did not shoot at the mariner but at the ship, and that the prisoner could not be found guilty of the offence with which he was charged, because the statute 39 Geo. III., c. 37, upon which the prisoner was indicted, came into force on the 10th May, 1799, and the fact charged in the indictment happened on the 27th June following, when the prisoner could not know that any such statute existed. The jury said that they were satisfied that the accused did not fire upon the vessel for non-production of her papers, but in consequence of the quarrel which had taken place between him and the captain of the other vessel. Lord Eldon held that he was of opinion that the guns might be considered as shot at each individual on board her; that the accused was, in strict law, guilty within the statute 39 Geo. III., c. 37, though he could not then know that it had passed; and that his ignorance of that fact could in no otherwise affect the case than that it might be the means of recommending him to a merciful consideration. On a reference to twelve other judges it was held that the accused could not have been tried if the statute 39 Geo. III., c. 37, had not passed, and as he could not have known of that statute, they thought it right he should have a pardon.⁴ An act, though not unlawful in its commencement, becomes unlawful when a statute makes it so, notwithstanding the ignorance of the doer of the act that any such statute is in force.⁵ But before a continuous act or proceeding, not originally unlawful, can be treated as unlawful by reason of the passing of an Act of Parliament by which it is in terms made so, a reasonable time must be allowed for its discontinuance;

¹ (1891) 1 Weir 74, 75.

² Esop, (1836) 7 C. & P. 456.

³ Baron's and Allard, (1852) Dearsly 51, 454.

⁴ Richard Biley, (1800) R. & R. 1.

⁵ Burns v. Newell, (1800) 5 Q. B. D. 444.

Martial law.—"The proclamation of martial law is, in fact, no more than a declaration that under circumstances of urgent public danger all law if for a time suspended, and that for the safety of the State, the Government deems it necessary to set aside the ordinary rules of law by a military force, and to proceed summarily to put down the rebellion, or to punish those who are concerned in it. Courts-martial are employed on such occasions, in order to guard against the danger of subjecting innocent persons to military executions, by instituting an inquiry, necessarily only summary, into the guilt of the parties whose immediate punishment is necessary for the restoration of tranquillity and the suppression of rebellion. But courts-martial so assembled have nothing in common with the tribunals bearing the same name, which, under the Mutiny Act, take cognizance of military offences, etc. Courts-martial of such description have powers lawfully defined by the laws under which they are created, and the sentences passed become matters of record which can be enforced by the military authorities, which is not the case with courts-martial assembled for the punishment of rebels, under proclamation of martial law, without the sanction of any positive enactment. Sentences of such courts add nothing to the legality of the punishments inflicted, and serve only to show that these punishments have not been inflicted without due inquiry into the guilt of those who were subjected to them. Accordingly, it is the practice, where martial law has been exercised and punishments have been inflicted under it, that where the danger is over, the legislature should be applied to for laws of indemnity for the security of those by whom these powers have been exercised, and for whom there is no legal warrant, however necessary it may have been to assume them."¹

The civil Courts have no jurisdiction durante bello to interfere with the decision of a military court sitting in a martial law area, even where a capital sentence has been pronounced, and is about to be executed, for an offence not punishable capitally under the ordinary criminal law.² The High Court in Ireland has held that it has the power when its jurisdiction is invoked to decide whether a state of war exists which justifies the application of martial law; but once such a condition of affairs is established to the satisfaction of the Court, it cannot interfere to determine what is or what is not necessary.³

Liability of private persons.—Private persons acting under ss. 43, 59, 77 and 78 of the Code of Criminal Procedure⁴ will be protected under this section.

P R A C T I C E .

Procedure.—Jurisdiction.—Act of State.—It is within the province of municipal Courts to determine the true character of the acts done by a public functionary, that the particular act in question is an act of State, and that the authority of the Crown, the defence is complete, and the Courts can take no further cognizance of it.⁵

Punishment.—Ignorance of law is no defence, but it is a matter to be taken into consideration in mitigation of punishment.⁶

80. Nothing is an offence which is done by accident¹ or misfortune, and without any criminal intention² or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner by lawful means and with proper care and caution.

Accident in doing a lawful act.

¹ Finlayson's Review of authorities as to suppression of Riot or Rebellion, p. 96.

² John Allen, [1921] 2 I. R. 211.

³ Strickland, [1921] 2 I. R. 317.

⁴ Act V of 1893.

⁵ Mugrave v. Pulido, (1879) 5 App. Cas. 102, 111.

⁶ Esop, (1836) 7 C. & P. 458.

ILLUSTRATION.

A is at work with a hatchet ; the head flies off and kills a man who is standing by. Here, if there was no want of proper caution on the part of A, his act is excusable and not an offence.

COMMENT.

This section exempts the doer of an innocent or lawful act in an innocent or lawful manner from any unforeseen evil result that may ensue from accident or misfortune. If either of these two elements is wanting the act will not be excused on the ground of accident.

1. ' Accident.'—An accident is not the same as an occurrence, but is something that happens out of the ordinary course of things.¹ An effect is said to be accidental when the act by which it is caused is not done with the intention of causing it, and when its occurrence as a consequence of such act is not so probable that a person of ordinary prudence ought, under the circumstances in which it is done, to take reasonable precautions against it.² The idea of something fortuitous and unexpected is involved in the word 'accident.'³ An injury is said to be accidentally caused whensoever it is neither wilfully nor negligently caused.⁴

..... Criminal Law further
..... intended or likely to injure him, using due care. The scholar dies. Such a death is accidental.

(2) A turns B, a trespasser, out of his house, using no more force than is necessary for that purpose. B resists but without striking A. They fall in the struggle and B is killed. Such a death is accidental.

(3) A, a workman, throws snow from a roof, giving proper warning. A passenger is nevertheless killed. Such a death is accidental.

(4) A takes up a gun, not knowing whether it is loaded or not, points it in sport at B and pulls the trigger. B is shot dead. Such a death is not accidental. If A had had reason to believe that the gun was not loaded, the death would have been accidental, although he had not used every possible precaution to ascertain whether the gun was loaded or not.

2. 'Criminal intention'—See Comment under s. 81, infra.

CASES.

Shooting accident.—Two men, accused and deceased, went into a jungle, shikaring porcupines. They agreed to take up certain positions in the jungle and lie in wait for game. This was done. After a while, the accused heard a rustle, and believing it was a porcupine fired in that direction. The shot, however, reached his companion and caused his death. It was held that the accused was protected by this section, the affair being a pure accident.⁵

English cases.—A man found a pistol in the street, which he had reason to believe was not loaded, having tried it with a rammer ; he carried it home and shewed it to his wife ; and she standing before him he pulled up the cock, and touched the trigger. The pistol went off and killed the woman. The rammer, perhaps, was too short and deceived him. It was held that the man was guilty of manslaughter. Foster thinks that this is an extremely hard case "because accidents of this lamentable kind may be the lot of the wisest and the best of mankind, and most commonly fall amongst the nearest friends and relations."⁶ A man and his wife went to take a dinner at the house of a friend. He carried his gun

¹ Per Willes, J., in Fenwick v. Schmalz, 518, 524.
(1868) L. R. 3 C. P. 313, 316.

² Stephen's Digest of Crim. L., Art. 231.

³ Per Lord Halsbury in Hamilton, Fraser & Co. v. Pendorf & Co., (1887) 12 App. Cas.

⁴ 10th Par. Rep. 16.

⁵ Timmappa, (1901) 3 Bom. L. R. 678.

⁶ Ramplon's case, Kel. 41, Foster, 263.

with him, hoping to meet with some diversion by the way ; but before he went to dinner he discharged it, and set it up in a private place in his friend's house. He went to Church after dinner and in the evening returned home bringing his gun with him, which was carried into the room where his wife was, she having brought it part of the way. He taking it up touched the trigger, and the gun went off and killed the wife, whom he dearly loved. It came out in evidence, that, while the man was at Church, a person belonging to the family had privately taken the gun out to shoot and had returned it loaded to the place where it was put in the friend's house. The prisoner was acquitted on the ground that he had reasonable grounds to believe that the gun was not loaded.¹ A person was charged with having fired a fowling-piece loaded with small shot, in a field within an easy shot of a high road, where persons frequently passed, and in the direction of the road, and killed a girl passing at the time. It appeared that the shot was really a long one, being above fifty yards, and that it proved fatal only by one of the leads having unfortunately penetrated the child's eye, while the other shot hardly penetrated the skin. It was held that the death was accidental.²

81. Nothing is an offence merely by reason of its being done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm, if it be done without any criminal intention¹ to cause harm, and in good faith² for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property.³

Explanation.—It is a question of fact in such a case whether the harm to be prevented or avoided was of such a nature and so imminent as to justify or excuse the risk of doing the act with the knowledge that it was likely to cause harm.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, the captain of a steam-vessel, suddenly and without any fault or negligence on his part, finds himself in such a position that, before he can stop his vessel, he must inevitably run down a boat B with twenty or thirty passengers on board, unless he changes the course of his vessel, and that, by changing his course, he must incur risk of running down a boat C with only two passengers on board, which he may possibly clear. Here, if A alters his course without any intention to run down the boat C and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the passengers in the boat B, he is not guilty of an offence, though he may run down the boat C by doing an act which he knew was likely to cause that effect, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which he intended to avoid was such as to excuse him in incurring the risk of running down C.

(b) A in a great fire pulls down houses in order to prevent the conflagration from spreading. He does this with the intention in good faith of saving human life or property. Here, if it be found that the harm to be prevented was of such a nature and so imminent as to excuse A's act, A is not guilty of the offence.

COMMENT.

An act which would otherwise be a crime may in some cases be excused if the person accused can shew that it was done only in order to avoid consequences which could not otherwise be avoided, and which, if they had followed, would have inflicted upon him or upon others whom he was bound to protect inevitable and irreparable evil, that no more was done than was reasonably necessary for that purpose, and that the evil inflicted by it was not disproportionate to the evil avoided.³

¹ Foster, 265

² Alison, 144.

³ Stephen's Digest of Crim. L., Art. 33.

Wherever necessity forces a man to do an illegal act, forces him to do it, it justifies him, because no man can be guilty of a crime without the will and intention of his mind. It must be voluntary. A man who is absolutely by natural necessity forced, his will does not go along with the act.¹

1. 'Without any criminal intention.'—Under no circumstances can a person be justified in intentionally causing harm; if he causes the harm without any criminal intention, and merely with the knowledge that it is likely to ensue, he will not be held responsible for the result of his act, provided it be done in good faith to avoid or prevent other harm to person or property.

'Criminal intention' simply means the purpose or design of doing an act forbidden by the criminal law without just cause or excuse. An act is intentional if it exists in idea before it exists in fact, the idea realising itself in the fact because of the desire by which it is accompanied. The motive for an act is not a sufficient test to determine its criminal character. By a motive is meant anything that can contribute to give birth to, or even to prevent, any kind of action. Motive may serve as a clue to the intention; but although the motive be pure, the act done under it may be criminal. Purity of motive will not purge an act of its criminal character.

"Under the Penal Code no man can be tried for any delusion or misconception of mind, however culpable and criminal such delusion or misconception may appear to be."²

Mens rea.—It is one of the principles of the English criminal law that a crime is not committed if the mind of the person doing the act in question be innocent. It is said that actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea (the intent and act must both concur to constitute the crime). This principle was discussed elaborately by Wills, J., in *Tolson's case*³ in which the prisoner was convicted of bigamy, having gone through the ceremony of marriage within seven years, after she had been deserted by her husband. The jury found that at the time of the second marriage she in good faith and on reasonable grounds believed her husband to be dead. It was held by the majority of the Court that a bona fide belief on reasonable grounds in the death of the husband at the time of the second marriage afforded a good defence to the indictment, and that the conviction was wrong. "The guilty intent is not necessarily that of intending the very act or thing done and prohibited by common or statute law, but it must at least be the intention to do something wrong. That intention may belong to one or other of two classes. It may be to do a thing wrong in itself and apart from positive law, or it may be to do a thing merely prohibited by statute or by common law, or both elements of intention may co-exist with respect to the same deed. There are many things prohibited by no statute—fornication or seduction, for instance—which nevertheless no one would hesitate to call wrong; and the intention to do an act wrong in this sense at the least must as a general rule exist before the act done can be considered a crime. Knowingly and intentionally to break a statute must, I think, from the judicial point of view, always be morally wrong in the absence of special circumstances applicable to the particular instance and excusing the breach of the law, as, for instance, if a municipal regulation be broken to save life or to put out a fire. But to make it morally right some such special matter of excuse must exist, inasmuch as the administration of justice and, indeed, the foundations of civil society rest upon the principle that obedience to the law whether it be a law approved of or disapproved of by the individual, is the first duty of a citizen.

"Although prima facie and as a general rule there must be a mind at fault before there can be a crime, it is not an inflexible rule, and a statute may relate to such a subject-matter and may be so framed as to make an act criminal whether

¹ Per Lord Mansfield in George Stratton, 3 All 279, 280.

(1779) 21 St. Tr. 1046, 1223.

³ (1859) 23 Q. B. D. 168, 172, 173.

² Per Stuart, C. J., in Abdul Kadir, (1880)

there has been any intention to break the law or otherwise to do wrong or not. There is a large body of municipal law in the present day which is so conceived. Bye-laws are constantly made regulating the width of the thoroughfares, the height of buildings, the thickness of walls, and a variety of other matters necessary for the general welfare, health, or convenience, and such bye-laws are enforced by the sanction of penalties, and the breach of them constitutes an offence and is a criminal matter. In such cases it would, generally speaking, be no answer to proceedings for infringement of the bye-law that the person committing it had bona fide made an accidental miscalculation or an erroneous measurement. The Acts are properly

"Whether an enactment is to be construed in this sense or with the qualification ordinarily imported into the construction of criminal statutes, that there must be a guilty mind, must, I think, depend upon the subject-matter of the enactment, and the various circumstances that may make the one construction or the other reasonable or unreasonable." But in the same case Stephen, J., remarks that the phrase non est reum, nisi mens sit rea "naturally suggests that, apart from all particular definitions of crimes, such a thing exists as a 'mens rea' or 'guilty mind,' which is always expressly or by implication involved in every definition. This is obviously not the case, for the mental elements of different crimes differ widely. 'Mens rea' means in the case of murder, malice aforethought; in the case of theft, an intention to steal; in the case of rape, an intention to have forcible connection with a woman without her consent; and in the case of receiving stolen goods, knowledge that the goods were stolen. In some cases it denotes mere inattention. For instance, in the case of manslaughter by negligence it may mean forgetting to notice a signal. It appears confusing to call so many dissimilar states of mind by one name. It seems contradictory indeed to describe a mere absence of mind as a "mens rea" or guilty mind. The expression again is likely to and often does mislead. To an unlegal mind it suggests that by the law of England no act is a crime which is done from laudable motives, in other words, that immorality is essential to crime."

"The principle involved appears to me, when fully considered, to amount to no more than this. The full definition of every crime contains expressly or by implication a proposition as to a state of mind. Therefore, if the mental element of any conduct alleged to be a crime is proved to have been absent in any given case, the crime so defined is not committed; or, again, if a crime is fully defined, nothing amounts to that crime which does not satisfy that definition."

It, therefore, appears that the above maxim has not so wide an application as it is sometimes considered to have. It has undergone a modification owing to the greater precision of modern statutes. It is impossible to apply it generally to all statutes, and the substance of all the reported cases is that it is necessary to look at the object of each act that is under consideration to see whether and how far knowledge is of the essence of the offence created. Crimes are at the present day much more accurately defined by statutes or otherwise than they formerly were.

But *Sherras v. De Rutzen*² seems very like an emphatic re-assertion of the doctrine that mens rea is an essential ingredient in every offence except in three cases³: (1) cases not criminal in any real sense but which in the public interest are prohibited under a penalty, e.g., Revenue Acts; (2) public nuisances; and (3) cases criminal in form but which are really only a summary mode of enforcing a civil right.

An intention to offend against the penal provisions of an Act constitutes mens rea. Sir Richard Couch, in delivering judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council,¹ observed : " It was strongly urged by the respondent's counsel that in order to the constitution of a crime, whether common law or statutory, there must be mens rea on the part of the accused, and that he may avoid conviction by shewing that such mens did not exist. That is a proposition which their Lordships do not desire to dispute ; but the questions whether a particular intent is made an element of the statutory crime, and when that is not the case, whether there was an absence of mens rea in the accused, are questions entirely different, and depend upon different considerations. In cases when the statute requires a motive to be proved as an essential element of the crime, the prosecution must fail if it is not proved. On the other hand, the absence of mens rea really consists in an honest and reasonable belief entertained by the accused of the existence of facts which, if true, would make the act charged against him innocent."

¹ Tolson, (1889) 23 Q. B. D. 163, 185, 186.

² [1893] 1 Q. B. 918.

³ Vide the judgment of Wright, J., in ibid.

The maxim actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea has, however, no application to the offences under the Code. Because the definitions of various offences contain expressly a proposition as to the state of mind of the accused. The definitions state whether the act must have been done ' voluntarily ', ' knowingly ', ' dishonestly ', or ' fraudulently ' or the like. Every ingredient of the offence is stated in the definitions. So mens rea will mean one thing or another according to the particular offence. The guilty mind may thus be a fraudulent mind, or a dishonest mind, or a negligent or rash mind.

When guilty intent is of the gist of an offence, evidence of similar acts to those charged at or about the same time as the latter is admissible to prove the intent.²

2. ' Good faith'.—See s. 52, supra.

3. ' Preventing. . . harm to person or property'.—This is the case in which evil is done to prevent a greater evil. It is to this ground of justification that we must refer the extreme measures which may become necessary on occasions of contagious diseases, sieges, famines, tempests, shipwrecks. But the more serious a remedy of this nature is, the more evident ought its necessity to be. The welfare of the State has served as a pretext for all crimes. To give validity to this means of justification three essential points must be established :—the certainty of the evil to be avoided, the absolute inapplicability of any means less costly, the certain efficacy of the means employed.³

Where a chief constable, not in his uniform, came to a fire and wished to force his way past the military sentries placed round it, was kicked by a sentry, it was held that, as the sentry did not know who he was, the kick was justifiable for the purpose of preventing much greater harm under this section and as a means of acting up to the military order. " The kick would be justified under s. 81. . . as given in good faith for the purpose of preventing much greater harm, the looting of the house or the spread of the fire, on the same principle that the man is excused by that section who in a great fire pulls down other people's houses to prevent the conflagration from spreading."⁴ Where a Magistrate arrested a drunken person whose conduct was at the time a grave danger to the public, it was held that the Magistrate was protected under this section or ss. 96 to 105.⁵ A person placed poison in his toddy pots, knowing that, if taken by a human being, it would cause injury, but with the intention of thereby detecting an unknown thief who was in the habit of stealing the toddy from his pots. The toddy was drunk by, and caused injury to, some soldiers who purchased it from an unknown vendor. It was held that the person was rightly convicted under s. 328, and that this section did not apply.⁶

English cases.—A man who, in order to escape death from hunger, kills another for the purpose of eating his flesh, is guilty of murder ; although at the time of the

¹ Bank of New South Wales v. Piper, [1897] A. C. 383, 389.

² Dudley West, (1916) 12 Cr. App. R. 145.

³ Bentham.

⁴ Per Jardine, J., in Boston v. Futtell, (1892) 17 Bom. 626, 628.

⁵ Gopal Naidu, (1922) 48 Mad 605, F.B.

⁶ Dhanja Daji, (1868) 5 B. H. C. Cr. C. 59.

act he is in such circumstances that he believes and has reasonable ground for believing that it affords the only chance of preserving his life. At the trial of an indictment for murder it appeared, upon a special verdict, that the prisoners D and S, seamen, and the deceased, a boy between seventeen and eighteen, were cast away in a storm on the high seas, and compelled to put into an open boat; that the boat was drifting on the ocean and was probably more than 1,000 miles from land; that on the eighteenth day, when they had been seven days without food and five without water, D proposed to S that lots should be cast who should be put to death to save the rest, and that they afterwards thought it would be better to kill the boy that their lives should be saved; that on the twentieth day D, with the assent of S, killed the boy, and both D and S fed on his flesh for four days; that at the time of the act there was no sail in sight nor any reasonable prospect of relief; that under these circumstances there appeared to the prisoners every probability that unless they then or very soon fed upon the boy, or one of themselves, they would die of starvation. It was held, upon those facts, that there was no proof of any such necessity as could justify the prisoners in killing the boy, and that they were guilty of murder.¹ Lord Coleridge, C.J., in *Dudley's case*² said: "The temptation to the act which existed here was not what the law has ever called necessity. Nor is this to be regretted. Though law and morality are not the same, and many things may be immoral which are not necessarily illegal, yet the absolute divorce of law from morality would be of fatal consequences; and such divorce would follow if the temptation to murder in this case were to be held by law an absolute defence of it. It is not so. To preserve one's life is generally speaking a duty, but it may be the plainest and the highest duty to sacrifice it. War is full of instances in which it is a man's duty not to live, but to die. The duty, in case of shipwreck, of a captain to his crew, of the crew to the passengers, of soldiers to women and children, as in the noble case of the Birkenhead; these duties impose on men the moral necessity, not of the preservation, but of the sacrifice of their lives for others, from which in no country, least of all, it is to be hoped, in England, will men ever shrink, as indeed, they have not shrunk. It is not correct, therefore, to say that there is any absolute or unqualified necessity to preserve one's life. 'Necesse est ut eam, non ut vivam,' is a saying of a Roman officer quoted by Lord Bacon himself with high eulogy in the very chapter on necessity to which so much reference has been made. . . . It is not needful to point out the awful danger of admitting the principle which has been contended for. Who is to be the judge of this sort of necessity? By what measure is the comparative value of lives to be measured? Is it to be strength, or intellect, or what? It is plain that the principle leaves to him who is to profit by it to determine the necessity which will justify him in deliberately taking another's life to save his own. In this case the weakest, the youngest, the most unresisting, was chosen. Was it more necessary to kill him than one of the grown men? The answer must be 'No.'—

"So spake the Fiend, and with necessity,
The tyrant's plea, excused his devilish deeds."

It is not suggested that in this particular case the deeds were 'devilish'; but it is quite plain that such a principle once admitted might be made the legal cloak for unbridled passion and atrocious crime. . . . It must not be supposed that in refusing to admit temptation to be an excuse for crime it is forgotten how terrible the temptation was; how awful the suffering; how hard such trials to keep the judgment straight and the conduct pure. We are often compelled to set up standards we cannot reach ourselves, and to lay down rules which we could not ourselves satisfy. But a man has no right to declare temptation to be an excuse, though he might himself have yielded to it, nor allow compassion for the criminal to change or weaken in any manner the legal definition of the crime."

¹ Dudley and Stephens, (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 273.

² Ibid. pp. 287, 288.

A and B, swimming in the sea after a ship-wreck, get hold of a plank not large enough to support both; A pushes off B, who is drowned. This, in the opinion of Sir James Stephen, is not a crime, as A thereby does B no direct bodily harm, but leaves him to his chance of another plank.

Doctrine of self-preservation.—The authors of the Code remark:—"We long considered whether it would be advisable to except from the operation of the penal clauses of the Code acts committed in good faith from the desire of self-preservation; and we have determined not to except them.

"We admit, indeed, that many acts falling under the definition of offences ought not to be punished when committed from the desire of self-preservation; and for this reason, that, as the Penal Code itself appeals solely to the fears of men, it never can furnish them with motives for braving dangers greater than the dangers with which it threatens them. Its utmost severity will be inefficacious for the purpose of preventing the mass of mankind from yielding to a certain amount of temptation. It can, indeed, make those who have yielded to the temptation miserable afterwards. But misery which has no tendency to prevent crime is so much clear evil. It is vain to rely on the dread of a remote and contingent evil as sufficient to overcome the dread of instant death, or the sense of actual torture. An eminently virtuous man indeed will prefer death to crime; but it is not to our virtue that the penal law addresses itself; nor would the world stand in need of penal laws if men were virtuous. A man who refuses to commit a bad action, when he sees preparations made for killing or torturing him unless he complies, is a man who does not require the fear of punishment to restrain him. A man, on the other hand, who is withheld from committing crimes solely or chiefly by the fear of punishment, will never be withheld by that fear when a pistol is held to his forehead or a lighted torch applied to his fingers for the purpose of forcing him to commit a crime.

"It would, we think, be mere useless cruelty to hang a man for voluntarily causing the death of others by jumping from a sinking ship into an overloaded boat. The suffering caused by the punishment is considered by itself an evil, and ought to be inflicted only for the sake of some preponderating good. But no preponderating good, indeed no good whatever, would be obtained by hanging a man for such an act. We cannot expect that the next man who feels the ship in which he is left descending into the waves, and sees a crowded boat putting off from it, will submit to instant and certain death from fear of a remote and contingent death. There are men, indeed, who in such circumstances would sacrifice their own lives rather than risk the lives of others. But such men act from the influence of principles and feelings which no penal laws can produce, and which if they were general, would render penal law unnecessary. Again, a gang of dacoits, finding a house strongly secured, seize a smith, and by torture and threats of death induce him to take his tools and to force the door for them; here, it appears to us, that to punish the smith as a housebreaker would be to inflict gratuitous pain; we cannot trust to the deterring effect of such punishment. The next smith who may find himself in the same situation will rather take his chance of being, at a distant time, arrested, convicted and sentenced to imprisonment, than incur certain and immediate death.

"In the cases which we have put, some persons may perhaps doubt whether there ought to be impunity; but those very persons would generally admit that the extreme danger was a mitigating circumstance to be considered in apportioning the punishment. It might, however, with no small plausibility be contended that if any punishment at all is inflicted in such cases, that punishment ought to be not merely death, but death with torture; for the dread of being put to death by torture might possibly be sufficient to prevent a man from saving his own life by a crime; but it is quite certain, as we have said, that the mere fear of capital punishment which is remote, and which may never be inflicted at all, will never prevent him from saving his life. And a fortiori, the dread of a milder punishment will not prevent him from saving his life. Laws directed against offences to which men are prompted by cupidity, ought always to take from offenders more than those offenders expect to gain by crime. It would obviously be absurd to provide that a thief or a swindler should be punished with a fine not exceeding half the sum which he had acquired by theft or swindling, in the same manner, laws directed against offences to which men are prompted by fear ought always to be framed in such a way as to be more terrible than the dangers which they require men to brave. It is on this oldier who runs away in action is punished with a to the moral depravity which his offence indicates nest and benevolent man and irreproachable in all the relations of civil life; yet he is punished as severely as a deliberate assassin, and more severely than a robber or a kidnapper. Why is this? Evidently because, as his offence arises from fear, it must be punished in such a manner that timid men may dread the punishment more than they dread the fire of the enemy.

"If all cases in which acts falling under the definition of offences are done from the desire of self-preservation were as clear as the cases which we have put of the man who jumps from a sinking ship into a boat, and of the smith who is compelled by dacoits to force a door for them, we should, without hesitation, propose to exempt this class of acts from punishment. But it is to be observed, that in both these cases the person in danger is supposed to have been brought into danger, without the smallest fault on his own part, by mere accident, or by the depravity of others. If a captain of a merchantman were to run his ship on shore in order to cheat the insurers, and then to sacrifice the lives of others in order to save himself from a danger created by his own villainy; if a person who had joined himself to a gang of dacoits with no other intention than that of robbing were, at the command of his leader, accompanied with threats of instant death in case of disobedience, to commit murder, though unwillingly, the case would be widely different, and our former reasoning would cease to apply; for it is evident that punishment which is inefficacious to prevent a man from yielding to a certain temptation may often be efficacious to prevent him from exposing himself to that temptation. We cannot count on the fear which a man may entertain of being brought to the gallows at some distant time as sufficient to overcome the fear of instant death; but the fear of remote punishment may often overcome the motives which induce a man to league himself with lawless companions, in whose society no person who shrinks from any atrocity that they may command can be certain of his life. Nothing is more usual than for pirates, gang-robbers and rioters to excuse their crimes by declaring that they were in dread of their associates, and durst not act otherwise. Nor is it by any means improbable that this may often be true. Nay, it is not improbable that crews of pirates and gangs of robbers may have committed crimes which every one among them was unwilling to commit, under the influence of mutual fear; but we think it clear that this circumstance ought not to exempt them from the full severity of the law.

"Again nothing is more usual than for thieves to urge distress and hunger as excuses for their thefts. It is certain, indeed, that many thefts are committed from the pressure of distress so severe as to be more terrible than the punishment of theft, and than the disgrace which that punishment brings with it to the ears of mankind. It is equally certain that, when the distress from which a man can relieve himself by theft is more terrible than the evil consequences of theft, those consequences will not keep him from committing theft; yet it by no means follows that it is irrational to punish him for theft; for though the fear of punishment is not likely to keep any man from theft when he is actually starving, it is very likely to keep him from being in a starving state. It is of no effect to counteract the irresistible motive which immediately prompts to theft; but it is of great effect to counteract the motives to that illness and that prostration which end in bringing a man into a condition in which no law will keep him from committing theft. We can hardly conceive a law more injurious to society than one which should provide that as soon as a man who had neglected his work, or who had squandered his wages in stimulating drugs, or gambled them away, had been thirty-six hours without food, and felt the sharp impulse of hunger, he might, with impunity, steal food from his neighbours.

"We should, therefore, think it in the highest degree pernicious to enact that no act done under the fear even of instant death should be an offence. It would a fortiori be absurd to enact that no act under the fear of any other evil should be an offence.

"There are, as we have said, cases in which it would be useless cruelty to punish acts done under the fear of death, or even of evils less than death. But it appears to us impossible precisely to define these cases. We have, therefore, left them to the Government, which, in the exercise of its clemency, will doubtless be guided in a great measure by the advice of the Courts."¹

But in their First Report the Commissioners say: "We think that a distinction may be drawn between cases in which a man does a thing which is an offence by law, spontaneously, to save his own life, and cases in which he does such a thing, from what is called duress, that is from the compulsion of others to save his life threatened by them.

"With respect to the former, we agree with the authors of the Code that it is impossible to define precisely those cases in which it may be proper to excuse the parties, and that it is expedient to leave them to the discretion of the Government."² They then proposed s. 64 to meet the latter kind of cases.

As to the doctrine of compulsion and necessity, see Comment under s. 94, infra.

Act of a child under seven years
of age.

82. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

COMMENT.

Under the age of seven years no infant can be guilty of a crime; for, under that age an infant is, by presumption of law, doli incapax, and cannot be endowed with any discretion.³ He cannot distinguish right from wrong. If the accused were a child under seven years of age, the proof of that fact would be ipso facto an answer to the prosecution.⁴ Accused purchased for one anna, from a child aged six years, two pieces of cloth valued at fifteen annas, which the child had taken from the house of a third person. It was held that, assuming that a charge of an offence under s. 411 could not be sustained, the accused was clearly guilty of criminal misappropriation, if he knew that the property belonged to the child's guardian and dishonestly appropri-

1
2
3
4
5
6

under seven years is only confined to the Penal Code, and does not extend to local or special Acts. See, for instance, the Indian Railways Act⁷ as to the offences committed by children against certain provisions of that Act. See also ante s. 6, ill. (a).

¹ Note B, p. 111, 112, 113.

² Sections 167, 168.

³ 1 Hale P. C. 27, 28; Marsh v. Loader, (1863) 14 C. B. N. S. 535.

⁴ Lulhini Agradanini, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr).
27.

⁵ Makhulshah, (1886) 1 Weir 470.

⁶ Marsh v. Loader, supra.

⁷ Act IX of 1890, s. 130.

83. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child above seven years of age and under twelve,¹ who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding² to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct³ on that occasion.

Act of a child above seven and under twelve of immature understanding.

COMMENT.

In construing this section the capacity of doing that which is wrong is not so much to be measured by years, as by the strength of the offender's understanding and judgment. The circumstances of a case may disclose such a degree of malice as to justify the maxim malitia supplet aetatem.⁴

1. 'Under twelve.'—With reference to the precocity of children in the East, the rule of the Indian Code which fixes the age of twelve as the period, after which the plea of immaturity of understanding shall not be allowed, appears to be proper.⁵

2. 'Sufficient maturity of understanding.'—"Where the accused is above seven years of age and under twelve, the incapacity to commit an offence only arises where the child has not attained sufficient maturity, etc., and such non-attainment would have apparently to be specially pleaded and proved, like the incapacity of a person who, at the time of doing an act charged as an offence, was alleged to have been of unsound mind. The Legislature is manifestly referring in s. 83. . . to an exceptional immaturity of intellect."⁶ Maturity of understanding is to be presumed in the case of such a child unless the negative be proved on the defence.⁷

3. 'Consequences of his conduct.'—"It is not apparently the penal consequences to the offender that are referred to, but the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act, such for instance as that, when fire is applied to an inflammable substance, it will burn, or that a heavy blow with an axe or a sword will cause death or grievous hurt."⁸

Theft by a child.—Where a child of nine years of age stole a necklace, worth Rs. 2-8, and immediately afterwards sold it to the accused for five annas, the child was discharged under this section, but the accused was convicted because the act of the child, though under twelve years of age, showed that he had attained a sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct, and that the act of the child was therefore a theft, and that the accused was rightly convicted of receiving stolen property.⁹

Bigamy by a child of ten years.—Where a child of ten years married again during the life of his first wife, he was held to be guilty of bigamy, notwithstanding that he was under the age of legal age to perform a marriage, and that he was not of sufficient maturity to understand the nature and consequences of his act on the occasion of the second marriage.¹⁰

Murder by a girl of ten years.—The accused who was about ten years of age slept with her mother-in-law the night before her husband's death. Her husband died about nineteen days after he was found in the same homestead. In the early morning the mother-in-law woke up the accused, and told her to go about her household duties. Shortly after this the accused was seen running out of the house and her husband was found mortally wounded on the neck. She hid herself in a field and was not found until the afternoon. It was held that she was

¹ Mussamul Aimonah, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

² 1st Rep., s. 117.

³ Per Jackson, J., in Lukhimi Agradani, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 27, 23.

⁴ 1st Rep. s. 117.

⁵ Per Jackson, J., in Lukhimi Agradani, sup.

⁶ Begarayi Krishna, (1883) 6 Mad. 373.

⁷ Godi, (1896) Cr. R. No. 65 of 1896.

Unrep. Cr. C. 876.

doli capax and that the Court could infer from the circumstances of the case such a degree of malice as to justify the application of the maxim malitia supplet aetatem.¹

English law.—According to English law an infant between the age of seven and fourteen years is presumed to be doli incapax. If a child more than seven and under fourteen years of age is indicted for felony, it will be left to the jury to say whether the offence was committed by the prisoner, and, if so, whether at the time of the offence, the prisoner had a guilty knowledge that he was doing wrong.² In cases of murder if it appear to the Court and jury that the infant was doli capax and could discern between good and evil when the offence was committed, he may be convicted of the capital offence and executed.³ But an infant under fourteen, if indicted for murder, must be proved conscious of the nature of the act.⁴

Infants above fourteen and under twenty-one are subject to all kinds of punishments; for it is presumptio juris that after fourteen years they are doli capaces, and can discern between good and evil.⁵

English cases—A boy of eight was hanged in 1629 for burning two barns as it appeared that he had malice, revenge, craft, and cunning.⁶ Where a boy of ten killed his playfellow, the fact that he hid the body away was held sufficient to rebut the presumption of doli incapax and he was hanged. So a girl of thirteen was burnt for killing her mistress.⁷ Where an infant of nine years of age killed an infant of the like age and hid both the blood and the body, and afterwards confessed the crime, it was held that he might lawfully be hanged but pardon was asked for.⁸ Similarly, where a boy of ten years of age murdered a girl of about five years of age, under circumstances of "mischievous discretion," he was sentenced to death, though he was afterwards pardoned by the King upon condition of his entering immediately into the sea-service. The judges unanimously laid down: "There are many crimes of the most heinous nature, such as in the present case the murder of young children, poisoning parents or masters, burning houses, etc., which children are very capable of committing; and which they may in some circumstances be under strong temptations to commit; and therefore, though the taking away the life of a boy of ten years old may savour of cruelty, yet as the example of this boy's punishment may be a means of deterring other children from the like offences; and as the sparing this boy, merely on account of his age, will probably have a quite contrary tendency, in justice to the public, the law ought to take its course; unless there remaineth any doubt touching his guilt."⁹ A confession made by a boy under fourteen years of age, who had committed murder, was held to be admissible against him.¹⁰

Rape.—The rule at common law is that in regard to the offence of rape malitia non supplet aetatem; a boy under fourteen is under a physical incapacity to commit the offence. That is a presumptio juris et de jure, and judges have time after time refused to receive evidence to shew that a particular prisoner was in fact capable of committing the offence. The Criminal Law Amendment Act¹¹ has not altered the common law principle.¹² Nor can a boy under fourteen be convicted of an assault with intent to commit rape,¹³ or of feloniously carnally knowing and abusing a girl under ten years of age.¹⁴ But he can be guilty as a principal in the second degree¹⁵ or may be convicted of an indecent assault.¹⁶ This presumption

¹ Mussamat Aïmona, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

² Elizabeth Owen, (1830) 4 C. & P. 236;

³ Reg. v. Owen, (1830) 4 C. & P. 236.

⁴ Ibid., p. 25.

⁵ Ibid., p. 26.

⁶ Ibid., p. 27.

83. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child above seven years of age and under twelve,¹ who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding² to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct³ on that occasion.

COMMENT.

In construing this section the capacity of doing that which is wrong is not so much to be measured by years, as by the strength of the offender's understanding and judgment. The circumstances of a case may disclose such a degree of malice as to justify the maxim malitia supplet aetatem.⁴

1. 'Under twelve.'—With reference to the precocity of children in the East, the rule of the Indian Code which fixes the age of twelve as the period, after which the plea of immaturity of understanding shall not be allowed, appears to be proper.⁵

2. 'Sufficient maturity of understanding.'—"Where the accused is above seven years of age and under twelve, the incapacity to commit an offence only arises where the child has not attained sufficient maturity, etc., and such non-attainment would have apparently to be specially pleaded and proved, like the incapacity of a person who, at the time of doing an act charged as an offence, was alleged to have been of unsound mind. The Legislature is manifestly referring in s. 83. . . to an exceptional immaturity of intellect."⁶ Maturity of understanding is to be presumed in the case of such a child unless the negative be proved on the defence.⁴

3. 'Consequences of his conduct.'—"It is not apparently the penal consequences to the offender that are referred to, but the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act, such for instance as that, when fire is applied to an inflammable substance, it will burn, or that a heavy blow with an axe or a sword will cause death or grievous hurt."⁶

Theft by a child.—Where a child of nine years of age stole a necklace, worth Rs. 2-8, and immediately afterwards sold it to the accused for five annas, the child was discharged under this section, but the accused was convicted because the act of the child, though under twelve years of age, showed that he had attained a sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct, and that the act of the child was therefore a theft, and that the accused was rightly convicted of receiving stolen property.⁶

Bigamy by a child of ten years.—Where a child of ten years married again during the life-time of her husband, the marriage being negotiated and caused to be performed by her mother, the child was held not to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of her conduct on the occasion of the second marriage.⁷

Murder by a girl of ten years.—The accused who was about ten years of age slept with her mother-in-law the night before them urder. Her husband aged about nineteen slept with his brother in another hut in the same homestead. In the early morning the mother-in-law woke up the accused, and told her to go about her household duties. Shortly after this the accused was seen running out of the house and her husband was found mortally wounded on the neck. She hid herself in a field and was not found until the afternoon. It was held that she was

¹ Musammul Aimonu, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

² 1st Rep., s. 117.

³ Per Jackson, J. in Lukhimi Agradani, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 27, 28.

⁴ 1st Rep. s. 117.

⁵ Per Jackson, J., in Lukhimi Agradani, supra.

⁶ Begarayi Krishna, (1893) 6 Mad. 373.

⁷ Godi, (1896) Cr. R. No. 65 of 1896. Unrep. Cr. C. 876.

doli capax and that the Court could infer from the circumstances of the case such a degree of malice as to justify the application of the maxim malitia supplet aetatem.¹

English law.—According to English law an infant between the age of seven and fourteen years is presumed to be doli incapax. If a child more than seven and under fourteen years of age is indicted for felony, it will be left to the jury to say whether the offence was committed by the prisoner, and, if so, whether at the time of the offence, the prisoner had a guilty knowledge that he was doing wrong.² In cases of murder if it appear to the Court and jury that the infant was doli capax and could discern between good and evil when the offence was committed, he may be convicted of the capital offence and executed.³ But an infant under fourteen, if indicted for murder, must be proved conscious of the nature of the act.⁴

Infants above fourteen and under twenty-one are subject to all kinds of punishments; for it is presumptio juris that after fourteen years they are doli capaces, and can discern between good and evil.⁵

English cases.—A boy of eight was hanged in 1629 for burning two barns as it appeared that he had malice, revenge, craft, and cunning.⁶ Where a boy of ten killed his playfellow, the fact that he hid the body away was held sufficient to rebut the presumption of doli incapax and he was hanged. So a girl of thirteen was burnt for killing her mistress.⁷ Where an infant of nine years of age killed an infant of the like age and hid both the blood and the body, and afterwards confessed the crime, it was held that he might lawfully be hanged but pardon was asked for.⁸ Similarly, where a boy of ten years of age murdered a girl of about five years of age, under circumstances of "mischievous discretion," he was sentenced to death, though he was afterwards pardoned by the King upon condition of his entering immediately into the sea-service. The judges unanimously laid down: "There are many crimes of the most heinous nature, such as in the present case the murder of young children, poisoning parents or masters, burning houses, etc., which children are very capable of committing, and which they may in some circumstances be under strong temptations to commit; and therefore, though the taking away the life of a boy of ten years old may savour of cruelty, yet as the example of this boy's punishment may be a means of deterring other children from the like offences; and as the sparing this boy, merely on account of his age, will probably have a quite contrary tendency, in justice to the public, the law ought to take its course; unless there remaineth any doubt touching his guilt."⁹ A confession made by a boy under fourteen years of age, who had committed murder, was held to be admissible against him.¹⁰

Rape.—The rule at common law is that in regard to the offence of rape malitia non supplet aetatem; a boy under fourteen is under a physical incapacity to commit the offence. That is a presumptio juris et de jure, and judges have time after time refused to receive evidence to shew that a particular prisoner was in fact capable of committing the offence. The Criminal Law Amendment Act¹¹ has not altered the common law principle.¹² Nor can a boy under fourteen be convicted of an assault with intent to commit rape,¹³ or of feloniously carnally knowing and abusing a girl under ten years of age.¹⁴ But he can be guilty as a principal in the second degree¹⁵ or may be convicted of an indecent assault.¹⁶ This presumption

¹ Mussumut Amona, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

² Elizabeth Owen, (1830) 4 C. & P. 236;
Sidney Smith, (1845) 1 Cox 260.

³ 1 Hale P. C. 26.

⁴ Vamplew, (1862) 3 F. & F. 520.

⁵ 1 Hale P. C. 26.

⁶ Ibid., p. 25.

⁷ Ibid., p. 26.

⁸ Ibid., p. 27.

⁹ Winn v. Wall, (1780) 1 East 203.

¹⁰ Winn v. Wall, (1780) 1 East 203.

¹¹ Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1861, s. 1.

¹² Winn v. Wall, (1780) 1 East 203.

¹³ Winn v. Wall, (1780) 1 East 203.

of English law has no application to India.¹ A boy of twelve can be convicted of attempt to commit rape.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—It is not that a Magistrate is under no circumstances competent to find from the appearance of a person convicted by him that he is a youthful offender, but it is generally desirable that there should be some reliable evidence on the point, and especially when it is necessary to determine the period of detention. Where the age of the accused is under twelve years, the Magistrate should, considering the provisions of this section, find that he has attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his act.³

An objection that the accused is of such an age as not to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct is not one of a preliminary character, but rather a matter of defence to be considered with the other issues arising in the case.⁴

Where a child under twelve years of age commits an offence when he is unable to understand the nature of the offence, he cannot be debarred under s. 105 of the Indian Evidence Act from the defence allowed him by this section because of his ignorance of Court procedure.⁵

84. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it,¹ by reason of unsoundness of mind,² is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law.³

Act of a person of unsound mind.

COMMENT.

The policy of the law is to control not only the sane, but so far as is possible, also the insane. It is not, therefore, every person mentally diseased who, ipso facto, is exempted from criminal responsibility. Such exemption is allowed only where the insane person "is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law." This section lays down the legal test of responsibility in cases of alleged unsoundness of mind. It is by this test, as distinguished from the medical test, that the criminality of an act is to be determined.⁶ This provision of our law is in substance the same as that laid down in the answers of the Judges to the questions put to them by the House of Lords in M'Naghten's case.⁷

A man who by reason of mental disease is prevented from controlling his own conduct, and a man who is deprived, by disease affecting the mind, of the power of passing a rational judgment on the moral character of the act he meant to do, is entitled to the benefit of this section.⁸ A human creature deprived of reason, and disordered in his senses, is still an animal, or instrument possessing strength and ability to commit violence; but he is no more so than a mere mechanical machine which, when put in motion, performs its powerful operations on all that comes in its way, without consciousness of its own effects, or responsibility for them. In like manner, the man under the influence of real madness has properly no will, but does what he is not conscious or sensible of doing and therefore cannot be made answerable for any consequences.⁹

¹ Benjamin v. The King, (1891) 122 All. 127.

² Lakshman Dagdu, (1886) 10 Bom. 512; Nga Kan Hla, (1914) 2 U. B. R. 28.

³ (1843) 4 St. Tr. (N.) S. 847, 10 C. & F. 200.

⁴ Halil Shah, (1887) P. R. No. 42 of 1887.

⁵ Kinloch's case, (1795) 23 How. St. Tr. 1000.

27.

⁶ Ali Raza, (1924) 28 O. C. 69.

There are four kinds of persons who may be said to be non compos mentis (not of sound mind): (1) an idiot; (2) one made non compos by sickness; (3) a lunatic or madman; and (4) one that is drunk.

(1) An idiot is a fool or madman from his nativity, and one who never has any lucid intervals; and such an one is described as a person that cannot number twenty, tell the days of the week, does not know his father or mother, his own age, etc. A person deaf or dumb from his birth, who has no means of learning to discriminate between right and wrong, or of understanding the penal enactments of the law, as applicable to particular offences, is an idiot; but if it can be shown that he has the use of understanding, which many of that condition discover by signs, then he may be tried, convicted, and presumed to be punished, although great caution should be observed in such proceedings.¹

(2) A person made non compos mentis by sickness is excused in criminal cases from such acts as are committed while under the influence of his disorder.² Several causes have been assigned for this disorder: such as the distemper of the humours of the body; the violence of a disease, as a fever or palsy; or the concussion or hurt of the brain; and, as it is more or less violent, it is distinguishable in kind or degree, from a particular dementia, in respect of some particular matters, to a total alienation of the mind, or complete madness.³

(3) A lunatic is one who is affected by his disorder only at certain periods and vicissitudes, having intervals of reason. Such a person during his frenzy is entitled to the same indulgence as to his acts, and stands in the same degree with one whose disorder is fixed and permanent.⁴

That is the species of madness called lunacy, where persons are subject to temporary paroxysms in which they are guilty of extravagance, such persons committing crimes when they are not affected by the malady would be, to all intents and purposes, amenable to justice; and that so long as they could distinguish good from evil, they would be answerable for their conduct. And that is the species of insanity in which the patient fancies the existence of injury, and seeks an opportunity of gratifying revenge by some hostile act, if such a person be capable in other respects of distinguishing right from wrong, there would be no excuse for any act of atrocity which he might commit under this description of derangement.⁵

Madness is permanent. Lunacy and madness are spoken of as acquired insanity, and idiocy as natural insanity.

(4) As to persons who are drunk, see s. 85, infra.

1. 'At the time of the commission of the offence, the accused must clearly be accused was labouring under such a disorder of mind as to be not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong.'⁶ If he did know it, he was responsible.⁷ A plea of insanity at the time of trial will not avail the accused.⁸ In such a case he will be tried in accordance with the special procedure laid down in the Code of Criminal Procedure.

2. 'Unsoundness of mind.'—Whether the want of capacity is temporary or permanent, natural or supervening, whether it arises from disease, or exists from the time of birth, it is included in this expression. Thus an idiot who is a person without understanding from his birth, a lunatic who has intervals of reason, and

¹ Russell, 118; Archbold 23. 1 Hale P.C.

² 1 Hale P.C. 30

³ Russell, 119; 1 Hale P.C. 30

⁴ Ibid., p. 120; ibid., p. 31

⁵ Bellingham's case, Collinson on Lunacy, p. 636; Edward Oxford, (1840) 9 C. & P. 525, 533; Offord, (1831) 5 C. & P. 168; Hadfield's

case, Collinson on Lunacy, p. 480

⁶ Third question and answer in M'Naghten's case, (1843) 10 C. & F. 200, 204; Edward Oxford, sup. Pursoram Doss, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 42; Jugo Mohen Malo, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 5

⁷ Harka, (1906) 28 A. W. N. 193

⁸ Nota Ram, (1866) P. R. No 56 of 1866.

a person who is mad or delirious, are all persons of "unsound mind." There are many cases in which a person, though suffering from insanity, is not irresponsible, must reach that degree which is ascribed in the latter part of this exception.

If a person is of unsound mind, he is to be judged by the ordinary rules in regard to insanity, no matter whether the insanity arose from disease of the brain or from persistent indulgence in intoxicating drugs or liquor.¹

An idiot or lunatic, even if he is conscious of his act, has no capacity to know its nature and quality, and is therefore not responsible. Mad men, especially those under the influence of some delusion, may have capacity enough to know the nature of the act, but unless they also know that they are doing 'what is either wrong or contrary to law,' they are not responsible. A common instance is, where a man fully believes that the act he is doing, e.g., killing another man, is done by the immediate command of God.²

"It is only unsoundness of mind which materially impairs the cognitive faculties of the individual, so that he is unable to understand the nature and quality of his act, or to know that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law. . . . A person strikes another, and in consequence of an insane delusion thinks he is breaking a jar. Here he does not know the nature of the act. Or he may kill a child under an insane delusion that he is saving him from sin and sending him to heaven. Here he is incapable of knowing by reason of insanity that he is doing what is morally wrong. Or he may under an insane delusion believe an innocent man whom he kills to be a man that was going to take his life; in which case, by reason of his insane delusion, he is incapable of knowing that he is doing what is contrary to the law of the land."³ A person whose cognitive faculties are not so impaired as to make it impossible for him to know the nature of his act or that he was doing what was wrong or contrary to law is not exempted from criminal responsibility.⁴

It is not every kind of frantic humour or something unaccountable in a man's actions that points him out to be such a mad man as is to be exempted from punishment: it must be a man that is totally deprived of his understanding and memory, and doth not know what he is doing, no more than an infant, than a brute, or a wild beast, such an one is never the object of punishment.⁵ Want of any motive for the doing of an act cannot be taken as evidence of maniacal tendency.⁶

Partial delusion.—Whether a person who, under an insane delusion as to the existing facts, commits an offence in consequence thereof, is to be therefore excused depends upon the nature of the delusion. If he labours under a partial delusion only, and is not in other respects insane, he must be considered in the same situation as to responsibility as if the facts, with respect to which the delusion exists, were real. For example, if under the influence of his delusion, a person supposes another man to be in the act of attempting to take away his life, and he kills that man as he supposes in self-defence, he would be exempt from punishment. If his delusion was that the deceased had inflicted a serious injury to his character and fortune, and killed him in revenge for such supposed injury, he would be liable, to

¹ Harka, (1903) 26 A. W. N.

² M. & M. 61.

³ Per Q.

Kader Nasyf

Chajju

Ramton, (1)

23 C.

No.

191

⁴ Ram Sundar Das, (1919) 23 C. W. N. 621, 29 C. L. J. 209.

⁵ Edward Arnold, (1724) 16 St. Tr. 695.

⁶ (1859) 1 F. & F. 666.

punishment.¹ If a person afflicted with an insane delusion, in respect of one or more particular subject or person, commits crime, knowing that he was acting contrary to law, but did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of an insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, he is nevertheless punishable according to the nature of the crime committed.²

Moral insanity.—This is a form of insanity when a man's intellectual faculties are sound, but his moral sense is affected or diseased. The functions of the mind are of a twofold nature—those of the intellect, or faculty of thought, such as perception or judgment; and those of the moral sentiments and affections, the propensities and the passion; and the latter may be diseased while the intellectual faculties are sound.³ “We learn, however, . . . that insanity affects not only the cognitive faculties of the mind which guide our actions, but also our emotions which prompt our actions, and the will by which our actions are performed. It may be that our law, like the law of England, limits non-liability only to those cases in which insanity affects the cognitive faculties; because it is thought that those are the cases to which the exemption rightly applies, and the cases, in which insanity affects only the emotions and the will, subjecting the offender to impulses, whilst it leaves the cognitive faculties unimpaired, have been left outside the exemption, because it has been thought that the object of the criminal law is to make people control their insane as well as their sane impulses. . . . We are not prepared to accept the view as generally correct that a person is entitled to exemption from criminal liability under our law in cases in which it is only shown that he is subject to insane impulses, notwithstanding that it may appear clear that his cognitive faculties, so far as we can judge from his acts and words, are left unimpaired.”⁴

The delusions which indicate a defect of sanity such as will relieve a person from criminal responsibility, are delusions of the senses, or such as relate to facts or objects—not mere wrong notions, or impressions, of a moral nature, and the aberration must be mental, not moral, to affect the intellect of the individual. It is not enough that they show a diseased or depraved state of mind, or an aberration of the moral feelings; the sense of right and wrong being still, although it may be perverted, yet not destroyed, and the theory of a moral insanity, or insanity of the moral feelings, while the sense of right and wrong remains, is not to be reconciled with the legal doctrine on the subject.⁵ The circumstance of the prisoner having acted under an irresistible influence to the commission of an offence is no defence if at the time he committed the act he knew he was doing what was wrong. “If an influence be so powerful as to be termed irresistible, so much the more reason is there why we should not withdraw aid from it. There are three powerful restraints on the person who is suffering under such restraint of conscience, and the restraint of law. If a legal excuse, rendering the crime punishable, you at once withdraw a most powerful restraint—that forbidding and punishing its perpetration.”⁶

The circumstance of an act being apparently motiveless is not a ground from which the existence of an irresistible influence can be inferred. Motives exist unknown and innumerable which might prompt the act. A morbid and restless but resistible thirst for blood would itself be a motive urging to such a deed for its ¹ Fourth question and answer in M'Naghten's case, (1843) 10 C. & F. 200; Chatu Pramanik, (1901) 28 Cal. 613.

² First question and answer in M'Naghten's case, sup.; Townley, (1863) 3 F. & F. 839.

³ From the speech of Sir Alexander Cock-own relief.¹ It is dangerous ground to take to say that a man must be insane because men fail to discern the motive for his act.²

Insanity brought on by drunkenness.—In a recent case the House of Lords have laid down after a review of English cases bearing on the subject that insanity, whether produced by drunkenness or otherwise, is a defence to the crime charged only under certain circumstances. Evidence of drunkenness which renders the accused incapable of forming the specific intent essential to constitute the crime ought to be taken into consideration, with the other facts proved, in order to determine whether he had that intent. In this case the accused ravished a girl of thirteen years of age and in furtherance of the act of rape placed his hand upon her mouth and his thumb upon her throat, thereby causing death by suffocation. The sole defence was a plea of drunkenness. It was held that drunkenness was no defence unless it could be established that the accused at the time of committing rape was so drunk that he was incapable of forming the intent to commit it (which was not alleged), inasmuch as the death resulted from a succession of acts, the rape and the act of violence causing suffocation, which could not be regarded independently of each other; and that the prisoner was guilty of murder.³

Drunkenness is no excuse, but delirium tremens caused by drinking, and differing from drunkenness, if it produces such a degree of madness, even for a time, as to render a person incapable of distinguishing right from wrong, relieves him from criminal responsibility.⁴ If voluntary drunkenness has caused a disease which has produced such incapacity as is mentioned in this section then the act will be excused, though the disease may be of a temporary nature.⁵ The accused while proceeding towards his field met a boy who was returning home, and without speaking a word he killed the boy with a single stroke of a club as he passed and then made off across a field. The blow dealt was unpremeditated, there being no quarrel or dispute of any kind. The evidence showed that the accused was addicted to intemperate habits by excessive use of opium, and that for some days before and after killing the boy the accused was irresponsible for his actions. It was held that the accused was incapable of knowing the nature of his act or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law.⁶ The accused after partaking of intoxicating liquor walked two miles in the sun to a village where he was hit on the head by another person. He pursued that person to a certain house, but not finding him there he attacked and wounded with a club five women who were in the house. The Civil Surgeon thought that the accused was not fully responsible for his actions owing to the mental state caused by the wound on the head, the alcohol he had taken, and the walk in the sun. It was held that the facts were not sufficient to bring the case within the provisions of this section. The term 'unsoundness of mind' cannot be construed so widely as to cover the loss of self-control following a hostile blow on the head. The assault on the women was the outcome of hostile rage.⁷

Homicidal mania. Homicidal mania or monomania is commonly defined to be a state of partial insanity, accompanied by an impulse to the perpetration of murder, from which it is also sometimes called impulsive or paroxysmal mania. There may or may not be evidence of intellectual aberration, but the main feature of the disorder is the existence of a destructive impulse which, like a delusion, cannot be controlled by the patient. This impulse, thus dominating over all other feelings, leads a person to destroy those to whom he is most fondly attached, or any one who may be involved in his delusion. Sometimes the impulse is long felt, but concealed and restrained: there may be merely signs of depression and

¹ Hayes, (1879) 1 F. & F. 666, 82 All.
(1885) P. P. No. 116112.

² Sedgwick, (1848) 3 C. & K. 147, 148.

³ Director of Public Prosecutions v. Beard,
(1925) A. C. 477.

⁴ Drum, (1851) 11 Cox 523.

⁵ Sholin Akom, (1862) 29 Cal. 470.

⁶ Ibid.

⁷ Mary, Gyn., (1912) 7 L. R. R. 13.

melancholy, low spirits and loss of appetite, as well as eccentric or wayward habits, but nothing to lead to a suspicion of the fearful contention which may be going on within the mind. As in criminal mania, many of those who are in habits of daily intercourse with the patients have been first astounded by the act of murder, and then only for the first time led to conjecture that certain peculiarities of language or conduct, scarcely noticed at the time, must have been symptoms of insanity. Occasionally the act of murder is perpetrated with great deliberation, and apparently with all the marks of sanity.¹ Homicidal maniacs need have no motive to perpetrate the crime.²

Impulsive insanity.—It is said that on particular occasions men are seized with irrational or irresistible impulses to kill, to steal, or to burn, and under the influence of such impulses they sometimes commit acts which would otherwise be most atrocious crimes. It would be absurd to deny the possibility that such impulses may occur, or the fact that they have occurred and have been acted on. Instances are given in which the impulse was felt and resisted. The only question which the existence of such impulses can raise in the administration of criminal justice is, whether the particular impulse was really irresistible as well as unresisted. If it was irresistible, the person accused is entitled to be acquitted, because the act would not then be voluntary and not properly his act. If the impulse was resistible, the fact that it proceeded from disease is no excuse at all. If a man's nerves were so irritated by a baby's crying that he instantly killed it, his act would be murder; it would not be less murder if the same irritation and the corresponding desire were produced by some internal disease. The great object of the criminal law is to induce people to control impulses; and there is no reason why, if they can, they should not control insane as well as sane impulses. The proof that an impulse was irresistible depends principally on the circumstances of the particular case. The commonest and the strongest cases are those of women who, without motive or concealment, kill their children after recovery from child-bed.³

3. Nature of the act or what is either wrong or contrary to law.—The question in each case must be, whether the accused person was in a state to know the nature of the act and its criminal character as against the law of the land. That is, it must be ascertained whether he was conscious of doing what he ought not to do.

If the accused were conscious that the act was one which he ought not to do, and if the act was at the same time contrary to the law of the land, he is punishable. His liability will not be diminished if he did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, if he knew that he was acting contrary to law.⁴ A person may be both insane and responsible for his actions.⁵ Where a man deliberately murdered his wife under the belief that she was haunted by evil spirits, and that if he killed her the evil spirits would leave her, he was held guilty of murder.⁶

The inquiry must be directed to the particular thing done and not to any other, because a man may be responsible for some things, and not for others. Thus everything depends on the attitude of the prisoner's mind with regard to the particular act charged against him. If it was a guilty mind with regard to that act, its general derangement will not be an excuse. Thus, in the case of Lord Ferrers, who was tried before the House of Lords for the murder of his steward, it was shown that he was occasionally insane, and incapable from his insanity of knowing what he did, or judging of the consequences of his actions, but as it

¹ Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence, Vol. I
1868, p. 508, 509.

Southey, (1805) 4 F. & F. 864; Leigh, (1860)
 4 F. & F. 915.

² Davis, (1881) 14 Cox 563, 564; Lachman,
 (1923) 22 A. L. J. R. 116.

³ Seal Ali, (1917) 3 P. L. W. 356.

appeared that the murder was deliberate and the Earl knew what he was doing, he was executed.¹

Any disease which so disturbs the mind that you cannot think calmly and rationally of all the different reasons to which we refer in considering the rightness or wrongness of an action—any disease which so disturbs the mind that you cannot perform that duty with some moderate degree of calmness and reason may be fairly said to prevent a man from knowing that what he did was wrong.²

Where the unsoundness of mind deposed to is not such as would make the accused incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is contrary to law, he cannot be exonerated from responsibility for crime under this section.³

Homicide by a person suffering from fever.—Where an accused, who was suffering from fever which caused him while suffering from its paroxysms to be bewildered and unconscious, killed his children at being annoyed at their crying, but he was not delirious then, and there was no evidence to show that he was not conscious of the nature of his act, it was held that he could not be entitled to protection under this section.⁴

The accused stabbed a child (his brother's wife) with a sword and killed her. No motive could be assigned for his attack on the child, and it appeared that he had been in the habit of treating the child kindly and affectionately. He was suffering from fever and want of food at the time, and the medical evidence showed it was possible that the act was committed under a sudden attack of homicidal mania. It was held that he was liable for murder.⁵

Homicide by a Ganja-smoker.—The accused, an habitual ganja-smoker, killed his wife and children, because she quarrelled with him and objected to go to a village where he proposed to go. It was held that until the accused's habit of smoking ganja had induced in him such a diseased state of mind as to make him incapable of knowing the nature of his act or criminality, this section did not apply in his favour.⁶

Homicide under the influence of religious enthusiasm.—Where a father sacrificed his son because wealth had not accompanied the son's birth and afterwards cut his own throat as a protest against his deity's injustice, he was held guilty of murder. The Court said: "Although there may have been some degree of religious enthusiasm or even hallucination, there is nothing to show that Bishen (the father) killed his child whilst in a state of mind that incapacitated him from knowing right from wrong. It seems to us rather that he did expect to receive some worldly benefit from the sacrifice of his son, and that wealth would come to him, and his dead child be restored to life again together."⁷

Melancholic homicidal mania.—The accused who was charged with committing murder was a young man of weak intellect, and the motive actuating the offence was trivial and inadequate. As soon as he had killed his uncle by hacking him on the head and neck with a sword, the prisoner rushed about, brandishing his weapon and shouting "Victory to Kali." He attempted to strike other persons including his own father. When the paroxysm had passed off, during the police inquiry, the prisoner appeared to be rational, but immediately afterwards he developed aphasia, attempted to commit suicide and was undoubtedly insane from that time for a period of five years. It was held that the above were the

(1912) 15 O. C. 321.

¹ Lakshman Dogdu, (1886) 10 Bom. 512.

² Venkatasami, (1889) 12 Mad. 459.

³ Sultharam Lalad Ramji, (1890) 14 Bom. 564; Tinacouri Dhopi, (1922) 27 C. W. N. 290.

⁴ Bishendharee Kahar, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr. 64, 65

signs and indicia of insanity as expressed in works on the subject of medical jurisprudence, and that the prisoner was suffering from a fit of melancholic homicidal mania at the time he hacked the deceased with the sword and was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing that he was doing an act which was wrong or contrary to law, and therefore he was not guilty of murder.¹

Homicide under the influence of morbid feeling.—The accused was seen near a boy who was playing in a public place. Some hours afterwards the child's dead body was found there; the throat was cut and there were marks of a violent struggle. The circumstances were such as to lead to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of murder.²

The accused killed his wife and child. There was no motive to explain the double murder and the accused admitted without reservation what he had done and made no attempt at concealment or escape. According to the accused his mind was a blank at the time of the occurrence and he was not conscious of what he did. There was some evidence that the accused had not been quite himself, and that he had been disturbed and distressed by the shortage of cloth, rice and fodder. There was no reliable evidence that his intellect was deranged. It was held that he was guilty of murder.³

Homicide without motive.—The accused, a soldier, shot his officer through the head; the only evidence for the defence being that the act was sudden, without apparent motive, and that he had been under depression. It was held that was that the sole question was whether the that his expressions soon after the act v inadequacy of motive was immaterial, th

Homicide under the influence of insane delusions caused by loss of blood.—A married woman killed her husband immediately after an apparent recovery from a disease which caused a great loss of blood and brought on insane delusions of the senses, and which had been renewed at the time of murder. It was held that she had not been in such a state of mind at the time of the act as to know its nature or be accountable for it.⁴

Homicide by a person in a paroxysm of insanity.—Where a married woman, fondly attached to her children, and apparently most happy in her family, poisoned two of them, but it appeared that there was insanity in her family, it was held she was not guilty as she had been in a paroxysm of insanity at the time of the act.⁵

Homicide by a monomaniac.—Where the accused, labouring under a notion that the inhabitants of Hadleigh and particularly one C were continually issuing warrants against him with intent to deprive him of his liberty and life, shot C, it was held that the prisoner laboured under that species of insanity which was called monomaniac and was therefore not liable for his act.⁶

Homicide by a person suffering from a failure of reasoning powers.—Where the accused cut his wife's throat without any rational motive, and was captured at once without any attempt on his part to escape or offer resistance, and the evidence showed that before the commission of the offence he suffered from a failure of reasoning powers and also that he entertained delusions as to dangers which threatened his wife. It was held that the facts proved unsoundness of mind which prevented the accused from knowing the nature of his act.⁷

¹ Saibo Koeri, (1905) 10 C. W. N. 725.

² Barton, (1863) 3 F. & F. 772.

³ Ram Sundar Das, (1919) 23 C. W. N. 621, 29 C. L. J. 209.

⁴ Dixon, (1869) 11 Cox 341.

⁵ Law, (1862) 2 F. & F. 830.

⁶ Fyre, (1862) 3 F. & F. 247.

⁷ Offord, (1931) 5 C. & P. 163.

⁸ Dil Gazi, (1907) 34 Cal. 686, Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All. 329.

(but resistible) thirst for blood, would itself be a motive urging to such a deed for its own relief. But if an influence be so powerful as to be termed irresistible, so much the more reason is there why we should not withdraw any of the safeguards tending to counteract it. There are three powerful restraints, all tending to the assistance of the person who is suffering under such an influence—the restraint of religion, the restraint of conscience, and the restraint of law. But if the influence itself be held a legal excuse, rendering the crime dispensable, you at once withdraw a most powerful restraint—that forbidding and punishing the murder.

“These remarks are very pertinent in a country where we have constantly to deal with criminals upon whose savage instincts neither religion nor conscience can be seriously regarded as restraints, and who can only be kept from the most atrocious crimes against the persons of others by their fear of the law. Human nature is manifold. Man, at his best, is only a very highly developed animal, with all the instincts and passions of the inferior animals. In him they are softened, modified and controlled by generations of civilization and education, and restrained by example, social opinion, and the fear of punishment in this world or the next. Man, at his worst, is very little above the lower animals, and is only made more dangerous by that reason which distinguishes him from them. With him, criminal longings are natural and familiar, and he is only kept from yielding to them by a dread of punishment. Cruelty—that is, a desire to inflict suffering for the pleasure of witnessing it—is a natural instinct. We find it in the highly civilized and educated despot who is freed from all restraint by the possession of absolute power: we find it in all classes of reasoning mankind: we find it in children who are left to follow the promptings of their own natures: and we find it in nearly all the lower animals. It is this natural instinct which lends to a real battle far more interest than is conveyed by the most scientific of sham fights, not only to those fighting, but to those looking on, whatever may be the excuses and justifications used to cover the bloodshed. It is because of this natural instinct that the most humane, educated, highly civilized, and sometimes most religious, sportsmen are conscious—very clearly conscious—of a greater pleasure in shooting at living game than at inanimate targets of any kind, however carefully devised to satisfy the mere desire for skill in the use of weapons. Many other instances of the kind might be put forward. Education, religion, civilization, all strive to cover up or find excuses for this blood-thirstiness, but it is there as part of our animal nature: it may be controlled into absolute impotence, but it can never be eradicated.

“The crime called ‘running amok’ is common enough in India. In some few cases it may be due to real insanity, or to a temporary mental disorder caused by drugs or other intoxicants. But I believe that in the majority of cases it is nothing but the reckless indulgence of a natural desire to kill. The records of criminal justice in India teem with cases where the injury inflicted by the criminal on his victim is out of all proportion to the motive or provocation which gave rise to the crime, and this, where there has not been the least reason for suspecting any degree of insanity. I have, in my own limited experience, had cases where a young boy, some 15 years of age, killed his sleeping father for the sake of getting hold of five rupees in the pocket of the latter; where a young man killed his sleeping mother after deliberate premeditation, because of a petty dispute as to his share in the family rice crop; and where a perfectly sane and affectionate father dashed out the brains of his favourite child—a boy 2 or 3 years of age—in order to point a curse at a creditor who was pressing him for a petty debt. Each of these cases simply shewed the breaking out of a naturally savage nature, through the feeble, artificially created, restraint which usually kept it down.

“In the cases of a large majority of Indian rustics of the class of the accused, the lack of education and the narrow vista of a village life, result in their having only a vague idea of the power of the law, and their want of knowledge and imagination prevents them from realising anything even approximate to the more serious of the consequences that may ensue from disobedience to it. It is not therefore an intemperate use of it, as you would if he had used a different kind of weapon; but where a dangerous instrument is used, which, if used, must produce grievous bodily harm, drunkenness can have no effect on the consideration of the malicious intent of the party."¹

Although simple frenzy occasioned immediately by drunkenness is no excuse yet if by one or more such practices, an habitual or fixed frenzy be caused, though this madness was contracted by the vice and will of the party, yet this habitual and fixed frenzy thereby caused, puts the man into the same condition in relation to crimes, as if the same were contracted involuntarily at first.²

1. 'Without his knowledge.'—If a man is made drunk through stratagem or the fraud of others, or through ignorance, or through any other means causing intoxication without the man's knowledge or against his will, he is excused. If a person, by the unskillfulness of his physician, or by the contrivance of his enemies, eat or drink such a thing as causes such a temporary or permanent frenzy, this puts him into the same condition as any other frenzy, and equally excuses him.³

86. In cases where an act done is not an offence unless done with a particular knowledge or intent, a person who does the act in a state of intoxication shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated, unless the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Offence requiring a particular intent or knowledge committed by one who is intoxicated.

COMMENT.

As certain guilty knowledge or intention forms part of the definitions of many offences, this section is provided to meet those cases. It says that a person voluntarily drunk will be deemed to have the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated.

In England it has been held that where the intention of a person committing a crime is an element of the crime itself, the fact that he was intoxicated at the time he committed the act may be taken into consideration in considering whether he formed the intention necessary to constitute the crime.⁴ Recently, in Rez v. Beard,⁵ the House of Lords after referring to various cases have laid down that evidence of drunkenness which renders the accused incapable of forming the specific intent essential to constitute the crime should be taken into consideration with the other facts proved in order to determine whether or not he had this intent. Evidence of drunkenness falling short of a proved incapacity in the accused to form the intent necessary to constitute the crime, and merely establishing that his mind was affected by drink so that he more readily gave way to some violent passion, does not rebut the presumption that a man intends the natural consequences of his acts. The Court of Criminal Appeal has held that intoxication may reduce homicide to manslaughter.⁶ It has also held that drunkenness is not a good defence unless it can be positively proved that it was of such a nature that the accused did not know the difference between right and wrong.⁷

The Calcutta High Court has in an early case observed: "Voluntary drunkenness does not, of course, palliate any offence, but it is generally taken

¹ Per Alderson, B. in Meakin, (1836) 7

⁴ Doherty, (1887) 16 Cox 306. See also

Where the defence of insanity is set up in order to warrant the jury in acquitting the prisoner, it must be proved affirmatively that he is insane, if the fact be left in doubt, and if the crime charged in the indictment be proved it is their duty to convict.¹

Punishment.—Partial delusion, or the mere existence of mental disease, does not exempt a person from criminal responsibility, though mental weakness caused by disease is an extenuating circumstance affecting the sentence.² The accused had intentionally killed another man, and it was found on the evidence that he was at the time insane, but not to such a degree that he did not know the nature of his act or that what he was doing was wrong and contrary to law. It was held that, although the accused was not entitled to the benefit of this section, it was not proper that he should be hanged, but rather he should be sentenced to transportation for life, so that the Government might be in a position to make such modification (if any) of the sentence as might be indicated by further observation of the prisoner.³

Acquittal.—The following is suggested as a suitable form of finding of acquittal on the ground of insanity :—

“The Court, concurring with the Assessors, finds that—did kill—by striking him on the head with a club, but that, by reason of unsoundness of mind, he was incapable of knowing that he was doing an act which was wrong or contrary to law, and that he is not therefore guilty of the offence specified in the charge, viz., and the Court directs that the said—be acquitted, and that, under the provisions of s. 471, Criminal Procedure Code, the said—be kept in safe custody in the—pending the orders of the Local Government.”⁴

85. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, is, by reason of intoxication, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law : provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge¹ or against his will.

Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will.

COMMENT.

Voluntary drunkenness is no excuse for the commission of a crime.⁵ At the same time drunkenness does not, in the eye of the law, make an offence the more heinous.⁶ It is a species of madness for which the mad man is to blame. The law pronounces that the obscuration and divestment of that judgment and human feeling which in a sober state would have prevented the accused from offending, shall not be a defence. The person who is intoxicated is to be treated as if he were sober.

from a madness which is not caused by any act of the person. That voluntary species of madness which it is in a party's power to abstain from, he must answer for. However, with regard to the intention, drunkenness may perhaps be adverted to according to the nature of the instrument used. If a man uses a stick, you would not infer a malicious intent so strongly against him, if drunk, when he made

¹ Michael Stokes, (1848) 3 C. & K. 185.

² Michael Stokes, (1848) 3 C. & K. 185.

³ Bodhee Khan, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 79 ; Boodh Dass, (1866) P. R. No. 41 of 1866.

⁴ Zoolfkar Khan, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 36, 8 Beng. L. R. App. 21.

⁵ 7th Parl. Rep., s. 13.

⁶ Kendrick v. Hopkins, (1880) Cary's Rep. 133.

Every man is free to inflict any suffering of damage he chooses on his own person and property ; and if instead of doing this himself, he consents to its being done by another, the doer commits no offence. A man may give away his property ; and so another who takes it by his permission does not commit theft. He may inflict self-torture or he may consent to suffer torture at the hands of another.¹ The authors of the Code say : " We conceive the general rule to be, that nothing ought to be an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person of ripe age who, undeceived, has given a free and intelligent consent to suffer that harm or to take the risk of that harm. The restrictions by which the rule is limited affect only cases where human life is concerned. Both the general rule and the restrictions may, we think, be easily vindicated. If Z, a grown man, in possession of all his faculties, directs that his valuable furniture shall be burned, that his pictures shall be cut to rags, that his fine house shall be pulled down, that the best horses in his stable shall be shot, that his plate shall be thrown into the sea, those who obey his orders, however capricious those orders may be, however deeply Z may afterwards regret that he gave them, ought not, as it seems to us, to be punished for injuring his property. Again, if Z chooses to sell his teeth to a dentist, and permits the dentist to pull them out, the dentist ought not to be punished for injuring Z's person. So if Z embraces the Mahomedan religion, and consents to undergo the painful rite which is the initiation into that religion, those who perform the rite ought not to be punished for injuring Z's person

" The reason on which the general rule which we have mentioned rests is this, that it is impossible to restrain men of mature age and sound understanding from destroying their own property, their own health, their own comfort, without restraining them from an infinite number of salutary or innocent actions. It is by no means true that men always judge rightly of their own interest. But it is true that, in the vast majority of cases, they judge better of their own interest than any lawgiver, or any tribunal, which must necessarily proceed on general principles, and which cannot have within its contemplation the circumstances of particular cases and the tempers of particular individuals, can judge for them. It is difficult to conceive any law which should be effectual to prevent men from wasting their substance on the most chimerical speculation, and yet which should not prevent the construction of such works as the Duke of Bridgewater's canals. It is difficult to conceive any law which should prevent a man from capriciously destroying his property, and yet which should not prevent a philosopher, in a course of chemical experiments, from dissolving a diamond, or an artist from taking ancient pictures to pieces, as Sir Joshua Reynolds did, in order to learn the secret of the colouring. It is difficult to conceive any law, which should prevent a man from capriciously injuring his own health, and yet which should not prevent an artisan from employing himself in callings which are useful and indeed necessary to society, but which tend to impair the constitutions of those who follow them, or a public spirited harm themselves.

It is chie

it suffic

" But though in general we would not punish an act on account of any harm which it might cause to a person who had consented to suffer that harm, we think that there are exceptions to this rule, and that the case in which death is intentionally inflicted is an exception.

" It appears to us that the reasons which render it highly inexpedient to inflict punishment in ordinary cases of harm done by consent of the person harmed do not exist here. The thing prohibited is not, like the destruction of property, or like the mutilation of the person, a thing which is sometimes pernicious, sometimes innocent, sometimes highly useful. It is always, and under all circumstances, into account as throwing light on the question of intention."¹ The legislature appears to have intended to make a distinction between the presumption as to knowledge and the presumption as to intention, and though ordinarily intention is to be inferred from knowledge, it is not to be inferred when the knowledge is merely a legal fiction.² In a Madras case, the question as to knowledge and intention which should be attributed to a drunken person has been discussed without unanimity on the point.³

A full bench of the former Chief Court of Lower Burma laid down that the omission of any express provision in this section regarding the intention which is to be attributed to a drunken man doing an act which is an offence when done with a particular knowledge or intent leaves it open to the Courts to deal with the question of intention on the general principles of law. The drunkenness of an accused person at the time he committed the act, charged as an offence, may be and should be taken into consideration in cases where intention on the part of the accused is necessary to constitute the offence charged, and that the intention which would be ascribed to a sober man in connection with an act must not necessarily be ascribed to a drunken man who does the same act. The question of intention must be determined in each individual case according to the actual facts proved according to accepted principles.⁴

Although this section attributes to a drunken man the knowledge of a sober man when judging of his action, it does not give him the same intention, and, therefore, drunkenness or a state of intoxication affords a sufficient excuse for not exacting the extreme penalty of the law.⁵ Though voluntary drunkenness cannot excuse the commission of an offence, yet where, as upon a charge of murder, the question is whether an act was premeditated or done only from sudden heat and impulse, the fact of the party being intoxicated is held to be a circumstance proper to be taken into consideration. The sentence of death was accordingly commuted to transportation for life.⁶

87. Nothing which is not intended to cause death or grievous hurt,¹ and which is not known by the doer to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, to any person, above eighteen years of age, who has given consent,² whether express or implied, to suffer that harm; or by reason of any harm which it may be known by the doer to be likely to cause to any such person who has consented to take the risk of that harm.

Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent.

ILLUSTRATION.

A and Z agree to fence with each other for amusement. This agreement implies the consent of each to suffer any harm which, in the course of such fencing, may be caused without foul play; and if A, while playing fairly, hurts Z, A commits no offence.

COMMENT.

This section appears to proceed upon the maxim volens non fit injuria; he who consents suffers no injury. This rule is founded upon two very simple propositions: (1) that every person is the best judge of his own interest; (2) that no man will consent to what he thinks hurtful to himself.

¹ Per Glover, J., in Ram Sakoy Dhur, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) Cr. 24. See J. M., (1910) 1 U. B. R. (1910-13) 17.

² Aldul Karim, (1892) S. J. L. B. 650, Nya Ba Gyne, (1911) 1 U. B. R. (1910-13) 165.

³ In re Mandra Gadaba, (1914) 38 Mad. 479.

⁴ Tun Baw, (1912) 6 L. B. R. 160, r. 8.

⁵ Pal Singh, (1917) P. W. R. No. 37 of 1917; Tincovers Dhopi, (1922) 27 C. W. N. 290, 33 C. L. J. 34.

⁶ Booda Dasa, (1866) P. R. No. 41 of 1866.

manslaughter.¹ If, while engaged in a friendly game, one of the players commits an unlawful act whereby death is caused to another, he is guilty of manslaughter. In such a case it is immaterial to consider whether the act which caused death was in accordance with the rules and practice of the game. The act would be unlawful if the person committing it intended to produce a serious injury to another, or if, in committing an act which he knows may produce a serious injury, he is, indifferent and reckless as to the consequences.²

"It seems also, that in cases of friendly contests with weapons, which, though not of a deadly nature, may yet breed danger, there should be due warning given that each party may start upon equal terms. For, if two were engaged to play at cudgels, and the one made a blow at the other, likely to hurt, before he was upon his guard, and without warning, from whence death ensued; the want of due and friendly caution would make such act amount to manslaughter, but not to murder, because the intent was not malicious.

"But though the weapons be of a dangerous nature, yet if they be not directed by the persons using them against each other, and so no danger to be reasonably apprehended; if death casually ensue, it is but misadventure."³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prize-fight.—Although all persons present at and sanctioning a prize-fight, where one of the combatants is killed, are guilty of manslaughter, yet they are not such accomplices as require their evidence to be confirmed, if they are called as witnesses against other parties charged with the manslaughter.⁴

38. Nothing, which is not intended to cause death, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to any person for whose benefit¹ it is done in good faith, and who had given a consent.² whether express or implied, to suffer that harm or to take the risk of that harm.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, a surgeon, knowing that a particular operation is likely to cause the death of Z, who suffers under a painful complaint, but not intending to cause Z's death, and intending, in good faith, Z's benefit, performs that operation on Z, with Z's consent. A has committed no offence.

COMMENT.

No consent can justify an intentional causing of death. But a person for whose benefit a thing is done, may consent that another shall do that thing, even if death may probably ensue. The last section allows any harm to be inflicted short of grievous hurt: this section sanctions the infliction of any harm as it is for the benefit of the person to whom it is caused.

The authors of the Code say: "In general we have made no distinction between cases in which a man causes an effect designedly, and cases in which he causes it with a knowledge that he is likely to cause it. If, for example, he sets fire to a house in a town at night, with no other object than that of facilitating a theft, but being perfectly aware that he is likely to cause people to be burned in their beds, and thus causes the loss of life, we punish him as a murderer. But there is, as it appears to us, a class of cases in which it is absolutely necessary to make a distinction. It is often the wisest thing that a man can do to expose his

¹ Alston, 144

² Bradshaw, (1878) 14 Cox 83.

³ 1 East P. C. 269.

⁴ James Hargrave, (1831) 5 C. & P. 170.

a thing which a wise lawgiver would desire to prevent, if it were only for the purpose of making human life more sacred to the multitude. We cannot prohibit men from destroying the most valuable effects or from disfiguring the person of one who has given his unextorted and intelligent consent to such destruction or such disfiguration, without prohibiting at the same time gainful speculations, innocent luxuries, manly exercises, healing operations. But by prohibiting a man from intentionally causing the death of another, we prohibit nothing which we think it desirable to tolerate.

"It seems to us clear, therefore, that no consent ought to be a justification of the intentional causing of death."¹

Scope.—The section does not permit a man to give his consent to anything intended or known to be likely to cause his own death or grievous hurt. It only justifies any harm short of grievous hurt. The question of benefit to the person harmed is immaterial under this section, though material under the preceding one. See also s. 91, infra.

1. 'Grievous hurt.'—See s. 320, infra.

2. 'Consent.'—See s. 90, infra, which gives a negative explanation of this word. 'Consent' is defined in the Indian Contract Act as follows:—"Two or more persons are said to consent when they agree upon the same thing in the same sense." Sir James Stephen says that in criminal law 'consent' means "a consent freely given by a rational and sober person so situated as to be able to form a rational opinion upon the matter to which he consents."

A claimed to be dab (an edged instrument) proof and invited B to put his claim to the test. B thereupon cut A on the arm inflicting a wound as a result of which A bled to death. It was held that A's consent was given under a misconception of fact, but that in the circumstances B could not be supposed to be aware of his mistake. B had no intention of causing death or grievous hurt and was therefore entitled to the benefit of this section.²

Manly sports and exercises.—Ordinary games such as fencing, single sticks, boxing, football, and the like are protected by this section. But a prize-fight is illegal, and all persons aiding and abetting therein are guilty of assault, and that the consent of the person actually engaged in fighting to the interchange of blows does not afford any answer to the criminal charge of assault.³ All persons who by their presence encourage a fight from which death ensues to one of the combatants are guilty of manslaughter, although they neither say nor do anything.⁴ No persons can by agreement go out to fight with deadly weapons, doing by agreement what the law says shall not be done, and thus shelter themselves from the consequences of their acts.⁵ All struggles in anger, whether by fighting or wrestling, or any other mode—all kinds of contests in anger are unlawful.⁶ There is nothing unlawful in sparring unless, perhaps, the men fight on until they are so weak that a dangerous fall is likely to be the result of the continuance of the game. Therefore, except in the latter case, death caused by an injury received during a sparring match, does not amount to manslaughter.⁷

If death ensue in consequence of such games as are entered into to give strength, skill, or activity in the use of arms, or for sport or recreation, as wrestling by consent, playing at cudgels, fencing, archery, etc., it is held in England to be misadventure. The true principle which distinguishes such cases from those where death ensues in consequence of an intent to do a slight injury is, that here bodily harm is not the motive on either side. Proper caution and perfect fair play should be used on both sides: for, if any improper advantage be taken, it will amount to

¹ Note B, pp. 106-103.

² Shree Kin, (1915) 8 L. B. R. 166.

³ Coney, (1882) 8 Q. B. D. 534; Perkins, (1831) 4 C. & P. 537; Orton, (1878) 14 Cox 226.

⁴ Edward Murphy, (1833) 6 C. & P. 103.

⁵ Bradshaw, (1878) 14 Cox 83.

⁶ Canniff, (1840) 9 C. & P. 339.

⁷ Young, (1866) 10 Cox 371.

for it is not to be conceived that such a one could obtain the free and intelligent consent of any person to his performing upon him an operation dangerous to life but by misrepresentation; and such a one could hardly satisfy a Court of Justice that he had undertaken the operation in good faith under cl. 72 (this section), for good faith must surely be construed here to mean, a conscientious belief that he had skill to perform the operation and by it to benefit the party, while the supposition is that he was unskilled and ignorant."¹

A person who so 'takes a leap in the dark' is guilty of gross negligence.² Death caused by administering an improper medicine is manslaughter.³ But even an unlicensed practitioner will not be criminally responsible for the death of a person, occasioned by his treatment, unless his conduct is characterised either by gross negligence to his patient's safety.⁴ If he is guilty of gross negligence after he has applied a remedy, or of gross manslaughter ensues in consequence of either, he is liable to be convicted of manslaughter.⁵

A person uneducated in matters of surgery operated on a man for internal piles by cutting them with an ordinary knife, and the man died from hæmorrhage. He was charged, under s. 304A, with causing death by doing a rash and negligent act. It was contended that, inasmuch as the prisoner had performed similar operations on previous occasions, it was not a rash act within the meaning of that section, and that at all events he was entitled to the benefit of this section as he did the act in good faith, without any intention to cause death, and for the benefit of the patient who had accepted the risk. It was held that having regard to the meaning of 'good faith' he was not entitled to the benefit of this section: and that this section did not apply to the case, as it was not shown by the accused that the deceased knew the risk he was running in consenting to the operation, and he could not therefore be said to have accepted the risk.⁷

The accused operated upon a patient for cataract, with the result that the patient lost the sight of her left eye. It was found that the operation was performed with the consent of the patient, and in good faith and for her benefit, and that it was performed in accordance with the recognized Indian method of treatment for cataract. It was held that the accused had committed no offence under the Code.⁸

English cases.—In an action against a chemist and druggist upon an alleged retainer (as a surgeon and apothecary) to treat the plaintiff for a certain disorder (for which mercurial treatment was improper), it was held that mercurial treatment, in a case for which it was wholly unfit, was such negligence or ignorance as would sustain an action.⁹ A person in the habit of acting as a man-midwife tore away part of the prolapsed uterus of one of his patients, supposing it to be a part of the placenta, as a result of which the patient died. It was held that he was not indictable for manslaughter, unless he was guilty of criminal misconduct, arising either from the grossest ignorance or the most criminal inattention.¹⁰ The accused, a person not a regular practitioner, administered lobelia, a dangerous medicine, which produced death. It was held that the question for the jury was whether he had acted so rashly and carelessly as to cause death.¹¹ Any person

¹ 1st Rep., s. 123.

² Rudlock v. Lowe, (1865) 4 F. & F. 519

³ Markus, (1864) 4 F. & F. 356.

⁴ Nanny Simpson's case, (1829) 1 Lewin 172; Joseph Webb, (1834) 2 Lewin 196

⁵ John Long, (1830) 4 C. & P. 398.

⁶ John Long, (1831) 4 C. & P. 423.

⁷ Sukarou Kobiraj, (1887) 14 Cal. 566. See Baboolun Hijrah, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

⁸ Suraj Bala, (1908) 28 A. W. N. 91, 5 A. L. J. R. 155.

⁹ Jones v. Fay, (1863) 4 F. & F. 525.

¹⁰ John Williamson, (1897) 3 C. & P. 675.

¹¹ Cricht. (1855) 1 F. & F. 519.

life to great hazard. It is often the greatest service that can be rendered to him to do what may very probably cause his death. He may labour under a cruel and wasting malady which is certain to shorten his life, and which renders his life, while it lasts, useless to others and a torment to himself. Suppose that under these circumstances he, undeceived, gives his free and intelligent consent to take the risk of an operation which in a large proportion of cases has proved fatal, but which is the only method by which his disease can possibly be cured, and which, if it succeeds, will restore him to health and vigour. We do not conceive that it would be expedient to punish the surgeon who should perform the operation, though by performing it he might cause death, not intending to cause death, but knowing himself to be likely to cause it. Again, if a person attacked by a wild beast should call out to his friends to fire, though with imminent hazard to himself, and they were to obey the call, we do not conceive that it would be expedient to punish them, though they might by firing cause his death, and though when they fired they knew themselves to be likely to cause his death. We propose, therefore, that it shall be no offence to do even what the doer knows to be likely to cause death if the sufferer being of ripe age has, undeceived, given a free and intelligent consent to stand the risk, and if the doer did not intend to cause death, but on the contrary, intended in good faith the benefit of the sufferer."¹ See also s. 91, infra.

1. 'Benefit.'—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of this section.²

2. 'Good faith, and who has given a consent.'—Nothing is said to be done in good faith which is done without due care and attention.³ Every person who enters into a learned profession undertakes to bring to the exercise of it a reasonable degree of care and skill. A surgeon undertakes that he will perform a cure, but he does not undertake to use the highest possible degree of care and skill. There may be persons who have higher education and greater advantages than he has, but he undertakes to bring a fair, reasonable, and competent degree of skill. He does not undertake to use the highest possible degree of skill.⁴ Any person, whether a licensed medical practitioner or not, who deals with the life or health of any person, is bound to have competent skill; and is bound to treat his patients with care, attention, and assiduity; and if a person dies for want of either, the person is guilty of manslaughter.⁵ To render a medical man liable for negligence, or want of due care and skill, it is not enough that there has been a less degree of skill than some other medical men might have shown, or a less degree of care than even he himself might have bestowed; nor is it enough that he himself acknowledges some degree of want of care, there must have been a want of competent and ordinary care and skill, and to such a degree as to have led to a bad result.⁶ The Court (or the jury) has to consider whether in the execution of that duty which a doctor had undertaken to perform, he is proved to have shewn such a gross want of care, or such a gross and culpable want of skill, as any person undertaking such a charge ought not to be guilty of.⁷ The question is whether, under all the circumstances, the prisoner acted with criminal inattention and carelessness.⁸

But if a person bona fide and honestly exercising the best skill to cure a patient, perform an operation which causes the patient's death, he is not guilty of manslaughter and it makes no difference whether the party be a regular or an irregular surgeon.⁹

Unqualified persons.—The Law Commissioners observe that this section will not excuse dangerous operations performed by unqualified persons: "We apprehend that 'an unqualified and ignorant quack' could hardly be excused,

¹ Note B, p. 108.

² Explanation to s. 92, infra.

³ Section 52, supra.

⁴ Lanphier v. Phipps, (1838) 8 C. & P. 475.

⁵ Catherine Spiller, (1832) 5 C. & P. 333.

⁶ Rich v. Pierpont, (1862) 3 F. & F. 35.

⁷ Ferguson's case, (1830) 1 Lewin 181.

⁸ Crook, (1859) 1 F. & F. 621.

⁹ Van Butchell, (1829) 3 C. & P. 629.

2. 'Benefit.'—More pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of this section.¹

Provisos.—The authors of the Code say: "We cannot safely confide to him the interest of his neighbours in the same unreserved manner in which we confide to him his own, even when he sincerely intends to benefit his neighbours. Even parents have been known to deliver their children up to slavery in a foreign country, to inflict the most cruel mutilations on their male children, to sacrifice the chastity of their female children, and to do all this declaring, and perhaps with truth, that their object was something which they considered as advantageous to the children. We have therefore not thought it sufficient to require that on such occasions the guardian should act in good faith for the benefit of the ward. We have imposed several additional restrictions which, we conceive, carry their defence with them."²

The following illustrations had been given by the authors of the Code to illustrate the meaning of this section ; but except illustration (d) all were omitted by the Commissioners. They, however, elucidate the purport of the section very clearly :—

(a) A, a parent, whips his child moderately, for the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.

(b) A confines his child, for the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.

(c) A, in good faith, for his child's pecuniary benefit, emasculates his child. Here, inasmuch as A has caused grievous hurt to the child for a purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt to the child, A is not within the exception.

(f) A, intending in good faith the pecuniary benefit of Z, his daughter, a child under twelve years of age, abets a rape committed by B on Z. Neither A nor B is within the exception.

90. A consent is not such a consent as is intended by any section of this Code, if the consent is given by a person under fear of injury,¹ or under a misconception of fact,² and if the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception; or if the consent is given by a person who, from unsoundness of mind or intoxication, is unable to understand the nature and consequence of that to which he gives his consent ; or unless the contrary appears from the context, if the consent Consent of child. is given by a person who is under twelve years of age.

COMMENT.

This section does not define 'consent,' but describes what is not consent.

¹ Explanation to 92, 107/rd.

¹ Note R, p. 17.

Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing, as in balance, the good and evil on each side.¹ Consent means an active will in the mind of a person to permit the doing of the act complained of, and knowledge of what is to be done, or of the nature of the act that is being done, is essential to a consent to the act.²

Under this section the consent must be free, i.e., it must not be caused by coercion, fraud, or misrepresentation. Consent under the Code is not valid if obtained by either misrepresentation or concealment, and implies not only a knowledge of the risk but a judgment in regard to it, a deliberate free act of the mind.³ Suppose an ignorant person to represent himself as having skill to perform a difficult operation, and by this pretence to obtain consent to perform it, such consent can avail him nothing.⁴ But where the facts which invalidate a consent are unknown to the person to whom it is given, as if other persons without his knowledge represent that he possesses medical skill and thus obtain consent to his administering a potent medicine, etc., this will not make the consent invalid.

Consent differs from submission.—“There is a difference between consent and submission; every consent involves a submission; but it by no means follows that a mere submission involves consent.”⁵ “Mere submission by one who does not know the nature of the act done cannot be consent.”⁶

1. ‘Fear of injury.’—This is a very wide expression. ‘Injury’ seems to be limited to physical injury.

2. ‘Misconception of fact’.—Consent given under a misconception is invalid, if the person to whom the consent is given is aware of its existence. An honest misconception by both the parties, however, does not invalidate the consent. In a case the private parts of the deceased were cut off by the accused who were eunuchs. The accused pleaded that a similar operation was performed on them; that they never understood the practice of emasculation to be forbidden; and that they acted under the free consent of the deceased. It was held that where a man of full age submitted himself to emasculation, performed neither by a skilful hand, nor in the least dangerous way, and died from the injury, the persons concerned in the act were guilty of culpable homicide and not murder.⁷ The accused, who professed to be snake-charmers, persuaded the deceased to allow themselves to be bitten by a poisonous snake, inducing them to believe that they had power to protect them from harm. It was held that the consent given by the deceased allowing themselves to be bitten did not protect the accused, such consent having been founded on a misconception of facts, that is, in the belief that the accused had power by charms to cure snake-bites and the accused knowing that the consent was given in consequence of such misconception.⁸ The prisoner was indicted for indecently assaulting two boys, each of whom was eight years of age. The boys stated in evidence that they did not know what he was going to do to them when he did each of the acts in question. It was held that the prisoner was guilty as the boys merely submitted to his act not knowing its nature.⁹

Misrepresentation.—A consent given on a misrepresentation of fact is one given under a misconception of fact within the meaning of this section. The misrepresentation should be regarded as leading to a misconception of the facts with reference to which the consent is given.¹⁰ The prisoner professed to give medical and surgical advice for money. The prosecutrix, a girl of nineteen,

¹ Story, s. 222.

² Lock, (1872) L. R. 2 C. C. 11.

³ Nagamuddin, (1891) 492.

Hijrah, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

(1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.)

Shue Kin, (1915) 8 L. B. R.

⁴ B. & P.

⁵ Sultanoo Kobiraj, (1

⁶ Per Colledge, J., in & P.

136 Mad. 453; Mussamat

⁷ 222, 724.

No. 17 of 1916.

⁸ Per Quain, J., in Loc

consulted him with respect to illness from which she was suffering. He advised that a surgical operation should be performed, and under pretence of performing it, had carnal connection with the prosecutrix. She submitted to what was done under the belief that he was merely treating her medically and performing a surgical operation. It was held that the prisoner was guilty of rape.¹

Consent in cases of rape.—This section will only protect a man from the charge of rape if he has the intelligent consent of the prosecutrix. According to the English law a consent produced by mere animal instinct would be sufficient to prevent the act from constituting a rape.² See s. 376, infra.

Indecent assault.—In two cases it has been held that an indecent assault is within the rule that fraud vitiates consent. In the first case, the prisoner, knowing that he had a foul disease, induced a girl, who was ignorant of his condition, to consent to sleep with him, and infected her.³ In the second case, the prisoner having gonorrhœa had connection with a girl without informing her of the fact and the disease was communicated to her. It was held in both these cases that the prisoner was guilty of an indecent assault.⁴ But both these cases were unfavourably commented upon in R. v. Clarence,⁵ which practically lays down that concealment of the physical condition of the accused is not such a fraud as to create criminal liability. In this case the prisoner had connection with his wife at a time when he was suffering from gonorrhœa, the wife not knowing about the disease. It was held that the conduct of the prisoner did not amount to assault occasioning actual bodily harm. In each of the two cases mentioned above the prosecutrix was a young girl and not a town woman. In the case of a town woman a question may be raised as to the implied consent to take risks flowing from promiscuous embraces.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—The onus of proving consent is on the accused. The evidence of consent which would be sufficient in a civil transaction must be equally sufficient in exculpation of a prisoner's guilt.⁶

91. The exceptions in sections 87 and 88 and 89 do not extend to acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause, or be intended to cause or be known to be likely to cause, to the person giving the consent, or on whose behalf the consent is given.

Exclusion of acts which are offences independently of harm caused.

ILLUSTRATION.

Causing miscarriage (unless caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman) is an offence independently of any harm which it may cause or be intended to cause to the woman. Therefore, it is not an offence "by reason of such harm"; and the consent of the woman or of her guardian to the causing of such miscarriage does not justify the act.

COMMENT.

This section says in explicit terms that consent will only condone the act causing harm to the person giving the consent which will otherwise be an offence. If the act is an offence independently of the harm which it has caused then the doer will not be protected by the consent given.

¹ Flattery, (1877) 2 Q. B. D. 410.

² Fletcher, (1866) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 39;
Barratt, (1873) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 81.

³ Bennett, (1866) 4 F. & F. 1105.

⁴ Sinclair, (1867) 13 Cox 28.

⁵ (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 23, 16 Cox 511. See also Hegarty v. Shine, (1878) 14 Cox 145, where the Court expressed the opinion that the concealment of a venereal disease from a woman could not constitute an assault.

⁶ Anuncio Furnagot, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 57.

92. Nothing is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person for whose benefit it is done in good faith,² even without that person's consent,³ if the circumstances are such that it is impossible for that person to signify consent, or if that person is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian or other person in lawful charge of him from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit: Provided—

Provisos. First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or the attempting to cause death;

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt⁴ or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity;

Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of hurt, or to the attempting to cause hurt, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or hurt;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) Z is thrown from his horse, and is insensible. A, a surgeon, finds that Z requires to be trepanned. A, not intending Z's death, but in good faith, for Z's benefit, performs the trepan before Z recovers his power of judging for himself. A has committed no offence.

(b) Z is carried off by a tiger. A fires at the tiger knowing it to be likely that the shot may kill Z, but not intending to kill Z, and in good faith for Z's benefit. A's ball gives Z a mortal wound. A has committed no offence.

(c) A, a surgeon, sees a child suffer an accident which is likely to prove fatal unless an operation be immediately performed. There is not time to apply to the child's guardian. A performs the operation in spite of the entreaties of the child, intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.

(d) A is in a house which is on fire, with Z, a child. People believe that the child will be killed by the fire. A drops the child from the house-top, knowing it to be likely that the fall may kill the child, but not intending to kill the child, and in good faith, the child's benefit. Here, even if the child is killed by the fall, A has committed no offence.

Explanation.—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit. The meaning of sections 88, 89 and 92.

COMMENT.

The logical place of this section would be after s. 89.

Object.—The principal object of ss. 88, 89 and this section is to protect medical practitioners. The authors of the Code observe:—

"There yet remains a kindred class of cases which are by no means rare. For example, a person falls down in an apoplectic fit, and alone can save him, and he is unable to signify his consent to be bled. who bleeds him commits an act falling under the definition of an offence. The surgeon is not the patient's guardian, and has no authority from any su-protection of means of saving life. Bleeding. The surgeon's offence. The child's guardian yet it is evident that the surgeon ought not to be punished. Again, a house is on fire. A person snatches up a child too young to understand the danger, and flings it below, Here, it down knew that it would very probably be killed, and though he was not the child's parent or guardian, he ought not to be punished.

"In these examples there is what may be called a temporary guardianship justified by the exigency of the case and by the humanity of the motive. This temporary guardianship bears a considerable analogy to that temporary magistracy with which the law invests every person who is present when a great crime is committed, or when the public peace is concerned. To acts done in the exercise of this temporary guardianship, we extend by clause 72 (this section) a protection very similar to that which we have given to the acts of regular guardians."¹

The following illustrations² further elucidate the meaning of the section :—

(1) A is rendered insensible by an accident which renders it necessary to amputate one of his limbs before he recovers his senses. The amputation of his limb without his consent is not an offence.

(2) If the accident made him mad, the amputation in spite of his resistance would be no offence.

(3) B is drowning and insensible. A, in order to save his life, pulls B out of the water with a hook which injures him. This is no offence.

1. 'Benefit'—See explanation.

2. 'Good faith.'—See s. 52, supra.

Where the accused, a man of education and wealth and living in a town where medical attendance could be procured, chained up his brother, who was subject to fits of violent insanity with lucid intervals, for over three months in a cruel way, it was held that he could not be said to have acted with due care and attention and was guilty of an offence under s. 344.³

3. 'Consent'—See s. 90, supra.

4. 'Grievous hurt.'—See s. 320, infra.

5. 'Hurt.'—See s. 319, infra. Section 89 provides for 'grievous hurt' in a similar case.

6. 'Pecuniary benefit.'—The explanation to this section, coupled with s. 88, does not justify the performing of a dangerous surgical operation by an unskilled person, although it was not intended to cause death, for the mere pecuniary benefit of the person voluntarily submitting to it.⁴

93. No communication made in good faith¹ is an offence by reason of any harm to the person to whom it is made, if it is made for the benefit of that person.

Communication made in good faith.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, a surgeon, in good faith, communicates to a patient his opinion that he cannot live. The patient dies in consequence of the shock. A has committed no offence, though he knew it to be likely that the communication might cause the patient's death.

COMMENT.

This section is introduced to protect the innocent without unduly cloaking the guilty. It requires that communication should have been made (1) in good

¹ Note B, p. 109.

² Stephen's Digest of Crim. Law, Art. 226.

³ Shimbur Narain, (1923) 45 All. 495.

⁴ Baboolun Hijrah, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

faith, and (2) for the benefit of the person to whom it is made. The illustration speaks of the case of a surgeon. Very often a timely warning to the patient of his approaching death is necessary in order that he may be able to arrange his affairs to his own satisfaction. In such a case the doctor will be protected under this section if the patient dies of the shock resulting from the communication.

1. 'Good faith.'—See s. 52, supra.

94. Except murder,¹ and offences against the State punishable with death,² nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is compelled to do it by threats, which, at the time of doing it, reasonably cause the apprehension that instant death³ to that person will otherwise be the consequence: Provided the person doing the act did not of his own accord, or from a reasonable apprehension of harm to himself short of instant death, place himself in the situation by which he became subject to such constraint.

Explanation 1.—A person who, of his own accord, or by reason of a threat of being beaten, joins a gang of dacoits, knowing their character, is not entitled to the benefit of this exception, on the ground of his having been compelled by his associates to do anything that is an offence by law.

Explanation 2.—A person seized by a gang of dacoits, and forced by threat of instant death, to do a thing which is an offence by law, for example, a smith compelled to take his tools and to force the door of a house for the dacoits to enter and plunder it, is entitled to the benefit of this exception.

COMMENT.

The Indian law about compulsion and necessity as a justification of an act otherwise criminal is based on the law of England. By this section a person is excused from the consequences of any act, except (1) murder,¹ and (2) offences against the State punishable with death, done under fear of instant death. Fear of hurt or even of grievous hurt is not a sufficient justification. In English law fear of grievous hurt is a good justification.

Object.—Stephen² says: "Criminal law is itself a system of compulsion on the widest scale. It is a collection of threats of injury to life, liberty, and property if people do commit crimes. Are such threats to be withdrawn as soon as they are encountered by opposing threats? The law says to a man intending to commit murder, if you do it I will hang you. Is the law to withdraw its threat if some one else says, if you do not do it I will shoot you?"

"Surely it is at the moment when temptation to crime is strongest that the law should speak most clearly and emphatically to the contrary. It is, of course, a misfortune for a man that he should be placed between two fires, but it would be a much greater misfortune for society at large if criminals could confer impunity upon their agents by threatening them with death or violence if they refused to execute their commands. If impunity could be so secured a wide door would be opened to collusion, and encouragement would be given to associations of malefactors, secret or otherwise."

¹ Kuliyatara Bomma, [1912] M. W. N. 1108.

² History of Crim. Law, Vol. II, p. 107.

1. 'Murder.'—See s. 300, infra. 'Murder' in this section does not include abetment of murder punishable under s. 109. Where a confessional statement by the wife, charged with abetment of murder, alleged that she held her husband's legs while another struck him with an axe, but that she protested against the murder, and only assisted because such other person threatened to kill her also, it was held that the omission of the Judge to direct the jury that, if they believed the statement, she could not, having regard to this section, be convicted of abetment of murder under s. 109, was a misdirection vitiating the conviction.¹

2. 'Offences against the State.'—See s. 121, infra, for offences against the State punishable with death.

3. 'Instant death.'—There must be reasonable fear, at the very time, of instant death. Persons who do criminal acts from fear of anything but instant death do them at their peril.² Persons who had offered or given bribes to certain officials in the Revenue Department of the Government in order to avoid pecuniary injury or personal molestation were not protected by this section.³ Mere menace of future death will not be sufficient. Where certain witnesses gave false evidence, and then pleaded that they were coerced to do so by a Police Inspector, it was held that they were guilty as there was no proof of instant death.⁴ A policeman stood by, acquiescing in an assault on a prisoner committed by another policeman for the purpose of extorting a confession. He was bound under the Bombay District Police Act (IV of 1890) to arrest persons committing assaults likely to cause grievous bodily injury but he did not. It was held that nothing but fear of instant death was a defence for a policeman who tortured any one by orders of his superior.⁵

Doctrine of compulsion and necessity.—"No one can plead the excuse of necessity or compulsion as a defence of an act otherwise penal, except as provided in s. 94... 'Lord Hale argues that our law is better than that laid down by the Jesuitical Casuists of France, in this respect, as it prevents aggrieved persons pretending to judge their own cause, and then proceeding to illegal means of redress, as when servants, judging themselves in want of clothes or victuals, get them by robbing their masters.'⁶ Mr. Branson cited McGrowther's case,⁷ as showing how any other rule would make crime triumphant. Where some prisoners pleaded that in 1746 they joined the Duke of Perth in arms against the King, because they feared that their houses would be burned and their goods spoiled, all the Judges concurred that the prisoners were rightly convicted; and Sir M. Foster points out that if threats of this kind were an excuse, it would be in the power of any leader of a rebellion to indemnify all his followers. The same consideration applies to people who bribe public officers, a crime more common here than high treason. If the law allowed the bribers to escape criminal liability... by pleading and proving that they were put in fear of some pecuniary injury or some stoppage of promotion, that would be tantamount to encouraging the corruption, as the corrupt Judge or officer would then be able by a politic use of threats to give an indemnity to all who paid him money... In dealing with the question of guilty or not, the law does not, where there is no fear of instant death, require the Courts to discuss the philosophy of free will, or determine whether the person who bribes to secure some advantage to himself is a victim of extortion, or feels helpless or not."⁸ "No man, from a fear of consequences to himself, has a right to make himself a party to committing mischief on mankind."⁹

¹ Umafari Devi, (1924) 52 Cal. 112.

² Maganlal, (1889) 14 Bom. 115, 131, 132.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Somoo, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

⁵ Latif Khan, (1935) 20 Bom. 394.

⁶ 1 Hale P. C. 51.

⁷ (1746) 9 St. Tr. 566, Foster's C. L. 12, 18.

⁸ Ive Jardine, J., in Maganlal, supra p. 131, 133, 134, 135.

⁹ Tyler, (1838) 6 C. & P. 616, 620.

The same learned Judge in another Bombay case¹ remarks: "All our training as judges, all the great decisions make us look with dislike on any theory which makes crime easy and excuses atrocious acts. . . Except where unsoundness of mind is proved, or real fear of instant death is proved, the burden being on the prisoner, the pressure of temptation is not an excuse for breaking the law. . . Our Courts have no duty cast on them of discussing the varying motives to crime as a matter of metaphysics—of sitting as did the fallen angels reasoning high of ' Providence, foreknowledge, will and fate,

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute,
And found no end in wandering mazes lost.' "

See also the remarks of Lord Coleridge in *R. v. Dudley*² (ride cases under s. 81, supra.)

English law.—The English law excuses a person who has been forced to commit an offence by fear of death or of grievous bodily harm, except in cases of treason or homicide. The fear of having houses burnt or goods spoiled is no excuse in the eye of the law for joining and marching with rebels.³ A person is excused, under certain conditions, if he is forced to levy war against the King or to adhere to the King's enemies provided he uses every reasonable endeavour to resist or escape.⁴ According to English law a married woman charged with the commission of any criminal act, except treason, homicide, and probably robbery, is, in case her husband shall be present at the time of the commission of such act, presumed to have acted under his coercion, and such coercion . . . that she did not so act. There is no provision in the circumstances in the Penal Code.

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Punishment.—The moral guilt of a person who commits a crime under compulsion is less than that of a person who commits it freely, but any effect which is thought proper may be given to this circumstance by a proportional mitigation of the offender's punishment.⁵

95. Nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or that it is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper⁶ would complain of such harm.

COMMENT.

The maxim de minimis non curat lex (the law does not take account of trifles) is the foundation of this section.

Object.—The authors of the Code observe: " Clause 73 (this section) is intended to provide for those cases which, though, from the imperfections of language, they fall within the letter of the penal law, are yet not within its spirit, and are all over the world considered by the public, and for the most part dealt with by the tribunals, as innocent. As our definitions are framed, it is theft to dip a pen in . . . of his wafers, an assault to cover him . . . commodore him by pressing against . . . verable acts without performing which men cannot live together in society, acts which all men constantly do and

¹ Derji Govindji, (1895) 20 Bom 215, 9 St. Tr. 391, 398, 566

² 229, 223.

³ (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 273.

⁴ McGrouther's case, (1746) Foster 13, 18,

7th Parl. Rep., 73.

⁵ Stephen's History of Crim. Law, Vol. II, p. 107

suffer in turn, and which it is desirable that they should do and suffer in turn, yet which differ only in degree from crimes. That these acts ought not to be treated as crimes is evident, and we think it far better expressly to except them from the penal clauses of the Code than to leave it to the judges to except them in practice; for if the Code is silent on the subject, the judges can except these cases only by resorting to one of two practices which we consider as most pernicious, by making law, or by wresting the language of the law from its plain meaning."¹

Scope.—This section has no application, unless the act in question amounts to an offence under the Code, but for the operation of this section. Where the accused who was ordered by his employers in Calcutta to take certain bags of papers and forms belonging to them to their yard to burn and destroy them, instead of doing that took them to a place for sale, it was held that his act did not amount to criminal breach of trust and that this section had therefore no application.² The section has no application where the act charged against the accused person amounts to an offence irrespectively of whether he thereby caused, intended to cause, or knew himself to be likely to cause, harm. The accused was arrested under s. 131 of the Railways Act for being found in a state of intoxication on a railway station. The Magistrate discharged him on the ground that the harm done was so slight that "no notice would be taken of it under s. 95 of the Indian Penal Code beyond a mere warning." It was held, on revision, that the accused should have been convicted because to be drunk upon any part of a railway was to commit an offence under s. 120A of the Railways Act, and the fact that he caused little or no annoyance to any one in particular could not exempt him from conviction under that section.³

This section leaves unaffected the Madras Regulations (XI of 1816, s. 10, and IV of 1821, s. 6) as to trivial offences.

1. 'Person of ordinary sense and temper.'—Such person must be taken from the class to which the complainant belongs.

CASES.

Acts causing slight harm—Where a person was convicted for taking pods, almost valueless, from a tree standing on Government waste land⁴; where a person complained of the harm caused to his reputation by the imputation that he was travelling with a wrong ticket⁵; where a young woman, of questionable character, was going through a public thoroughfare to fetch water, and the accused caught hold of her hand, the act of the accused was considered to be a mere piece of foolish and vulgar chaff which seriously to treat as a crime would be absurd⁶; where the accused was convicted of mischief for taking some earth of hardly any appreciable value from an open piece of ground⁷; where a person removed a semi-decayed branch of a tamarind tree not belonging to him, and overhanging the roof of his house, because it inconvenienced him⁸; where a barrister and a pleader were engaged in a case, and the latter made a remark conveying an imputation on the former upon which the former called the latter a "liar"⁹; where a pleader said to the pleader of the opposite party that the status of a witness who received Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 a month was higher than his¹⁰; where a person killed a goat by jhatka process and exposed its flesh for sale in the presence of Mahomedans so as to

¹ Note B, pp. 109, 110.

² P. v. N. C. J., (1887) 10 A. W. N. 100.

Krishna, (1889) 13 Mad. 34.

⁴ Bhairon Misr, (1887) 7 A. W. N. 73.

⁵ Gulzari Lal, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 229.

⁶ Jiva Ram, (1888) 8 A. W. N. 100, Mahomed Khan, sup.

⁷ Vansittart, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 46; Amir Hasan, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 167.

⁸ Sharif Ahmad v. Qubut Singh, (1921) 43 All. 497, 502.

from a tree.

⁹ South Indian Railway Co. v. Rama-

Acts causing serious harm.—Where a blow was given across the chest with an umbrella by a dismissed policeman to a District Superintendent of Police because his application to reconsider his case had been rejected⁴; where the accused tore up a paper which showed a money debt due from him to the prosecutor, though it was unstamped, and therefore not a legal security⁵; where the accused was charged with the offence of theft in respect of three pice worth of dung-cakes and mangoes⁶; where a respectable man was taken by the ear⁷; where a man of low caste instituted prosecution for defamation on his being falsely charged with theft⁸; and where a person was dubbed kulabhrashta, i.e., prostitute's son, in a book published by the accused, this section was held to be not applicable.⁹

The Central Provinces Circular.—Magistrates should also bear in mind the provisions of s. 95 of the Indian Penal Code and apply them reasonably to the complaints before them, with reference to the position in life of the parties concerned, and the habits of the class to which they belong.¹⁰

96. Nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

Object.—The authors of the Code say: “We propose... to except from the operation of the penal clauses of the Code large classes of acts done in good faith for the purpose of repelling unlawful aggressions. In this part of the chapter we have attempted to define, with as much exactness as the subject appears to us to admit, the limits of the right of private defence. It may be thought that we have allowed too great a latitude to the exercise of this right; and we are ourselves of opinion that if we had been framing laws for a bold and high-spirited people, accustomed to take the law into their own hand, and to retaliate in kind, the danger in repelling injury, it would have been fit to provide for. But the danger is on the other side; the danger is to ourselves; the patience with which they submit to the cruel depredations of gang-robbers, and to trespass and mischief committed in the most outrageous manner by bands of ruffians, is one of the most remarkable, and at the same time one of the most discouraging symptoms which the state of society in India presents to us. Under these circumstances we are ²⁰ C. F. C. C. No. 8, 8. 4.

An accused person who at his trial has not pleaded the right of private defence, but has raised other pleas inconsistent with such a defence, cannot in appeal set up a case, founded upon the evidence taken at his trial, that he acted in the exercise of the right of private defence; neither is the Court competent to raise such a plea on his behalf.¹

Right of private defence of the body
and of property.

37. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99, to defend—

First.—His own body and the body of any other person,² against any offence affecting the human body;

Secondly.—The property, whether moveable or immoveable,³ of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft,⁴ robbery,⁵ mischief⁶ or criminal trespass,⁷ or which is an attempt⁸ to commit theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass.

COMMENT.

This section says what the extent of the right of defence is. Section 99 speaks of the limitations on the exercise of this right.

This section is much wider than the English law. Under it even a stranger may defend the person or property of another person; whereas under the English law there must be some kind of relationship existing, such as that of master and servant or husband and wife or guardian and ward, before this right could be exercised on behalf of another. Under the English law a person has no right to commit an assault merely in defence of other persons.

A full bench of the Madras High Court has laid down that the right of private defence as laid down in ss. 96 to 103 enables the arrest of any person when he has not been guilty of an offence for which arrest without warrant is permitted (e.g., drunkenness), when the person arresting or confining has a genuine and reasonable apprehension that to allow the other to remain at large will endanger the person and property of others. Where, therefore, a village Magistrate arrested a drunken person whose conduct was at the time a grave danger to the public, it was held that he was not guilty of any offence.⁹

Scope.—As to the defence of property the section speaks of "theft and robbery" but not offences like "house-breaking" and "dacoity." It, therefore, seems that the mention of "theft" must be taken to include all offences ejusdem generis. The same consideration applies to the mention of "mischief" and "criminal trespass."

1. 'Any other person.'—"It is a noble movement of the heart, that indignation which kindles at the sight of the feeble injured by the strong. It is a noble movement which makes us forget our own danger at the first cry of distress. It concerns the public safety that every honest man should consider himself as the natural protector of every other."¹⁰ The section embodies this principle and it provides that every person has a right to defend the property of himself or of any other person.

Defence of person.—Where a person assisted by a friend retaliated severely on another, who trespassed into his house with the object of having intercourse with his wife, both were held to have committed no offence.¹¹

The deceased BW was on a cart when the accused KD came up near it. He said to KD, "Is that you?" and on KD replying "yes," he began using abuse and kicked KD. The latter then called out to the accused PS, who came running

¹ Timmal, (1899) 21 All. 122.

² Gopal Naidu, (1922) 40 Mad. 605, F.B.

³ Bentham.

⁴ Dharmun Teli, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 36.

up with a bottle in his hand and evidently with the intention to strike the deceased with it and he admitted that he did strike him. Then BW slashed at KD with his dah first and then turned on PS and slashed at him with it. He hit KD on the forearm and the injury caused did not turn out to be very serious. But the result of the blow which hit PS was that three of his fingers were cut off. Then it was that KD took a knife from somewhere about his person and stabbed BW with it in a vital part of the body causing BW's death. It was held that although the deceased had turned upon PS, KD had the right to cause death to the deceased, if he might reasonably apprehend at the time that PS's life was in danger owing to the conduct of the deceased; that a man in KD's position might reasonably apprehend that the conduct of the deceased indicated an intention on his part to go on using the dah against them to either kill or inflict the gravest injury to his companion. If the deceased had the chance of using the dah again on PS there was a possibility and probability of PS losing his life and that, under the circumstances, the act of KD in taking out the knife and stabbing the deceased was covered by s. 100 and that KD did not exceed the right of self-defence.¹

Where a body of about ten men, belonging to the decree-holder's party, went with Court officers upon a plot of land in the joint possession of the judgment-debtors to take symbolical possession thereof, and the drummer was assaulted by one of the latter, whereupon the accused and their party replied by an attack upon the opponents, during the course of which one of the accused's party fractured the skull of the drummer's assailant by an isolated act, but the accused continued to beat him after he had fallen helpless on the ground, it was held that the accused had a right of private defence under the circumstances, but having exceeded such right by beating the wounded man after he had fallen, they were guilty of hurt.²

Where a person grows crops on a piece of land which another person cuts and carries away and stacks in a field of a third party without interruption and retires from the field and then the person growing the crops comes up in numbers armed with clubs and other weapons, not to commit a premeditated riot but merely to take away the crops they are entitled to and not to use any force unless they are opposed or attacked, and, while so acting within their rights in collecting their own crops with a view to take them away, they are attacked by the party of the person who stacked the crops who were also similarly armed, first, by clods of earth and, then, with spears, they have the right to defend their persons from an attack with clods and spears, an attack which reasonably causes apprehension that death will be the result, and to cause any injury short of death.³ Where a person who had seized cattle which had been trespassing on his lands, gathered together a number of men to assist him in resisting an anticipated attempt to rescue the cattle, and a fight between the parties took place, in which several men on each side were killed and injured, it was held that the person who had seized the cattle and his party were protected by this section.⁴

English case—Under circumstances which might have induced the belief that if, their son shot and killed his father. It grounds for believing and honestly believed defence of his mother, the homicide was excusable.⁵

2. 'Immoveable property.'—A party in possession of land is legally entitled to defend his possession against another party seeking to eject him by force⁶; or

¹ Nga Kyaw Dun, (1903) 16 Burma L. R. 99. See Ma Hla So v. Nga Than, (1911) 4 B. L. T. 288.

² Kunja Bhuiya, (1912) 39 Cal. 896.

³ Daburam Raut, (1912) 17 C. L. J. 394.

⁴ Nareschi Singh, (1923) 2 Pat. 595.

An accused person who at his trial has not pleaded the right of private defence, but has raised other pleas inconsistent with such a defence, cannot in appeal set up a case, founded upon the evidence taken at his trial, that he acted in the exercise of the right of private defence; neither is the Court competent to raise such a plea on his behalf.¹

Right of private defence of the body and of property.

37. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99, to defend—

First.—His own body and the body of any other person,¹ against any offence affecting the human body;

Secondly.—The property, whether moveable or immoveable,² of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft,³ robbery,⁴ mischief⁵ or criminal trespass,⁶ or which is an attempt⁷ to commit theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass.

COMMENT.

This section says what the extent of the right of defence is. Section 99 sets out the limitations on the exercise of this right.

This section is much wider than the English law. Under it even a servant may defend the person or property of another person; whereas under the law there must be some kind of relationship existing, such as that of master and servant or husband and wife or guardian and ward, before this right is exercised on behalf of another. Under the English law a person has no right to commit an assault merely in defence of other persons.

A full bench of the Madras High Court has laid down that the right of private defence as laid down in ss. 96 to 105 enables the arrest of any person not been guilty of an offence for which arrest without warrant (e.g., drunkenness), when the person arresting or confining has a reasonable apprehension that to allow the other to remain at large would be dangerous to the person and property of others. Where, therefore, a village headman arrested a drunken person whose conduct was at the time a grave danger to the community it was held that he was not guilty of any offence.²

Scope.—As to the defence of property the section speaks of "robbery" but not offences like "house-breaking" and "dacoity". It seems that the mention of "theft" must be taken to include "criminal trespass". The same consideration applies to the mention of "mischief".

1. "Any other person."—"It is a noble movement of sympathy and sympathy which kindles at the sight of the feeble injured by a movement which makes us forget our own danger at the time. It concerns the public safety that every honest man should be the natural protector of every other."³ The section embodies this principle. It provides that every person has a right to defend the person of any other person.

Defence of person.—Where a person assisted by another, who trespassed into his house with the intention of committing a crime, and with his wife, both were held to have committed a crime.

The deceased BW was on a cart when the accused said to KD, "Is that you?" and on KD replying "Yes," the accused and kicked KD. The latter then called out to the

¹ Timmal, (1898) 21 All. 122.

² Gopal Naidu, (1922) 46 Mad. 605, F.B.

The auction purchaser does not commit any criminal act in going to assert his title and to take possession of the property purchased by him by ousting the judgment-debtor, who became a trespasser after the date of delivery of possession.¹

Where the common intention of an assembly of more than five persons was to resist by force an unlawful trespass on land it was held that they were not guilty of rioting.²

7. * Attempt.—See s. 511, infra.

Defence of property.—Plea allowed.—The villagers belonging to C walked religious procession, through a part of the village of K, carrying with them a vessel containing water which purported to be consecrated. The villagers of K objecting, obstructed the procession, whereupon the members of it resisted the obstruction, and used some violence, causing grievous hurt to one of the obstructers and hurt to others of them. It was held that they were justified in exercising their right of private defence of body and property and the harm inflicted was not more than necessary for the purpose of self-defence.³ Where persons, who actually grew the disputed crop and who were no parties either to the civil suit for possession which was decreed against their landlord, or to the delivery of possession of the land, resisted the action of the complainant who went to take possession under the decree of the civil Court, it was held that they were justified in claiming what they had grown and in resisting the complainant.⁴

Criminal trespass.—A Police officer attempted to carry on a general search for stolen property (not authorized by law). One of the accused in resisting such a search pushed the Sub-Inspector and the latter ordered two constables to climb on his roof and break into the house, whereupon the villagers assumed a threatening attitude and threatened to cut them to pieces if they entered the house and this empty threat was sufficient to prevent the police from committing the trespass. It was held that the accused were justified in resisting the search, and they had not exceeded the right of private defence.⁵

Plea disallowed.—Accused was out in the jungles with his gun; an altercation took place between him and the deceased, the former interfering to prevent the latter from committing real or supposed cattle trespass; the deceased thereupon with a large club attacked the accused, who fired without any particular aim, but lowering the muzzle of the gun so as not to hit a vital part, and death immediately resulted from the wound thus inflicted. It was held that the accused's act was not a legal exercise of the right of private defence as he had only to stand back and he was safe.⁶

Altercation between two parties.—Party A sowed a crop in a field to which apparently they were entitled. Party B, claiming the field and the crop as theirs, entered upon the land and began to cut the crop. Party A, having watched party B enter upon the land, took counsel together and then proceeded to attack party B, and a fight ensued, in which grievous hurt was caused. It was held that it was not open to party A to plead "private defence of property."⁷ of possession and gaining of

It is not found that there was time to have recourse to the authorities. This case is not supported by Q.-E. v. Prag

¹ Prankhang, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1078.
² Kureem Bulsh, (1867) P. R. No. 13 of 1868. See to the same effect, Gurdil Singh, Gur. App. 64.

³ Prankhang, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1078.
⁴ Kureem Bulsh, (1867) P. R. No. 13 of 1868. See to the same effect, Gurdil Singh, Gur. App. 64.

⁵ Singh,
princi-

⁶ Regula Bheemappa, (1902) 26 Mad. 249.

⁷ Gajendra Ghorai, (1911) 15 C. L. J. 80.

to steal from it¹; or to do an act which will have the effect of causing injury to it, e.g., by cutting a bund.² It is immaterial whether the person in possession of the property had or had not the right to possession. If a zemindar's people enter upon crops with the intention of distraining without notice, the ryot owners are justified in considering such action as trespass.³ But mere persistence in demanding rent will not amount to trespass so as to justify an assault on the person making the demand.⁴ A landlord who had not tendered to his tenant such a lease as the latter was bound to accept under the Madras Rent Recovery Act (Mad. Act VIII of 1865) distrained his cattle for arrears of rent, the assistance of the police having been procured for the purpose. The tenant, with the assistance of seven other persons, forcibly obstructed the removal of the cattle which had already been actually seized and driven for some yards. It was held that the tenants were not entitled to the right of defence and were guilty of rioting.⁵

When an attack is made on persons acting in the lawful exercise of their right over property, they are entitled to the right of private defence, and the only question that arises thereafter is whether any member of the party individually exceeded the right. Persons exercising their lawful rights are not members of an unlawful assembly, nor can the assembly become unlawful by their repelling an attack made on them by persons who had no right to obstruct them, nor by exceeding the lawful use of their right of private defence. In such a case each is liable only for his individual acts done in excess of such right.⁶

3. 'Theft.'—See s. 378, infra. Where a number of persons were justified in resisting the theft of their crops they could not all be considered as members of an unlawful assembly with the common object of asserting a right to the land on which the crops stood, because some of their number exceeded the right of private defence. But if after some of them had exceeded the right of private defence, others continued in the assembly aiding and abetting them, they could all be considered members of an unlawful assembly.⁷

4. 'Robbery.'—See s. 390, infra.

5. 'Mischief.'—See s. 425, infra.

6. 'Criminal trespass.'—See s. 441, infra. A rightful owner is entitled to physically turn out a trespasser or one trying to infringe upon his rights. A person exercising this right should, however, not use more force than is reasonable to defend his possession from a trespasser.⁸ A person in possession of lands is, however, not justified in confining persons who commit trespass.⁹

"A civil trespass will not excuse the firing a pistol at a trespasser in sudden resentment or anger. If a person takes forcible possession of another man's close, so as to be guilty of a breach of the peace, it is more than a trespass. So, if a man with force invades and enters into the dwelling of another. But a man is not authorized to fire a pistol on every intrusion or invasion of his house. He ought, if he has a reasonable opportunity, to endeavour to remove him without having recourse to the last extremity. But, the making an attack upon a dwelling, and especially at night, the law regards as equivalent to an assault on a man's person; for a man's house is his castle, and, therefore, in the eye of the law, it is equivalent to an assault; but no words or singing are equivalent to an assault, nor will they authorize an assault in return."¹⁰

¹ Mokee, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 15.

² Biryo Singh v. Khub Lall, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 66; Shunker Singh v. Burmah Mahlo, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 25; Ganouri Lal Das, (1889) 16 Cal. 206.

³ Kankai Shahu, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 40.

⁴ Mahomed Jan v. Khadi Sheik, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 65 (75).

⁵ Ramayya, (1889) 13 Mad. 148.

⁶ Kunja Bhuiya, (1912) 39 Cal. 896;

⁷ ... 335.
13

⁸ ... (Cr.) 64.

⁹ Meade, (1823) 1 Lewin 181, 185.

The auction purchaser does not commit any criminal act in going to assert his title and to take possession of the property purchased by him by ousting the judgment-debtor, who becomes a trespasser after the date of delivery of possession.¹

Where the possession of an assembly of more than five persons was secured by force as a lawful trespass on land it was held that they were not guilty of rioting.²

7. "Attempt"—See s. 311, infra.

Defence of property.—Flea allowed.—The villagers belonging to C walked religious procession, through a part of the village of K, carrying with them a vessel containing water which propagated to be consecrated. The villagers of K objecting, obstructed the procession, whereupon the members of it resorted to obstruction, and used some violence, causing grievous hurt to one of the obstructors and hurt to others of them. It was held that they were justified in exercising their right of private defence of body and property and the harm inflicted was not more than necessary for the purpose of self-defence.³ Where persons, who actually gave the disputed crop and who were supporters either to the civil suit for possession which was decreed against their landlord, or to the delivery of possession of the land, resisted the action of the complainant who went to take possession under the decree of the civil Court, it was held that they were justified in claiming what they had grown and in resisting the complainant.⁴

Criminal trespass.—A Police officer attempted to carry on a general search for stolen property (not as authorized by law). One of the accused in resisting such a search pushed the S.D. Inspector and the latter ordered two constables to climb on his roof and break it to the house, whereupon the villagers assumed a threatening attitude and threatened to cut them to pieces if they entered the house and this empty threat was sufficient to prevent the police from committing the trespass. It was held that the accused were justified in resisting the search, and they had not exceeded the right of private defence.⁵

Flea challenged.—Accused was out in the jungles with his gun; an altercation took place between him and the deceased, the former interfering to prevent the latter from committing real or supposed cattle trespass; the deceased thereupon with a large club attacked the accused, who fired without any particular aim, but lowering the muzzle of the gun so as not to hit a vital part, and death immediately resulted from the wound thus inflicted. It was held that the accused's act was not a legal exercise of the right of private defence as he had only to stand back and he was safe.⁶

Altercation between two parties.—Party A sowed a crop in a field to which apparently they were entitled. Party B, claiming the field and the crop as theirs, entered upon the land and began to cut the crop. Party A, having watched party B enter upon the land, took counsel together and then proceeded to attack party B, and a fight ensued, in which grievous hurt was caused. It was held that it was not open to party A to plead that they were acting in the exercise of their right of private defence of property.⁷ This case does not lay down sound law. The finding of possession and sowing of the crops on the part of A brings the case under this section subject to s. 99. The taking of counsel before action will not by itself deprive the accused of his right of private defence. It is not found that there was time to have recourse to the authorities. This case is not supported by Q.-E. v. Prag

¹ Ram Krishna Singh, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 233.

² Franklang, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1078.

³ Kalee Mundle, (1880) 10 C. L. R. 278;
Guru Charan Chang, (1870) 6 Beng. L. R.
App. 9; Toolee Singh, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.)
64.

⁴ Kurcen Bulah, (1867) P. R. No. 13 of 1868. See to the same effect, Gurdit Singh,
(1872) P. R. No. 12 of 1872.

⁵ Kaliji, (1901) 24 All. 143. Kadhu Singh,
(1902) 24 All. 208, lays down the same principle on similar facts.

⁶ Regula Bheemappa, (1902) 26 Mad. 249.

⁷ Gajendra Ghoras, (1911) 15 C. L. J. 80.

Dat,¹ though it professes to follow that case; and is directly in conflict with *Q.-E. v. Narsang Pathabhai*², *Pachkauri v. Q.-E.*³, and *K.-E. v. Ayya Annasamy Aiyar*⁴, and has not been referred to in *Emp. v. Hira*⁵. In the last case certain persons who were lawfully in possession, as tenants of agricultural land, having reason to suppose that it was possible that they might be attacked and ejected from the land by force, made a practice of keeping their clubs in readiness, and also persuaded the tenants of some adjacent fields to do likewise. The expected attack came, and there was a somewhat severe fight, in the course of which both parties were injured. It was held that the defenders were within their rights in holding themselves in readiness to repel an attack if and when it should come.

The petitioners went with three ploughs on the land to which the complainant had the right of possession, and of which he was in possession till such entry, and began to plough up the land, to uproot some castor plants and throw them away. While they were thus in actual but temporary occupation, the complainant and his party went on the land and tried to unyoke the cattle, whereupon a riot took place. It was held that the petitioners were not justified in entering on the land, in ploughing it, uprooting the plants and throwing them away, that they were members of an unlawful assembly, the common object of which was to enforce a right or supposed right for the exercise of which they were prepared to use force, and that their action in beating the complainant's party was not justified by the fact of their having obtained temporary occupation.⁶

98. When an act, which would otherwise be a certain offence, is not that offence, by reason of the youth,¹ the want of maturity of understanding,² the unsoundness of mind,³ or the intoxication⁴ of the person doing that act, or by reason of any misconception⁵ on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A; Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters by night a house which he is legally entitled to enter. Z, in good faith, taking A for a house-breaker, attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were not acting under that misconception.

COMMENT.

This section lays down that for the purpose of exercising the right of private defence physical or mental incapacity of the person against whom the right is exercised is no bar.

1. 'Youth.'—See ss. 82-83, supra.
2. 'Want of maturity of understanding.'—See s. 83, supra.
3. 'Unsoundness of mind.'—See s. 84, supra.
4. 'Intoxication.'—See s. 85, supra.
5. 'Misconception.'—See ss. 76-79, supra.

¹ (1895) 20 All. 459.
² (1899) 14 Bom. 441.
³ (1897) 24 Cal. 686.

⁴ (1901) 25 Mad. 624.
⁵ (1922) 45 All. 250.
⁶ Jasram Alakhon, (1907) 35 Cal. 103.

99. There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that act may not be strictly justifiable by law.¹

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.²

There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.³

The right of private defence in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.⁴

Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

Explanation 2.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is acting by such direction, or unless such person states the authority under which he acts, or, if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority, if demanded.

COMMENT.

This section enumerates the limitations put on the exercise of the right of defence.

1. First clause.—This clause applies to those cases in which the public servant is acting (1) in good faith, and (2) under colour of his office, though the particular act being done by him may not be justifiable by law.

* Grievous hurt.—See s. 320, infra.

* Public servant.—See s. 21, supra.

* Good faith.—See s. 52, supra.¹

* Under colour of his office.—The protection is intended to be given only to a public servant acting honestly in the legitimate discharge of powers conferred or of duties imposed upon him.

* Not strictly justifiable by law.—This section has no application to a case where the initial proceeding, and the power under which any public servant purports to act are altogether without jurisdiction² and entirely *ultra vires*³. But the protection afforded under it to public servants is not lost to them by reason of any mistake on their part in the exercise of their proper functions.⁴ The section thus

¹ Bhawoo Jivaji v. Mulji Dayal, (1888) 12 Bom. 377; Pukot Kotu, (1896) 19 Mad. 349.

² Jogendra Nath Mukerjee, (1897) 24 Cal. 320; Haq. Dad, (1925) 6 Lab. 392.

³ Tuleiram, (1888) 13 Bom. 168; Lehrhaj,

(1891) 11 A. W. N. 195; Asa, (1913) P. L. R. No. 325 of 1913.

⁴ Tiruchittambala Pathan, (1896) 21 Mad. 78. See Bhola Makto, (1904) 9 C. W. N. 125; Kishen Lal, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 501.

applies to cases where there is an excess of jurisdiction as distinct from a complete absence of jurisdiction, to cases where the official has done wrongly what he might have done rightly, but not to cases where the act could not possibly have been done rightly.¹ Thus resistance to the execution of an illegal warrant is justifiable in exercise of the right of private defence.² Resistance to a general search for stolen property is justifiable as the law requires the mention of specific things.³

Cases.—Resistance to an officer acting without a warrant.—A police-officer attempted without a search-warrant to enter into a house in search of property alleged to have been stolen and was obstructed and resisted. It was held that, even though the officer was not strictly justified in searching the house without a warrant, the person obstructing and resisting could not set up the illegality of the officer's proceeding as a justification of his obstruction, as it was not shown that the officer was acting otherwise than in good faith and without malice.⁴

Resistance to an officer acting on an illegal warrant or order.—Where, on the complaint of one G that his wife was wrongfully confined by his father-in-law, a warrant was issued under s. 96, Criminal Procedure Code, and the police-officer, attempting to execute this warrant at the house of the father-in-law, was obstructed by him and seven others who used criminal force, it was held that, as the warrant issued was wholly illegal, the accused were not deprived of the right of defence.⁵ Where the accused was convicted of having assaulted a peon when executing a writ of delivery of possession of a share in a tank by ordering some fishermen to cast their nets in the tank and catch fish for the decree-holder as provided in the writ, it was held that whatever mistake there might be in the procedure of the Munsif in giving the direction in the writ, the accused had no right of private defence against the peon who was a public servant acting under colour of his office in good faith.⁶ A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to issue an order under s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, in favour of any person and ask the police to allow him to cut the crops, without making any inquiry as to who was in possession of the lands, and the third party, whose possession is found, has a right of private defence of property and that party is not deprived of that right simply because the police were there armed with an illegal and unjustifiable order of the Magistrate.⁷

Illegal attachment does not justify resistance.—Where articles protected from attachment were attached, it was held that this act did not justify resistance.⁸ Where the property of a person was wrongfully attached as the property of certain absconders, it was held that the rightful owner had no right of private defence of his property, as the police-officer was acting in good faith under colour of his office, and that even supposing the order of attachment might not have been properly made, that would in itself be no sufficient ground for such a defence.⁹ This decision seems questionable. There is no right of private defence if the proceedings of a public officer are not "strictly justifiable by law." But in this case the action of the police-officer was entirely ultra vires as the property in question did not belong to the absconders, and there is no room left for the operation of the first two clauses of this section. See *Q.-E. v. Tulsiram*¹⁰; *Jagarnath Mandhata v. Q.-E.*¹¹; and *Q.-E. v. Jogendra Nath Mukerjee*¹².

Apprehension of death or grievous hurt.—An Excise Inspector pursued an armed smuggler, and on coming up with him ordered him to stop and fired his

¹ Bisu Haldar, (1907) 11 C. W. N. 830, 6 C. L. J. 127; Shaikh Moynuddin, (1921) 2 P. L. T. 455.

² Musammam Hafiz Bibi v. Musammam Suba Bibi, (1922) 27 C. W. N. 854.

³ Prankhang, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1078; Government of Assam v. Sahedulla, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 857, v.s.

⁴ Vyankatray Shrinivas, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 50; Pukot Kotu, (1896) 19 Mad. 349;

Altar Singh, (1917) P. L. R. No. 57 of 1918.

⁵ Bisu Haldar, sup.

⁶ Preo Lal Mukerjee, (1913) 18 C. W. N. 548.

⁷ Shaikh Moynuddin, sup.

⁸ Phomalai Udayan, (1898) 21 Mad. 236.

⁹ Bhai Lal Chowdhury, (1902) 29 Cal. 417.

¹⁰ (1885) 13 Bom. 183.

¹¹ (1897) 24 Cal. 324.

¹² (1897) 24 Cal. 320.

revolver twice to frighten him, whereupon the smuggler drew a sword and cut the Inspector on the thigh. It was held that the smuggler had reasonable ground for believing that the Inspector intended to cause death or grievous hurt and did not exceed the right of private defence.¹

2. Second clause.—The first clause speaks of the acts done by a public servant, this clause, of acts done under the direction of a public servant. Under this clause it is not necessary that the doer should be a public servant. He must only act under the directions of a public servant. Explanation 2 must be read conjointly with this clause. Notwithstanding this clause, a person can resist a public servant if the latter's conduct is altogether illegal. Thus, where a licensed vaccinator unlawfully attempted to take lymph from the arm of a person who objected to it, it was held that the resistance was justifiable.²

Cases.—Resistance to the execution of a warrant.—Where a police-officer attempted to execute a warrant, the issue of which was illegal, it was held that the accused were justified in their resistance.³ It was held similarly where a constable conducted a search without any authority.⁴ Where the warrant issued for the arrest of a debtor was initialled though not fully signed, it was held that he had no right of private defence.⁵

Resistance to the execution of not a strictly legal order.—An order to the Police purporting to be made under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, directing them to take charge of some crops in dispute, was not strictly legal, and in execution of such order the Police went to the spot where the crop was stored and after announcing the order proposed to guard it. It was held that the accused in seizing several men of the Police party and carrying them off into confinement had exceeded their right of private defence.⁶

3. Third clause.—This clause must be read with the first clause of s. 105.⁷ It places an important restriction on the exercise of the right of private defence

'Time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.'—No man has the right to take into his own hands for the protection of his person or property, or property of another person, must be restricted and recourse to the public authorities. It is necessary to have recourse to the public authorities in order to protect his person or property. . . . have recourse to the public authorities. . . . Indian Penal Code.⁸

There is no right of private defence where two parties arm themselves for a fight to enforce their right or supposed right, and deliberately engage in large numbers in a fight. In such a case, if it is not shown that the accused were acting within the legal limits of the right of private defence, it does not matter which party was the first to attack.⁹ The right of private defence being granted for defence only, it must not and cannot legally be exercised when there is 'time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.' This does not mean that a person in actual possession is, when attacked, to abandon his property to the mercy of the marauders, with a view of making an application to the Police for assistance.¹⁰ The

¹ Ngo Nam Du, (1919) 3 U. B. R. 176.

² Jagannath Mandhata, (1897) 24 Cal. 324; Mangobind Muchi, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 627; Bakul, (1906) 26 A. W. N. 98.

³ Jayendra Nath Mukerjee, (1897) 24 Cal. 320; Bisu Halder, (1907) 11 C. W. N. 836, 6 C. L. J. 127.

⁴ Idu Mandal, (1907) 6 C. L. J. 753.

⁵ Janki Prasad, (1886) 8 All. 293.

⁶ Bhola Mukhi, (1904) 9 C. W. N. 125.

⁷ Narasany Patalkhan, (1890) 14 Bom. 441.

⁸ Jairam Mahlon, (1907) 35 Cal. 103.

⁹ Kabiruddin, (1908) 35 Cal. 364; Mamuruddin, (1908) 35 Cal. 384; Ambika Lal, (1908) 35 Cal. 443; Becker Awp., (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 885, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 104.

¹⁰ Annamalai, (1890) 1 Weir 46; Shamsher Khan, (1826) 16 A. W. N. 170; Jeechar Est., (1916) 35 A. L. J. R. 47.

law must not be invoked to oppress persons who, when there is no time to have recourse to the public authorities, find themselves in a position in which they must either exert the privilege of private defence as provided and restricted by the law or submit to a forcible invasion of the right of person or property in cases where, under s. 97, the law does not require any such submission.¹ At the same time the right of private defence does not take the place of the functions of those public servants who are especially charged with the protection of life and property and the apprehension of offenders, and where the assistance of the public authorities can be procured, the right cannot be lawfully exercised.

The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences. If the danger is not apprehended, the owner of the property is not called to the time and place

When a person is attacked while doing a lawful act, he is entitled to stand his ground and defend himself, and the law does not intend that he must run away to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.² There is no obligation upon a person entitled to exercise the right of private defence and to defend his person or property, to retire merely because his assailant threatens him with violence.³

That a person can avoid injury by the exercise of the right of private defence of the right will be justified will depend not on the actual danger but on whether there was reasonable apprehension of such danger.⁴ It never was intended that a man should submit to the deprivation of property in his possession without exercising any right of self-defence, and trust to recover it by the tedious operation of a case in the Civil Court with all the weight of possession, onus of proof, etc., against him.⁵ A rightful owner has a right to eject a trespasser from his land by civil process, but it is not within his right to take a mob of men and forcibly clear the person in possession of the land in respect of which he had only title without possession. The right of private defence does not cover a case of taking or retaking possession by means of criminal force or show of criminal force.⁶

Cases.—Time to obtain protection of public authorities.—Where the servants of an indigo factory having been interfered with by the villagers to sow land, went out in force to effect their purpose and the villagers also went out armed to meet them, it was held that in the affray which followed neither party could plead the right of private defence of property as there was a Police Station near at hand.⁷ The petitioners numbering from forty to sixty, armed with clubs, spears and heavy billets of wood, proceeded to the disputed land, attacked the complainant and his father, and destroyed the crops growing thereon. Both parties claimed the land as having fallen to their shares on partition. The Magistrate found that the complainant was in possession and had grown the crops. It was held that the right of private defence did not arise, as there was no invasion of the petitioner's rights on the day of occurrence, and, in any case, that they had ample time to have recourse to the authorities for the protection of their rights.⁸ The complainant's party, consisting of twelve or thirteen persons, went with pickaxes to a bund

¹ Nga Hla Tun U, (1896) F. J. L. B. 219.

² Narany Pathakdas, (1850) 14 Bom. 411.

³ State v. Bhat, (1850) 14 Bom. 411.

⁴ State v. Bhat, (1850) 14 Bom. 411.

⁵ State v. Bhat, (1850) 14 Bom. 411.

⁶ State v. Bhat, (1850) 14 Bom. 411.

⁷ Jasuram Marwari, (1923) 2 Pat. L. R. 13.

⁸ State v. Bhat, (1850) 14 Bom. 411.

Ma

Pa

(embankment) erected on the land of the master of the accused in order to cut it, as it obstructed the flow of water from their lands and destroyed their crops. The accused hearing of this at once assembled to the number of fifty or sixty, armed themselves with clubs and proceeded to the bund. At this time the complainant's party had either finished the cutting or ceased to do so, when he saw the accused approaching. The latter attacked the complainant's party and drove them to their village. One or more of the assailants also beat a man, who was present there, but was not connected with the cutting of the bund, both in the first attack and when they returned from the chase, and fractured his skull, in consequence of which he died shortly after. It was held that the accused were members of an unlawful assembly from the beginning, as they went armed with clubs and in large numbers to enforce their right at all hazards, that, if not so at the beginning, they became an unlawful assembly, and had no right of private defence, when the opposite party had ceased cutting the bund, and that even if they had, they exceeded their right by attacking their opponents and chasing them and by beating the deceased.¹ The accused made a combined attack upon M and R as they were throwing earth upon a narrow path of the shamilat and in so doing threw earth upon the fences with which the accused had formed enclosures upon the shamilat. The injury caused to R was not serious but M died of the blow caused by one of the accused. It was held that as the matter was not urgent and no serious loss of

ation, one evening, that the complainants intended to go on his land on the following day, and uproot the juwari seed sown in it. At about three o'clock next morning he was informed that the complainants had entered on his land, and were ploughing up the seed. Thereupon he at once proceeded to the spot, followed by the remaining accused, and remonstrated with the complainants, who commenced an attack on the accused. In the fight which ensued, both sides received serious injuries, and the leader of the complainant's party was killed. It was held that the complainants being the aggressors, the accused had the right of private defence; and that they were not bound to act on the information received on the previous evening, and seek the protection of the public authorities, as they had no reason to apprehend a night attack on their property.³ Where the opponents of the accused erected some huts stealthily at night on a plot of land of which the accused were in peaceful possession and it was alleged that the opponents were in possession of the land for about fourteen hours and the accused at break of day on coming to know of this took the earliest opportunity to exercise their own right of private defence and came to the spot armed to turn out the opponents who were found by them still engaged in erecting more huts and there was a free fight between the parties and the accused did not inflict more hurt than was necessary for defending themselves, it was held that the accused were not guilty of rioting as they were entitled to their right of private defence.⁴ Where a person who had seized cattle which had been trespassing on his lands, gathered together a number of men to assist him in resisting an anticipated attempt to rescue the cattle, and a fight between the parties took place, in which several men on each side were killed and injured, it was held that the person who had seized the cattle and his party had not exceeded the right of private defence.⁵

4. Fourth clause.—The right of private defence is restricted to not inflicting more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.⁶ The amount of force necessary depends on the circumstances of the case, and there is no protection if the harm is caused by excessive violence quite unnecessary to the case.¹ For example, a person set by his master to watch a garden or yard, is not at all justified in shooting at, or injuring, in any way, persons who may come into those premises, even in the night. He ought first to see whether he could not take measures for their apprehension.² A kick is not a justifiable mode of turning a man out of your house, though he be a trespasser. If a person becomes excited and gives another a kick, it is an unjustifiable act.³

¹ 13 W. R. (Cr.) 66; Josef Gasorati, (1879) P. R. No. 36 of 1879.

If the accused are justified in resisting the theft of their crops, they cannot be considered as members of an unlawful assembly, with the common object to assert a right to the disputed land and crops, because some members thereof may have exceeded the right of private defence; but if some of the members continue in it, after the others have exceeded the right by the infliction of unnecessary violence, and aid and abet the latter, they also must be considered as having exceeded the right.⁴

Cases.—Justifiable harm.—Where the accused finding a thief entering into his house at night, through an entrance made in the sidewall, seized him while intruding his body and held him with his face down to the ground to prevent his further entrance and thereby caused his death by suffocation⁵; where a person attacked by another with a spear struck a blow with a club which resulted in the death of the party attacking⁶; where a boy whose crop was frequently stolen found a person stealing and gave him some blows with a club which resulted in his death⁷; and where a number of armed men attacked a court-house, and one of the inmates shot an assailant⁸ the right of private defence was held to be a good justification.

Where the tenants were found to have held their lands on the batai system, under which harvested crops should be taken to the village khalihan, but it appeared that they went in a large body armed with clubs with the avowed intention of removing them to their own houses, and were making up the crops already cut into bundles, whereupon the zemindar's watchmen remonstrated and a number of their amlas went to the spot armed with clubs and swords and a fight took place, owing to the interference of the leader of the tenants, in the course of which some of the tenants received slight incised wounds and one of them a severe one inflicted by one of the accused, and where it further appeared that the zemindar's people had, four days before the date of the occurrence, sent an urgent appeal to the Police for protection against a serious breach of the peace which seemed imminent, it was held that, inasmuch as the common object of the accused was to protect the zemindar's rights over the crops, and there was no specific finding by the Session Judge that their intention was to use more force than was necessary or that they had in fact used excessive force, they acted in the exercise of the right of private defence and were not guilty of rioting.⁹

More harm caused than necessary.—Where a person killed a weak old woman found stealing at night¹⁰; where a person caught a thief in his house at night and deliberately killed him with a pickaxe to prevent his escaping¹¹; where the deceased attempted to take a pickaxe from the accused and the latter resisting struck him with it and killed him¹²; where a number of persons apprehending a thief committing house-breaking strangled him and subjected him to gross mal-treatment

¹ Osborn Browne, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 33.

² Jake Sully, (1824) 1 C. & P. 319.

³ Hill's case, (1877) 2 Lewin 214.

⁴ Bajjant's Case, (1908) 35 Cal. 298;

⁵ Kunja Bai, (1912) 39 Cal. 894.

⁶ Kerim Bux, (1863) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 12.

⁷ Mohr's, (1862) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

⁸ Mokse, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 15.

⁹ Ram Lal Singh, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 51.

¹⁰ Ram Kalaian Singh, (1903) 35 Cal. 827.

¹¹ Osborn Browne, sup.

¹² Durgam Gier, (1868) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 73;

Fakeera Chamar, (1868) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 57.

¹³ Purna Meah, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 89.

when he was fully in their power and helpless¹; where the accused fired a gun at persons at a distance of twenty-five yards, without a reasonable apprehension of danger, and injured them²; and where the accused armed with spears attacked and killed two persons unarmed who were ploughing a field believed by the accused to be their field³ the right of private defence was negatived.⁴ Where A trespassed on the lands of B, whose servants seized and confined A till the following day, when B gave information to the Police, it was held that the conduct of B and his servants in confining A could not be supported on the ground that they were exercising the right of private defence of property.⁵ The accused who was watching his field (some of the grain of which had on previous occasions been stolen) saw the deceased cutting his corn. On being pursued the deceased ran his head against a tree and fell. The accused then hit him recklessly with a stick while on the ground, and fractured his skull in two places, causing death. It was held that the right of private defence of property had been exceeded and the accused was guilty of culpable homicide.⁶ The accused, five in number, went on a moonlight night, armed with clubs and assaulted two men who were cutting their rice crop, one of whom received six distinct fractures of the bones of the skull besides a number of other wounds and was killed on the spot. It was held that they were guilty of murder as they had inflicted more harm than was necessary for the purpose of defending their property.⁷ Where the accused, three of whom were armed with a sword, a garasa (scythe) and a lobanda (ironshod stick) respectively, and the rest with clubs, went in a large body to a certain disputed land, where the labourers of the opposite party were reaping some musouri crops, and attacked them, fatally wounding one and severely injuring another, it was held that the accused who ordered the attack, and those who used the sword, garasa and lobanda, had exceeded the right of private defence of property, and others, who continued in the unlawful stealing wood in his master's ground

The horse took fright and ran away and dragged the boy on the ground till his shoulder was broken, whereof he died. This was ruled to be murder.⁸

Arrest.—The English and Indian law differ somewhat on the point of arrest by, or by the direction of, public servants. Under the English law a person offering resistance to a public servant making an arrest is extenuated if the document of warrant or writ is defective in the frame of it, or if the manner of making the arrest is illegal, or if the name of the officer or party is entered without due authority; but the law of India allows no extenuation on any of these accounts as long as the act is bona fide.

Explanation.—Actual knowledge that a person is a public servant or acting by the direction of a public servant, or reasonable ground of knowledge, as from his dress, words, weapons, etc., will deprive those against whom he acts of the right of self-defence.¹⁰

100. The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in the last preceding section, to the voluntary causing of death¹ or of any other harm to the assailant, if the offence which occasions the exercise of the right be of any of the descriptions² hereinafter enumerated, namely:—

When the right of private defence of the body extends to causing death,

¹ Dhannujai Poly, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 68.

² Hussainudjy, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 46.

³ Gour Chand Chawg, (1872) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 28.

⁴ See also Abdul Hakim, (1880) 3 All. 253; Sabba Naik, (1898) 21 Mad. 249.

⁵ Shurufoddin v. Kaseemath, (1870) 13

W. R. (Cr.) 64.

⁶ Boj, (1902) P. R. No. 29 of 1902.

⁷ Mammun, (1916) P. R. No. 35 of 1916.

⁸ Bisaynath Dhanuk, (1905) 36 Cal. 652.

⁹ Hallaway, (1828) 1 East P. C. 237, Cro. Car. 131, 1 Hale P. C. 454.

¹⁰ M. & M. 76.

First.—Such an assault, as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death will otherwise be the consequence of such assault;

Secondly.—Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt³ will otherwise be the consequence of such assault;

Thirdly.—An assault with the intention of committing rape⁴;

Fourthly.—An assault with the intention of gratifying unnatural lust⁵;

Fifthly.—An assault with the intention of kidnapping⁶ or abducting;

Sixthly.—An assault with the intention of wrongfully confining⁷ a person, under circumstances which may reasonably cause him to apprehend that he will be unable to have recourse to the public authorities for his release.

COMMENT.

This section justifies the killing of an assailant when apprehension of atrocious crimes enumerated in the several clauses is caused. It should be read subject to the provision of s. 99.

The section gives the right of private defence against actual assailants. It does not authorise the killing or causing of hurt to persons who may in future when reinforced by others become assailants.

1. 'Voluntary causing of death.'—As to the meaning of the word 'voluntary,' see s. 39, supra. The law most undoubtedly authorizes a man who is under a reasonable apprehension that his life is in danger or his body in risk of grievous hurt to inflict death upon his assailant either when the assault is attempted or directly threatened, but the apprehension must be reasonable and the violence inflicted must not be greater than is reasonably necessary for the purpose of self-defence. It must be proportionate to and commensurate with the quality and character of the act it is intended to meet and what is done in excess is not protected.¹

Homicide in self-defence is justifiable, although the party killing was guilty of an assault, or engaged in an unlawful conflict; provided (1) that the party killing did not either commence or provoke the attack with intent to kill or do grievous bodily harm; (2) that he declined further conflict, and quitted and retreated from it, so far as was practicable with safety; (3) that he killed the assailant because he had reasonable cause for believing it to be necessary so to do, in order to avoid immediate death.²

2. 'Any of the descriptions.'—A man is not justified in shooting another who is about to arrest him, when there is nothing to show that he has reason to apprehend that any of the acts mentioned in this section would ensue.³

3. 'Grievous hurt.'—See s. 320, infra.

4. 'Rape.'—See s. 375, infra;

5. 'Unnatural lust.'—See s. 377, infra.

6. 'Kidnapping.'—See s. 359, infra.

7. 'Wrongfully confining.'—See s. 340, infra.

¹ Whitaker, (1852) 2 A. W. N. 172.

² 10th Parl. Rep., 35.

³ Sher Bat, (1879) F. R. No. 1 of 1880.

CASES.

First clause.—Apprehension of death.—The accused who were two in number were being searched by an armed gang who announced their intention to kill them. The accused took refuge in a dark kitchen of a house. The mob broke into the house and two of them made their way with torches to the kitchen and attacked the accused. One of the attacking party was hacked to death by the accused. It was held that the accused had committed no offence since they were fighting for life with a murderous mob in front and an enemy who made his way in the room where they had taken refuge and it was not surprising that they did their best to make sure that their enemy was dead.¹ A party of armed men escorting certain ladies met with resistance from certain persons one of whom levelled a gun against a member of the escorting party, but was stabbed to death. It was held that the act of killing was done in self-defence.²

Second clause.—Apprehension of grievous hurt.—Plea allowed.—A person rushed at the accused armed with a heavy weapon and showing every intention to assault him. The accused used his spear, when that person was in the very act of delivering a blow to him, and in doing so he killed that person. The Sessions Judge held that the right of private defence was exceeded, because the accused had an opportunity of running away. It was held that the accused reasonably anticipated grievous son, and his uncle's son seized a second jatu, two feet long, and struck the assailant twice on the head with it in consequence of which he died, it was held that there was no excess of the right of private defence and the accused had committed no offence.⁴

The deceased, S, and three others, who formed his party, attacked with clubs the accused, B, and his party, three in number, as the result of a quarrel. One of the party of the deceased struck a blow on the accused which felled him to the ground. The accused rose up and inflicted a blow on the head of S, which fractured his skull causing death within a short time. It was held that under the circumstances of the case the accused did not exceed his right of private defence by inflicting the blow on the head of the deceased, as the circumstances were such as reasonably caused the apprehension that grievous hurt would, but for his action, after running some distance, found that he could not very well make his escape and he turned round and hit the deceased a blow and killed him, it was held that the appellant acted in self-defence and was not guilty of any offence.⁶

Plea disallowed.—The accused had an intrigue with one S, wife of A. S and A were sleeping one night in a house about eighty paces from the place where the accused slept. In the early morning S left her cot to visit the accused. A missed her and suspecting where she had gone followed her with a hatchet. He assaulted the accused and wounded him, whereupon the accused stabbed him with a knife and killed him. It was held that as the accused had not established that

¹ Gurlingappa Shidramappa, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R. 817, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 66.

² Ramzani, (1924) 23 A. L. J. R. 68.

³ Nga Kyaw Zan, (1903) 9 Burma L. R. 191. See Nga Kyaw Dun, (1903) 10 Burma L. R. 99.

⁴ Puran, (1904) 6 P. L. R. 49. See Yusuf

Khan, (1919) P. W. R. No. 1 of 1920, 21 P. L. R. 2

⁵ Bhut Nath Dome, (1909) 13 C. W. N. 1180. See also Baburam Raut, (1912) 17 C. L. J. 394.

⁶ Ram Sewal, (1924) 23 A. L. J. R. 131.

voluntarily causing the death of his assailant was necessary for the purpose of defence he could not plead the right of defence.¹

Third clause.—Rape.—Where the husband and other relations of a girl assaulted a man while he was in the very act of violating her, it was held that they were justified under this clause.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Where the defence is that the party was about to commit such a crime as would justify his death, this must be proved, not indeed so as to establish the fact conclusively, but so as to prove that the accused had such grounds for supposing violence was intended as would warrant a rational man in so acting, and he must prove that the offence about to be committed could not have been prevented by milder means.³

101. If the offence be not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding section, the right of private defence of the body does not extend to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, but does extend, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing to the assailant of any harm other than death.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

COMMENT.

Under this section any harm short of death can be inflicted in exercising the right of private defence in any case which does not fall within the provisions of the preceding section which dealt with offences in which the harm was likely to be very serious, and hence justified the killing of the assailant.

CASES.

A dispute arose between two parties, Mollahs and Shikdars. Shikdars attacked and killed one of the Mollahs who were exercising the right of retaking their own property. Three of the Shikdars were also wounded. The Shikdars were convicted of culpable homicide not amounting to murder and rioting. The Mollahs were held entitled to the protection conferred by this section.⁴ A public servant while acting in the execution of his duties had his conveyance stopped by a number of camel-drivers whose camels were trespassing on the banks of a canal belonging to Government. A prisoner who had been legally arrested was forcibly rescued by personal violence fired his gun, wounded one of them. It was

102. The right of private defence of the body commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension¹ of danger to the body arises from an attempt or threat to commit the offence though the offence may not have been committed; and it continues as long as such apprehension of danger to the body continues.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of the body.

COMMENT.

This section indicates when the right of private defence of the body commences and till what time it continues. It commences and continues as long as danger to body lasts.

¹ Hakim, (1884) P. R. No. 41 of 1884.

² Jalvi Chamar, (1912) 16 C. L. J. 440.

³ Josef Casarati, (1879) P. R. No. 36 of 1879.

⁴ Tanoo Shikdar, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 47.

⁵ Mukerji, (1900) P. R. No. 5 of 1901.

1. 'Reasonable apprehension.'—The right commences only on a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body caused by an attempt or threat to commit an offence.¹ There must be an attempt or threat, and consequent thereon an apprehension of danger; but it is not a mere idle threat, or every apprehension of a rash or timid mind, that will justify the exercise of the right. Reasonable ground for the apprehension is requisite. Suppose the threat to proceed from a woman or a child and to be addressed to a strong man: in such a case there could hardly be a... inent danger seems to be meant. But... dangerous weapon in such a way that... his seems sufficient justification of the... ther has reason.

...who voluntarily
As if A know-
...the deliberate
purpose of resisting the attack with all necessary force, and does so, and thereby causes B's death. A appears to be entitled to the benefit of the exception, for he had a reasonable apprehension of danger when B attacked him, notwithstanding the attack was not unforeseen.³ The view that a person should not exercise his right of self-defence, if by running away he can avoid injury from his assailant, places a greater restriction on the right of private defence of the body than the law requires. The extent to which the exercise of the right will be justified will depend not on the actual danger but on whether there was reasonable apprehension of such danger.⁴ A man may justify a battery if he proves merely an assault on the part of the prosecutor, and he need not stay until the prosecutor has actually struck him, but the battery must be such only as was necessary for his defence.⁵

A bare fear of any offence, however well grounded, as that another lies in wait to take away the party's life, unaccompanied by any overt act, indicative of such an intention, will not warrant him in killing that other by way of prevention.

...accident; according to the degree of the caution used, and the probable grounds for such belief.⁷

C A S E S.

Reasonable apprehension.—Where the accused apprehending opposition went armed to appraise crops and on the arrival of the opposite party similarly armed did not wait till that party had attacked but proceeded to meet them and a fight took place, it was held that the accused had acted within the right of private defence which commenced as soon as the opposite party appeared with arms and began to move towards them which was a distinct threat to attack them.⁸

No reasonable apprehension.—A and B met at a drinking shop and drank together. On their departure A and B quarrelled about B having, as A declared, caused the death of the latter's four children by incantation. B admitted it, and said he would cause A to be taken by a tiger at once, at which A killed him with a club. It was held that A had no reasonable apprehension of danger.⁹ Where the accused fired a gun at a person at a distance of twenty-five yards, without a

¹ Gobardhan Bhuyan, (1870) 4 Beng. L. R. App. 101; Narain Das, (1922) 3 Lah. 144.

² M. & M. 78.

³ M. & M. 79.

⁴ Alingal Kunhinayan, (1905) 28 Mad. 454.

⁵ Deana, (1909) 73 J. P. 255.

⁶ 1 East P. C. 272.

⁷ Ibid., p. 273.

⁸ Hafiz Ali, (1907) 10 O. C. 196.

⁹ Gobardhan Bhuyan, sup.

reasonable apprehension of danger, and without any necessity for so doing, it was held that his act was not justifiable.¹

103. The right of private defence of property extends, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the wrong-doer, if the offence the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right, be an offence

When the right of private defence of property extends to causing death.

of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely:—

First.—Robbery¹;

Secondly.—House-breaking² by night;

Thirdly.—Mischief³ by fire committed on any building, tent or vessel, which building, tent or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property;

Fourthly.—Theft,⁴ mischief or house-trespass,⁵ under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence, if such right of private defence is not exercised.

COMMENT.

This section indicates when a person can be killed in defence of one's own property; s. 100 indicates when a person can be killed in defence of one's body.

A distinction is observed between such offences as are attended with force, or any extraordinary degree of atrocity, which in their nature betoken such urgent necessity as will not allow of any delay, and others of a different sort, if no resistance be made by the offender; and therefore a party would not be justified in killing another who was attempting to pick his pocket.²

1. 'Robbery.'—See s. 390, infra. Robbery by violence may be resisted by violence sufficient to overcome the force employed by the attacker, and if, in the course of such resistance, death is caused, it may be justified if the right of self-defence was exercised reasonably and properly, but the measure of self-defence must always be proportionate to the quantum of force used by the attacker and which it is necessary to repel.³

2. 'House-breaking.'—See s. 445, infra.

3. 'Mischief.'—See s. 425, infra.

4. 'Theft.'—See s. 378, infra.

5. 'House-trespass.'—See s. 442, infra.

CASES.

'Robbery.'—The accused, in resisting a sudden attack made upon them by other persons for the purpose of cutting their crop, and when they had no time to complain to the Police, inflicted a wound on one of them with a bamboo from the effects of which the man died. It was held that the force used, or the injuries inflicted, by the accused were not such as to exceed the right of private defence of property.⁴

¹ Hussainuddy, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 46.

² 1 East P. C. 273.

³ Ram Prasad Mahlon, (1910) 4 P. L. J.

259.

⁴ Guru Charan Chang, (1870) 6 Beng. L. R. App. 9, 14 W. R. (Cr.) 60.

'House-breaking.'—The accused found two men close to an aperture made in his house for committing burglary. One of them made off but the other advanced to attack the accused, when the latter gave him a blow in the dark with a stick, which killed him. It was held that the accused was justified in his act.¹

104. If the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right of private defence, be theft, mischief or criminal trespass, not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding section, that right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but does extend, subject to the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing to the wrong-doer of any harm other than death.

COMMENT.

Section 101 and this section restrict the [right of private defence in certain cases to voluntary causing hurt or grievous hurt. This section is connected with s. 103 just as s. 101 is with s. 100. Thus, where the offence which occasions the right of private defence of property is criminal trespass, the right of defence under this section only extends to the voluntarily causing to the wrong-doers some harm other than death.²

This section has no application by way of defence to a charge under s. 504 (insult to provoke breach of the peace). The accused was taking earth from a tank whereupon the complainant having objected, the accused filthily abused him. The accused was thereupon tried for an offence under s. 504 and his defence was that the tank was in his possession and belonged to him. The Magistrate held that, as the complainant had failed to prove his possession of the disputed tank, the accused was justified under this section in voluntarily using abusive language. He therefore acquitted the accused. On appeal, a re-trial was ordered on the ground that this section could have no application as found by the Magistrate.³

CASES,

In an affray respecting land one of the aggressive party was killed. The accused, who were exercising the right of private defence of property, were not found guilty of culpable homicide; but were convicted of rioting. It was held that the accused, not being legally guilty of culpable homicide, were not legally guilty of any other offence coupled with rioting, and not being rioters, or members of an unlawful assembly, could claim the benefit of this section.⁴ Where a person assisted by a friend retaliated severely on another, who trespassed into his house with the object of having intercourse with his wife, they were held to have committed no offence.⁵ Where A trespassed on the land of B, whose servant seized and confined A till the following day, when B gave information to the Police, it was held that the conduct of B and his servants in confining A could not be supported on the ground that they were exercising the right of private defence of property.⁶ Where a police-officer entered into the house of a person of suspicious character at midnight to see whether he was in the house and he was pushed out of the house by that person, it was held that the act of the police-officer in entering into the house was house-trespass and that that person was justified in pushing him out.⁷

¹ Pelkoo Nushyo, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 43;
Ram Lall Singh, (1874) 22 W. R. (Cr.) 51;

11 C. L. J. 113.

⁴ Mitro Sing, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

⁵ Dhaumun Teli, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 36.

⁶ Shurufoddin v. Kassinath, (1870) 13 W. R. (Cr.) 64.

⁷ Dorasmay Pillai, (1903) 27 Mad. 52.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property.

105. The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences.¹

The right of private defence of property against theft continues till the offender has effected his retreat with the property or either the assistance of the public authorities is obtained, or the property has been recovered.²

The right of private defence of property against robbery continues as long as the offender causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint or as long as the fear of instant death or of instant hurt or of instant personal restraint continues.

The right of private defence of property against criminal trespass or mischief continues as long as the offender continues in the commission of criminal trespass or mischief.³

The right of private defence of property against house-breaking by night continues as long as the house-trespass which has been begun by such house-breaking continues.⁴

COMMENT.

This section defines the commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property just as s. 99 does in the case of defence of body. In both the cases the right commences with the reasonable apprehension of danger.

1. First clause.—The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences. Before such apprehension commences the owner of the property is not called upon to apply for protection to the public authorities. Where the accused apprehending opposition went armed to appraise crops, and, on the arrival of the opposite party similarly armed, did not wait till the opposite party had actually attacked, but proceeded to meet them, and a fight took place, it was held that the accused had acted within the right of private defence, which commenced as soon as the opposite party appeared with arms and began to move towards them, which was a distinct threat to attack them.¹ See Comment on clause (3) under s. 99, supra.

2. Second clause.—“Till the offender has effected his retreat with the property.”—“We are not sure of the meaning intended by the expression ‘till the offender has effected his retreat with the property.’ We know not certainly when he is to be considered as having effected his retreat; probably it is when he has once got clear off, having escaped immediate pursuit, or pursuit not having been made; . . . We presume that the protection of parties pursuing robbers, etc., for the recovery of property which they have succeeded in carrying off, or for bringing them to justice, was thought not to be within the scope of the provisions, touching the right of private defence.” It was suggested that the privilege of this clause should operate till the offender is taken and delivered to an officer of justice.² The clause “or either the assistance of the public authorities is obtained” did not exist in the draft Code.

This provision only applies to stolen property and not to property acquired dishonestly within the meaning of ss. 403 and 411.⁴

¹ Hughes v. The People, (1897) 15 O. C. 195.

² 1st Rep., s. 154.

³ 1st Rep., s. 155.

⁴ Agra, (1914) P. R. No. 37 of 1914.

"Or the property has been recovered."—A recapture of the plundered property, while it is in course of being carried away, is authorized, for the taking and retaking is one transaction. But when the offence has been committed and the property removed, a recapture after an interval of time by the owner or by other person on his behalf, however justifiable, cannot be deemed an exercise of the right of defence of property. The recovery which the section contemplates seems to be a recovery either immediate or made before the offender has reached his final retreat; as where stolen cattle are tracked until ultimately overtaken in their retreat and recaptured.¹ But Mayne is of opinion that "resistance within justifiable limits may be continued as long as the wrongful act is going on. But when the robber, for instance, has made his escape, the principle of self-defence would not extend to the property were found in the purpose of its recovery." "or the property has been recovered" has not much meaning in it. There is no decided case of any of the High Courts on this point.

It will, therefore, be observed that while in all other cases the right only exists for the purpose of prevention of the offences named, in the particular case of theft the right continues for the recovery of the property even after the theft has been accomplished. The extent of such right is that mentioned in s. 104. The right and its extent being thus found, every case must thereafter be judged on its own particular facts, to decide whether or not the exercise of the right in the recovery of stolen property has been exceeded. Here the exceptions contained in s. 99 come in. If A runs away with B's watch, B may chase him until he effects his escape, but the right of self-defence does not end with the escape. If B sees A in the street the next day, the next month, or the next year, wearing the stolen watch, B may forthwith seize A and recover his watch, using for the purpose as much force as the case allows. If a policeman should be at hand, B's proper course would be to hand A over to him and let him recover the watch. But B is not bound to put off the capture of A until he can find assistance from public authority. Again, suppose that on a day after the theft thereof, B sees his watch lying on a table in a house or garden, if he can get the assistance of a policeman without losing sight of it, no doubt he would be bound to do so. But he would be under no legal obligation to risk a further loss or removal of the stolen property for the purpose of having recourse to the public authorities. If the circumstances are such that immediate seizure seems to offer the only reasonable prospect of recovery, B is entitled to enter the house or garden and recover his watch. The capture of the thief would not be an assault in the one case, and the entry into the house or garden would not be criminal trespass in the other.

3. Fourth clause.—In the case of criminal trespass and mischief the right of private defence ceases to exist as soon as the commission of these offences ceases.

Where land in possession of A was encroached on by the servants of B, who committed mischief on the land, and the servants of A assembled after the alleged mischief had been completed, there being no suggestion that the mischief was likely to be renewed, it was held that the servants of A could not claim the right of private defence of property which had ceased under this clause.²

The complainant's party, consisting of twelve or thirteen persons, went with pickaxes to a bund erected on the land of the master of the accused in order to cut it, as it obstructed the flow of water from their lands and destroyed their crops. The accused hearing of this at once assembled to the number of 50 or 60, armed themselves with clubs and proceeded to the bund. At this time the complainant's party had either finished the cutting or ceased to do so, when they saw the accused approaching. The latter attacked the complainant's party and drove them to their village. One or more of the assailants also beat a man, who was present there, but was not connected with the cutting of the bund, both in the first attack and when they returned from the chase, and fractured his skull, in consequence of which he died shortly after. It was held that the accused were members of an unlawful assembly from the beginning, as they went armed with clubs and in large numbers to enforce their right at all hazards, that, if not so at the beginning, they became an unlawful assembly, and had no right of private defence, when the opposite party had ceased cutting the bund, and that, even if they had, they exceeded their right by attacking their opponents and chasing them and by beating the deceased.¹

¹ M. & M. 81.

² Raj Kisto Doss, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

4. Fifth clause.—The right of private defence against house-breaking continues only so long as the house-trespass continues, hence where a person followed a thief and killed him in the open, after the house-trespass had ceased, it was held that he could not plead the right of private defence.²

106. If in the exercise of the right of private defence against an assault which reasonably causes the apprehension of death, the defender be so situated that he cannot effectually exercise that right without risk of harm to an innocent person, his right of private defence extends to the running of that risk.

Right of private defence against deadly assault when there is risk of harm to innocent person.

ILLUSTRATION.

A is attacked by a mob who attempt to murder him. He cannot effectually exercise his right of private defence without firing on the mob and he cannot fire without risk of harming young children who are mingled with the mob. A commits no offence if by so firing he harms any of the children.

COMMENT.

This section should be read in the light of s. 100. It provides for the risk which a person may have to run to defend himself against an assault reasonably causing the apprehension of his death.

¹ Ambika Lal, (1908) 35 Cal. 443.

² Balakee Jolaked, (1868) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 9;

Guibadan, (1885) P. R. No. 25 of 1885.

CHAPTER V.

OF ABETMENT.

THIS Chapter applies to offences punishable under ss. 121A, 124A, 225A, 225B, 294A and 304A.¹

Abetment of a 107. A person abets the doing of a thing, who—thing.

First.—Instigates any person to do that thing; or,

Secondly.—Engages with one or more other person or persons in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing; or,

Thirdly.—Intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.

Explanation 1.—A person who, by wilful misrepresentation, or by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, voluntarily causes or procures, or attempts to cause or procure, a thing to be done, is said to instigate the doing of that thing.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, a public officer, is authorized by a warrant from a Court of Justice to apprehend Z. B, knowing that fact and also that C is not Z, wilfully represents to A that C is Z, and thereby intentionally causes A to apprehend C. Here B abets by instigation the apprehension of C.

Explanation 2.—Whoever, either prior to or at the time of the commission of an act, does anything in order to facilitate the commission of that act, and thereby facilitates the commission thereof, is said to aid the doing of that act.

COMMENT.

When an offence is committed and several persons take part in the commission of it, each person may contribute in a manner and degree different from the others to the doing of the criminal act.

The act may be done by the hands of one person while another is present, or is close at hand ready to afford help; or the actual doer may be a guilty agent acting under the orders of an absent person: and besides these participators, there may be other persons who contribute less directly to the commission of the offence by advice, persuasion, incitement or aid. It is proper to mark the nature and degree of participation which is essential to criminal liability, but it will be seen that the several gradations of action above referred to are not always treated as denoting necessarily different measures of guilt with a view to distinction in respect of punishment.

We have seen that if several persons, combining both in intent and act, commit an offence jointly, each is guilty, as if he had done the whole alone; and that so it is, if each has his several part to do, all contributing to one result. When all combine, each does the act so far as his own part extends, and, as to the residue, may be regarded as procuring it to be done by means of guilty agents: all the parties, so concerned, stand in the mutual relation of principals and agents. The present Chapter treats of co-agency of a less direct and immediate kind: the agent being urged forward by a person who will not himself act, but who procures or instigates another to put in execution his criminal intention.¹ Under this Chapter persons rendering any kind of assistance to the criminal are punishable. Bentham² says: "The more these preparatory acts are distinguished, for the purpose of prohibiting them, the greater the chance of preventing the execution of the principal crime itself. If the criminal be not stopped at the first step of his career, he may at the second, or the third. It is thus that a prudent legislator, like a skilful general, reconnoitres all the external posts of the enemy with the intention of stopping his enterprises. He places in all the defiles, in all the windings of his route, a chain of works, diversified according to circumstances, but connected among themselves, in such a manner that the enemy finds in each, new dangers and new obstacles."

¹ Act XXVII of 1870, s. 13, as amended by Act XI of 1891.

Abetment under the Penal Code involves active complicity on the part of the abettor at a point of time prior to the actual commission of the offence, and it is of the essence of the crime of abetment that the abettor should substantially assist the principal culprit towards the commission of the offence. Nowhere concurrence in the criminal acts of another without such participation therein as helps to effect the criminal act or purpose is punishable under the Code.

Abetment is a separate and distinct offence provided the thing abetted is an offence.³ Abetment does not in itself involve the actual commission of the crime abetted. It is a crime apart.⁴

As a general rule a charge of abetment fails if the substantive offence is not established against the principal. But there may be an exception where the substantive offence was undoubtedly committed, and there is evidence, such as a retracted confession by the abettor, on which the jury might have found, as against him, that the offence was committed by the principal, though, as against the latter, the confession would be insufficient for a conviction of murder.⁵

Scope.—The definition of 'abetment' given here applies to all Acts passed by the Government of India.⁶

Ingredients.—Abetment is constituted (1) by instigating a person to commit an offence; or (2) by engaging in a conspiracy to commit it; or (3) by intentionally aiding a person to commit it.⁷

(1) Abetment by instigation.—First clause.—A person is said to 'instigate' another to an act, when he actively suggests or stimulates him to the act, by any means or language, direct, or indirect, whether it take the form of express solicitation, or of hints, insinuation or encouragement.⁸ The word 'instigate' means urge on, incite, bring about by persuasion, provoke.⁹ Advice can become 'instigation' if it is meant actively to suggest or stimulate the commission of an offence. Advice per se cannot necessarily be instigation.¹⁰ A mere acquiescence, or permission, does not amount to an instigation. Nor can deliberate absence from the scene of offence amount to instigation.¹¹ Instigation implies knowledge of the criminality of an act. Words which amount merely to a permission may perhaps

¹ M. & M. 83.

² Principles of Penal Laws, Vol. I, Part III, Ch. 15, p. 560.

³ Sesha Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Chetty, (1923) 33 M. L. T. 263.

⁴ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 148, 159, 52 Cal. 196, F. C.

⁵ Umadasi Dasi, (1924) 52 Cal. 112.

⁶ General Clauses Act (X of 1897), ss. 3

(1), 4 (2).

⁷ Imandi Bhooyah, (1873) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 8.

⁸ Russ 164; Amiruddin Salebhoy, (1922)

24 Bom. L. R. 534, 542.

⁹ Lashminarayana Aiyar, [1917] M. W. N.

831, 22 M. L. T. 373.

¹⁰ Raghunath Dasa, (1920) 5 P. L. J. 129.

¹¹ Etim Ali Majumdar, (1900) 4 C. W. N.

500.

amount to an instigation, but this will depend on the position of the speaker and the occasion on which they are spoken.

The word 'instigation,' as used in this section, may be an instigation of an unknown person.¹

Explanation 1 to this section says that a person who (1) by wilful misrepresentation, or (2) by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, voluntarily causes, or procures, or attempts to cause or procure, a thing to be done, is said to instigate the doing of that thing. The illustration is an example of instigation by 'wilful misrepresentation.' Instigation by 'wilful concealment' is where some duty exists which obliges a person to disclose a fact.

The offence is complete as soon as the abettor has incited another to commit a crime, whether the latter consents or not, or whether, having consented, he commits the crime or not. This form of abetment depends upon the intention of the person who abets, and not upon the act, which is actually done by the person whom he abets.²

Instigation through a third party.—It is immaterial whether the instigation be personal, or through the intervention of a third person.³

Cases.—Master's liability.—Where, of several persons constituting an unlawful assembly, some only were armed with sticks, and A, one of them, was not so armed, but picked up a stick, and used it, B (the master of A), who gave a general order to beat, was held guilty of abetting the assault by A.⁴ The carrying off of certain buffaloes, belonging to the complainant, by order of the accused, and the retention of them in the custody of the latter's servant, were held to amount to an abetment of theft.⁵

Suppression of evidence.—Where a prisoner asked a witness to suppress certain facts in giving his evidence, it was held that this was an abetment of giving false evidence.⁶

Deliberate absence is no instigation.—Where persons of influence being aware of the objects of the members of an unlawful assembly deliberately absented themselves from the locality where such assembly was formed, it was held that that was not such sympathy as amounted to instigation.⁷

Instigation to commit an offence by letter or telephone.—Where one person the act is only an attempt to abet.⁸ The accused telephoned to W asking if he could have two boys for immoral purposes. No particular boys were named or indicated. The accused was charged with inciting W "to procure the commission by certain male unknown persons of acts of gross indecency with him," the accused. It was held that as the accused was inciting W to commit what, if he had done the acts, would have been a criminal offence, it was immaterial that the male persons whom he was to procure were not at the time ascertained or that the accused was inciting W to incite another to commit an offence, and that the accused was rightly convicted.¹⁰

Consent to hold a stake.—Two men, having quarrelled, agreed to fight with their fists, and to bind themselves to fight, each put down £1, so that £2 might be paid to the winner. The accused consented to hold the £2, and pay it over to the winner. Otherwise, he had nothing to do with the fight, and he was not

¹ Ganesh Damodar Savarkar, (1909) 12 Bom. L. R. 103.

² The La Anny, (1906) 12 Burma L. R. 70.

³ Robert Carr (Earl of Somerset), (1616) 2 St. Tr. 963.

⁴ Rasoolulla, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 51.

⁵ Tarinee Prosad Banerjee, (1872) 18 W. R.

(Cr.) 8.

⁶ Andy Chetty, (1863) 2 M. H. C. 433.

⁷ Etim Ali Majumdar, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 500.

⁸ Shro Dal Mal, (1891) 16 All. 352.

⁹ Emmord, (1874) 13 Cox 9.

¹⁰ Beasley, [1923] 1 K. R. 403.

present at it. There was no reason to suppose that the life of either man would be endangered. The men fought, and one of them received injuries of which he afterwards died. The accused having been informed who was the winner, but not knowing of the other man's danger, paid over the £2 to the winner. It was held that the mere consent to hold the stakes could not be said to amount to a participation in the fight.¹

(2) Abetment by conspiracy.—Second clause.—‘Conspiracy’ consists in a combination and agreement by persons to do some illegal act or to effect a legal purpose by illegal means. “So long as such a design rests in intention only, it is not indictable. When two agree to carry it into effect, the very plot is an act in itself, and the act of each of the parties, promise against promise, actus contra actum, capable of being enforced, if lawful, punishable if for a criminal object or for the use of criminal means. And so far as proof goes, conspiracy, as Grose, J., said in Rex v. Briscoe,² is generally ‘matter of inference deduced from certain criminal acts of the parties accused, done in pursuance of an apparent criminal purpose in common between them.’ The number and the compact give weight and cause danger.”³

Conspiracy is now made a substantive offence in India. In order to constitute the offence of abetment by conspiracy, there must be a combining together of two or more persons in the conspiracy, and an act, or illegal omission, must take place in pursuance of that conspiracy and in order to the doing of that thing. It is not necessary that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engages in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.⁴ Where parties concert together, and have a common object, the act of one of the parties done in furtherance of the common object and in pursuance of the concerted plan is the act of the whole.⁵

A mere conspiracy would not amount to abetment, and it would appear that if conspirators were detected before they had done more than discussed plans, with a general intention to commit an offence, they would not be liable as abettors.⁶

Before the introduction of Chapter VA conspiracy except in cases provided for by ss. 311, 400, 401, 402, and 121A of the Code was a mere species of abetment where an act or an illegal omission took place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and amounted to a distinct offence for each distinct offence abetted by conspiracy.⁷

A conviction for conspiracy cannot stand when the charge against the other alleged conspirators has failed.⁸ When a conspiracy between several persons is alleged, it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove, before it can be held established, that each conspirator knew and had personal communication with all the rest, because some of them might be intermediaries.⁹

Conspiracy to commit various acts amounting to distinct offences.—On this point the Madras High Court is equally divided in its opinion. Three judges hold that a conspiracy to commit various acts which are in themselves distinct offences is itself one offence under the Penal Code and not several abetments of those distinct offences.¹⁰ Three others hold that conspiracy is a mere species of abetment when an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of the conspiracy and amounts to a distinct offence for each distinct offence abetted by conspiracy.¹¹

¹ Taylor, (1875) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 147.

² (1803) 4 East 164, 171.

³ Per Willes, J., in Mulcahy, (1868) L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 317. See Quinn v. Leatham, [1901] A. C. 495, 528.

⁴ Explan. 5 to s. 108; Kaifi Munda, (1901) 28 Cal. 797; Gobind Dobey, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 35.

⁵ Ameer Khan, (1871) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 15.

⁶ Shah Ali, (1878) P. R. No. 18 of 1879.

⁷ See Tirumal Reddi, (1901) 24 Mad. 523.

⁸ Jogjiban Ghose, (1909) 9 C. L. J. 663. See Plummer, [1902] 2 K. B. 339.

⁹ Percy Henry Burn, (1909) 11 Bom. L. R. 1153.

¹⁰ Per Sir Arnold White, C. J., Shepherd and Boddam, JJ., (1900) 1 Weir 47.

¹¹ Per Davies, Benson and Moore, JJ., in ibid.

Cases.—Suicide—Evidence that a woman prepared herself to commit suicide in the presence of the accused, that they followed her to the pyre and stood by her, her step-sons crying "Ram, Ram," and one of the accused admitted that he told the woman to say "Ram, Ram," and she would become suttee, was held to prove active connivance and unequivocal countenance of the suicide by the accused, and to justify the inference that they had engaged with her in a conspiracy for the commission of the suttee.¹

Forgery—To prepare, in conjunction with others, a copy of an intended false document, and to buy a stamped paper for the purpose of writing such false document, and to ask for information as to a fact to be inserted in such document, are facts which would support a conviction for abetment of forgery as being acts done to facilitate the commission of the offence.²

Abortion—A woman who, believing herself to be with child, but not being with child, conspires with other persons to administer drugs to herself, or to use instruments on herself, with intent to procure abortion, is liable to be convicted of conspiracy to procure abortion.³

(3) Abetment by aid.—Third clause.—(a) By an act.—A person abets by aiding, when by any act done either prior to, or at the time of, the commission of an act, he intends to facilitate, and does in fact facilitate, the commission thereof (vide Explan. 2). For instance, the supplying of necessary food to a person known to be engaged in crime is not per se criminal; but if food were supplied in order that the criminal might go on a journey to the intended scene of the crime or conceal himself while waiting for an opportunity to commit the crime, the supplying of food would be in order to facilitate the commission of the crime and might facilitate it.⁴ "The intention should be to aid the commission of a crime. A mere giving of an aid will not make the act an abetment of an offence, if the person who gave the aid did not know that an offence was being committed or contemplated. The intention should be to aid an offence or to facilitate the commission of an offence."

an example. A, B and C are friends. A and B have fallen out, so much so that A is determined to shoot B. A goes to the house of C, and on some pretext or other induces C to call B to his house. C has not the least idea that A would shoot B on his arrival. B arrives and is murdered by A. A committed murder. Can it be said that C is guilty of abetment, because he 'intentionally aided' A? C did give his aid in calling B to his place. But he never knew why A wanted him to send for B. Whatever C did, he did intentionally, for his intention it certainly was that B should come. But it was not C's intention that a crime should be committed. C cannot be held guilty of abetment of murder."⁵

Presence does not amount to aiding.—Mere presence at the commission of a crime cannot amount to intentional aid, unless it was intended to have that effect. To be present and aware that an offence is about to be committed does not constitute abetment unless the person thus present holds some position of rank or influence such that his countenancing what takes place may, under the circumstances, be held a direct encouragement, or unless some specific duty of prevention rests on him, which he leaves unfulfilled in such wise that he may be safely taken as having joined in conspiracy for the perpetration of the offence.⁶ An offence of abetment by presence falls through, if the principal offence is not substantiated.⁷ A priest who officiates at a bigamous marriage was held to have intentionally aided it, but not the persons who were merely present at the celebration or who permitted its celebration in their house, when such permission afforded no particular facility for the act.¹

All. 268, 275.

¹ Lakshmi, (1886) Cr. R. No. 51 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 303; Shidlingappa, (1896) Cr. R. No. 13 of 1896, Unrep. Cr. C. 844.

² Raja Khan, (1920) 32 C. L. J. 478.

Cases.—Giving of a house to extort a confession.—A zemindar who had lodged a complaint of theft lent a house belonging to him to the police-officer who was conducting the investigation in the theft case for the purposes of such investigation. It was found that at the time of lending the house the zemindar knew that it was likely to be used for the purpose of putting illegal pressure upon persons suspected of complicity in or knowledge of the theft, and also that the zemindar was at times present while the police-officer was engaged in that house in torturing certain persons summoned there by him, though he did not actually take part in the torturing. It was held that the zemindar was, by virtue of explanation 2, guilty of doing an act in order to facilitate the commission of an offence under s. 330.²

Order to assault.—Where orders were given to assault a particular person, who died in consequence of the injuries inflicted, the person giving the orders was held guilty of abetting the commission of voluntarily causing grievous hurt.³ But if no definite orders are given there will be no abetment.⁴

Giving of a weapon to a person to hurt another.—Where A gave a dao to B, who had given out his intention to coerce the party against whom he was acting, and who inflicted grievous hurt on such party with the dao, (an edged weapon), A was held guilty of abetment in the commission of that act.⁵

Acceptance of an unstamped receipt is not aiding.—Where a debtor paid a sum of money to his creditor, and asked for a stamped receipt from him, who had not at hand a stamp, and then accepted an unstamped receipt, saying he would affix a stamp thereto, which he did not do, it was held that this did not constitute abetment of the offence of giving an unstamped receipt because he had done or omitted nothing which it was in his power to effect.⁶

Attestation or writing of a document is not aiding.—G, a prostitute, purchased a child for purposes of prostitution: at her request the first accused wrote a document evidencing the transaction; the other three accused attested the document, and all the four accused were present when the child was handed over to G. G also put into the hands of the first accused the price of the child, which money he handed over to the child's mother. It was held that the accused could not be convicted for abetment by intentionally aiding the illegal disposal of the child under s. 372.⁷

Act abetted is illegal but not an offence.—A guardian of a Mahomedan married female infant aged six years who caused a marriage ceremony to be gone through in her name with another man, during the lifetime of her husband, but in her absence and without her consent, was held not to have committed the offence of abetting bigamy.⁸ Because to constitute abetment the accused must be proved either to have instigated or aided some person to commit an offence. This case has been distinguished in a subsequent case in which a Hindu having given his daughter, said to be eight years old, in marriage to a certain person, again gave her in marriage to another in the lifetime of her first husband. It was held that he was guilty of an offence under s. 109 read with s. 494, although his daughter had not the knowledge and intelligence necessary to enable her to commit an offence under s. 494.⁹

¹ Umi, (1882) 6 Bom. 126.

² Faiyaz Husain, (1896) 16 A. W. N. 194.

³ Dorjensur Surmah, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 61.

⁴ Luchmun Singh, (1904) 31 Cal. 710.

⁵ Eshan Meah, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 52.

⁶ Mithu Lal (1885) 8 All. 18; Janki,

(1882) 7 Bom. 82; Nga Shwe Hwin, (1904) 11 Burma L. R. 34; Madaneing, (1893) 7 C. P. L. R. 21.

⁷ Bondili Sankara Singh, (1884) 1 Weir 47.

⁸ Abdool Kurree, (1878) 4 Cal. 10.

⁹ Nand Lal Singh, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 343.

(b) By illegal omission.—To prove abetment by 'illegal omission,' it is necessary to show that the accused intentionally aided the commission of the offence by his 'non-interference';¹ and the omission involved a breach of a legal obligation.² Thus every police-officer is bound to shelter a person in custody and to arrest persons committing assaults likely to cause grievous bodily injury and if he omit to perform his duty, he is guilty of abetment.³

Cases.—Non-interference where there is duty to interfere.—A Village Magistrate who was present while certain police constables were wrongfully confining and causing hurt to a resident of the village to extort a confession and who did not interfere with nor stop the criminal act committed in his presence nor report them to a Magistrate was held guilty of abetment of offences under ss. 330 and 348 of the Penal Code.⁴ But the mere fact that the offence of extortion was committed in the presence of a village chowkidar without eliciting any disapproval on his part was held not to render him liable as an abettor.⁵ Where a Head Constable, who knew that certain persons were likely to be tortured for the purpose of extorting confession, purposely kept out of the way, it was held that he was guilty of abetment.⁶

Omission must be of legal obligation.—A motor car was driven by the chauffeur of the accused, on a road in Mahabeshwar, driving over which was forbidden under s. 9 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1904. The accused was at Poona then but was convicted of abetment of the offence under s. 13 of the Motor Vehicles Act on the ground that it was his duty to inform the driver of the existence of the prohibition. It was held on revision by the High Court that as no legal obligation was imposed on the accused to instruct his servant he was not liable.⁷

Attempt.—The abetment of an offence within the meaning of s. 40 being itself an offence punishable under this Chapter, an attempt to commit the offence of abetment is provided for in s. 511, and there is therefore no legal obstacle to punishing such offence.⁸

English law.—According to English law, criminals are divided into four classes. The distinction is based on the consideration whether a party was present or absent at the commission of the offence.

(1) Principal in the first degree.—One who is the actual perpetrator of the crime. It is not necessary that he should be actually present when the offence is consummated; thus one who lays poison or a trap for another is a principal in the first degree. Nor need the deed be done by the principal's own hands; for it will suffice if it is done through an innocent agent, as for instance, if one incites a child or a madman to murder. Even an animal may be employed as an innocent agent. For example, a person who sets a dog upon people is himself guilty of assaulting them.

(2) Principal in the second degree.—One by whom the actual perpetrator of the crime is aided and abetted at the very time when it is committed. He may or may not be actually present at the scene of the crime. It will suffice, if he has the intention of aiding, abetting, and is sufficiently near to give the necessary aid; as when he is near the house; or when he is near the person who is to be executed. He is liable for the offence of abetment in the second degree, whether he is present or absent at the execution of their common purpose.

Both the above classes of principals are liable to the same punishment.

¹ Khajak Nooral Hossain v. Falve-Tonner, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 26.

² Akadam Sheikh, (1869) 4 B. & P. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 7; Coverji, (1906) 9 Bom. L. R. 159, 161.

³ Latif Khan, (1893) 20 Bom. 394.

⁴ Appanna Hegade, (1899) 1 Weir 52; Krishna Shetti, (1891) 1 Weir 50.

⁵ Kali Churn Gargady, (1873) 21 W. R.

(Cr.) 11.

⁶ Gopal Chander Sirkar, (1852) 8 Cal. 728, but see Lakshmi, (1856) Unrep. Cr. G. 303.

⁷ Coverji, sup.

⁸ Spier, (1857) P. R. No. 49 of 1857. See Eala, (1859) 21 Bom. 257, 1 Bom. L. R. 678.

(3) Accessory before the fact.—One who being absent at the time when the felony is committed, yet procures, counsels, commands, or abets another to commit a felony. He is punishable in all respects as the principal felon. If present at the commission he would be a principal.

(4) Accessory after the fact.—One who, knowing a felony to have been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts, assists, harbours, or maintains the felon.

A felony must be actually committed, or there cannot be any accessories.

Principals are dealt with in the Penal Code under ss. 34 to 38. There is no distinction between 'principals in the first degree' and 'principals in the second degree,' in the Code. Under English law this distinction is confined to felonies only. It does not exist in cases of misdemeanour or serious offences as high treason or forgery.

The offence of abetment corresponds as nearly as one word can be said to correspond to another to the offence which is known in England of being an 'accessory before the fact.' But mere concurrence—that kind of passive concurrence which is known in England as being an 'accessory after the fact'—is not abetment and is not to be treated as abetment.

'Accessory after the fact' is treated in scattered sections. See provisions relating to harbouring, ss. 212, 216; and, also, ss. 130, 136, 137, 410-414.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence, or actionable wrong, anything said, done, or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.¹ A conspiracy may be proved by other than oral evidence: it may be proved by the evidence of surrounding circumstances and the conduct of the accused both before and after the alleged commission of the crime.²

In order to convict a person of abetting the commission of a crime, it is not only necessary to prove that he has taken part in those steps of the transaction which are innocent, but in some way or other it is absolutely necessary to connect him with those steps of the transaction which are criminal.³ It is necessary to prove criminal intention against the accused. The finding that accused No. 1 could not have acted in the illegal way without the approval and connivance of accused No. 2 is not sufficient to prove abetment.⁴

Procedure.—It is not open to an appellate Court to find a man guilty of the abetment of an offence on a charge of the offence itself.⁵ But if on facts the accused may be charged with the principal offence and abetment, he may be convicted of abetment though only charged with the principal offence.⁶

108. A person abets¹ an offence who abets either the commission of an offence, or the commission of an act² which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence with the same intention or knowledge as that of the abettor.

Abettor,

¹ Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, s. 10.

² Anappa Elarampada, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 317.

³ Nis Chand Hectoryer, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr) 41.

⁴ Pramodraya Mura, (1921) 2 P. L. T.

193.

⁵ Chand Nur, (1874) 11 B. H. C. 210; Padmanatha Panjikannaya, (1909) 33 Mad. 264.

⁶ Yedtha Sullayya, [1912] M. W. N. 72.5

Explanation 1.—The abetment of the illegal omission of an act may amount to an offence although the abettor may not himself be bound to do that act³.

*Explanation 2.*⁴—To constitute the offence of abetment, it is not necessary that the act abetted should be committed, or that the effect requisite to constitute the offence should be caused.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A instigates B to murder C. B refuses to do so. A is guilty of abetting B to commit murder.

(b) A instigates B to murder D. B in pursuance of the instigation stabs D. D recovers from the wound. A is guilty of instigating B to commit murder.

*Explanation 3.*⁵—It is not necessary that the person abetted should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should have the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or any guilty intention or knowledge.

-ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, with a guilty intention, abets a child or a lunatic to commit an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence, and having the same intention as A. Here A, whether the act be committed or not, is guilty of abetting an offence.

(b) A, with the intention of murdering Z, instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to do an act which causes Z's death. B, in consequence of the abetment, does the act in the absence of A and thereby causes Z's death. Here, though B was not capable by law of committing an offence, A is liable to be punished in the same manner as if B had been capable by law of committing an offence, and had committed murder, and he is therefore subject to the punishment of death.

(c) A instigates B to set fire to a dwelling-house. B, in consequence of the unsoundness of his mind, being incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law, sets fire to the house in consequence of A's instigation. B has committed no offence, but A is guilty of abetting the offence of setting fire to a dwelling-house, and is liable to the punishment provided for that offence.

(d) A, intending to cause a theft to be committed, instigates B to take property belonging to Z out of Z's possession. A induces B to believe that the property belongs to A. B takes the property out of Z's possession, in good faith, believing it to be A's property. B, acting under this misconception, does not take dishonestly, and therefore does not commit theft. But A is guilty of abetting theft, and is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

*Explanation 4.*⁶—The abetment of an offence being an offence, the abetment of such an abetment is also an offence.

ILLUSTRATION.

A instigates B to instigate C to murder Z. B accordingly instigates C to murder Z, and C commits that offence in consequence of B's instigation. B is liable to be punished for his offence with the punishment for murder; and, as A instigated B to commit the offence, A is also liable to the same punishment.

*Explanation 5.*⁷—It is not necessary to the commission of the offence of abetment by conspiracy that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engage in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.

ILLUSTRATION.

A consents with B a plan for poisoning Z. It is agreed that A shall administer the poison. B then explains the plan to C, mentioning that a third person is to administer the poison, but without mentioning A's name. C agrees to procure the poison, and procures and delivers it to B for the purpose of its being used in the manner explained. A administers the poison; Z dies in consequence. Here, though A and C have not conspired together, yet C has been engaged in the conspiracy in pursuance of which Z has been murdered. C has therefore committed the offence defined in this section, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

COMMENT.

'Abettor' under this section means the person who abets (1) the commission of an offence, or (2) the commission of an act which would be an offence if committed by a person not suffering from any physical or mental incapacity. In the light of the preceding section he must be an instigator or a conspirator or an intentional helper. This section is in conformity with the English law except on one point. Under English law a person using an innocent agent as his tool is deemed to be a principal whereas under this section he is treated as an abettor. So far as the actual result is concerned this distinction has not much meaning.

1. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

2. 'Commission of an act.'—There must be abetment of the commission of an act. The section does not contemplate any acts of subsequent abetment. Thus, a person cannot be convicted of abetment of a false charge solely on the ground of his having given evidence in support of such charge.¹

3. Explanation 1.—If a public servant is guilty of an illegal omission of duty made punishable by the Code, and a private person instigates him he abets the offence of which such public servant is guilty, although the abettor, being a private person, could not himself have been guilty of that offence.

4. Explanation 2.—The offence of abetment is complete notwithstanding that the person abetted refuses to do the thing, or fails involuntarily in doing it, or does it and the expected result does not follow. The offence of abetment by instigation depends upon the intention of the person who abets, and not upon the act which is actually done by the person whom he abets.² If it was impossible to accomplish the commission of an offence in a way suggested by the abettor and no offence is committed then the abettor would not be liable.

therefore, the accused offered money for the killing or disabling of the deceased by means of charms and it was left to the persons who were to earn the money to decide whether their victim was to be killed or disabled, it was held that he was guilty of abetment of murder.⁴ In a Bombay case a doubt has been expressed whether abetment of murder by sorcery or other impossible means is an offence under the Code.⁵

5. Explanation 3.—If a man does, by means of an innocent agent, an act which amounts to a crime, the employer, and not the agent, is accountable for

¹ Essa Pundal, (1872) 9 Bom. L. R. App. 16; Pura Pundal, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 39; Jugai Molini Dasseer, (1881) 10 C. L. R. 4.

² Imamudi Bhogera, (1873) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 8.

³ Sahib Ditta, (1885) P. R. No. 20 of 1885.

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ Pestianji Dinsha, (1873) 10 B. H. C. 75.

the act.¹ Illustrations (b), (c) and (d) exemplify this explanation. R sold to D certain trees which in fact and to the knowledge of R, though not to the knowledge of D, belonged to a third person. The trees were sold to D with the intention that they should be cut down and taken away. It was held that R had committed the offence of abetment of theft.²

'Guiltily intention or knowledge.'—The offence of abetment depends upon the intention of the person who abets and not upon the knowledge or intention of the person he employs to act for him.

English law.—If the person abetted does not know that the act is illegal he is considered as an innocent agent only, and the abettor is held liable as a principal.

6. Explanation 4.—According to this explanation a person may make himself an abettor by the intervention of a third person, without any direct communication between himself and the person employed to do the thing.

'Abetment of an offence being an offence.'—These words do not mean "when an abetment of an offence is actually committed," but that, when the abetment of an offence is by definition or description an offence under the Penal Code, that is, when an abetment of an offence is punishable under s. 109 or s. 116 or other provision of the Code, then the abetment of such abetment is also an offence. Where S instigated K, a bench clerk, in the Court of M, a Presidency Magistrate, to instigate the latter to accept an illegal gratification for acquitting an accused the case, and K received arrested, and did not in guilty of the abetment of

Abetment of such an abetment.—It is not necessary to an indictment for the offence of abetment of an offence to show that such offence was actually committed.³

A sought the aid of B with the intention of committing a theft of the property of C, and B, with the consent of his master, and for the purpose of carrying out his object. It was held that B had committed yet A was liable for abetment of theft.⁴ Where the accused asked a native doctor to supply her with medicine for the purpose of poisoning her son-in-law, it was held that the offence committed might be treated as an instigating of the doctor to abet the accused in the commission of the murder, and, with reference to this explanation, might have been punished under ss. 116 and 302.⁵

7. Explanation 5.—It is not necessary that all persons joining in any conspiracy must be aware of every secret or every minute detail. When the number of persons conspiring to do a particular act is very large there will be a few amongst them who will plot and plan, and though the others are not fully cognizant of all facts yet their liability is not at all lessened. Where two persons were indicted for making and engraving a plate for the purposes of forgery, and it was proved that one of them gave the order for the manufacture of the plate to an innocent agent, who never saw the other until it was completed, it was held that they were both correctly charged as principals.⁶

More knowledge.—More subsequent knowledge of the offence is insufficient to constitute abetment.⁷ And more knowledge of a design on the part of another to commit an offence and speaking to that other about it without evidence that the

¹ Joan Bleandale, (1848) 2 C & K. 763.

² Dharam, (1901) 14 C P L R. 192

³ Ram Charan, (1878) 15 A W N 147

⁴ Sridal Chamarra, (1918) 46 Cal. 607

⁵ Trigulchillo Nath Chowdhry, (1878) 4 Cal. 366; Dhonnath Burua, (1872) 18 W R

(Cr) 32

⁶ Trigulchillo Nath Chowdhry, sup.

⁷ Must Eshwar, (1852) P L N 24 of 1852

⁸ Ball, (1842) 1 Cox 281

⁹ Skinner v. Lee, (1855) 2 W. R. (Cr) 41.

person aware of the design instigated the other by word or deed to commit the offence, does not constitute abetment.¹

Principal cannot be abettor.—A person who has been convicted of an offence as principal cannot also be punished for abetting it.²

PRACTICE;

The offence of abetment is a substantive one, and the conviction of an abettor is, therefore, in no way dependent on the conviction of the principal.³

In order to convict a person of abetting the commission of a crime, it is not only necessary to prove that he has taken part in those steps of the transaction which are innocent, but in some way or other it is absolutely necessary to connect him with those steps of the transaction which are criminal.⁴

108A. A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in British India, abets the commission of any act without and beyond British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Abetment in British India of offences outside it.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, in British India, instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder.

COMMENT;

Object.—This section was added by Act IV of 1898, s. 3. The Select Committee in their Report observed: "We have made it an offence for a person in British India to abet any act which would be an offence if committed in British India, but, as a fact, is committed outside. In short, to put it in popular language, we have extended the law of abetment of offences committed outside British India. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that if a person in British India abetted or incited a murder in Goa, he would not be guilty of any offence. We have come to the conclusion that he ought to be deemed guilty of an offence, and that India is not to be made an alsatia for instigators of crime."⁵

The section provides for the difficulty discussed in Ganpatrao's case ⁶ in which it was held that an abetment in British India by a British subject of an offence committed in a foreign territory was not an offence punishable under the Penal Code, and could not, therefore, be tried by a Court in British India.

The section contemplates that the abetment shall be completed in British India. If the act committed in British India amounts to preparation only it will not be punishable. The illustration is, however, not very clear. If A is in British India and B in Pondicherry, A can only abet an offence by him either by a letter or some other mode of communication. Even if the letter be written in British India yet until it reaches B it can hardly be said that B has been instigated. If the instigation, in fact, takes place when the letter reaches B, then the instigation has taken place in Pondicherry and not in British India.

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—No Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under this section unless upon complaint made by order of Government.⁷

¹ Venkatasami, (1886) Weir, 3rd Edn., 187.

² Jeetoo Chowdhry, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 23;

⁴ Nim Chand Mookerjee, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

⁵ G. I. 1897, Part VI, p. 238. See Baku, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 678, 24 Bom. 287.

⁶ (1894) 19 Bom. 105.

⁷ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

Punishment of abetment if the act abetted is committed in consequence and where no express provision is made for its punishment.

109. Whoever abets any offence¹ shall, if the act abetted is committed² in consequence of the abetment and no express provision³ is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence.

Explanation.—An act or offence is said to be committed in consequence of abetment, when it is committed in consequence of the instigation, or in pursuance of the conspiracy, or with the aid which constitutes the abetment.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B accepts the bribe. A has abetted the offence defined in section 161.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. B, in consequence of the instigation, commits that offence. A is guilty of abetting that offence, and is liable to the same punishment as B.

(c) A and B conspire to poison Z. A, in pursuance of the conspiracy, procures the poison and delivers it to B in order that he may administer it to Z. B, in pursuance of the conspiracy, administers the poison to Z in A's absence and thereby causes Z's death. Here B is guilty of murder. A is guilty of abetting that offence by conspiracy, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

COMMENT.

Under this section the abettor is liable to any punishment which may be inflicted on the principal offender, (1) if the act of the latter is committed in consequence of the abetment, and (2) no express provision is made in the Code for the punishment of such an abetment. This section lays down nothing more than that if the Code has not separately provided for the punishment of an abetment as such then it is punishable with the punishment provided for the original offence.¹

In order to abet under this section it is not necessary that the abettor must be absent.²

1. 'Offence.'—See s. 40, supra. Abetment of an offence under a local law (e.g., Madras Act V of 1920) is an offence falling within the purview of this section.³

2. 'Is committed.'—Under this section the act abetted should be committed in consequence of the abetment,⁴ or in pursuance of the conspiracy (See Explanation). Assisting in the preparation of an offence which leads to nothing does not amount to an abetment under this section.⁵ Offering gratification as a reward or motive to withdraw a case against the accused under the Motor Car Act, which had already been dismissed, was held not to amount to an abetment of an offence under s. 161.⁶

3. 'No express provision'—This section only applies to those cases of abetment about which 'no express provision is made by this Code.' Hence it does not apply to abetting the waging of war, ss. 121, 122, 123, to abetting the escape of State prisoners, s. 130; to abetting mutiny, s. 132; to abetting an assault of a

¹ Sesha Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Chetty, (1923) 33 M. L. T. 263.

² Nirmal Kanta Roy, (1914) 41 Cal. 1072.

³ Sesha Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Chetty, supra.

⁴ Rayroomar Banerjee, (1862) 1 Ind. Jur. (O. S.) 105.

⁵ Surat Bakadar, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 362.

⁶ Shamsul Huq, (1920) 33 C. L. J. 379.

soldier or sailor on his superior officer, s. 134; and to abetting insubordination by the same, s. 136.

CASES.

Forgery.—A person taking an active part in the preparation of a document, but no part in the forgery of the name of the executant, is held not to have committed forgery, but simply abetment of that offence.¹

Homicide.—In a case of suttee, A ordered the pile to be lighted. B did not then assist but afterwards when the woman fled from the pile induced her to return. A was held guilty of abetment of culpable homicide, but B of abetment of suicide only.² The accused accompanied his brother who was taking a child to murder it: after accompanying him for a while he refused further to go along with his brother, but at the same time though knowing fully well that the child was being taken to be murdered, he made no attempt to take the child back with him and the child was subsequently murdered. It was held that the accused was guilty of murder.³

Marrying a girl during the lifetime of her husband.—Where a Hindu having given his daughter, eight years old, in marriage to a certain person, again gave her in marriage to another in the lifetime of her first husband, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section read with s. 494, although his daughter had not the knowledge and intelligence necessary to enable her to commit an offence under s. 494.⁴

Abetment of kidnapping.—Where a Hindu woman left her husband's house taking with her infant daughter, and went to the house of A, and on the same day the daughter was married to B, the brother of A, without her father's consent, it was held that A was rightly convicted under this section and s. 363 of abetting the offence of kidnapping which was committed by the mother of the girl.⁵ The Allahabad High Court has not approved of this view. One C by making certain false representations to the mother of J, a married girl of eleven years of age, induced her to part with the custody of her daughter. C took the girl away from her own village to a neighbouring village where she was joined by T. Thence C and T took the girl about with them from place to place making unsuccessful attempts to dispose of her in marriage, until they were arrested by a chowkidar of Tiabpur, on his being informed that an attempt was made to sell the girl in that village. Upon these findings C was convicted of the offence punishable under s. 366 and T of abetment of that offence, following the rule in Samia Kaundan.⁶ On appeal to the High Court the appeal of C was summarily rejected. As to T it was held, dissenting from Samia Kaundan and agreeing with the view taken in *Ram Supdar*⁷ and Rakhai Naihari,⁸ that the offence of kidnapping having been completed as soon as the minor was actually taken out of the custody of her guardian, T could not properly be convicted of abetment on the hypothesis that the offence was a continuing one. But inasmuch as there was evidence on the record that the assist-abetment of the offence of kidnapping after the person had once been taken out of

¹ Kashi Nath Naeik, (1897) 25 Cal. 207. See Chattaraj Babar, No. (2), (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 367, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 130.

² Sikteloff Rastell, (1863) 1 R. J. P. J. 174.

³ Szla, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 207.

⁴ Nani Lal Singh, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 313. See Thakurayya, (1891) 14 Mad. 364;

Balambal, (1902) 26 Mad. 463; Moss, (1893) 16 All. 83.

⁵ Prankrishna Surma, (1882) 8 Cal. 969; Samia Kaundan, (1878) 1 Mad. 173.

⁶ (1876) 1 Mad. 173.

⁷ (1896) 10 All. 109.

⁸ (1897) 2 C. W. N. 81.

⁹ Tika, (1903) 23 A. W. N. 233.

the keeping of the lawful guardian.¹ A married woman cannot abet her own abduction under s. 498.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—To substantiate a charge under this section it is necessary to show intentional aid by some act or illegal omission.³ It is necessary to prove abetment, and that the act abetted was committed in consequence of the abetment.

Procedure.—The general procedure for cases of abetment is in accordance with that for the offence abetted. Abetments therefore are cognizable or non-cognizable, bailable or non-bailable, compoundable or non-compoundable, according to the procedure for the offence abetted.

Jurisdiction.—A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.⁴ The Court competent to try the offence of abetment is the Court declared competent to try the offence abetted.

Summary trial.—Whether an abetment is triable summarily or not, depends upon whether the offence abetted is triable summarily or not.⁵

Joint trial—An abettor may be tried either jointly with, or separately from, the principal offender.⁶

Complaint.—Under sub-section (4) of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, a complaint in writing is necessary for the prosecution of a person who abets any of the offences referred to in sub-section (1).

Section 196A of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under s. 120B and not for abetment of conspiracy punishable under this section.⁷

Sentence.—A sentence of less than transportation for life is not a legal sentence for abetment of murder under s.302 and this section when the offence of murder is actually committed in consequence of the abetment. The legal punishment for such abetment is the punishment provided for murder.⁸

It is irregular to convict and punish a person for abetment of theft, and at the same time to convict and punish him for receiving the stolen property.⁹

Charge.—In a charge of abetment, the section of the principal offence, and the particular section of this Chapter under which the case falls should be mentioned in the charge, and the words "under the said section" should be used.¹⁰

• charge you—as follows :—

That X Y (if the person is not known say that an unknown person) on the—day of—, at—, committed the offence of—, and that you at—, abetted the said X Y (or person unknown) in the commission of the said offence of—, which was committed in consequence of your abetment, and you have thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 109 and—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).

¹ Muhammad Baksh, (1893) P. R. No. 8 of 1894; Chanda, (1892) P. R. No. 13 of 1893.

L. R. 351.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 180.

⁵ Ibid., ss. 260, 261.

⁶ Ibid., s. 239.

⁷ Abdul Salim, (1921) 49 Cal. 573; Abdul Rahman, (1924) 3 Rang. 95

^a Nga Kyaw Din, (1896) P. J. L. B 269.

* Sita Ram Rai, (1880) 3 All 181.

¹⁰ (1865) 3 W.R. (Cr. L.) 5, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9.

soldier or sailor on his superior officer, s. 134; and to abetting insubordination by the same, s. 136.

CASES.

Forgery.—A person taking an active part in the preparation of a document, but no part in the forgery of the name of the executant, is held not to have committed forgery, but simply abetment of that offence.¹

Homicide.—In a case of suttee, A ordered the pile to be lighted. B did not then assist but afterwards when the woman fled from the pile induced her to return. A was held guilty of abetment of culpable homicide, but B of abetment of suicide only.² The accused accompanied his brother who was taking a child to murder it: after accompanying him for a while he refused further to go along with his brother, but at the same time though knowing fully well that the child was being taken to be murdered, he made no attempt to take the child back with him and the child was subsequently murdered. It was held that the accused was guilty of murder.³

Marrying a girl during the lifetime of her husband.—Where a Hindu having given his daughter, eight years old, in marriage to a certain person, again gave her in marriage to another in the lifetime of her first husband, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section read with s. 494, although his daughter had not the knowledge and intelligence necessary to enable her to commit an offence under s. 494.⁴

Abetment of kidnapping.—Where a Hindu woman left her husband's house, taking with her infant daughter, and went to the house of A, and on the same day the daughter was married to B, the brother of A, without her father's consent, it was held that A was rightly convicted under this section and s. 363 of abetting the offence of kidnapping which was committed by the mother of the girl.⁵ The Allahabad High Court has not approved of this view. One C by making certain false representations to the mother of J, a married girl of eleven years of age, induced her to part with the custody of her daughter. C took the girl away from her own village to a neighbouring village where she was joined by T. Thence C and T took the girl about with them from place to place making unsuccessful attempts to dispose of her in marriage, until they were arrested by a chowkidar of Tiabpur, on his being informed that an attempt was made to sell the girl in that village. Upon these findings C was convicted of the offence punishable under s. 366 and T of abetment of that offence, following the rule in Samia Kaundan.⁶ On appeal to the High Court the appeal of C was summarily rejected. As to T it was held, dissenting from Samia Kaundan and agreeing with the view taken in *Ram Supdar*⁷ and Rakhal Naikari,⁸ that the offence of kidnapping having been completed as soon as the minor was actually taken out of the custody of her guardian, T could not properly be convicted of abetment on the hypothesis that the offence was a continuing one. But inasmuch as there was evidence on the record that the assistance given by T in attempting to dispose of J was the result of a conspiracy entered into before the kidnapping took place, the conviction of T for abetment of kidnapping was sustainable.⁹ The former Punjab Chief Court held that there could be no abetment of the offence of kidnapping after the person had once been taken out of

¹ Kashi Nath Baski, (1897) 23 Cal. 207.
² Chandrasekhar Baski, N. 174 (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 207, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 130.

³ Chandrasekhar Baski, (1903) 1 R. J. P. J. 174.

⁴ State (1904) 10 Ind. 175.

⁵ State (1904) 10 Ind. 175.

⁶ State (1904) 10 Ind. 175.

Bilimbi, (1902) 26 Mad. 163; Moos, (1902) 14 All. 84.

⁷ Pratishtha Sharma, (1902) 8 Cal. 929; Samia Kaundan, (1902) 1 Mad. 173.

⁸ (1906) 1 Mad. 173.

⁹ (1906) 19 All. 109.

(1907) 2 C. W. N. 81.

¹⁰ Tika, (1907) 23 A. W. N. 722.

the keeping of the lawful guardian.¹ A married woman cannot abet her own abduction under s. 498.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—To substantiate a charge under this section it is necessary to show intentional aid by some act or illegal omission.³ It is necessary to prove abetment, and that the act abetted was committed in consequence of the abetment.

Procedure.—The general procedure for cases of abetment is in accordance with that for the offence abetted. Abetments therefore are cognizable or non-cognizable, bailable or non-bailable, compoundable or non-compoundable, according to the procedure for the offence abetted.

Jurisdiction.—A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.⁴ The Court competent to try the offence of abetment is the Court declared competent to try the offence abetted.

Summary trial.—Whether an abetment is triable summarily or not, depends upon whether the offence abetted is triable summarily or not.⁵

Joint trial.—An abettor may be tried either jointly with, or separately from, the principal offender.⁶

Complaint.—Under sub-section (4) of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, a complaint in writing is necessary for the prosecution of a person who abets any of the offences referred to in sub-section (1).

Section 196A of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under s. 120B and not for abetment of conspiracy punishable under this section.⁷

Sentence.—A sentence of less than transportation for life is not a legal sentence for abetment of murder under s.302 and this section when the offence of murder is actually committed in consequence of the abetment. The legal punishment for such abetment is the punishment provided for murder.⁸

It is irregular to convict and punish a person for abetment of theft, and at the same time to convict and punish him for receiving the stolen property.⁹

Charge.—In a charge of abetment, the section of the principal offence, and the particular section of this Chapter under which the case falls should be mentioned with the circumstance which brings it under the said section.¹⁰

The charges should be 41-1-1.

of—
said X Y (or person unknown) in the commission of the said offence of—, which was committed in consequence of your abetment, and you have thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 109 and—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).

¹ Muhammad Balkish, (1893) P. R. No. 8 of 1894; Chanda, (1892) P. R. No. 13 of 1893.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 180.

³ Ibid., ss. 260, 261.

* Ibid., s. 239.

7 JUL 7 1951

soldier or sailor on his superior officer, s. 134; and to abetting insubordination by the same, s. 136.

CASES.

Forgery.—A person taking an active part in the preparation of a document, but no part in the forgery of the name of the executant, is held not to have committed forgery, but simply abetment of that offence.¹

Homicide.—In a case of suttee, A ordered the pile to be lighted. B did not then assist but afterwards when the woman fled from the pile induced her to return. A was held guilty of abetment of culpable homicide, but B of abetment of suicide only.² The accused accompanied his brother who was taking a child to murder it: after accompanying him for a while he refused further to go along with his brother, but at the same time though knowing fully well that the child was being taken to be murdered, he made no attempt to take the child back with him and the child was subsequently murdered. It was held that the accused was guilty of murder.³

Marrying a girl during the lifetime of her husband.—Where a Hindu having given his daughter, eight years old, in marriage to a certain person, again gave her in marriage to another in the lifetime of her first husband, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section read with s. 494, although his daughter had not the knowledge and intelligence necessary to enable her to commit an offence under s. 494.⁴

Abetment of kidnapping.—Where a Hindu woman left her husband's house taking with her infant daughter, and went to the house of A, and on the same day the daughter was married to B, the brother of A, without her father's consent, it was held that A was rightly convicted under this section and s. 363 of abetting the offence of kidnapping which was committed by the mother of the girl.⁵ The Allahabad High Court has not approved of this view. One C by making certain false representations to the mother of J, a married girl of eleven years of age, induced her to part with the custody of her daughter. C took the girl away from her own village to a neighbouring village where she was joined by T. Thence C and T took the girl about with them from place to place making unsuccessful attempts to dispose of her in marriage, until they were arrested by a chowkidar of Tiabpur, on his being informed that an attempt was made to sell the girl in that village. Upon these findings C was convicted of the offence punishable under s. 366 and T of abetment of that offence, following the rule in Samia Kaundan.⁶ On appeal to the High Court the appeal of C was summarily rejected. As to T it was held, dissenting from Samia Kaundan and agreeing with the view taken in *Ram Sundar*⁷ and Rakhal Naikari,⁸ that the offence of kidnapping having been completed as soon as the minor was actually taken out of the custody of her guardian, T could not properly be convicted of abetment on the hypothesis that the offence was a continuing one. But inasmuch as there was evidence on the record that the assistance given by T in attempting to dispose of J was the result of a conspiracy entered into before the kidnapping took place, the conviction of T for abetment of kidnapping was sustainable.⁹ The former Punjab Chief Court held that there could be no abetment of the offence of kidnapping after the person had once been taken out of

¹ Kashi Nath Naek, (1897) 25 Cal. 207.
See Chhotabai Babar, No. (2), (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 367, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 139.

² Sakelchell Reetoll, (1863) 1 R. J. P. J. 174.

³ Sidu, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 207.

⁴ Nand Lal Singh, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 343.
See Tara Narayana, (1891) 14 Mad. 364;

Balambal, (1902) 26 Mad. 463; Moss, (1893) 16 All. 88.

⁵ Prantrishna Surma, (1882) 8 Cal. 609;
Samia Kaundan, (1876) 1 Mad. 173.

⁶ (1876) 1 Mad. 173.

⁷ (1896) 19 All. 109.

⁸ (1897) 2 C. W. N. 81.

⁹ Tika, (1903) 23 A. W. N. 233.

the keeping of the lawful guardian.¹ A married woman cannot abet her own abduction under s. 498.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—To substantiate a charge under this section it is necessary to show intentional aid by some act or illegal omission.³ It is necessary to prove abetment, and that the act abetted was committed in consequence of the abetment.

Procedure.—The general procedure for cases of abetment is in accordance with that for the offence abetted. Abetments therefore are cognizable or non-cognizable, bailable or non-bailable, compoundable or non-compoundable, according to the procedure for the offence abetted.

Jurisdiction.—A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.⁴ The Court competent to try the offence of abetment is the Court declared competent to try the offence abetted.

Summary trial.—Whether an abetment is triable summarily or not, depends upon whether the offence abetted is triable summarily or not.⁵

Joint trial.—An abettor may be tried either jointly with, or separately from, the principal offender.⁶

Complaint.—Under sub-section (4) of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, a complaint in writing is necessary for the prosecution of a person who abets any of the offences referred to in sub-section (1).

Section 196A of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under s. 120B and not for abetment of conspiracy punishable under this section.⁷

Sentence.—A sentence of less than transportation for life is not a legal sentence for abetment of murder under s. 302 and this section when the offence of murder is actually committed in consequence of the abetment. The legal punishment for such abetment is the punishment provided for murder.⁸

It is irregular to convict and punish a person for abetment of theft, and at the same time to convict and punish him for receiving the stolen property.⁹

Charge.—In a charge of abetment, the section of the principal offence, and the particular section of this Chapter under which the case falls should be mentioned with the circumstance which brings it under the said section.¹⁰

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you—as follows :—

That X Y (if the person is not known say that an unknown person) on the—day of—, at—, committed the offence of—, and that you at—, abetted the said X Y (or person unknown) in the commission of the said offence of—, which was committed in consequence of your abetment, and you have thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 109 and—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).

¹ Muhammad Balkhsh, (1893) P. R. No. 8 of 1894; Chanda, (1892) P. R. No. 13 of 1893.

² Pratt, (1897) P. R. No. 13 of 1897.

³ Pratt, (1897) P. R. No. 13 of 1897.

⁴ L. R. 351.

⁵ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 180.

⁶ Ibid., ss. 260, 261.

⁷ Ibid., s. 239.

⁸ Pratt, (1897) P. R. No. 13 of 1897.

⁹ Ibid.

(Cr. L.) 9.

soldier or sailor on his superior officer, s. 134; and to abetting insubordination by the same, s. 136.

CASES.

Forgery.—A person taking an active part in the preparation of a document, but no part in the forgery of the name of the executant, is held not to have committed forgery, but simply abetment of that offence.¹

Homicide.—In a case of sullee, A ordered the pile to be lighted. B did not then assist but afterwards when the woman fled from the pile induced her to return. A was held guilty of abetment of culpable homicide, but B of abetment of suicide only.² The accused accompanied his brother who was taking a child to murder it: after accompanying him for a while he refused further to go along with his brother, but at the same time though knowing fully well that the child was being taken to be murdered, he made no attempt to take the child back with him and the child was subsequently murdered. It was held that the accused was guilty of murder.³

Marrying a girl during the lifetime of her husband.—Where a Hindu having given his daughter, eight years old, in marriage to a certain person, again gave her in marriage to another in the lifetime of her first husband, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section read with s. 494, although his daughter had not the knowledge and intelligence necessary to enable her to commit an offence under s. 494.⁴

Abetment of kidnapping.—Where a Hindu woman left her husband's house, taking with her infant daughter, and went to the house of A, and on the same day the daughter was married to B, the brother of A, without her father's consent, it was held that A was rightly convicted under this section and s. 363 of abetting the offence of kidnapping which was committed by the mother of the girl.⁵ The Allahabad High Court has not approved of this view. One C by making certain false representations to the mother of J, a married girl of eleven years of age, induced her to part with the custody of her daughter. C took the girl away from her own village to a neighbouring village where she was joined by T. Thence C and T took the girl about with them from place to place making unsuccessful attempts to dispose of her in marriage, until they were arrested by a chowkidar of Tiabpur, on his being informed that an attempt was made to sell the girl in that village. Upon these findings C was convicted of the offence punishable under s. 366 and T of abetment of that offence, following the rule in Samia Kaundan.⁶ On appeal to the High Court the appeal of C was summarily rejected. As to T it was held, dissenting from Samia Kaundan and agreeing with the view taken in *Ram Supdar*⁷ and Rakhal Naikari,⁸ that the offence of kidnapping having been completed as soon as the minor was actually taken out of the custody of her guardian, T could not properly be convicted of abetment on the hypothesis that the offence was a continuing one. But inasmuch as there was evidence on the record that the assistance given by T in attempting to dispose of J was the result of a conspiracy entered into before the kidnapping took place, the conviction of T for abetment of kidnapping was sustainable.⁹ The former Punjab Chief Court held that there could be no abetment of the offence of kidnapping after the person had once been taken out of

¹ Kashi Nath Naek, (1897) 25 Cal. 207. See Chhotalal Babar, No. (2), (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 367, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 130.

² Sahebloll Reetloll, (1863) 1 R. J. P. J. 174.

³ Sadu, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 207.

⁴ Nand Lal Singh, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 343. See Thandacarayudu, (1891) 14 Mad. 364;

Balambal, (1902) 26 Mad. 463; Moss, (1893) 16 All. 88.

⁵ Prankrishna Surma, (1882) 8 Cal. 909; Samia Kaundan, (1876) 1 Mad. 173.

⁶ (1876) 1 Mad. 173.

⁷ (1896) 19 All. 109.

⁸ (1897) 2 C. W. N. 81.

⁹ Tika, (1903) 23 A. W. N. 233.

the keeping of the lawful guardian.¹ A married woman cannot abet her own abduction under s. 498.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—To substantiate a charge under this section it is necessary to show intentional aid by some act or illegal omission.³ It is necessary to prove abetment, and that the act abetted was committed in consequence of the abetment.

Procedure.—The general procedure for cases of abetment is in accordance with that for the offence abetted. Abetments therefore are cognizable or non-cognizable, bailable or non-bailable, compoundable or non-compoundable, according to the procedure for the offence abetted.

Jurisdiction.—A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.⁴ The Court competent to try the offence of abetment is the Court declared competent to try the offence abetted.

Summary trial.—Whether an abetment is triable summarily or not, depends upon whether the offence abetted is triable summarily or not.⁵

Joint trial.—An abettor may be tried either jointly with, or separately from, the principal offender.⁶

Complaint.—Under sub-section (4) of s. 195, Criminal Procedure Code, a complaint in writing is necessary for the prosecution of a person who abets any of the offences referred to in sub-section (1).

Section 196A of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under s. 120B and not for abetment of conspiracy punishable under this section.⁷

Sentence.—A sentence of less than transportation for life is not a legal sentence for abetment of murder under s. 302 and this section when the offence of murder is actually committed in consequence of the abetment. The legal punishment for such abetment is the punishment provided for murder.⁸

It is irregular to convict and punish a person for abetment of theft, and at the same time to convict and punish him for receiving the stolen property.⁹

Charge.—In a charge of abetment, the section of the principal offence, and the particular section of this Chapter under which the case falls should be mentioned said section.¹⁰

charge you—as follows :—

That X Y (if the person is not known say that an unknown person) on the—day of—, at—, committed the offence of—, and that you at—, abetted the said X Y (or person unknown) in the commission of the said offence of—, which was committed in consequence of your abetment, and you have thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 109 and—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).

¹ Muhammad Bakhsh, (1893) P. R. No. 8 of 1894; Chanda, (1892) P. R. No. 13 of 1893.

² M. N. S. v. State, (1893) P. R. No. 13 of 1893.

No. 11 of 1895.

³ Khandu Vishnu Sathe, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 351.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 180.

⁵ Ibid, ss. 260, 261.

⁶ Ibid, s. 239.

⁷ Abdul Salim, (1921) 49 Cal. 573; Abdul Rahman, (1924) 3 Rang. 95.

⁸ Nga Kyaw Din, (1896) P. J. L. B. 269.

⁹ Sita Ram Rai, (1880) 3 All. 181.

¹⁰ (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr. L.) 5; (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9.

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (omit the words "by the said Court" in cases tried by Magistrate)] on the said charge.

When the abettor is charged with the person committing the offence the charge should run thus :

That you—, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the commission of the offence of—by— which was committed in consequence of your abetment, and that you have thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 109 and— of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of my Court [or the Court of Session].

110. Whoever abets the commission of an offence¹ shall, if the person abetted does the act with a different intention or knowledge from that of the abettor, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence which would have been committed if the act had been done with the intention or knowledge of the abettor and with no other.

Punishment of abettor if person abetted does act with different intention from that of abettor.

COMMENT.

This section says that though the person abetted commits the offence with a different intention or knowledge yet the abettor will be punished with the punishment provided for the offence abetted. The liability of the person abetted is not affected by this section.

Explanation 3 to s. 108 bears relation to this section. See ill. (d).

1. 'Offence.'—Offence under this section denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law (s. 40).

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Same as for the offence abetted.

111. When an act is abetted and a different act is done, the abettor is liable for the act done, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had directly abetted it :

Liability of abettor when one act abetted and different act done.

Provided the act done was a probable consequence¹ of the abetment, and was committed under the influence of the instigation, or with the aid or in pursuance of the conspiracy which constituted the abetment.

Proviso.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A instigates a child to put poison into the food of Z and gives him poison for that purpose. The child, in consequence of the instigation, by mistake puts the poison into the food of Y, which is by the side of that of Z. Here, if the child was acting under the influence of A's instigation, and the act done was under the circumstances a probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had instigated the child to put the poison into the food of Y.

(b) A instigates B to burn Z's house. B sets fire to the house and at the same time commits theft of property there. A, though guilty of abetting the burning of the house, is not guilty of abetting the theft, for the theft was a distinct act, and not a probable consequence of the burning.

(c) A instigates B and C to break into an inhabited house at midnight for the purpose of robbery, and provides them with arms for that purpose. B and C break into the house, and being resisted by Z, one of the inmates, murder Z. Here, if that murder was the probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable to the punishment provided for murder.

COMMENT:

Principle.—This section proceeds on the maxim “every man is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act.”

“If one man instigates another to perpetrate a particular crime, and that other, in pursuance of such instigation, not only perpetrates that crime, but, in the course of doing so, commits another crime in furtherance of it, the former is criminally responsible as an abettor in respect of such last mentioned crime, if it is one which, as a reasonable man, he must, at the time of the instigation, have known would, in the ordinary course of things, probably have to be committed in order to carry out the original crime. For example, if A says to B:—‘You waylay C on such and such a road and rob him, and if he resists, use this sword, but not more than is absolutely necessary’; and B kills C, A is responsible as an abettor of the killing, for it was a probable consequence of the instigation. To put it in plain terms, the law virtually says to a man: ‘If you choose to run the risk of putting another in motion to do an unlawful act, he, for the time being, represents you as much as he does himself; and if, in order to effect the accomplishment of that act, he does another which you may fairly from the circumstances be presumed to have foreseen would be a probable consequence of your instigation, you are as much responsible for abetting the latter act as the former.’”¹

Foster² says: “If the principal totally and substantially varies, if being solicited to commit a felony of one kind he wilfully and knowingly commits a felony of another, he will stand single in that offence, and the person soliciting will not be involved in his guilt. But if the principal in substance complies with the temptation, varying only in circumstances of time or place, or in the manner of execution, in these cases the person soliciting to the offence will, if absent, be an accessory before the fact, if present a principal...A commands B to murder C by poison, B does it by a sword, or other weapon, or by any other means. A is accessory to this murder: for the murder of C was the object principally in his contemplation, and that is effected. So where the principal goes beyond the terms of the solicitation, if in the event the felony committed was a probable consequence of what was ordered or advised, the person giving such orders or advise will be an acces-

his servant to waylay dies of this beating.
house of C; he does it; and the flames taking hold of the house of D that likewise is burnt. A is accessory to the burning of this latter house. These cases are all governed by one and the same principle. The advice, solicitation, or orders in substance were pursued and were extremely flagitious on the part of A. The events though possibly falling out beyond his original intention, were in the ordinary course of things the probable consequences of what B did under the influence, and at the instigation of A. And, therefore, in the justice of the law, he is answerable for them.”

1. ‘Probable consequence.’—The test of guilt in charges of abetment must always be whether, having regard to the immediate object of the instigation or conspiracy, the act done by the principal is one which, according to ordinary experience and common sense, the abettor must have foreseen as probable. But it is sufficient for a conviction if the act done was a probable consequence of the abetment. It is not necessary that the abettor should know it to be a probable consequence.³

¹ Per Straight, J., in Alathura Das, (1884)
6 All. 491, 491.

² Crown Cases, pp. 369, 370.
³ M. & M. 91.

See illustrations to this section, but the act done must have been committed in pursuance of the conspiracy.¹

CASES.

Where several persons turned out to beat a man, but one of them killed him, it was held that as the intention of all of them was to beat him only they would be liable for grievous hurt only and the causing death to the deceased went so far beyond the common purpose that it could not be said to have been a probable consequence of the abetment.² Where A ordered B and C to seize and forcibly take D in the contemplation of an assault upon D, and D was so beaten and tortured as to have died in consequence, it was held that A was guilty at least of abetting the omission of voluntarily causing grievous hurt.³ B and C instigated A to rob the deceased on his return home after receiving a sum of money; whereupon A killed the deceased. A was convicted of murder and B and C of abetment of murder under this section and s. 302. But the High Court altered the convictions of B and C to those under ss. 109 and 392.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—(1) That the accused abetted the commission of a particular act.

(2) That the act actually committed was done under the influence of such abetment.

(3) That the act done was a probable consequence of the abetment.

Procedure.—Same as the offence abetted.⁵

112. If the act for which the abettor is liable under the last preceding section is committed in addition to the act abetted, and constitutes a distinct offence,¹ the abettor is liable to punishment for each of the offences.

Abettor when liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and for act done.

ILLUSTRATION.

A instigates B to resist by force a distress made by a public servant. B, in consequence, resists that distress. In offering the resistance, B voluntarily causes grievous hurt to the officer executing the distress. As B has committed both the offence of resisting the distress and the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, B is liable to punishment for both these offences; and, if A knew that B was likely voluntarily to cause grievous hurt in resisting the distress, A will also be liable to punishment for each of the offences.

COMMENT.

This section is a further extension of the principle enunciated in the preceding section: it is much wider than the English law on the point. Under it the abettor is punished for the offence abetted as well as the offence committed.

1. Offence.—See s. 40, supra.

113. When an act is abetted with the intention on the part of the abettor of causing a particular effect, and an act for which the abettor is liable in consequence of the abetment, causes a different effect from that intended by the abettor, the abettor is liable for the effect caused in the same manner

Liability of abettor for an effect caused by the act abetted different from that intended by the abettor.

¹ Nilakanta, (1912) 11 M. L. T. 1.

² Goluck Chung, (1886) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 75.

³ Doorgessur Surmah, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) of 1919.

⁴ Mathura Das, (1884) 6 All. 491.

⁵ See Harnam Singh, (1919) P. R. No. 21 and to the same extent as if he had abetted the act with the intention of causing that effect, provided he knew that the act abetted was likely to cause that effect.

ILLUSTRATION.

A instigates B to cause grievous hurt to Z. B, in consequence of the instigation, causes grievous hurt to Z. Z dies in consequence. Here, if A knew that the grievous hurt abetted was likely to cause death, A is liable to be punished with the punishment provided for murder.

COMMENT.

This section should be read in conjunction with s. 111. Section 111 provides for the doing of an act different from the one abetted, whereas this section deals with the case where the act done is the same as the act abetted but its effect is different. To make the abettor liable it must be shewn that he knew that the act abetted was likely to cause that effect. This can be done by shewing that a reasonable man would draw an inference that a particular effect was likely to ensue from a particular act.

Abetment of attempt to murder.—It is somewhat difficult to conceive circumstances which would constitute instigation to another to make merely an attempt to murder. Prima facie any incitement to use violence to another would fall under one of the two categories, viz., to cause death, or to cause hurt, grievous or simple.¹

PRACTICE.

Procedure.—Same as for the offence abetted.

114. Whenever any person, who if absent would be liable to be punished as an abettor,¹ is present when the act or offence for which he would be punishable in consequence of the abetment is committed,² he shall be deemed to have committed such act or offence.³

COMMENT.

Principle.—The meaning of this section is that if the nature of the act done constitutes abetment, then, if present, the abettor is to be deemed to have committed the offence, though in point of fact another man actually committed it. The section says that the person present is deemed to have committed the offence, not that he has committed it. It simply provides for the punishment of what the English law calls 'principals in the second degree.' A person present abetting an offence is to be deemed to have committed the offence though he does not, in fact, do so any more than a 'principal in the second degree' does.² Where, for instance, a blow is struck by A, in the presence of and by the order of B, both are principals in the transaction. If two persons join in beating a man and he dies, it is not necessary to ascertain exactly what the effect of each blow was.³ If A instigates B to murder Z, he commits abetment; if absent, he is punishable as an abettor, and if the offence is committed, then under s. 109; if present, he is by this section deemed to have committed the offence and is punishable as a principal.

Scope.—Section 109 and this section supersede the English law as to principals in the first and second degrees and accessories before the fact.

¹ Nga Po Kya, (1903) 9 Burma L. R. 190.

(1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 164.

² (1869) 4 M. H. C. App. 37; 1 Weir 50;
Peer Mahomed, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 52; Chima,

³ Mahomed Asper, (1874) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 11.

This section deals with the case, where there has been the crime of abetment, but where also there has been actual commission of the crime abetted and the abettor has been present thereat.¹ It only applies when an abettor has done something constituting abetment prior to the commission of the crime itself, and when he has also been present at the commitment of the crime, but has not actually committed it.² The abetment must have been completed before the actual offence is committed.³

Sections 34 and 114.—According to s. 34 where a criminal act is done by several persons, each is liable as if it were done by himself alone; so that if two or more persons are present aiding and abetting in the commission of a murder, each will be tried and convicted as a principal, though it might not be proved which of them actually committed the act. This section appears to refer to cases somewhat different, namely, where a person by abetment, previous to the commission of the act, renders himself liable as an abettor, is present when the act is committed, but takes no active part in the doing of it.⁴

1. 'Who if absent would be liable to be punished as an abettor.'—To bring a person within this section it is necessary first to make out the circumstances which constitute abetment, so that, "if absent," he would have been "liable to be punished as an abettor" and then to show that he was present when the offence was committed.⁵ Previous concert is an essential factor in the constitution of the offence of abetment under this section. Where both master and servant were present and the latter received money for selling ganja in contravention of the terms of the license, it was held that having regard to the provisions of s. 34 the servant was liable for the illegal sale, but that this section would not apply "unless the person present abetting the offence would, if absent, have been guilty of abetment."⁶

Where no conspiracy, instigation, or act, or illegal omission, is proved and the abetment consists only of participation in the actual commission of the offence, s. 109 is the section applicable.⁷

2. 'Is present when the act or offence ... is committed.'—The mere presence as an abettor of any person will not render him liable for the offence committed.⁸ He must be sufficiently near to give assistance,⁹ and there must be a participation in the act.¹⁰ Presence is either actual or constructive. It is not necessary that the party should be actually present, an ear or eye witness of the transaction; he is, in construction of law, present, aiding and abetting, if, with the intention of giving assistance, he be near enough to afford it, should occasion arise. Presence during the whole of the transaction is not necessary. For instance, if several persons combine to forge an instrument, and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are nevertheless all guilty as principals.¹¹ If a man is

¹ Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 148, 159, 52 Cal. 197, r.c.

² Ghosh, (1915) 8 L. R. R. 275, r.c.

³ Anand, (1921) 21 L. W. 19, Ram Ranjan Roy, (1914) 42 Cal. 422.

⁴ Jan Mahomed, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

⁵ Mussumat Nirani, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 49; Abbi Mitter v. Lachmi Narain, (1909) 27 Cal. 546; Hansa Pathak v. Bansi Lal Das, (1901) 8 C. W. N. 519, Barendra Kumar Ghosh, supra.

⁶ Keshwar Lal Shaha v. Girish Chunder Dutt, (1922) 29 Cal. 496, 498.

⁷ Abdalla Khan, (1899) P. R. No. 15 of 1899.

⁸ Abbi Mitter v. Lachmi Narain, supra; Dandekar Singh, (1899) 27 Cal. 144; Chandrasekari Gouda, (1897) 2 C. W. N.

49. A doubt has been expressed, whether there can be abetment of a riot. Holmwood, J., said: "We can see no reason why a riot should not be abetted as well as any other crime. The only difficulty arises from the presence of the accused at the riot which renders them liable under s. 147 in the first instance if they gave orders to the mob and thereby joined in the common object of the unlawful assembly." Dadan Gazi, (1906) 10 C. W. N. 890, 891, 892.

⁹ William Stewart, (1818) R. & R. 303; Patrick Kelly, (1820) R. & R. 421; Hovell, (1839) 9 C. & P. 437.

¹⁰ Muradi, (1916) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 6 of 1917 See Suraj Pandey, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 461.

¹¹ John Lingley, (1821) R. & R. 446.

simply present whilst an offence is committed, but does not take any part in it, he will not be liable merely because he takes no steps to prevent the offence.¹

The mere presence of a person on the occasion of giving a bribe and his omission to promptly inform the authorities, do not constitute him an accomplice, unless it can be shown that he somehow co-operated in the payment of the bribe, or was instrumental in the negotiations for the payment.²

The act at the doing of which the abettor is present must amount to an offence. Thus this section is not applicable to the case of a person abetting the pledging of a thing entrusted to a stranger.³

If an abettor of an offence is, on account of his presence at its commission, to be charged under this section as a principal, his abetment must continue down to the time of the commission of the offence. If he distinctly withdraws at any moment before the final act is done, the offence cannot be held to have been committed with his continuing abetment.⁴

A conviction under this section cannot stand where the abetment charged necessarily requires the presence of the abettor. To come within the section, the abetment must be complete apart from the presence of the abettor.⁵ One R was betting orders

Two persons who were admittedly eye-witnesses to the occurrence were not called as witnesses by the prosecution. It was held that the conviction of R under s. 302 and this section could not stand as the only abetment charged necessarily required the presence of R, while to come within this section the abetment must be complete apart from the presence of the abettor.⁶

Cases.—Where the accused came with a number of armed men and forcibly carried off a crop without the consent of the owner, it was held that even if they took with a knife, but there was no proof of A's urging him on, or that A knew in any other way that B would be likely to use a knife. It was held that A could not be convicted of abetting an offence under s. 326, but only of abetting an assault.⁸

Person watching outside a house while an offence is committed inside.—Where a person watched the door of a house while a murder was being committed inside he was held guilty of murder. A conspirator, who stood outside of a house, while his friends entered inside and looted it, and watched out in pursuance of the common design, was held to be guilty under this section.⁹

English cases.—A person waiting outside of a house to receive goods which a confederate was stealing in the house was held to be the 'principal' in the theft.¹⁰ Where several persons were acting together, some in the shop and some out, and the property was stolen by the hands of one of those who were in the shop, it was held that those who were outside were equally guilty as principals.¹¹ J had employed M to load sacks of oats, the property of J, from a vessel on to the trams of K, who was to carry them on the trams to the warehouse of T. By previous concert between M and K oats were taken by M from two of the sacks and put into a nose bag in the absence of K, and hidden under a tram. K returned in a few minutes and

¹ 1 Hale P. C. 439; Foster, 350.

² Doodhar Singh, (1890) 27 Cal. 144;

Chatradhari Goala, (1897) 2 C. W. N. 49.

³ Yeditha Subbaya, (1912) 23 M. L. J. 722, [1912] M. W. N. 725.

⁴ Amrita Gorinda, (1873) 10 B. H. C. 497

⁵ Ram Ranjan Roy, (1914) 42 Cal. 422.

⁶ Ibid.

⁷ Ibid.

⁸ Shib Chunder Mundle, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr) 59.

⁹ Tha Mya, (1908) 4 L. B. R. 271.

¹⁰ Khandu Vishnu Sathe, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 351.

¹¹ Joseph Owen, (1825) 1 Mood. C. C. 96.

¹² Charles Gogerly, (1818) R. & R. 343.

took the nose bag and its contents from under the tram and took them away, M being then within three or four yards of him. It was held that as both had been present at some parts of the transaction, both could be convicted as principals in the larceny.¹ S was a barman at a refreshment bar, and C went up to the bar, called for refreshments and put down a florin. S served C, took up the florin, and took from his employer's till some money, and gave C as his change 18s. 6d., which C put in his pocket and went away with it. On leaving the place he took some silver from his pocket and was counting it when he was arrested. On entering the bar signs of recognition took place between S and C, and C was present when S took the money from the till. It was held that C was liable as principal in the second degree.²

3. 'He shall be deemed to have committed such act or offence.'—These words are very important. Their effect is that the person present is to be treated in the same way as if he had committed the offence. This is not the same thing as saying 'he has committed the offence.' The person present is deemed to have committed the offence, not that he has committed it. It is upon this ground that the previous conviction of an accused for an offence cannot be taken into consideration at a subsequent conviction for abetment for the purpose of enhancing punishment under s. 75.³

When one thing is not the same as another thing, but the Legislature says that it "shall be deemed to be" the same thing, it creates a legal fiction, and in that case "the Court is entitled and bound to ascertain for what purposes and between what persons the statutory fiction is to be resorted to."⁴ And fictions created by law shall never be contradicted so as to defeat the ends for which they are invented, though for every other purpose they may be contradicted.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the committing of the principal offence.

(2) That the accused was present whilst it was being committed.

(3) That the accused was an abettor of the offence (s. 108).

It is necessary to prove acts which would constitute abetment if the accused was absent and then to show that the accused was present.

Procedure.—Same as for the offence abetted.

115. Whoever abets the commission of an offence¹ punishable with death or transportation for life, shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if any act for which the abettor is liable in consequence of the abetment, and which causes hurt² to any person, is done, the abettor shall be liable to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetment of offence punishable with death or transportation for life—if offence not committed, if act causing harm is done in consequence.

¹ Martin Kelly, (1847) 2 C. & K. 379.

² Coppins, (1873) 12 Cox 517.

³ Kashia Ansoo, (1907) 10 Bom. L. R. 26.

⁴ Ex parte Walton, (1881) 17 Ch. D. 740.

750.

⁵ Mostyn v. Fabrigas, (1774) 1 Cowp. 161.

177; Atmaram, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 681, 31 Bom. 430.

ILLUSTRATION.

A instigates B to murder Z. The offence is not committed. If B had murdered Z, he would have been subject to the punishment of death or transportation for life. Therefore A is liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and also to a fine; and, if any hurt be done to Z in consequence of the abetment, he will be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and to fine.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the abetment of certain offences which are either not committed at all, or not committed in consequence of abetment, or only in part committed.

Offence punishable with death only—see s. 303.

Offences punishable with death or transportation for life—see ss. 121, 132, 194, 302, 303, 305, 307 and 396.

Offences punishable with transportation for life—see ss. 121A, 122, 124A, 125, 128, 130, 131, 194, 222, 225, 226, 232, 238, 255, 304, 307, 311, 313, 314, 326, 329, 364, 371, 376, 377, 388, 389, 394, 400, 409, 412, 413, 436, 438, 449, 459, 467, 472, 474 and 477.

Three different states of fact may arise after an abetment:—

(1) No offence may be committed. In this case the offender is punishable under this section and s. 116 for the mere attempt to cause crime.

(2) The very act at which the abetment aims may be committed, and will be punishable under ss. 109 and 110.

(3) Some act different, but naturally flowing from the act abetted, may be perpetrated, in which case the instigator will fall under the penalties of ss. 111, 112 and 113.

1. 'Offence.'—This term here denotes a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

2. 'Hurt.'—See s. 319, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove that the offence abetted, though not committed in consequence, is one punishable with death, or transportation for life.

Procedure.—Not bailable; and see the offence abetted.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the commission by one XY of an offence of—punishable with death or transportation for life, which said offence was not committed in consequence of the abetment, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 115 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

116. Whoever abets an offence¹ punishable with imprisonment shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both ;

¹ Abetment of offence punishable with imprisonment —if offence be not committed;

and if the abettor or the person abetted is a public servant,² whose duty it is to prevent the commission of such offence, the abettor shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

if abettor or person abetted be a public servant whose duty it is to prevent offence.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B refuses to accept the bribe. A is punishable under this section.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. Here, if B does not give false evidence, A has nevertheless committed the offence defined in this section, and is punishable accordingly.

(c) A, a police-officer, whose duty it is to prevent robbery, abets the commission of robbery. Here, though the robbery be not committed, A is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for that offence, and also to fine.

(d) B abets the commission of a robbery by A, a police-officer, whose duty it is to prevent that offence. Here, though the robbery be not committed, B is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence of robbery, and also to fine.

COMMENT.

This section provides for the abetment of an offence punishable with imprisonment. There is no provision in the Code for punishing abetment of an offence punishable with fine only, e.g., offences under ss. 137, 154, 156, 278, 283, 290, and 294A (second para)

1. 'Offence.'—This term here means a thing punishable under the Code or some local or special law (s. 40).

2. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra

The enhanced punishment provided in the second clause of this section only applies to those public servants whose duty it is to prevent the commission of such offence. Public servants not falling in this category will be dealt with under the first clause. Where the accused was charged with having abetted the commission of an offence punishable under s. 161 of the Penal Code, the person abetted having been a Civil Surgeon, it was held that the enhanced imprisonment prescribed by the latter part of this section could not be awarded, as the Civil Surgeon was not a public servant within the words of the section, 'whose duty it is to prevent the commission of such offence.'¹

CASE.

A Vakil of the High Court signed and sent a letter to another Vakil of that Court, who practised in District Courts subordinate thereto. The purport of this letter, which was one of several printed forms prepared for circulation to Vakils practising in districts, was to the effect that the Vakil, to whom it was addressed, "could easily send his clients' cases, both civil and criminal," to the writer, who would conduct them in that Court. And 'as a remuneration' the fees paid by the

¹ Ramnath Surma Biscoe, (1873) 21 3 Pat. 647.
W.R. (Cr.) 9. See Rameshwar Singh, (1924) clients would be shared between the writer and the Vakil who had sent the cases. It was held that that was incitement within the meaning of this section.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove that the offence abetted, though not committed, in consequence, is one punishable with imprisonment, or that the accused, or the person abetted, is a public servant; and that it was his duty to prevent the commission of such offence.

Procedure.—Same as for the offence abetted.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the commission by one XY of an offence of—punishable with imprisonment, which said offence was not committed in consequence of the abetment, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 116 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance

Magis-

117. Whoever abets the commission of an offence¹ by the public² generally or by any number or class of persons exceeding ten,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Abetting commission of offence by the public or by more than ten persons.

ILLUSTRATION.

A affixes in a public place a placard instigating a sect consisting of more than ten members to meet at a certain time and place, for the purpose of attacking the members of an adverse sect, while engaged in a procession. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT.

Under this section it will be sufficient to shew any instigation or other mode of abetment, though neither the effect intended nor any effect follows from it. This section stood as clause 94 in the draft Code and contained another illustration as follows :—

"A inserts in a newspaper an article advising soldiers to shoot every commanding officer who uses them harshly. A has committed the offence defined in this clause."

1. 'Offence.'—This term here denotes a thing punishable under the Code or some local or special law (s. 40).

2. 'Public.'—This word includes any class of the public or any community (s. 12, supra).

3. 'Any number or class of persons exceeding ten.'—The offence abetted must have been intended to be committed by the public or by any number of persons exceeding ten collectively and conjointly.² Where, therefore, a person abetted twelve coolies to break their contracts, it was held that as each breach of contract was a separate and distinct offence, the abettor abetted twelve offences by twelve persons, and not one offence by twelve persons, and so was not punishable under this section.³ Where the accused instigated people to become members of a Jatha which would be unlawful association within the meaning of s. 16 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, it was held that his act came within the purview of this section.¹

¹ Parbati Charan Chatterji, (1895) 17 All. 498, r.c.

² Mihan Singh, (1923) 1 Lah. 1.
³ (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 24.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) abetment of the offence in question by the accused.

(2) That such offence was to be committed by the public; or by more than ten persons.

Procedure.—Same as for the offence abetted.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the commission of an offence of—by—numbering more than ten persons, by (state the act done by the accused in instigation), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 117 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

118. Whoever intending to facilitate or knowing it to be

Concealing design to commit offence punishable with death or transportation for life—

likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence¹ punishable with death or transportation for life, voluntarily² conceals,³ by any act or illegal omission,⁴ the existence of a design⁵ to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if that offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or, if if offence be committed;

the offence be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years: and in either case shall also be liable to fine.

if offence be not committed.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, knowing that dacoity is about to be committed at B, falsely informs the Magistrate that a dacoity is about to be committed at C, a place in an opposite direction, and thereby misleads the Magistrate with intent to facilitate the commission of the offence. The dacoity is committed at B in pursuance of the design. A is punishable under this section.

COMMENT.

Under s. 107 concealment of a design to commit an offence constitutes an abetment. There must be an obligation on the person concealing the offence to disclose it. The concealment to be criminal must be intentional or at least with knowledge that it will facilitate the commission of an offence.

This section and ss. 119 and 120, all contemplate the concealment of a design by persons other than the accused to commit the offence charged.² These sections apply to the concealment of all offences except those which are merely punishable with fine. They deal with concealment prior to the commission of an offence. Sections 202 and 203 deal with subsequent concealment.

¹ Kupat S v. A. (1925) 2 L. C. 118.

(O. B.) 105; Kalanda Vishnu Sahe, (1929) 1

² Regumam Prasad, (1922) 1 Ind. Jur. Bom. L. R. 251.

1. 'Offence.'—See s. 40, supra.

2. 'Voluntarily.'—See s. 39, supra.

3. 'Conceals.'—A person cannot be punishable if he is not legally bound to inform of the existence of a design and where he has not concealed the existence of the design by any overt act.¹ By s. 44 of the Criminal Procedure Code² every person whether within or without the presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit any offence punishable under sections 121—126, 130, 143—145, 147, 148, 302—304, 382, 392—399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456—460 of the Indian Penal Code shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention.

4. 'Illegal omission.'—See s. 43, supra. It must be shown that the omission was likely to facilitate the commission of an offence.³ Concealment by illegal omission can be an offence only when the omission is by some person bound by law to make report of offences.

5. 'The existence of a design.'—There must exist a design to commit at some future time an offence of the kind described, and no conviction should take place until the Court has sufficient proof that such a design existed.

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—Prove (1) the existence of the design to commit an offence.

(2) That such offence was one punishable with death, or transportation for life.

(3) That the accused concealed the existence of such design (a) by his act or illegal omission; or (b) by his knowingly false representation.

(4) That he did so voluntarily.

(5) That he thereby intended to facilitate or knew that he would thereby facilitate, the commission of such offence.

(6) That the offence concealed has been committed (if the case falls under the first clause).

Procedure.—Not bailable, if the concealment is of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life and the offence is committed. Bailable, if the offence is not committed.

Charge—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, with the intention of facilitating, or with the knowledge that you will thereby facilitate the commission of the offence of—(specify the act) (or omit to do—specify the omission) to conceal the existence of the design to commit the said offence, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 118 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Public servant concealing design to commit offence which it is his duty to prevent—

119. Whoever,¹ being a public servant, intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence² which it is his duty as such public servant to prevent,

¹ Bahadur, (1882) P. R. No. 34 of 1882. See Jhugroo, (1865) 4 W.R. (Cr.) 2, where it is held that the knowledge of a design to commit dacoity, and the voluntary concealment of the existence of that design with the knowledge that such concealment would facilitate the commission of dacoity do not amount to an abetment of dacoity.

² Act V of 1898.

³ Keeree, (1866) 1 Agra 37.

voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both ;

or, if the offence be punishable with death or transportation for life, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years ; or, if the offence be not committed, shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, an officer of police, being legally bound to give information of all designs to commit robbery which may come to his knowledge, and knowing that B designs to commit robbery, omits to give such information, with intent to facilitate the commission of that offence. Here A has by an illegal omission concealed the existence of B's design, and is liable to punishment according to the provision of this section.

COMMENT.

Section 118 deals with persons who are not public servants. In this section the same principle is extended to public servants but with severer penalty. Every omission on the part of a public servant to disclose a design to commit an offence which it is his duty to prevent will be punishable under this section.

1. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra. The section only applies to that class of public servants whose duty it is to prevent such offence.
2. 'Offence'—See s. 40, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the existence of the design to commit an offence.

(2) That the accused was a public servant.

(3) That it was the duty of the accused, as such public servant, to prevent the commission of that offence.

(4) That the accused concealed the existence of such design (a) by his act or illegal omission ; or (b) by his knowingly false representation.

(5) That the accused did so voluntarily.

(6) That the accused thereby intended to facilitate, or knew that he would thereby facilitate, the commission of such offence.

(7) That the offence concealed has been committed (if the case falls under the first clause).

Procedure.—Not bailable, if the concealment is of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life. Otherwise, the procedure is the same as that for the offence abetted.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, being a public servant, to wit—whose duty it was to prevent the commission of the offence of—with the intention of facilitating, or with the knowledge that you will thereby facilitate, the commission of the offence of—did (specify the act) (or omit to do—specify the omission) to conceal the existence of the design to commit the said offence, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 119 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Concealing design
to commit offence punishable with imprisonment—

120. Whoever, intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence¹ punishable with imprisonment, voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth, and, if the offence be not committed, to one-eighth, of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 118 deals with offences punishable with death or transportation for life: this section deals with offences punishable with imprisonment. The basic principle in both the sections is one and the same. All offences except those punishable with a fine are included in these two sections.

The illegal concealment by act or omission contemplated by this section has reference to the existence of a design on the part of third persons to commit an offence.¹

1. 'Offence.'—See s. 40, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove (1) the existence of the design to commit an offence.

(2) That such offence was punishable with imprisonment.

(3) That the accused concealed the existence of such design

(a) by his act or illegal omission, or

(b) by his knowingly false representation.

(4) That he did so voluntarily.

(5) That he thereby intended to facilitate, or knew that he would thereby facilitate, the commission of such offence.

If the case falls under the first clause, prove

(6) That the offence concealed has been committed.

Procedure.—Same as for the offence abetted.

Charge.—See s. 118, supra.

¹ Rajcoomar Banerjee, (1862) 1 Ind. Jur. (O. S.) 105.

CHAPTER V-A.

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY.

Definition of criminal conspiracy.

120-A. When two or more persons agree¹ to do, or cause to be done,—

(1) an illegal act,² or

(2) an act which is not illegal by illegal means, such an agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy :

Provided that no agreement except an agreement to commit an offence shall amount to a criminal conspiracy unless some act besides the agreement is done by one or more parties to such agreement in pursuance thereof.

Explanation.—It is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement, or is merely incidental to that object.

COMMENT.

This chapter has introduced into the criminal law of India a new offence, namely, the offence of criminal conspiracy. It was introduced by the Criminal Law Amendment Act.¹

To constitute a criminal conspiracy there must be an agreement of two or more persons, to do an act which is illegal or which is to be done by illegal means. The object in view or the methods employed should be illegal, as defined in s. 43, supra. A distinction is drawn between an agreement to commit an offence, and an agreement of which either the object or the methods employed are illegal but do not constitute an offence. In the case of the former, the criminal conspiracy is completed by the act of agreement ; in the case of the latter, there must be some act done by one or more of the parties to the agreement to effect the object thereof, that is, there must be an overt act.

Conspiracy differs from other offences in this respect, that in other offences the intention to do a criminal act is not a crime of itself until something is done amounting to the doing or the attempting to do some act to carry out the intention ; conspiracy, on the other hand, consists simply in the agreement or confederacy to do some act, no matter whether it is done or not.²

Object.—The Statement of Objects and Reasons stated :—"The sections of the Indian Penal Code which deal directly with the subject of conspiracy are those contained in Chapter V and s. 121A of that Code. Under the latter provision it is an offence to conspire to commit any of the offences punishable by s. 121 of the Indian Penal Code or to conspire to deprive the King of the sovereignty of British India or of any part thereof, or to overawe, by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Government of India or any Local Government, and to constitute a conspiracy under this section it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should take place in pursuance thereof. Under s. 107 abetment includes the engaging with one or more person or persons in any conspiracy for the doing of a thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing. In other words, except in respect of the offences particularized in s. 121A, conspiracy per se is not an offence under the Indian Penal Code.

¹ VIII of 1913.

² Amrita Lal Hazra, (1914) 42 Cal. 957 ;

Gulab Singh, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 658.

"On the other hand, by the common law of England if two or more persons agree together to do anything contrary to law, or to use unlawful means in the carrying out of an object not otherwise unlawful, the persons, who so agree, commit the offence of conspiracy. In other words, conspiracy in England may be defined as an agreement of two or more persons to do an unlawful act or to do a lawful act by unlawful means, and the parties to such a conspiracy are liable to indictment.

"Experience has shown that dangerous conspiracies are entered into in India which have for their object aims other than the commission of the offences specified in s. 121A of the Indian Penal Code, and that the existing law is inadequate to deal with modern conditions. The present Bill is designed to assimilate the provisions of the Indian Penal Code to those of the English law with the additional safeguard that in the case of a conspiracy other than a conspiracy to commit an offence some overt act is necessary to bring the conspiracy within the purview of the criminal law. The Bill makes criminal conspiracy a substantive offence, and when such a conspiracy is to commit an offence punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, and no express provision is made in the Code, provides a punishment of the same nature as that which might be awarded for the abetment of such an offence. In all other cases of criminal conspiracy the punishment contemplated is imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months or with fine or with both."¹

Scope.—The section is not applicable to offences committed before it came into force.²

1. 'Agree.'—The gist of the offence is an agreement between the accused persons. When one of the two accused is acquitted of the charge under ss. 120 B and 302, the other cannot be convicted of the charge.³

2. 'Illegal act.'—The word "illegal" is defined by s. 43.

120B. (1) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, shall, where no express provision is made in this Code for the punishment of such a conspiracy, be punished in the same manner as if he had abetted such offence.

(2) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable as aforesaid shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months, or with fine or with both.

COMMENT.

Under this section the punishment for a criminal conspiracy is more severe if the agreement is one to commit a serious offence; it is less severe if the agreement is to commit an act which, although illegal, is not an offence punishable with death, transportation, or rigorous imprisonment for more than two years.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused agreed to do or caused to be done an act.

(2) That such act was illegal or was done by illegal means.

¹ Gazette of India, 1913, Part V, p. 44.
² Monmohan Roy, (1915) 20 C. W. N. 292.

³ Osman Sardar, (1923) 39 C. L. J. 264.

Where the act itself is not illegal prove further

(3) That some overt act was done by one of the accused in pursuance of the agreement.

On a charge of conspiracy general evidence of the existence of the conspiracy may first be given, before particular facts are proved to show that one or more of the accused took part in it. Before evidence is let in under s. 10 of the Evidence Act, the defence is entitled to insist upon proof of reasonable ground for belief that the persons named in the charge have conspired together.¹

In cases of conspiracy the agreement between the conspirators cannot generally be directly proved, but only inferred from other facts proved in the case.²

Where two persons took a house in which a considerable number of pieces of fire-arms was found with tools and implements, and work had been actually done to some of the parts of fire-arms, it was held that the Court ought to infer a conspiracy to manufacture arms.³

Where the proof of a conspiracy depends upon proof of the participation of the accused in an overt act which itself amounts to an offence, the proper course is to put the accused on their trial for that offence.⁴

Procedure.—If the offence falls under clause (1)—Cognizable, if the offence which is the object of the conspiracy is cognizable, but not otherwise—Warrant or Summons, as the offence for which conspiracy is entered into—Bailable, if the offence which is the object of the conspiracy is bailable, otherwise not—Not compoundable—Court of Session if the offence which is the object of the conspiracy is triable exclusively by such Court: in the case of all other offences, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the First Class.

If the offence falls under clause (2)—Warrant—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the First Class.

In cases of indictment for conspiracy, when two persons are indicted and are tried together either both must be convicted or both must be acquitted. Where, therefore, three persons were charged with having entered into a conspiracy, and two of them were acquitted, the third person could not be convicted of conspiracy, whether the conviction be upon the verdict of a jury or upon his own confession.⁵

Once a charge of conspiracy is framed, anything done in pursuance of the conspiracy can be tried at the trial for conspiracy. It is not an irregularity or an improper exercise of discretion in putting in the form of charges specific acts specially relied on as against each individual accused to show that they joined in the conspiracy. Where the accused is charged with an offence of conspiracy and acts of cheating in pursuance of conspiracy, the charge is not bad and it is open to the prosecution to prove such acts in order that from them the existence of the conspiracy may be proved.⁶

Sanction.—Sanction of the Local Government is necessary before instituting proceedings under this section.⁷

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, agreed to do (or caused to be done) [an illegal act, to wit—] [an act, viz.,—by illegal means, to wit—] and that same act, viz.,—, was done in pursuance of the agreement] and thereby

¹ Anarita Lal Hazra, (1914) 42 Cal. 357.

² Khagendra Nath Chaudhuri, (1914) 10 C. W. N. 706.

³ Harsha Nath Chatterjee, (1914) 42 Cal. 1153.

⁴ Kali Das Baru, (1915) 39 C. L. J. 151.

⁵ Gulab Singh, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 680;

Bahmooland, (1915) P. R. No. 17 of 1915; Osman Sardar, (1923) 39 C. L. J. 261.

⁶ Abdul Salim, (1921) 35 C. L. J. 279, 28 C. W. N. 680; Billinghurst v. Blackburn, (1923) 27 C. W. N. 821.

⁷ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196-A.

committed an offence punishable under s. 120 B of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance [or the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court)].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

The charge of conspiracy must not be indefinite. The counts must state the illegal purpose and design of the agreement entered into between the accused with such proper and sufficient certainty as to lead to the necessary conclusion that it was an agreement to do an act in violation of the law.¹

When two or more persons have conspired together for committing some offence, and one or more of them have committed that offence in pursuance of the conspiracy but others have not, it is permissible to charge and try them together for the conspiracy as also for the substantive offence.²

A charge under this section is not bad because it states no definite date on which the accused agreed, or the names of persons in respect of whom the conspirators agreed to commit an offence.³

Punishment.—The punishment awardable under this section varies according as the offence has or has not been committed in consequence of the conspiracy. If an offence has been committed, the punishment is that provided by s. 109 of the Code, though, strictly speaking, there should not be a conviction in such cases of conspiracy but of abetment. If it has not been committed, the punishment is governed by s. 116 of the Code.⁴ Where, for instance, there is only a conspiracy to manufacture arms, without an actual manufacture, the sentence should be imposed under this section read with s. 19 (a) of the Arms Act and s. 116 of the Code, and the maximum term of imprisonment awardable under these sections is nine months' rigorous imprisonment.⁵

¹ Amrita Lal Hazra, (1914) 42 Cal. 937

² Ibid

³ Balmokand, (1915) P. R. No. 17 of 1915

⁴ Harsha Nath Chatterjee, (1914) 42 Cal.

1153; Khagendra Nath Chaudhuri, (1914) 19 C. W. N. 706; Balmokand, sup

⁵ Ibid

CHAPTER VI.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE.

121. Whoever¹ wages war² against the Queen,³ or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war,⁴ shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A joins an insurrection against the Queen. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A in India abets an insurrection against the Queen's Government of Ceylon by sending arms to the insurgents. A is guilty of abetting the waging of war against the Queen.

COMMENT.

Principle.—The section embraces every description of war, whether by insurrection or invasion, or war beyond our territories; and complicity in an abetment of insurrection, invasion, or foreign war; and further a British subject residing in British territory, who abets the waging of war against the British Government outside British territory, is guilty, no matter whether the British Government takes the initiative and invades the hostile territory or awaits the attack of the enemy, or whether the persons waging war are foreigners or persons owing allegiance to the Queen.¹

To constitute this offence no specified number of persons is necessary.² "There is no difference," says Foster,³ "between those insurrections which have carried the appearance of an army formed under leaders, and provided with military weapons, and with drums, colours, etc., and those other disorderly tumultuous assemblies which have been drawn together and conducted to purposes manifestly unlawful, but without any of the ordinary shew and apparatus of war before men."

the other circumstances of swords, guns, drums, colours, etc., have been added. But I think the merits of the case have never turned singly on any of these circumstances. In the cases of Damarce and Purchase, . . . there was nothing given in evidence of the usual pageantry of war, no military weapons, no banners or drums, nor any regular consultation previous to the rising; and yet the want of these circumstances weighed nothing with the court, though the prisoners' counsel insisted much on that matter. The number of the insurgents supplied the want of military weapons; and they were provided with axes, crowes and other tools of the like nature, proper for the mischief they intended to effect.

"The true criterion therefore in all these cases is, quo animo did the parties assemble? For if the assembly be upon account of some private quarrel, or to take revenge on particular persons, the statute of treasons hath already determined that point in favour of the subject. . . Upon the same principle and within the reason and equity of the statute, risings to maintain a private claim of right, or to destroy particular inclosures, or to remove nuisances, which affected or were thought to affect in point of interest the parties assembled for these purposes, or to break prisons in order to release particular persons without any other circumstance of aggravation, have not been holden to amount to levying war within the statute."

¹ Maomed Shuffee, All. Unrep.
² 3 Coke's Inst. 9.

³ Crown Cases, 208, 209, 210.

The offence of engaging in a conspiracy to wage war, and that of abetting the waging of war against the King, under this section, are offences against the Penal Code only, and are not treason or misprison of treason.¹

1. 'Whoever.'—The authors of the Code say:—"The laws of a particular nation or country cannot be applied to any persons but such as owe allegiance to the Government of the country, which allegiance is either perpetual, as in the case of a subject by birth or naturalization, etc., or temporary as in the case of a foreigner residing in the country. They are applicable of course to all such as thus owe allegiance to the Government, whether as subjects or foreigners, excepting as excepted by reservations or limitations which are parts of the laws in question."²

2. 'Wages war.'—These words "seem naturally to import a levying of war by one who throwing off the duty of allegiance arrays himself in open defiance of his sovereign in like manner and by the like means as a foreign enemy would do, having gained footing within the realm."³ There must be an insurrection, there must be force accompanying that insurrection, and it must be for an object of a general nature.⁴

The word "wages" has the same meaning as "levying" used in the English statute. In *Gordon's case*⁵ Lord Mansfield said: "There are two kinds of levying war:—one against the person of the King; to imprison, to dethrone, or to kill him; or to make him change measures, or remove counsellors:—the other, which is said to be levied against the Majesty of the King, or, in other words, against him in his regal capacity; as when a multitude rise and assemble to attain by force and violence any object of a general public nature; that is levying war against the Majesty of the King; and most reasonably so held, because it tends to dissolve all the bonds of society, to destroy property, and to overturn Government, and by force of arms, to restrain"

Every insurrection of the king, be it to dethrone of government, or to remove person measures of government, or to remove persons all amount to levying war within the statute, whether attended with the pomp and circumstances of open war or not. And every conspiracy to levy war for these purposes, though not treason within the clause of levying war, is yet an overt act within the other clause of compassing the King's death.

"Insurrections in order to throw down all inclosures, to alter the established" they are not levelled at the person of the king, they are against his royal majesty; and, besides, they have a direct tendency to dissolve all the bonds of society, and to the insurgents have no special interest,—rising to effect these ends by force and numbers, are, by construction of law, within the clause of levying war. For they are levelled at the king's Crown and royal dignity."⁶

¹ Amiruddin, (1871) 7 Beng. L. R. 63.

² 2nd Rep., s. 13.

³ Ibid., s. 10.

⁴ Frost, (1839) 9 C. & P. 129, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 85.

⁵ (1784) 21 St. Tr. 486, 644.

⁶ Foster on Crown Cases, pp. 210, 211; Gordon Trials, (1784) 21 St. Tr. 486, 490; Kunhi Kadur, (1921) 15 L. W. 311, 30 M. L. T. 123.

An assembly armed and arrayed in a warlike manner for any treasonable purpose is bellum levatum though not bellum percutsum. Lifting and marching are sufficient overt acts without coming to a battle or action.¹

No amount of violence, however great, and with whatever circumstances of a warlike kind it may be attended, will make an attack of one subject on another high treason. On the other hand, any amount of violence, however insignificant, directed against the King will be high treason, and as soon as violence has any political object, it is impossible to say that it is not directed against the King, in the sense of being armed opposition to the lawful exercise of his power.² When the object of a mob is not mere resistance to the District Magistrate but the total subversion of the British power and the establishment of the Khilafat Government, a person forming part of it and taking part in its actions is guilty of waging war.³

"There is a diversity between levying of war and committing of a great riot, a rout or an unlawful assembly. For example, as if three or four or more do rise to burn or put down an enclosure in Dale, which the lord of the Manor in Dale hath made there in that particular place; this or the like is a riot, a rout, or an unlawful assembly, and no treason. But if they had risen of purpose to alter religion established within the realm or laws, or to go from town to town generally, and to cast down enclosures, this is levying of war, (though there be no great number of the conspirators within the purview of this Statute), because the pretence is public and general and not private in particular."⁴

The Calcutta High Court has held that the expression 'wages war' in this section must be construed in its ordinary sense, and a conspiracy to wage war, or the collection of men, arms and ammunition for that purpose is not waging war.⁵

3. 'Against the Queen.'—The word 'Queen' denotes the sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland (s. 13).

4. 'Abets the waging of such a war.'—It is not essential that as a result of the abetment the war should be waged in fact. But the main purpose of the abetment must be to instigate the waging of war, i.e., the use of violence for the purpose of effecting innovations of a general and public nature.⁶

The authors of the Code say: 'We have made the abetting of hostilities against the Government in certain cases, a separate offence, instead of leaving it to the operation of the general law laid down in the chapter on abetment. We have done so for two reasons. In the first place, war may be waged against the Government by persons in whom it is no offence to wage such war, by foreign princes and their subjects. Our general rules on the subject of abetment would apply to the case of a person residing in the British territories who should abet a subject of the British Government in waging war against that Government; but they would not reach the case of a person who, while residing in the British territories, should abet the waging of war by any foreign prince against the British Government. In the second place, we agree with the great body of legislators in thinking, that though in general it is not an offence to abet the waging of war, it is an offence to abet the waging of war by a foreign prince against the British Government. It has been carried into effect in many countries, and it is a high offence against the state; for state-crimes, and especially the most heinous

¹ Foster, 218.

² Kebley's History of Criminal Law of England, Vol. II, p. 209. Foster, 208, 211.

³ Kunda Kunda, (1921) 30 J. L. T. 125, 13 J. L. W. 311.

⁴ Stroke, 3 Inst., 9.

⁵ Virindra Kumar Ghose, (1939) 37 Cal. 467.

⁶ Harrai Mohani, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 855, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 235.

and formidable state-crimes, have this peculiarity, that if they are successfully committed, the criminal is almost always secure from punishment. The murderer is in greater danger after his victim is despatched than before. The thief is in greater danger after the purse is taken than before. But the rebel is out of danger as soon as he has subverted the Government. As the penal law is impotent against a successful rebel, it is consequently necessary that it should be made strong and sharp against the first beginnings of rebellion, against treasonable designs which have been carried no further than plots and preparations. We have therefore not thought it expedient to leave such plots and preparations to the ordinary law of abetment. Under that general law, a conspiracy for the subversion of the Government would not be punished at all if the conspirators were detected before they had done more than discuss plans, adopt resolutions and interchange promises of fidelity. A conspiracy for the subversion of the Government, which should be carried as far as the gunpowder treason or the assassination plot against William the Third, would be punished very much less severely than the counterfeiting of a rupee, or the presenting of a forged cheque. We have, therefore, thought it absolutely necessary to make separate provision for the previous abetting of great state offences. The subsequent abetting of such offences may, we think, without inconvenience, be left to be dealt with according to the general law.¹ It may be noted in view of the last sentence that s. 121A which deals with conspiracies was added to the Code subsequently.

Under the English law, mere words spoken or written, however wicked and abominable, if they do not relate to any act or design then actually on foot against the life of the King or the levying of a war against him and in the contemplation of the speaker, do not amount to treason. Under the Penal Code, the waging or levying of a war and the abetting of it are put upon the same footing by this section. That is, the abetting of the waging of war is under the Code as much an offence of treason as the waging of war itself.

According to the general law as to abetment (s. 103, Expln. 2), to constitute the offence of abetment it is not necessary that the act abetted should be committed, or that the effect requisite to constitute the offence should be caused. This applies to the abetment of any other offence under the Code. The only difference created between the former offence and other offences is that, while under the general law as to abetment a distinction is made for the purposes of punishment between abetment which has succeeded, and abetment which has failed, this section does away with that distinction so far as the offence of waging war is concerned and deals equally with an abettor whose instigation has led to a war and one whose instigation has taken no effect whatever.²

The word "abets" in this section does not mean something less than that word as used in s. 107. The abetment contemplated under the former section need not be abetment of some war in progress; there may be and usually is instigation of this kind is abetting; as a man only tries to inflame of anything more than sedition.

It is only when he definitely and clearly incites to action that he is guilty of instigating and therefore of abetting the waging of war.³

The accused published a book of poems where in a spirit of blood-thirstiness and murderous eagerness directed against the Government and "White" rulers ran through the poems; the urgency of taking up the sword was conveyed in unambiguous language; and an appeal of blood-thirsty incitement was made to the people to take up the sword, form secret societies, and adopt guerrilla warfare for the purpose of rooting out "the demon" of foreign rule. It was held that the

¹ Note C, pp. 236, 237.

² Ganesh Damodar Satarkar, (1909) 12

Bom L. R. 105, 116.

³ Ibid, pp. 119, 120.

poems conveyed to readers an instigation to wage war; and that the offence of abetting the waging of war was committed.¹

Inducing or assisting subjects of a State at war to return to their own country after declaration of war will amount to abetment.²

If a British subject does an act which strengthens or tends to strengthen the enemies of the King in the conduct of a war against the King, or which weakens or tends to weaken the power of the King and of the country to resist or attack the enemies of the King and country, he gives aid and comfort to the King's enemies within the meaning of the Treason Act.³ The United Kingdom being at war with Germany, a British subject went to Germany and there endeavoured to persuade other British subjects, who were prisoners of war in Germany, to join the armed forces of the enemy, and took part in an attempt to land, arms and ammunition in Ireland for the use of the enemy, it was held that he was guilty of high treason.⁴ Such conduct will amount to abetment under this section.

Constructive levying of war.—"Constructive levying of war is in truth more directed against the Government than the person of the King; though in legal construction it is a levying of war against the King himself. This is when an insurrection is raised to reform some national grievance, to alter the established law or religion, to punish Magistrates, to introduce innovation of a public concern, to obstruct the execution of some general law by an armed force, or for any other purpose which usurps the Government in matters of a public and general nature. On the trial of Lord George Gordon the Court of King's Bench declared their unanimous opinion that an attempt, by intimidation and violence to force the repeal of a law, was a levying war against the King. The question was the 18 Geo. III, c. 60, for relieving Roman Catholics from the disabilities, and the treasonable act given in evidence was the assembling a great multitude of people, and encouraging them to surround the two Houses of Parliament and commit different acts of violence there and elsewhere, with a view to intimidate them to a repeal of the Statute. Insurrections of this nature, though not levelled directly against the person of the King, are yet an attack upon his regal office, and tend to dissolve all Government, society, and order. The King is bound in duty to enforce the Acts of the Legislature and uphold their authority: any resistance, therefore, to these, must, in its consequences, extend to the endangering of his person and Government, by involving the State in a general distraction; on which account this species of treason falls properly within the clause of levying war against the King. Of the same nature is an assembling together for the purpose of destroying all meeting houses or all bawdy houses, under colour of reforming a public grievance; or an insurrection to reduce by force the general price of victuals, to enhance the common rate of wages, to level all enclosures, to expel all foreigners, to release all prisoners, or to reform by numbers or an armed force any real or imaginary grievance, of a public and general nature, in which the insurgents have no peculiar interest. Against such insurrections Magistrates, Sheriffs, and indeed all private persons, may use force to suppress them without any special commission, in the same manner as they may oppose foreign enemies coming hostilely into the kingdom."⁵

As to the meaning of the word 'abets' see also s. 107, supra.

Foreigners.—All persons owing allegiance to the Sovereign may be guilty of this offence, but not foreigners, who owe no allegiance and for whom the Indian Legislature has no power to make laws. Therefore, a prince or subject of a foreign State by which war is lawfully waged against our Government, is not within the ¹ House of Commons Debates, (1899) 12 B. 1, R. 103.

² See, e.g., [1915] 1 K. B. 616.

³ Government, [1917] 1 K. B. 61.

⁴ Id.

⁵ 1 East P. C. Chap. 2, s. 17. To the same effect is Foster, (1794) 208, 211 cited in Lord Gordon's case, (1784) 21 St. Tr. 490, 499.

meaning of the section. But foreigners owing local allegiance are within the section.¹

Jurisdiction.—Where the prisoner was charged with having, at Calcutta, abetted the waging of war against the Queen, and was tried at the Sessions Court of Patna, it was held that the Court of Session at Patna had jurisdiction to try him, because he was a member of a conspiracy, other members of which had done acts within the district of Patna in pursuance of the original concerted plan, and with reference to the common object. The Court of Patna had jurisdiction also, because the prisoner had sent money from Calcutta to Patna by hundis, and, until that money reached its destination, the sending continued on the part of the prisoner.²

Amendment.—The words “also be liable to fine” were substituted for the words “forfeit all his property” by Act XVI of 1921, s. 2.

CASES.

The accused was seen in the front rank of a crowd of two or three thousand persons which attacked a force of police and military with swords, knives and bludgeons. The police had to fire in self-defence and it was only after nine persons were killed and three wounded that the mob retreated. The accused was then arrested and at his direction the mob dispersed. The accused had for some time previously been engaged in a propaganda to the effect that no revenue should be

Railways and telegraphs must be destroyed. In the crowd there was carried by the side of the accused a flag in the front of the mob in which there was the following inscription: “God the greatest. The Khulafat go to work light-mindedly and you will certainly succeed and God will be with you.” It was held that the accus

ing o
by the people of India by all peaceful and legitimate means,” by substituting the words “possible and proper” for the words “peaceful and legitimate.” In the course of the speech, he advocated the immediate starting of a parallel Government independent of all British control, by setting up on a separate and permanent foundation Courts, schools, art, industry, commerce, army, police and national parliament, with a view to obtain Swaraj. The speaker contemplated the present establishment of the above by peaceful and non-violent means; but he dipped into the future and foresaw that if the British Government resorted to repression and martial law, he apprehended that the Mahomedans at least would “kill them whenever you find “So long as the Government confines to the use of chains and fetters non-co-operation can remain peaceful as it is today, but if things are furthered Government has recourse to gallows or machine violent.” It was held the aims and objects vernment, the accused d a clear and direct incitement to action as distinguished from a state of mind.⁴

¹ M. & M. Sec R. v. Lynch, [1903] 1 K. B. 444, where a British subject joined the Boers to fight against the British.

² Amir Khan, (1871) 9 Beng. L. R. 36.

³ In re Umayyathantagath Puthen, (1922) 15 L. W. 311.

⁴ Hasrat Mohani, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 885.

The District Magistrate of a district marched to a place called Tirarangadi with a posse of soldiers and reserve police to arrest certain Khilafat leaders. Next morning after arrests had been effected a large body of Mopillas were marching from the west. The District Magistrate and the Deputy Inspector-General took a column of 120 police and 60 soldiers to meet them. One and a half miles from Tirarangadi they saw a big mob fifty yards away. The Deputy Superintendent went forward and ordered the mob to disperse but it came straight on in regular formation with two flags and a number of men in front. There were twenty-four swords. The police charged them with the bayonet and some of the police fired their guns. The mob then retired about thirty yards and those who had weapons dropped them. The accused was seen in front of the mob with a stick. It was held that it was doubtful whether the part taken by the accused could be said to be waging war under this section.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused waged war, or attempted to do so, or abetted the same.

(2) That such war was against the King-Emperor.

It is not incumbent on the prisoner to shew what the object and meaning of the acts done was, but it is the duty of the prosecutors to make out their case against the prisoner.² In a case in which the accused was charged with abetting the waging of war against the Queen it was held that the Calcutta Gazette and the Gazette of India were admissible in evidence to prove the proclamation and official communications of the Government relating to the war.³

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary before prosecution could be instituted under this section.⁴

Where an order under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code authorized a particular police officer to prefer a complaint of offences under ss. 121A, 122, 123 and 124 of the Penal Code, "or under any other section of the said Code which may be found applicable to the case," and the examination of the complainant also referred to the same sections, it was held that no complaint under this section was thereby authorized by the Local Government or in fact preferred, that the Magistrate had no power to commit thereunder, and that the defect was not cured by a subsequent order obtained while the case was before the Sessions Court, authorizing a complaint under the section which was not in fact made thereafter; nor did s. 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code apply in such a case.⁵

The Local Government cannot delegate to any other body or person the controlling power and discretion of determining whether cognizance shall be taken by the Court of an offence mentioned in s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and its judgment must be specifically directed to the particular section, and no other, under which the prosecution is to be carried on, and the order or authority should be preceded by a deliberate determination in this respect. An order authorizing a complaint under certain specified section "or under any other section found applicable," if it means found by any one other than Government, involves a delegation which cannot be sustained.⁶

The sanction of the Local Government must be strictly proved in the manner laid down in s. 78 of the Evidence Act, and the identity of the prisoner with the person named in the section must be established.⁷

¹ Palathingal Valia Peedikakkal, [1924] M. W. N. 548.

² Frost, (1839) 9 C. & P. 129.

³ Ameeroddeen, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 25.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

⁵ Barindra Kumar Ghose, (1909) 37 Cal. 467; Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 112, dissented from.

⁶ Barindra Kumar Ghose, sup

⁷ Aung Do, (1886) S. J. L. B. 382.

In enacting this section, the Legislature has not thought fit to limit in any way the period within which a prosecution for an offence against it may be commenced as in the case of the English statute.¹

Joinder of charges.—Charges under ss. 121A, 122 and 123 can be joined together.²

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused person) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, waged war (or attempted to wage war, or abetted the waging of war) against His Majesty the King, Emperor of India, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 121 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (when the charge is framed by a Presidency Magistrate, for Court of Session substitute High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.³

121-A. Whoever¹ within or without British India² conspires³

Conspiracy to commit offences punishable by section 121.

to commit any of the offences punishable by section 121, or to deprive the Queen of the sovereignty of British India,⁴ or of any part thereof, or conspires to overawe, by means of criminal force⁵ or the show of criminal force, the Government of India⁶ or any Local Government,⁷ shall be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, or with imprisonment of either description which may extend to ten years and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—To constitute a conspiracy under this section, it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission shall take place in pursuance thereof.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section provides for the offence of conspiring to wage war against the King. Before this section was introduced⁴ such a conspiracy was punishable only when it amounted to an abetment, that is, when an act or illegal omission took place in pursuance of that conspiracy. The present section immensely tightens the grip of the law on treasonable combinations. It is similar to the Treason-Felony Act⁵ passed in 1848.

It was thought right to make the offence of conspiring by criminal force, or by show of criminal force, more severely penal than the offence of actually taking part in an unlawful assembly, having for its object the overawing of the Government. The reason was this, that persons who, by conspiring to bring about such a result, set the whole matter in motion, seemed more criminal and far more deserving of punishment than those who were their mere tools, and only took part in such an assembly.

The essence of an offence under this section is the agreement to do all or any of the unlawful acts mentioned in the section.⁶

The provisions of the section are comprehensive and no formidable elements either in men or means are required to satisfy the definition of a conspiracy to wage war. No act or illegal omission is necessary for such a conspiracy, the mere agreement of two or more being sufficient. The determination of the Court in any case that a conspiracy to wage war has been established may not therefore necessarily imply the existence of a serious menace to the constitution or the stability of constituted authority in India.

¹ Ameeroddeen, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 25, 27.

² Barindra Kumar Ghose, (1909) 37 Cal. 167.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, Sch. V. No

xxviii (1).

⁴ Act XXVII of 1870, s. 4.

⁵ 11 & 12 Vic., c. 12, s. 3.

⁶ Nilakanta, [1912] M. W. N. 207.

Chapters IV, V and XXIII apply to this offence.¹

1. Interpretation.—The offence is committed with two kinds of conspiracies,—
 (a) without British India (a) to commit any of the offence (b) to deprive the King of the sovereignty of British India or any part thereof.

2. Conspiring to overawe by means of criminal force, or the show of criminal force, the Government.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 121. When people take part, however little, in committing this offence, the fact that they were foolish or ignorant does not mitigate the offence.²

2. 'British India.'—See s. 15, supra.

3. 'Conspires.'—See s. 107, supra. A conspiracy is a combination of two or more persons to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act by unlawful means. It consists not merely in the intention of two or more, but in the agreement of two or more to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act by unlawful means.³ The explanation to this section says that to constitute a conspiracy under this section it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should take place in pursuance thereof.⁴

Where several persons are charged with the same conspiracy it is a legal impossibility that some should be found guilty of one conspiracy and some of another. An accused not shewn to be a member of the conspiracy charged is entitled to demand an acquittal however bad his record may be and however much he may be suspected of this or that offence.

Association for music, gymnastic exercises and fencing with sticks amongst young men living in the same village or attending the same school are ordinary incidents of village or school life, and could hardly with propriety be proved as forming elements in any alleged scheme or conspiracy to wage war against the King-Emperor, and all the more so when they are shewn to have been accompanied by a complete absence of secrecy and rather by a courting of publicity.⁵

4. 'To deprive the Queen of the sovereignty of India.'—This expression corresponds to the clause "to deprive or depose him (King) or them (his successors) from the style, honour or the King's name of the Imperial Crown of this realm, or of any other of His Majesty's dominions or countries," existing in the English Statute against conspiracies.⁶

5. 'Criminal force.'—See s. 350, infra.

6. 'Government of India.'—See s. 16, infra.

7. 'Local Government.'—See s. 3 (29) of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897).

Amendment.—The words "and shall also be liable to fine" were added by Act XVI of 1921, s. 3.

PRACTICE.

An indictment or information for conspiracy must contain a statement of the facts relied upon as constituting the offence, in ordinary and concise language, with as much certainty as the nature of the case will admit.⁷

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused had entered into a conspiracy. Though to establish a charge of conspiracy there must be an agreement, there need not be proof of direct meeting or combination, nor need the parties be brought into each

¹ Act XXVII of 1870, s. 13.

² Ngo Chow, (1907) 1 B. L. T. 27.

³ Barindra Kumar Ghose, (1909) 37 Cal. 407.

⁴ Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, (1911) 38 Cal. 559; Nalanda, [1912] M. W. N. 207.

⁵ Nons Gopal Gupta, (1911) 15 C. W. N. 593, 594.

⁶ 36 Geo. III., c. 7.

⁷ Pulin Behary Das, [1912] 15 C. L. J. 517, 18 C. W. N. 1105.

other's presence. The agreement may be inferred from circumstances raising a presumption of a common concerted plan to carry out the unlawful design. Nor is it necessary that all should have joined in the scheme from the first; those who come in at a later stage are equally guilty, provided the agreement be proved.¹

(2) That the conspiracy was to commit an offence punishable under s. 121 or to deprive the King-Emperor of the sovereignty of British India or to overawe by means of criminal force or show of criminal force the Government of India or any Local Government.

With reference to evidence admissible as part of the res gestæ in prosecutions for conspiracy, or generally of an offence committed by confederates, it is an established rule that any act done by one of the party in pursuance of the original concerted plan and with reference to this common object is, in the contemplation of the law, the act of the whole party.²

If it be intended to give in evidence against the accused the acts of any other person it must be shewn that such person was also a member of the same conspiracy, and that the act done was in furtherance of the common design. The prosecutor may either prove the conspiracy, which renders the acts of the conspirators admissible in evidence, or he may prove the acts of the different parties and so prove the conspiracy.

When persons have been taken into custody and are in a condition which makes it impossible for them to act in aid or furtherance of the conspiracy, that is, when, so far as they are concerned, the conspiracy has come to an end, the acts of persons who were members of the conspiracy and who are still free to act in pursuance thereof, are not admissible as against them; these acts can no longer be deemed the acts of co-conspirators.

There is a distinction between persons who enter into a conspiracy for the sole purpose of committing the offence, and persons who enter into the criminal conspiracy for the purpose of committing the offence or from some other motive, such as the promotion of the national cause or the promotion of the nation against them. These latter persons may be truly called accomplices. There is not on the part of such persons an original purpose of discovering the secret designs of the conspirators and of disclosing them for the benefit of the public, which is the vital element in this class of cases.

The prosecution is not obliged to prove that the persons accused actually met and laid their heads together and after a formal consultation came to an express agreement to do evil. On the contrary, if the facts as proved are such that the Jury as reasonable men can say there was a common design and the prisoners were acting in concert to do what is wrong, that is evidence from which the Jury may suppose that a conspiracy was actually formed.

It is from this point of view that overt acts may properly be looked to as evidence of the existence of a concerted intention; indeed, the conspiracy is usually closely bound up with the overt acts, because, in many cases, it is only by means of the overt acts that the existence of the conspiracy can be made out. But the criminality of the conspiracy is independent of the criminality of the overt acts.

It is not necessary to establish by direct evidence that the accused persons did enter into an agreement to conspire.

The criminality of the conspiracy lies in the concerted intention, and once reasonable grounds are made out for belief in the existence of the conspiracy amongst the accused, the acts of each conspirator in furtherance of its object are evidence against each of the others; and this, whether such acts were done before or after his entry into the combination, in his presence, or in his absence.³

¹ Barindra Kumar Ghose, (1909) 37 Cal. 467.

² Pulin Behary Das, (1912) 15 C. L. J. 517, 16 C. W. N. 1105.

³ See Indian Evidence Act, s. 10.

(2) That the accused knew of such design.

(3) That he concealed the same.

(4) That he intended thereby to facilitate the waging of such war; or that he knew that it was likely that such concealment would facilitate the same.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you—knowing that on or about the—day of—, at—, certain persons had designed to wage war against the King-Emperor, concealed the existence of such design by (mention the act or omission) intending by such concealment to facilitate (or knowing it to be likely that such concealment would facilitate) the waging of such war, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 123 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

124. Whoever, with the intention of inducing or compelling the Governor General of India,¹ or the Governor of any Presidency,² or a Lieutenant-Governor, or a Member of the Council of the Governor General of India, or of the Council of any Presidency, to exercise or refrain from exercising in any manner any of the lawful powers of such Governor General, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor or Member of Council, assaults³ or wrongfully restrains,⁴ or attempts wrongfully to restrain, or overawes, by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, or attempts so to overawe, such Governor General, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor or Member of Council, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section is an amplification of the third clause of s. 121-A. It punishes severely assaults, etc., made on high officers of Government.

1. 'Governor General of India.'—See s. 16, supra.

2. 'Presidency.'—See s. 18, supra.

3. 'Assault.'—See s. 351, infra.

4. 'Wrongful restraint.'—See s. 339, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove (1) that the person assaulted, etc., was one of the persons described in this section.

(2) That the accused assaulted such person, or attempted to do so; or that the accused wrongfully restrained him or attempted to do so; or that the accused used criminal force or show thereof.

(3) That the accused did as mentioned in (2) in order to overawe that person, or in the attempt to do so (see Assault, Criminal force, Wrongful restraint).

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 199.

(4) That the accused did as above with the intention of inducing or compelling that person to exercise, or to refrain from exercising, any of his lawful powers.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused person) as follows:—

That you, on or about the —day of —, at —, with the intention of inducing the Hon'ble A. B., Member of the Council of the Governor General of India, to refrain from exercising a lawful power as such Member, assaulted such Member, and thereby committed an offence punishable under section 124 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session [or High Court].

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge. (vide Criminal Procedure Code, Sch. V. xxviii, 2).

124-A. Whoever¹ by words, either spoken or written,² or by signs, or by visible representation,³ or otherwise, brings or attempts⁴ to bring into hatred or contempt,⁵ or excites or attempts to excite disaffection⁶ towards, Her Majesty⁷ or the Government established by law in British India,⁸ shall be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

*Explanation 1.*⁹—The expression “disaffection” include disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2.—Comments expressing disapprobation¹⁰ of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

COMMENT.

Sedition is a crime against society, nearly allied to that of treason, and it frequently precedes treason by a short interval. Sedition in itself is a comprehensive term, and it embraces all those practices, whether by word, deed, or writing, which are calculated to disturb the tranquillity of the State, and lead ignorant persons to endeavour to subvert the Government and laws of the Empire. The objects of sedition generally are to induce discontent and insurrection, and stir up opposition to the Government, and bring the administration of justice into contempt; and the very tendency of sedition is to incite the people to insurrection and rebellion. Sedition has been described as disloyalty in action, and the law considers as sedition all those practices which have for their object to excite discontent or disaffection, to create public disturbance, or to lead to civil war; to bring into hatred or contempt the Sovereign or the Government, the laws or constitutions of the realm, and generally all endeavours to promote public disorder.²

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196

² Sullivan and Pigott, (1888) 11 Cox 44, 45.

By Act IV of 1898 the present section was substituted for the former section which stood thus:—

"Whoever by words, either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, excites, or attempts to excite, feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished with transportation for life or for any term, to which fine may be added or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

"Explanation.—Such a disapprobation of the measures of the Government as is compatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government, and to support the lawful authority of the Government against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist that authority, is not disaffection. Therefore, the making of comments on the measures of the Government, with the intention of exciting only this species of disapprobation, is not an offence within this clause."

The above section together with s. 121-A was avowedly inserted in this Chapter relating to offences against the State, with a view to fill up an inadvertent omission of a special provision for the punishment of the offence of abetment of rebellion. In the words of Sir Fitz James Stephen, it was felt that as the causes which produce rebellion are wide, and spread over a longer period, a wider definition of abetment in the case of rebellion was necessary than sufficed in the case of theft or murder. In giving effect to this view, the provisions were followed, and the section, as inserted in 1837, was finally incorporated in the present law of England of the present day "though much more compressed, and more distinctly expressed."²

The present section differs from the repealed section in four ways:

(1) In the repealed section, the offence consisted in exciting or attempting to excite feelings of "disaffection," in the present section, in addition to this, the feeling of "hatred" or "contempt" is made punishable.

(2) In the old section the object of the feeling was "the Government established by law in British India," in the new section, in addition to this "Her Majesty."

(3) The old section was "Exciting disaffection," under the new section it is "Exciting hatred or contempt."

(4) The old section had one Explanation, the new has three, and they differ from the former.

Principle.—The offence of sedition consists in exciting or attempting to excite in others certain bad feelings towards (a) the King-Emperor, or (b) towards the Government. Defamatory statements concerning the Sovereign will be punished under this section.

The offence does not consist in "exciting or attempting to excite mutiny or rebellion, or any sort of actual disturbance, great or small. Whether any disturbance or outbreak was caused by these articles, is absolutely immaterial. If the accused intended by the articles to excite rebellion or disturbance, his act would doubtless fall within s. 124-A, and would probably fall within other sections of the Penal Code. But even if he neither excited nor intended to excite any rebellion or outbreak or forcible resistance to the authority of the Government, still if he tried to excite feelings of enmity to the Government, that is sufficient to make him guilty under the section."³ A direct incitement to stir up disorder or rebellion is not necessary.⁴

Scope.—This section places absolutely on the same footing the successful exciting of feelings of disaffection and the unsuccessful attempt to excite them.

¹ Act XXVII of 1870, s. 5.

² Per Ranade, J., in Ramchandra Narayan, (1897) 22 Bom. 162, 160, F.B.

³ Per Strachey, J., in Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 112, 135.

⁴ Burns, (1886) 16 Cox 355, 365.

The offence consists in the making use of any means for the purpose of bringing the Government into hatred or contempt.

Intention essential.—The essence of the crime of sedition consists in the intention with which the language is used. But this intention must be judged primarily by the language itself. Intention for this purpose is really no more than meaning. When a man is charged in respect of anything he has written or said, the meaning of what he said or wrote must be taken to be his meaning, mean by the people as seditious, due expression and for high-flown or classical language.¹

"The intention of a speaker, writer or publisher may be inferred from the particular speech, article or letter, or it may be proved from that speech, article or letter considered in conjunction with what such speaker, writer or publisher has said, written or published on another or other occasions. Where it is ascertained that the intention of the speaker, writer or publisher was to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, it is immaterial whether or not the words spoken, written or published, could have the effect of exciting such feelings of disaffection, and it is immaterial whether the words were true or were false, and, except on the question of punishment, or in a case in which the speaker, writer or publisher is charged with having excited such feelings of disaffection, it is immaterial whether or not the words did in fact excite such feelings of disaffection."²

Strachey, J., has elaborately discussed the circumstances which should be taken into account in judging the intention of the accused. In his charge to the jury in *Tilak's case*³ he said: "You will thus see that the whole question is one of the intention of the accused in publishing these articles. Did they intend to excite in the minds of their readers feelings of disaffection or enmity to the Government? Or did they intend merely to excite disapprobation of certain

These are the questions which you have to consider. But you may ask, how are we to ascertain whether the intention of the accused was this, that, or the other? How can we tell whether his intention was simply to publish a historical discussion about Shivaji and Afzul Khan, or whether it was to stir up, under that guise, hatred against the Government? There are various ways in which you must approach the question of intention. You must gather the intention as best you can from the language of the articles; and you may also take into consideration, under certain conditions, the other articles that have been put in evidence, such as the articles about the plague and the Diamond Jubilee and so forth. But the first and most important index of the intention of the writer or publisher of a newspaper article is the language of the article itself. What is the intention which the articles themselves convey to your minds? In considering this, you must first ask yourselves what would be the natural and probable effect of reading such articles in the minds of the readers of the Kesari, to whom they were addressed? Read these articles, and ask yourselves how the ordinary readers of the Kesari would probably feel when reading them. Would the feeling produced be one of hatred to the Government, or would it be simply one of interest in a poem and a historical discussion about Shivaji and Afzul Khan and so forth? If you think that the only feelings which such readers would be excited to are feelings of interest in a poem of a historical or ethical discussion, then you may presume that that is all the accused by evidence which in most cases would be impracticable: The law will presume the intention—whether good or bad—from the language and conduct of the accused, and it will be then for him to show that his words were harmless and his motive innocent.¹ The Bombay High Court has laid down that it is impossible to convict the accused under this section unless it was found that he had an intention of exciting disaffection. In this case the accused had made a declaration, under s. 4 of the Press Act, XXV of 1867, that he was the owner of a certain press called the “Atmaram Press.” The management of the press was carried on by another person who looked after the whole concern. At this press was printed a bulky book which purported to be one devoted to metaphysics and philosophy and was styled “Ekashloki Gita.” It also contained seditious matter at long and varied intervals and interspersed with discussions of religious matters. The accused took no part in the management of the press; nor did it appear that he had read the book or acquainted himself with the nature of it. He was charged with sedition and convicted of the same. On appeal it was held by Chandavarkar, J., that the cumulative effect of the surrounding circumstances was such as to make it as probable that the accused had not read the book or that he had known its seditious object; and that the evidence having thus been evenly balanced and equivocal, a reasonable doubt arose as to the guilt of the accused, the benefit of which must be given to him. Heaton, J., held that it was impossible to convict the accused under this section unless it was found that he had an intention of exciting disaffection, and that the evidence fell very far short of proving the intention; that, attempt to do a thing must necessarily involve some intention; for a man cannot be said to attempt to do that which he has absolutely no knowledge of doing and no intention to do.² The question of intention is one of fact.³

¹ Per Edge, C. J., in Amba Prasad, (1897) 20 All. 55, 69, F.B.

² Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 122, 139, 142.

Innuendo.—If a particular article is charged as being seditious on the ground that it says more than appears on the face of it, it is the duty of the prosecution to show that it has in fact the guilty meaning or intent attributed to it.⁴

1. 'Whoever.'—Not only the writer of seditious articles but whoever uses in any way words or printed matter for the purpose of exciting feelings of disaffection to the Government is liable under the section, whether he is the actual author or not.⁵

"It is . . . not sufficient for a person who has published matter calculated to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, to say: 'This is not my own work,' because the adoption of the means, the publishing thereof was in itself his work, and therefore it is, that the printer or publisher of an article, which is open to these objections is always to be held liable . . . For everything that appears in his paper, the editor, printer, or publisher is as responsible as if he had written the article himself." No doubt the question of his liability to punishment is a matter which has to be seriously considered, and circumstances may considerably mitigate the penalty which has to be imposed. But his liability to conviction under the section is not affected by the circumstance that the publisher who used the words did not originate them. The result of his using the words in his publication is the same whether he had written the article himself, or made use of it in other ways. Whoever the composer might be, whoever wrote or caused it to be written, the person who used it for purposes of exciting disaffection is guilty of an offence under s. 124-A."⁶ The registered printer of a paper is liable to be convicted for a seditious article which appears in it and cannot escape on the plea of temporary absence, want of actual consent, or even if proved.⁷ Section 7 of Act XXV of 1869 provides that the printer or publisher of a newspaper or other printed matter, if he ever may be the writer of the

* Jivan Singh	1, 379.	Adhar Tilak, (1897)	22 Bom.
* Shankar Sh	(1910)	Bose, (1891)	19
Bom. L. R. 675.
* Ganesh Balra	12	J.,	Bhopat-
L. R. 21.
* Joy Chandra S	2.		1 of 1005.

articles in the paper, unless he can prove absence from the office of the paper in good faith and without knowledge that during his absence seditious matter would be published. It is not absence in good faith for the printer to go away, but with full knowledge of what is going to happen in his absence and for the purpose of shirking his liability.¹ Where the editor of a newspaper was convicted and sentenced under this section and the accused made his declaration as printer and publisher thereafter, and continued so to act after the editor had resumed work on release from jail, and further allowed his name to appear as such, though he was absent from the town of publication of the paper when certain seditious articles appeared therein, and engaged during the period in his own private business without taking any interest in the paper, it was held that he had not made out the bona fides of his absence, and was, therefore, legally responsible for the articles.²

A person, making a statutory declaration under Act XXV of 1867, that he is the printer and publisher of a newspaper, is presumably liable as such printer or publisher but may rebut such presumption. The liability of a proprietor is not governed by the Act and depends upon different considerations. The ground of liability in his case is that he authorized the publication of the incriminating article. The authority may be established by direct proof or as a reasonable inference from all the facts of the case. Under s. 14 of the Evidence Act, it is open to the Court to presume that the proprietor, having the control of the paper, authorizes the publication of the matter which appears in it. Such a presumption may be improper in the case of a large paper, with a separate editor responsible for the selection and publication of the literary matter, but in the case of a petty paper, with no responsible editor and published under the eye of the proprietor, the presumption might be reasonable though it would be open to him originally given, such authority may be inferred from the conduct of the parties, such as the publication of other libellous matter without any remonstrance or interference from the proprietor when it has come to his knowledge. Other issues of the same paper containing libellous matter are relevant as evidence to prove such authority. Mere absence of the proprietor at the time of the publication of the libel will not rebut such presumption if during such absence he exercises complete control over the paper.³ In a Bombay case Chandavarkar, J., said that "a declarathe Court performing the functions of a jury may presume that the owner had a hand in the printing and was aware of the contents and character of the book. But whether such a presumption is warranted in any individual case must depend upon its own facts and circumstances. The presumption... is not conclusive; it is not one of law but of fact and it is open to the accused to rebut it... The object is to create a sense of responsibility, so that if any public mischief occurs owing to any action or conduct of the press, the law can at once know who must prima facie be held responsible for it... the Courts should be careful to draw no inference of guilt against the declarant from the mere fact of declaration but must consider the surrounding circumstances and probabilities to enable them to arrive at a conclusion whether the declarant had a hand in the printing and publishing so as to bring him within the operation of s. 124-A... where the charge is under that section."⁴

¹ Phanendra Nath Mitter, (1903) 35 Cal. 945.

² Surendra Prasad Laliri, (1910) 38 Cal. 227.

³ Gadicherla Harisaravahama Rao, (1909) 32 Mad. 338.

⁴ Shankar Srikrishna Desai, (1910) 12 Bom. L. R. 675, 678, 679.

It is not sufficient for an accused person to say that what was put into his paper of a seditious character was put in during his absence and without his authority. If he did not authorize it, it is for him to prove that as a fact, because it must be within his knowledge whether any such authority was given.¹

Every man must be taken to intend the natural consequences of his own deliberate act, and therefore the law will not excuse a journalist or newspaper writer on the ground that he writes for hire merely, or that the commercial interests question.²

... of the Indian Sociologist
the Court, in convicting the printer, said: "If the accused published the libel, there is no distinction in law between what he wrote in it and what any other person wrote in it."³

2. 'Written.'—Disaffection may be excited in a thousand different ways. A poem, an allegory, a drama, a philosophical or historical discussion may be used for the purpose of exciting disaffection, just as much as direct attacks upon the Government. Seditious writing, while it remains in the hands of the author unpublished, will not make him liable. Publication of some kind is necessary.⁴

Sending a seditious matter by post addressed to a private individual not by name but by designation as the representative of a large body of students amounts to publication if it is opened by anybody.⁵

The sending through the post office of a packet containing a manuscript copy of a seditious publication with a covering letter requesting the addressee to circulate it to others, when the same was intercepted by another person and never reached the addressee, was held to amount to an attempt to commit sedition.⁶

3. 'Visible representations.'—"A seditious libel does not necessarily consist of written matter, and it may be evidenced by a woodcut or engraving of any kind,"⁷ or by

The accused ... tion Personified."
The photo port ... (rashtra purusha) standing on the lotus of self-reliance (svavalambana) wearing bracelets labelled self-rule (svarajya) and hail motherland (vande mataram) and holding in his right

In the left-hand bottom corner of the photo there were two dogs barking at the rashtra purusha labelled as "Dependents on others" (paravalambee) and near them stood two persons called "Effeminate" (janani). In the left-hand top corner there were portraits of Shivaji, Ramdas, Goddess of India's Independence (Shri Bharat Smtantrata) and Swami Vivekanand. Beneath these portraits were two texts: (1) "He who depended upon others, lost his cause," and (2) "Will the force of injustice (immorality) or physical force prevail"? In the top right-hand corner there were portraits of Chaphekar brothers, Ranade, Chiplunkar, Phadke, Khudiram Bose, Panchulla Chaki, Tatra, Tani, Rani of Jhansi and Nana Sahib, some of

The Sessions Judge in convicting the accused of sedition observed: "From the above description of the picture and its meaning it is clear that it is of a seditious nature and would be likely to excite hatred and disaffection to Government in the

¹ Bhaskar Balwant Bhopatkar, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 421; Lurman Narayana Joshi, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 286.

² Sullivan, (1864) 11 Cox 44.

³ Aldred, (1909) 22 Cox 1.

⁴ Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 122, 139; Foster, 198.

⁵ Suresh Chandra Sanyal, (1912) 39 Cal. 606.

⁶ Surendra Narayan Adhicary, (1911) 39 Cal. 522.

⁷ Per Fitzgerald, J., in Sullivan, sup. p. 51.

⁸ 2nd Rep., s. 24.

minds of persons who look at it." The High Court in confirming the conviction said: "The main evidence is really the evidence of the photograph itself, and although some of the photographs therein contained are photographs of gentlemen against whom there is nothing whatever to be said, yet, we think, we must take the photograph as a whole. And so considering it we are clear that its symbolism plainly exhorts to hatred of the established Government. That is made plain throughout the picture, and particularly by the selection as models for imitation of persons who have rebelled against the existing Government or have been executed for murder or convicted of sedition."¹

The writer of an article may be guilty of sedition, no matter how guardedly he attempts to conceal his real object, but the registered printer and publisher cannot be punished if the concealed object is not established by the evidence on the record.²

4. 'Attempts, etc.'—An attempt is an intentional preparatory action which fails in object—which so fails through circumstances independent of the person who seeks its accomplishment.³ When a man does an intentional act with a view to attain a certain end, and fails in his object through some circumstances independent of his own will, then that man has attempted to effect the object at which he aimed.⁴ To constitute an attempt all that is necessary is some external act, something tangible and ostensible of which the law can take hold as an act showing progress towards the actual commission of the offence. It does not matter that the progress was interrupted.⁵ It is not necessary in order to bring the case within this section that it should be shewn that the attempt was successful. Attempt does not imply success. It is merely trying. Whoever tries to excite, attempts to excite, etc., is held to come within this section. Whether the intention has achieved the result is immaterial. If the accused tried to excite hatred and contempt, the fact that he failed to do so will be no justification for him. That will be a matter to be decided in determining the sentence.⁶ If the attempt is made, the accused cannot shelter himself behind the fact that those to whom he may have addressed himself have either been too discreet or too temperate to act upon the obvious meaning of his teaching⁷; or that the peaceful circumstances and conditions of the Empire render his act innocuous.⁸

To determine whether an attempt to commit the offence of sedition is committed by the publication of certain articles, it is necessary to determine what is their true meaning, what is the innuendo they convey, and what is the covert meaning, if any, they have. The probable, or natural effect of the words used must then be decided, that is whether they are calculated to bring into hatred or contempt the Government, or excite against it feelings of disloyalty or enmity. If they are so, then it should be considered whether that was not the intention with which the words were used or published. For the purpose of determining whether or not that was the intention, the principle, that a man must be taken prima facie to intend that which is the natural result of his acts under the circumstances and in the particular case in which that act has taken place or occurs, should be applied. In determining whether the intention with which any document is published is or ¹ Devising Mohansing, Criminal Appeal No. 334 of 1910, decided on 3rd November, 1910, by Batchelor and Rao, JJ. Unrep. (Bom.). See to the same effect Shridhar Waman Nagarkar, Criminal Appeal No. 395 of 1910, decided on 1st December 1910, by Batchelor and Rao, JJ.

² Manomohan Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 233.

³ Luxman Narayan Joshi, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 286. See discussion of 'attempt' in In re The Amrita Bazar Patrika, (1919) 31 C. L. J. 289.

⁴ Vinayak Narayan Bhatye, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 394.

⁵ Ganesh Balwant Modsl, (1909) 12 Bom. L. R. 21.

⁶ Bhaskar Balwant Bhopalkar, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 421, 439; Bai Gangadhar Tilak, (1905) 10 Bom. L. R. 848.

⁷ Luxman Narayan Joshi, sup.; Bhaskar Balwant Bhopalkar, sup.; Burns, (1896) 16 Cox 355, 365.

⁸ Bhaskar Balwant Bhopalkar, sup., p. 449.

is not seditious, the writer must be deemed to intend the consequence which would naturally follow from his work taking into consideration the time and circumstances of the case.¹

In order to decide whether or not a speech constitutes an attempt to excite hatred, contempt, or disaffection, it should be viewed from the standpoint of the types of persons to whom it was primarily addressed. On the one hand, their limitations, if any, have to be taken into account; on the other, the fact that the words may convey to them a literal meaning must not be lost sight of. The time and the place are also factors which should be considered.²

Existence of a grievance, real or supposed, is no excuse or answer to an attempt to arouse towards Government feelings of hatred, contempt or disaffection.³

An attempt to publish sedition is complete as soon as a copy of the newspaper containing it is sold. It is none the less an attempt because something external to the accused happened which prevented a perusal of the article by the buyers or any other member of the public.⁴

In cases decided under the old section the expression "attempts to excite, etc.," is explained as follows:—

"If a person uses either spoken or written words calculated to create in the minds of the persons to whom they are addressed a disposition not to obey the lawful authority of the Government, or to subvert or resist that authority, if and when occasion should arise, and if he does so with the intention of creating such a disposition in his hearers or readers, he will be guilty of the offence of attempting to excite disaffection within the meaning of the section, though no disturbance is brought about by his words or any feeling of disaffection, in fact, produced by them. It is sufficient for the purposes of the section that the words used are calculated to excite feelings of ill-will against the Government and to hold it up to the hatred and contempt of the people, and that they were used with the intention to create such feeling."⁵

An attempt to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government is equivalent to an attempt to produce hatred of Government as established by law, to excite political discontent and alienate the people from their allegiance.⁶

5. 'Hatred or contempt.'—"With the feeling of hatred the law can do nothing because it cannot see into the heart and cannot reform it, but law does step in when any attempt is made to excite that feeling in others."⁷

'Hatred' and 'contempt' towards Government may be created by writings imputing to the Government base, dishonourable, corrupt or malicious motives in the discharge of its duties or by writings unjustly accusing the Government of hostility or indifference to the welfare of the people.⁸

The amount or intensity of disaffection is absolutely immaterial except perhaps in dealing with the question of punishment.⁹

6. 'Disaffection.'—Explanation 1 says that the word 'disaffection' "includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity."

The following judicial interpretations given to this word should be noted:

1. 'Disaffection' means a feeling contrary to affection, in other words, dislike or hatred.¹⁰

¹ Vinayak Narayan Bhatye, (1899) 2 Bom. L. R. 304.

² U. Damadaya, (1923) 1 Rang. 211.

³ Vinayak Narayan Bhatye, sup.

⁴ Ganesh Balwant Modak, (1900) 12 Bom. L. R. 21.

⁵ Per Petheram, C. J., in Jogendra Chunder Bose, (1891) 19 Cal. 35, 44.

⁶ Ramachandra Narayan, (1897) 22 Bom.

152, 156, vs.

⁷ Per Batty, J., in Bhaskar Balwant Bhopalkar, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 421, 437.

⁸ Bevan, (1916) 39 Mad. 1035.

⁹ Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 112, 134.

¹⁰ Per Petheram, C. J., in Jogendra Chunder Bose, sup., p. 44.

2. It means hatred, enmity, dislike, hostility, contempt, and every form of ill-will to the Government. 'Disloyalty' is perhaps the best general term, comprehending every possible form of bad feeling to the Government.¹

3. It means political alienation or discontent, a spirit of disloyalty to the Government or existing authority.²

4. It signifies political alienation or discontent, that is to say, a feeling of disloyalty to the Government or existing power, which tends to a disposition not to obey but to resist and attempt to subvert that Government or power. It cannot be construed to mean an absence of or the contrary of affection, or love, that is to say, dislike or hatred.³

5. It is a positive political distemper, and not a mere absence or negation of love or good-will. It is a positive feeling of aversion which is akin to disloyalty, a defiant insubordination of authority, or when it is not defiant, it secretly seeks to alienate the people, and weaken the bond of allegiance, and prepossesses the minds of the people with avowed or secret animosity to Government, a feeling which tends to bring the Government into hatred or contempt by imputing base or corrupt motives to it, makes men indisposed to obey or support the laws of the realm, and promotes discontent and public disorder.⁴

6. It means 'disloyalty.' Anyone who excites or attempts to excite feelings of hatred, dislike, ill-will, enmity or hostility towards the Government established by law in British India, excites or attempts to excite feelings of 'disaffection.'⁵

7. Disaffection is a feeling and not the want of a feeling. It is not the absence of affection. It is not indifference, but a positive emotion not necessarily prompting the action, but with a tendency to influence conduct just as all our feelings do. It is not necessarily limited to "feelings of enmity." It is intended to express a feeling which can only exist between the ruler and the ruled. Feelings of personal affection in such a connection are not demanded but only such feelings as the relation of the subject to the Government necessarily implies. This relation implies the recognition, on the part of the ruled, of the Government as a Government. The ruler must be accepted as a ruler, and disaffection which is the opposite of that feeling, is the repudiation of that spirit of acceptance of a particular Government as ruler.⁶

When the Bill for amending this section was introduced it was proposed to add the words "or ill-will" at the conclusion of Explanation 1. But the Select Committee thought that the expression "all feelings of ill-will" was too wide and vague. They said: "It is only when feelings of ill-will amount to disloyalty or enmity that they constitute such disaffection as is contemplated by the clause. A certain amount of ill-will may be compatible with genuine loyalty."⁷ In view of this opinion some of the interpretations given above, notably those of Strachey, J., and Edge, C. J., are not of any authority.

7. 'Her Majesty.'—'Her Majesty' means the sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland (s. 13).

8. 'Government established by law in British India.'—This means British rule and its representatives as such,—the existing political system as distinguished from any particular set of administrators.⁸ In this sense the 'Government' includes not only the Government of India but also Local Government.⁹ 'Government' does not mean the person or persons for the time being. It means

¹ Per Strachey, J., in Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 134.

² Per Farran, C J., in Ramachandra Narayan, (1897) 22 Bom. 152, 156, F.B.

³ Per Parson, J., in ibid, p. 159.

⁴ Per Ranade, J., in ibid, p. 162.

⁵ Per Edge, C.J., in Amba Prasad, (1897)

20 All. 55, 68, F.B.

⁶ Per Batty, J., in Bhaskar Balwant Bhopalkar, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 421, 437, 438.

⁷ Q I, 1898, Part V, p. 14.

⁸ Per Strachey, J., in Bal Gangadhar Tilak, sup., p. 135.

⁹ Besant, (1916) 39 Mad. 1085.

the person or persons collectively, in succession, who are authorized to administer Government for the time being. One particular set of persons may be open to objection, and to assail them and to attack them and excite hatred against them is not necessarily exciting hatred against the Government because they are only individuals, and not representatives of that abstract conception which is Government.¹ There is a clear distinction between the Government and the individual officers employed under the Government. Words bringing the former into hatred or contempt constitute sedition, but similar words directed against the latter can only infringe the law of libel.²

The expression 'Government established by law in British India' means "the various Governments constituted by the statutes relating to the Government of India now consolidated into the Government of India Act of 1916 (5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61) and would denote the person or persons authorized by law to administer Executive Government in any part of British India. The feelings, which it is the object of s. 124-A to prohibit, may be excited towards the Government in a variety of ways;... it is possible to excite such feelings towards the Government by an unfair condemnation of any of its services. Whether in a particular case the condemnation of any service is sufficient to excite any feeling of hatred or contempt or disaffection towards Government by law established in British India, must depend upon the nature of the criticism, the position of the service in the administration and all the other circumstances of that case. It would be a question of fact to be determined in each case with reference to its circumstances."³ The phrase "Government established by law in British India" means the established authority which governs the country and administers its public affairs and includes the representatives to whom the task of Government is entrusted.⁴

"The Government established by law acts through human agency, and admittedly the Civil Service is its principal agency for the administration of the country in times of peace. Therefore, where,... you criticise the Civil Service en bloc, the question whether you excite dissatisfaction against the Government or not seems to me a pure question of fact. You do so if the natural effect of your words, infusing hatred of the Civil Service, is also to infuse hatred or contempt of the established Government whose accredited agent the Civil Service is. You avoid doing so if, preferring appropriate language of moderation, you use words which do not naturally excite such hatred of Government. It is... a mere question of fact."⁵

As to the definition of 'Government,' see s. 17, supra. The expression 'established by law in British India' restricts the meaning which this word otherwise has.

As to the definition of 'British India,' see s. 15, supra.

Incitement to secure 'Swaraj'.—"Swaraj" does not necessarily mean Government of the country to the exclusion of the present Government, but its ordinary acceptance is 'home-rule' under the Government. The incitement of the members of a public meeting to exert themselves to secure 'Swaraj' does not amount to sedition.⁶ This case draws a sharp line between change of Government and change of form of Government. Advocating 'home-rule' for India is not per se objectionable. But such advocacy must not offend against existing laws.⁷

9. Explanations 2 and 3.—Both these explanations have a strictly defined and limited scope. They have no application whatever unless the article in question criticises "the measures of Government" or "administrative or other action of the

¹ Per Ratty, J., in Bhaslar Bahant Bho-jathur, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 421, 441.

² Raj Pal, (1922) 3 Lah. 405.

³ Per Shah, J., in Dal Gangadhar Tilak, (1916) 19 Bom. L. R. 211, 270.

⁴ Sundar Lal, (1919) 42 All. 233, r.s.

⁵ Per Batchelor, J., in Dal Gangadhar Tilak, supra, p. 264.

⁶ Beni Bhushan Roy, (1907) 34 Cal. 991.

⁷ Bevan, (1915) 39 Mad. 1085.

Government" and that too "without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt, or disaffection." The object of the Explanations is to protect bona fide criticism of public measures and institutions with a view to their improvement, and to the remedying of grievances and abuses, and to distinguish this from attempts, whether open or disguised, to make the people hate their rulers.

The Select Committee to which the Bill to amend this section was referred, in their Report say: "We have added explanation 3 to make it clear that criticism on the action of Government is not confined to cases in which it is sought to bring about the abolition of the Government."

the appointment. We have made consequential amendments in explanation 2 to make the language of the two explanations uniform."

Explanations 2 and 3 give a perfect freedom to journalists, to publicists, to orators and public speakers to discuss the measures and administrative acts of Government, to disapprove of them, to attack them, and to use forcible and strong language if necessary, and to do everything legitimate and honest in bringing before the public or the Government the fact that their measures or their actions are disapproved by a section of the public or by that particular speaker or journalist. But a publicist, a journalist, or a speaker, has no right to attribute dishonest or immoral motives to Government. Criticism, though harsh and uncompromising, must be free from the taint of language which is likely to arouse or calculated to engender feelings of enmity, hatred, or disloyalty against Government.¹

The limits to which a public speaker or writer can go in criticising the acts of Government are well summarized by Strachey, J.—"A man may criticise or comment upon any measure or act of the Government, whether legislative or executive, and freely express his opinion upon it. He may discuss the Income-tax Act, the Epidemic Diseases Act, or any military expedition, or the suppression of plague or famine, or the administration of justice. He may express the strongest condemnation of such measures, and he may do so severely, and even unreasonably, perversely and unfairly. So long as he confines himself to that, he will be protected by the explanation. But if he goes beyond that, and, whether in the course of comments upon measures or not, holds up the Government itself to the hatred or contempt of his readers,—as for instance, by attributing to it every sort of evil and misfortune suffered by the people, or dwelling adversely on its foreign origin and character, or imputing to it base motives, or accusing it of hostility or indifference to the welfare of the people,—then he is guilty under the section."²

Liberty of the press means complete freedom to write and publish without censorship and without restriction, save such as is absolutely necessary for the preservation of society. It might be the province of the press to call attention to the weakness or imbecility of a Government when it was done for the public good. It would also be its duty to complain of a grievance which the public good required to be removed, though the very assertion of a grievance creates discontent to a certain extent. Such writings, though trenching closely upon sedition, should receive the protection of a jury.

Every man is free to write as he thinks fit, but he is responsible to the law for what he writes; he is not, under the pretence of freedom, to invade the rights of the community, or to violate the constitution, or to promote insurrection, or endanger the public peace, or create discontent, or bring justice into contempt, or embarrass its functions... Political writing, when confined within proper and lawful limits, is not only justifiable, but is protected for the public good, and such writings are to be regarded in a free and liberal spirit. A writer may criticise or censure the conduct of the servants of the Crown or the acts of the Government—he can do it freely and liberally, but it must be without malignity, and not imputing corrupt or malicious motives; with the same motives a writer may freely criticise the proceedings of courts of justice and of individual judges—nay, he is invited to do, and to do so in a free and fair and liberal spirit. The law does not seek to put any narrow construction on the expressions used, and only interferes when plainly and deliberately the limits are passed of frank and candid and honest discussion.¹

¹ Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1905) 10 Bom. L. R. 848, Phanendra Nath Mitter, (1908) 35 Cal. 945.

² Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 112, 137, approved of in Manomohan Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 253.

Changes in policy and changes in measures are liable to criticism, and to criticise and urge objections to them is a special right of a free press in a free country. Every liberty is given to all men to express their opinions, so long as they do not misuse or abuse that power to the injury of others, including among injuries to others, injury to the State.² Where the object of the speaker was to obtain for Indians an increased and gradually increasing share of political authority and to subject the administration of the country to the control of the people (swarajya) and there was a distinct pleading that the political changes thus advocated should be obtained by lawful and constitutional means, it was held that there was no infringement of the provisions of this section.³

An article imputing wholesale bribery to the ministerial officers of the law Courts and to the lower officers of the police force, and expressing grave doubts as to whether the Government ever inquire into such abuses, so much is it occupied with investigations of boycott, dacoity and sedition, published when sedition is rife and the minds of people excited, may have the effect of creating a feeling that the Government is not doing its duty, and exceeds the limits of fair comment and is seditious, irrespective of the question of the truth of the allegations.⁴

10. 'Disapprobation.'—This means simply disapproval. It is quite possible to disapprove of a man's sentiments or actions and yet to like him.⁵ It is quite possible to like or to be loyal to any one, whether an individual or a Government, and at the same time to disapprove strongly of his or its measures. A man may criticise or comment upon any measure or act of the Government, whether legislative or executive, and freely express his opinion upon it. He may express the strongest condemnation of such measures, and he may do so severely, and even unreasonably, perversely and unfairly.⁶

It is not sedition for a writer to describe the Reform scheme as being monstrous and misbegotten, because it is not founded on democratic principles and not a genuine reform or a genuine initiation of constitutional progress, or to assert that some of the police officials and the judiciary are corrupt, unscrupulous and partial, or to state that if an organisation which he believes to be lawful is suppressed by proclamation it is arbitrary, and that in such case the responsibility will not rest on him for the madness which crushes down open and legal political activity in order to give a desperate and sullen notion into the hands of fiercely enthusiastic and unscrupulous forces, or to inculcate the doctrine of passive resistance or refusal of co-operation with the Government within legal limits, or to describe the British Courts in India as ruinously expensive.⁷

Dramatic performances.—Under the Dramatic Performances Act the Local Government may prohibit any dramatic performance of a nature likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government⁸ and authorize seizure of all its

¹ Sullivan, (1864) 11 Cox 44, 49, McCullins, (1879) 9 C. & P. 150. See also Lambert & Perry, (1910) 24 Camp. 399.

² Per Patten, 1 in Blackburn v. Bland (1894) 6 Buz. L. R. 421, 431. See the observations of Sullivan Aiyar, J., in P. Parashurajulu Nayudu, (1919) 37 M. L. J. 21, 22.

³ Per Gangadhar Tulik, (1916) 19 Bom.

L. R. 211.

⁴ Joy Chandra Sarkar, (1910) 38 Cal. 214.

⁵ Per Petheram, C. J. in Jogendra Chunder Bose, (1891) 19 Cal. 35, 44.

⁶ Per Strachey, J., in Bal Gangadhar Tulik, (1897) 22 Bom. 112, 137.

⁷ Manomohan Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 253.

⁸ Act XIX of 1876, s. 9.

paraphernalia.¹ Persons taking part in any such prohibited performance may be prosecuted and convicted.² A conviction under this Act is no bar to a prosecution under this section.

Liability for letters of correspondents.—The editor of a paper is liable for unsigned seditious letters appearing in the paper.⁴

Dissemination of seditious matter.—Section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code can be brought into operation when any person is found to be disseminating seditious matter. It runs as follows:—

“Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who, within or without such limits, either orally or in writing, or in any other manner intentionally disseminates or attempts to disseminate, or in anywise abets the dissemination of,—

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under s. 124-A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under s. 153-A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate, if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may (in manner hereinafter provided), require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

No proceedings shall be taken proprietor, printer or publisher of any published and published in conformity with, proprietary printed tion of Books Act, 1867, with reference to any matter contained in such Registration publication except by the order or under the authority of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf.”

Liability for publishing seditious extracts.—The law does not excuse the publication in newspapers of writings which are in themselves seditious libels, merely because they are copied from foreign newspapers as items of news. This will be a matter for the jury in considering the criminal intent; but they must also consider the circumstances under which the writings were copied, the state of the country at the time, the class of persons to whom the newspaper is addressed, the nature of their absence, if none, the intent of the publisher is

Republication of seditious articles from another newspaper, one of which only was filed as an exhibit by the prosecution and used in the case against the editor of that paper on his trial for sedition, is held to be not a report of the proceedings of a Court of Justice, and not justifiable.⁶

Where the compiler of certain Hindi Readers, meant for the use of children, collected together seditious utterances and sentiments which had already been published and the cumulative effect of which was to bring into hatred and contempt the Government, it was held that the books could be proscribed even though the originals were not proscribed. A compilation consisting of extracts from various sources may be seditious and a fit subject for an order of proscription, though the extracts considered in relation to their own proper contexts may not be in themselves of a seditious nature.⁷

¹ Act XIX of 1876 s. 8.

² Ibid., s. 6.

³ Ibid., s. 9.

⁴ Apurba Krishna Bose, (1907) 35 Cal

141, 163.

⁵ Sullivan, (1868) 11 Cox 44.

⁶ Apurba Krishna Bose, sup.

⁷ Bajjnath Kedia, (1924) 47 All. 298.

Seditious meeting.—Stephen¹ says: "If a meeting is held for the purpose of speaking seditious words to those who may attend it, those who take part in that design are guilty of a seditious conspiracy, of which the seditious words spoken are an overt act, and their meeting is an unlawful assembly. If at a meeting lawfully convened seditious words are spoken of such a nature as to be likely to produce a breach of the peace, the meeting may become unlawful in all those who speak the words or do anything to help those who speak to produce upon the hearers their natural effect. The speaking of the seditious words is in itself an offence in the speaker, but a mere meeting for the purpose of political discussion is not in itself illegal unless the circumstances under which it is convened or its behaviour when it is convened, is such as to produce reasonable fear of a breach of the peace, nor do I think that bare presence at such a meeting as a hearer or spectator makes a man guilty of any offence, though it may expose him to serious consequences if the meeting becomes disorderly and has to be dispersed, for in such a case force may be used against all persons who are present, whether they take part in the unlawful object of the meeting or not."

"If one man uses seditious words at a meeting those who stand by and do nothing, although they do not reprobate them, are not guilty of uttering the seditious words. Those even who make a speech themselves are not guilty of uttering seditious words unless you can gather from the language they use that they are endeavouring to assist the other man in carrying out that portion of his speech, and by that course endeavouring to assist him in causing his words which excite to disorder to produce their natural effect upon the people."²

To prevent meetings of a seditious character the Prevention of Seditious Meetings Act is passed. It is set out in full in the Appendix.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused spoke or wrote the words, or made the signs or representations, or did some other acts, in question.

(2) That he thereby brought or attempted to bring into hatred or contempt; or excited or attempted to excite disaffection.

(3) That such disaffection was towards His Majesty, or the Government of British India.

Evidence of publication.—If the manuscript of a seditious writing be proved to be in the handwriting of the accused, and it be also proved to have been printed and published, this is evidence to go to the jury that it was published by the accused, although there was no evidence given to show that the printing and publication were by the direction of the accused.³

In order to establish the fact of publication of seditious matter transmitted through the Post Office it is not necessary to prove the actual posting, nor that it was printed and published under the directions of the accused. If the seditious writing is shown to be in the handwriting of the accused, and it is further proved that the contents were in fact printed and published, there is sufficient evidence of publication by him.⁴

An indictment for sedition alleged "that the defendant, amongst other words and matter, uttered the words and matter following," and then set out several sentences as though they had been uttered continuously. The evidence showed that they had not been so uttered, but that the sentences had been selected from different parts of the speech, other matter intervening between them. It was held that there was no variance, and that if any portions of the speech omitted, varied, or controlled the sense of those parts that were set out, the onus was upon the defendant to show it.⁵

¹ History of Criminal Law, Vol. II, p. 386.

² Per Cave, J., in Buras, (1886) 16 Cox 335, 366

³ Lovell, (1839) 9 C. & P. 462.

⁴ Burendra Narayan Adhicary, (1911) 33 Cal. 522.

⁵ Crowe, (1848) 3 Cox 123.

Upon an indictment against A B and others, for unlawfully meeting together with persons unknown, for the p assembling and attending the meeting in question.¹

Intention as gathered from other articles.—Seditious articles published in the same newspaper, not forming the subject of the charges, on which the prisoner is being tried at the time, are admissible to show the intention of the person, who printed or published the latter.²

Articles not forming the subject of the charge and appearing in other issues of the same paper are not admissible to show the intention of the writer in the article complained of in the absence of proof of his identity.³

Intention as gathered from speeches not charged as seditious.—Where certain speeches form the subject-matter of a charge for sedition and when such speeches form part of a series of speeches or lectures on one topic, delivered within a short period of time, any of such speeches or lectures will be admissible, under s. 14 of the Indian Evidence Act, as evidence to prove the intention of the speaker in respect of the speeches which form the subject-matter of the charge.⁴

Not bailable.—Not compoundable—
District Magistrate or Magistrate

Chapters IV and V of the Code apply to offences punishable under this section.⁵

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.⁶ A commitment of the accused upon the evidence recorded before such sanction has been given is illegal.⁷ Orders under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be expressed with sufficient particularity and with strict adherence to the language of the section. An order purported to accord sanction to prosecute the editor, manager and the printer of a newspaper without specifying their names, and containing a misdescription of the seditious article. On the day of the trial an amended order correcting the errors in the previous order was filed. It was held that the prosecution was rightly instituted.⁸ Section 196 only requires that the complaint should be made upon authority from the Local Government and not that the actual complaint must be expressly authorized by the Local Government. A complaint is not defective because it does not set out the speeches or alleged seditious words which form the subject-matter of the charge.⁹ If the accused is charged under this section and also under s. 153-A the charge does not become defective merely because it does not set out what portions of the speech of the accused are within the provisions of this section and what are within those of s. 153-A.

Jurisdiction.—The offence is complete either in the district where the author hands over the document for the purpose of being communicated to the public or in the district where it is sent by post for publication and is published.¹⁰ Sending newspapers by post from the office where they are published to other places constitutes in law publication at the places where they are sent.¹¹

Confiscation.—A Magistrate can order forfeiture of a newspaper or book containing seditious matter under s. 99-A of the Criminal Procedure Code.

¹ Henry Hunt, (1820) 3 B. & A. 566.

² Phanendra Nath Mitter, (1908) 35 Cal.

845.

³ Manomohan Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 253.

⁴ Chidambaram Pillai, (1908) 32 Mad. 3.

⁵ Act XXVII of 1870, s. 13.

⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

⁷ Mulla Abdul Rahim, (1882) P. R. No. 28

of 1882.

⁸ Apurba Krishna Bose, (1907) 35 Cal. 141;

Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom. 112.

⁹ Chidambaram Pillai, sup.

¹⁰ Burdett, (1820) 4 B. & Ald. 717.

¹¹ Bal Gangadhar Tilak, sup., p. 129.

Seditious meeting.—Stephen¹ says: “If a meeting is held for the purpose of speaking seditious words to those who may attend it, those who take part in that design are guilty of a seditious conspiracy, of which the seditious words spoken are an overt act, and their meeting is an unlawful assembly. If at a meeting lawfully convened seditious words are spoken of such a nature as to be likely to produce a breach of the peace, the meeting may become unlawful in all those who speak the words or do anything to help those who speak to produce upon the hearers their natural effect. The speaking of the seditious words is in itself an offence in the speaker, but a mere meeting for the purpose of political discussion is not in itself illegal unless the circumstances under which it is convened or its behaviour when it is convened, is such as to produce reasonable fear of a breach of the peace, nor do I think that bare presence at such a meeting as a hearer or spectator makes a man guilty of any offence, though it may expose him to serious consequences if the meeting becomes disorderly and has to be dispersed, for in such a case force may be used against all persons who are present, whether they take part in the unlawful object of the meeting or not.”

“If one man uses seditious words at a meeting those who stand by and do nothing, although they do not reprobate them, are not guilty of uttering the seditious words. Those even who make a speech themselves are not guilty of uttering seditious words unless you can gather from the language they use that they are endeavouring to assist the other man in carrying out that portion of his speech, and by that course endeavouring to assist him in causing his words which excite to disorder to produce their natural effect upon the people.”²

To prevent meetings of a seditious character the Prevention of Seditious Meetings Act is passed. It is set out in full in the Appendix.

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused spoke or wrote the words, or made the signs or representations, or did some other acts, in question.

(2) That he thereby brought or attempted to bring into hatred or contempt; or excited or attempted to excite disaffection.

(3) That such disaffection was towards His Majesty, or the Government of British India.

Evidence of publication.—If the manuscript of a seditious writing be proved to be in the handwriting of the accused, and it be also proved to have been printed and published, this is evidence to go to the jury that it was published by the accused, although there was no evidence given to show that the printing and publication were by the direction of the accused.³

In order to establish the fact of publication of seditious matter transmitted through the Post Office it is not necessary to prove the actual posting, nor that it was printed and published under the directions of the accused. If the seditious writing is shown to be in the handwriting of the accused, and it is further proved that the contents were in fact printed and published, there is sufficient evidence of publication by him.⁴

An indictment for sedition alleged “that the defendant, amongst other words and matter, uttered the words and matter following,” and then set out several sentences as though they had been uttered continuously. The evidence showed that they had not been so uttered, but that the sentences had been selected from different parts of the speech, other matter intervening between them. It was held that there was no variance, and that if any portions of the speech omitted, varied, or controlled the sense of those parts that were set out, the onus was upon the defendant to show it.⁵

¹ History of Criminal Law, Vol. II, p. 386.

² Per Cave, J., in Burns, (1888) 16 Cox 355, 366

³ Lovett, (1839) 9 Q. & P. 462.

⁴ Surendra Narayan Adhicary, (1911) 39 Cal. 522.

⁵ Crowe, (1848) 3 Cox 123.

Upon an indictment against A B and others, for unlawfully meeting together with persons unknown, for the purpose of exciting discontent and disaffection, it was held (A B having presided at this meeting) that resolutions passed at a former meeting assembled a short time before, in a distant place, and at which A B also presided, and the avowed object of which meeting was that of the meeting mentioned in the indictment, were admissible in evidence to show the intention of A B in assembling and attending the meeting in question.¹

Intention as gathered from other articles.—Seditious articles published in the same newspaper, not forming the subject of the charges, on which the prisoner is being tried at the time, are admissible to show the intention of the person, who printed or published the latter.²

Articles not forming the subject of the charge and appearing in other issues of the same paper are not admissible to show the intention of the writer in the article complained of in the absence of proof of his identity.³

Intention as gathered from speeches not charged as seditious—Where certain speeches form the subject-matter of a charge for sedition and when such speeches form part of a series of speeches or lectures on one topic, delivered within a short period of time, any of such speeches or lectures will be admissible, under s. 14 of the Indian Evidence Act, as evidence to prove the intention of the speaker in respect of the speeches which form the subject-matter of the charge.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered.

Chapters IV and V of the Code apply to offences punishable under this section.⁵

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.⁶ A commitment of the accused upon the evidence recorded before such sanction has been given is illegal.⁷ Orders under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be expressed with sufficient particularity and with strict adherence to the language of the section. An order purported to accord sanction to prosecute the editor, manager and the printer of a newspaper without specifying their names, and containing a misdescription of the seditious article. On the day of the trial an amended order correcting the errors in the previous order was filed. It was held that the prosecution was rightly instituted.⁸ Section 196 only requires that the complaint should be made upon authority from the Local Government and not that the actual complaint must be expressly authorized by the Local Government. A complaint is not defective because it does not set out the speeches or alleged seditious words which form the subject-matter of the charge.⁹ If the accused is charged under this section and also under s. 153-A the charge does not become defective merely because it does not set out what portions of the speech of the accused are within the provisions of this section and what are within those of s. 153-A.

Jurisdiction.—The offence is complete either in the district where the author hands over the document for the purpose of being communicated to the public or in the district where it is sent by post for publication and is published.¹⁰ Sending newspapers by post from the office where they are published to other places constitutes in law publication at the places where they are sent.¹¹

Confiscation.—A Magistrate can order forfeiture of a newspaper or book containing seditious matter under s. 99-A of the Criminal Procedure Code.

¹ Henry Hunt, (1820) 3 B. & A. 566.

of 1882.

² Phanendra Nath Mitter, (1908) 35 Cal.

945.

³ Manomohan Ghose, (1910) 38 Cal. 253.

⁴ Chidambaram Pillai, (1908) 32 Mad. 3.

⁵ Act XXVII of 1870, s. 13.

⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

⁷ Mulla Abdul Rahim, (1882) P. R. No. 25

Appeal to Privy Council.—Once it appears that the principles of the law of sedition have been rightly understood by the local tribunal, the question whether those principles have been properly applied is so much in the nature of a question of fact and depends so largely upon local conditions that it is difficult for the Board to interfere on this ground with the conclusions arrived at by the Courts in India.¹

Charge.—In a Madras case Sir Arnold White ruled that a charge of an offence under this section is defective if it does not set out the speeches or passages in speeches alleged to be seditious, but such defect does not vitiate the proceedings in virtue of ss. 225 and 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.² But in a subsequent case two other Judges of the same High Court hold that if an offence under this section is committed by words spoken, the requirements of the law are satisfied if the charge gives such a description of the words used as is reasonably sufficient to enable the accused to know the matter with which he is charged, i.e., if the charge states the words used with substantial, though not absolute, accuracy; and it is enough if the substance of the words proved to have been used is the same as that of the words set out in the charge. Even if the words or the substance of the words used, are not entered at all in the charge, this will be only an irregularity which, under s. 225 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, will not vitiate a conviction unless such omission has misled the accused and occasioned a failure of justice.³

Charges under this section and s. 153-A could be joined together.⁴

The charge should run as follows:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused person) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, by writing (or speaking) the words (mention them) (or by signs or by visible representation, or otherwise) brought (or attempted to bring) into hatred or contempt (or excited or attempted to excite disaffection towards) His Majesty, the King-Emperor (or the Government established by law in British India), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 124-A and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—The framers of the Code wished to draw a marked distinction between minor offences and those of a very serious character where transportation would be the only appropriate punishment. The sentence of transportation is not an alternative for imprisonment as in ss. 121-A and 122.⁵

125. Whoever wages war against the Government of any Asiatic Power in alliance or at peace with the Queen or attempts to wage such war, or abets¹ the waging of such war, shall be punished with transportation for life, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section restrains a person from making British India the focus of intrigues and enterprise for the restoration of deposed rulers or other

¹ Kali Nath Roy, (1920) 23 Bom. L. R. 709, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 62, p. 6.

² Chidambaram Pillai, (1908) 32 Mad. 3.

³ Mylapore Krishnasami, (1909) 32 Mad. 384, per Benson and Wallis, JJ., Sankaran

Nair, J., dissentient

⁴ Tribhuvandas P. Mangrolwala, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 801.

⁵ See G. L., 1898, Part V, p. 13.

like purposes. And the fulfilment of the obligations of the State to allies and friendly powers requires that the abetment of such schemes by its subjects whether by furnishing supplies or otherwise should be forbidden.¹ The principle of this section is based upon international comity and a desire of the State to remain friendly with its neighbours.²

Where a person dwelling in British territory waged war with the Raja of Manipore, a country lying beyond British India, he was punished under this section.³

The offences defined in this section and ss. 126 and 127 are similar to those made punishable under the Foreign Enlistment Act,⁴ which applies to India. Sections 11 and 12 of that Act are as follows:—

“11. If any person within the limits of Her Majesty’s dominions, and without the license of Her Majesty, prepares or fits out any naval or military expedition to proceed against the dominions of any friendly State, the following consequences shall ensue:—

(1) Every person engaged in such preparation or fitting out or assisting therein, or employed in any capacity in such expedition, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour;

(2) All ships and their equipments and all arms and ammunitions of war, used in or forming part of such expedition, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

12. Any person who aids, abets, counsels, or procures the commission of any offence against this Act shall be liable to be fined and punished as a principal offender”.

1. ‘Abets.’—See s. 107, supra

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence—Prove (1) that the Power in question is Asiatic, and in alliance, or at peace, with the King

(2) That the accused waged war against the Government of such Power; or that the accused abetted or attempted the same.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, waged (or attempted to wage or abetted the waging of) war against the Government of—an Asiatic Power in alliance (or at peace) with the King-Emperor and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 125 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

126. Whoever commits depredation,¹ or makes preparations

Committing
depredation on territories of Power
at peace with the Queen.

tions to commit depredation, on the territories of any Power in alliance or at peace with the Queen, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine and to forfeiture of any

¹ M. & M. 105.

² Jameson, [1896] 2 Q. R. 425, 430.

³ Kifai Singh, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 16.

⁴ 33 & 34 Vic., c. 90.

⁵ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is necessary for prosecution under this section.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, being a public servant (mention the office), and as such having the custody of—, a State prisoner (or prisoner of war), on or about the—day of—, at—, voluntarily allowed such prisoner to escape from—, the place in which such prisoner was confined, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 128 of the Indian Penal Code and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

129. Whoever, being a public servant¹ and having the custody of any State prisoner or prisoner of war,² negligently suffers such prisoner to escape from any place of confinement in which such prisoner is confined, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Public servant
negligently suffering such prisoner to escape.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is like the one under s. 128, with the mitigating circumstance that the escape of the prisoner was not allowed voluntarily but suffered negligently. This section is similar to s. 223 which punishes the escape of an ordinary prisoner under similar circumstances.

1. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.
2. 'State prisoner or prisoner of war.'—See s. 128, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was a public servant.

(2) That he had the person in question in his custody.

(3) That such person was a State prisoner or prisoner of war.

(4) That the accused suffered such prisoner to escape from the place of confinement.

(5) That the accused did so negligently.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Sanction.—Sanction of Government is required for prosecution under this section.²

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, being a public servant (mention his office), and as such having the custody of—, a State prisoner (or prisoner of war), on or about the—day of—, at—, negligently suffered such prisoner to escape from any place of confinement in which such prisoner was confined, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 129 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

130. Whoever knowingly aids or assists¹ any State prisoner or prisoner of war in escaping from lawful custody, or rescues or attempts to rescue any such prisoner, or harbours or conceals any such prisoner who has escaped from lawful custody or, offers or attempts to offer any resistance to the recapture of such prisoner, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A State prisoner or prisoner of war, who is permitted to be at large on his parole within certain limits in British India, is said to escape from lawful custody if he goes beyond the limits within which he is allowed to be at large.

COMMENT.

This section uses words more extensive than those in the two preceding ones which contemplate an escape only from some prison or actual place of custody. Again, under the last two sections the offender is a public servant; under this section, he may be any person.

This section is somewhat narrower in scope than s. 129. It requires that the rescue or assistance should be given 'knowingly.'

1. 'Knowingly aids or assists.'—It is essential to show that the accused had a knowledge of the character in which the prisoner is confined, i.e., that he is a prisoner of State or of war.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question was a prisoner of State, or of war

(2) That such prisoner was at the time in lawful custody; or

That such prisoner has escaped from lawful custody.

(3) That the accused knew that such person was in lawful custody as a prisoner of State or of war, or

That he knew that such prisoner had escaped therefrom.

(4) That he aided or assisted such prisoner to escape, or that he rescued such prisoner, or attempted to do so; or

That he harboured or concealed such prisoner; or

That such prisoner was about to be recaptured, but the accused offered or attempted to offer resistance to such recapture.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows.—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, knowingly aided (or assisted, or offered to rescue, or attempted to rescue)—, a State prisoner (or prisoner of war), in escaping from lawful custody (or knowingly harboured or concealed)—, a State prisoner (or prisoner of war) who had escaped from lawful custody [or knowingly offered or attempted to offer resistance to the recapture of—, a State prisoner (or prisoner of war) who had escaped from lawful custody], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 130 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

CHAPTER VII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY AND NAVY.

The authors of the Code say: "A few words will explain the necessity of having some provisions of the nature of those which are contained in this Chapter.

"It is obvious that a person who, not being himself subject to military law, exhorts or assists those who are subject to military law to commit gross breaches of discipline, is a proper subject of punishment. But the general law respecting the abetting of offences will not reach such a person; nor, framed as it is, would it be desirable that it should reach him. It would not reach him, because the military delinquency which he has abetted is not punishable by this Code, and therefore is not, in our legal nomenclature, an offence. Nor is it desirable that the punishment of a person not military, who has abetted a breach of military discipline, should be fixed according to the principles on which we have proceeded in framing the law of abetment. We have provided that the punishment of the abettor of an offence shall be equal or proportional to the punishment of the person who commits that offence; and this seems to us a sound principle when applied only to the punishments provided by this Code. But the military penal law is, and must necessarily be, far more severe than that under which the body of the people live. The severity of the military penal law can be justified only by reasons drawn from the peculiar habits and duties of soldiers, and from the peculiar relation in which they stand to the Government. The extension of such severity to persons not members of the military professions appears to us altogether unwarrantable. If a person, not military, who abets a breach of military discipline, should be made liable to a punishment regulated, according to our general rules, by the punishment to which such a breach of discipline renders a soldier liable, the whole symmetry of the penal law would be destroyed. He who should induce a soldier to disobey any order of a commanding officer would be liable to be punished more severely than a dacoit, a professional thug, an incendiary, a ravisher or a kidnapper. We have attempted in this Chapter to provide, in a manner more consistent with the general character of the Code, for the punishment of persons who, not being military, abet military crimes."¹

Calcutta Rule.—Sessions Judges and Magistrates will forward to the Military Department of the Government of India a copy of the conviction and sentence in all cases in which persons serving under the Government of India in that Department are convicted in a Criminal Court.²

It has been brought to the notice of the High Court that Magistrates, in awarding penalties for offences committed by native military pensioners, not infrequently recite their belief that such pensioners will (on conviction) be subjected to an additional penalty, in the shape of loss of pension, and that they take this circumstance into account in deciding on the severity of the sentence passed by them on the offenders. This procedure on the part of Magistrates is incorrect, in so far as it proceeds on the assumption that the pensioners thus convicted must necessarily forfeit their pensions. The attention of all Magistrates is invited to the terms of Article 496, Army Regulations, India, Volume I, Part II, Native Troops, which governs the subject. Under that Article, the Government of India are the sole arbiters on the point whether, in each case, the pension shall or shall not be reduced, or wholly withdrawn, and in considering this point, due weight is given by Government to the sentence actually awarded by the Court in each case. Magistrates

¹ Note D, p. 120-

² C. H. C. R. & O., Vol. I, Ch. I., s. 102, p. 36.

should, therefore, not assume that in such cases forfeiture of pension is an invariable consequence of a conviction.¹

The attention of all Sessions Judges and Magistrates of the first and second classes in Bengal and Eastern Bengal and Assam is invited to the following order of the Government of India :—

“In the case of a reservist of the Native Army who may be sentenced by a Criminal Court to transportation or imprisonment for any term exceeding three months, a report should be made to the Adjutant-General in India.”²

The Punjab Rules.—Criminal cases against military officers and soldiers should only be taken up by District Magistrates or Magistrates of the First Class, and this direction should be strictly observed.

2. Cases falling under ss. 154 and 156 of the Army Act, 1881, should be dealt with by District Magistrates or Magistrates of the First Class who are European British subjects and Justices of the Peace, and by no other class or description of Magistrate.

3. In every case in which a military officer or a soldier is sentenced by a Criminal Court to a fine of Rs. 200 or upwards, or to imprisonment otherwise than in default of paying a fine not amounting to Rs. 200, the Court shall send a copy of its final order proprio motu to the immediate superior of the person convicted.

4. Whenever a soldier is committed to jail, whether for trial or under sentence, his military rank shall always be stated in the warrant of commitment, in order that due notice may be given to the military authorities of the day on which, and the hour at which, the imprisonment of such person will expire.

5. When a person amenable to Military law is convicted of any offence by a Cantonment Magistrate, information in the form given below shall be furnished by such Cantonment Magistrate to the superior officer of the person so convicted :—

FORM OF INFORMATION.

Name and Military rank of person convicted	Offence of which convicted.	Sentence.	Date.
--	-----------------------------	-----------	-------

6. On all occasions on which a British soldier may have to be conveyed in custody from one place to another, whether before or after sentence, application should be made to the local military authorities for a military escort to accompany such prisoners to the jail. The employment of Indian policemen on such duties is strictly prohibited.

7. The annexed extract from a letter from the Secretary to Government, Punjab, pointing out the consequences resulting from a sentence of rigorous imprisonment being passed upon a soldier in His Majesty's service, is published for information and guidance :

Extract (paragraph 2) from a letter No. 3565, dated 30th October 1876, from the Secretary to Government, Punjab, to the Registrar, Chief Court, Punjab.—

“(2) The Lieutenant Governor would be obliged if the Judges of the Chief Court would point out to Magistrates that a sentence of rigorous imprisonment or hard labour, when passed upon a soldier in His Majesty's service, involves his discharge under Military Regulations and that, consequently, though unintentional, it gives a far higher punishment than the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, should be borne in mind by Magistrates when trying soldiers for petty offences.”

8. Whenever a Military pensioner is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment by a Criminal Court, a report, containing information regarding the nature and circumstances of the offence and the amount of imprisonment to which the offender has been sentenced, shall be made at once direct to the Controller of Military Accounts of the Circle within which the conviction takes place. A similar report should also be made to the Postmaster-General, Punjab and North-West Frontier Province, as Military pensioners in the Punjab are paid through the agency of the Post Office.

¹ C. H. R. & O., Vol. I, Ch. I, s. 103, p. 36.

² Ibid, s. 104, p. 37.

Criminal Courts subordinate to the District Magistrate will report such case to the District Magistrate, who will forward all such reports of convictions, in his own or subordinate Courts, to the Controller, and to the Postmaster-General, Punjab and North-West Frontier Province.

9. Whenever a reservist of the Indian Army is sentenced by a Criminal Court to transportation or imprisonment for any term exceeding three months, the facts are to be reported, in the manner described in the last preceding paragraph, without delay to the Adjutant-General in India.

10. The annexed letter from the Government of India in the Military Department, No. 1205 C., dated the 23rd June 1893, prescribing rules for the defence of soldiers charged with criminal offences and prosecuted by Government, is published for information and guidance :—

“With reference to the correspondence ending with your letter No. 5—Camp, dated the 15th December 1892, I am directed to state, for the information of the Commander-in-Chief that the Government of India sanction the adoption of the following rules for the defence of soldiers charged with criminal offences and prosecuted by Government in Civil Courts :—

(1) When soldiers are to be tried by a Civil Court (i.e., a Court which is not a Military Court) upon any criminal charge, the local military authorities (general officers commanding districts) should consult the District Magistrate and arrange with him for the selection and remuneration of a pleader, advocate or barrister, as the importance and necessities of the case may require.

(2) The fee to be paid to the pleader, advocate or barrister must not exceed Rs. 100 per diem, when the trial is before a High Court, and Rs. 50 per diem in all other cases.

(3) It is to be clearly understood that the local authorities are only to appoint a pleader in cases where they think it desirable, and are to fix the fee beforehand (subject to the maximum amounts stated above) at whatever sum may be reasonable with reference to the customary rates of the localities concerned.

(4) The expenditure incurred will be a military charge, and will be adjusted under Grant 14 of the Budget Estimates, minor head ‘Contingencies.’ ”

11. When counsel is rightly provided for the defence of a soldier at the first trial in the Civil Court, counsel can also be provided, when considered necessary, on appeal, subject to the limitations laid down in clauses (2) and (3) of the rules sanctioned in Military Department letter No. 1205 C., dated 23rd June 1893.

Indian soldiers on leave and reservists not under training are at their homes and among their friends and free from military control; they are therefore in the same position as the ordinary civil population in this matter, and as such have no claim on Government for legal assistance if they happen to get into difficulties. Reservists of the Indian Army when called out for training or service are in the same position as soldiers serving with the colours, and the rules above should therefore be held to be applicable to them.

These rules do not apply to Native Officers.¹

131. Whoever¹ abets the committing of mutiny² by an officer, soldier or sailor, in the Army or Navy³ of the Queen,⁴ or attempts to seduce any such officer, soldier or sailor from his allegiance or his duty, shall be punished with transportation for Abetting mutiny, or attempting to seduce a soldier or sailor from his duty.

life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

¹ P. C. C. R. & O., Vol. II, No. 25., p. 183.

Explanation.—In this section the words “officer” and “soldier” include any person subject to the Articles of War, for the better government of Her Majesty’s Army,¹ or to the Articles of War contained in Act No. V of 1869.

COMMENT.

The first part of this section relates to the offence of abetting mutiny. The offence contemplated is an abetment which is not followed by actual mutiny, or which, supposing actual mutiny follows, is not the cause of that mutiny.

1. ‘Whoever.’—See s. 139, infra. The offender must be a person not subject to Articles of War.

2. ‘Mutiny.’—The offence of mutiny consists in extreme insubordination, as if a soldier resists by force, or if a nun¹ military superiors, such acts proceeding of a military nature. Acts of a riotous or civil authorities rather than against mutiny.¹ Where P published an article in his newspaper purporting to be a letter from a sympathiser of native soldiers to their address and calculated to seduce soldiers of the Indian Army from their allegiance and their duty to the King-Emperor, and D abetted the same by printing the articles in his press, it was held that P and D were guilty of an offence under this section, and that publishing broadcast some 3,000 copies of the letter was an act amounting to an attempt.²

3. ‘Navy.’—This includes Indian Marine service (s. 138).

4. ‘The Queen.’—See s. 13, supra.

5. ‘Army.’—The Indian Army Act of 1911 is a consolidated statute relating to the Government of His Majesty’s Indian Forces

Explanation—The explanation was added by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 6. The section is thus extended to non-combatants attached to and serving with the Army. The Army Act,³ 1881, applies to the English Army. Act V of 1869 is repealed by the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911). The substantive offences of which the abetment is punishable under the Code are punishable under the Indian Army Act.

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove (1) that the person abetted is an officer, etc., of the King’s Army or Navy.

(2) That the accused abetted him to commit mutiny; or attempted to seduce him from his allegiance.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the commission of mutiny by—, an officer (or soldier, or sailor), in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor [or attempted to seduce—an officer (or soldier, or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor from his allegiance (or duty)], and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 131 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

¹ M. & M. 112.

² Pindi Das, (1907) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 37 of 1907.

³ 44 & 45 Vic., c. 58.

132. Whoever¹ abets² the committing of mutiny by an officer, soldier or sailor, in the Army or Navy of the Queen, shall, if mutiny be committed in consequence of that abetment,³ be punished with death or with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the abetment of mutiny when mutiny is committed in consequence of that abetment. It therefore prescribes enhanced penalty.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 139, infra.

2. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

3. 'Committed in consequence of that abetment.'—An act or offence is committed in consequence of abetment, when it is committed in consequence of the instigation, or in pursuance of the conspiracy, or with the aid which constitutes the abetment.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the abetment of mutiny as in s. 131.

(2) That mutiny was committed in consequence of such abetment.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the commission of mutiny by—, an officer (or soldier or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor and mutiny was committed in consequence of that abetment, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 132 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

133. Whoever¹ abets² an assault³ by an officer, soldier or sailor, in the Army or Navy of the Queen,⁴ or any superior officer⁵ being in the execution of his office,⁶ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section punishes abetment of assault which is not committed. The next section punishes similar abetment where the offence is committed.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 139, infra.

2. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

3. 'Assault'—The assault here meant may probably be that which the Mutiny Acts and Articles of War provide against, namely, the striking a superior officer, or using or offering any violence against him when he is on duty. As to the definition of 'assault,' see s. 351, infra.

4. 'The Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.

⁴ See Explan. to s. 109, supra.

5. 'Superior officer.'—These words of course exclude from this provision such assaults as one private soldier may commit on another. But they clearly comprehend all officers whether commissioned or non-commissioned—for a non-commissioned officer is a superior officer in relation to a private soldier, as a Captain is to Subaltern, and the Commanding Officer of a Regiment to all the officers and men under his command.¹

6. 'Execution of his office.'—It is an inseparable part of this offence that the officer should be assaulted while in the execution of his office. An officer is in the execution of his office not only when he is performing a prescribed duty, but also when he is discharging a duty arising out of the exigency of the moment. Thus an officer seeing a soldier out of quarters after hours, or improperly dressed or drunk in the streets of a town, or transgressing any order or usage of the service, would at all times be in the execution of his duty and therefore of his office, in ordering the soldier to his barracks or directing such other measures as might be necessary. It must, however, be remembered that an important ingredient in the soldier's offence is, that he offers violence knowingly to his officer. If he strikes a person whom he or his abettor really does not know to be an officer, the offence of abetment which is here made punishable so severely, has not been committed by the person who abets the blow.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1)
 (2) That the person
 (3) That the assault
 (4) That such officer was at the time in the execution of his duty.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted an assault by—an officer (or soldier, or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor on—a superior officer being in the execution of his office, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 133 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance) or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

134. Whoever¹ abets² an assault by an officer, soldier or sailor, in the Army or Navy of the Queen,³ on any superior officer being in the execution of his office, shall, if such assault⁴ be committed in consequence of that abetment,⁵ be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetment of such assault if the assault is committed.

COMMENT:

This section punishes the abetment of an assault when such assault is committed in consequence of that abetment. It stands in the same relation to s. 133 just as s. 132 does to s. 131.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 139, infra.

2. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

3. 'Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.
4. 'Assault.'—See s. 351, infra.
5. 'In consequence of that abetment.'—See Explanation to s. 109.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was guilty of acts of abetment.
 (2) That the assault was committed.
 (3) That it was committed in consequence of the abetment.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session.

Charge—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted an assault which was committed by—, an officer (or soldier, or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor on—a superior officer being in the execution of his office, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 134 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

135. Whoever¹ abets² the desertion³ of any officer, soldier or sailor,⁴ in the Army or Navy of the Queen,⁵ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Abetment of desertion of soldier or sailor.

COMMENT.

Offences referred to in this and the next section are also punishable under the Army Act. The section is somewhat ambiguous. It does not say whether the desertion abetted under it must take place or not.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 139, infra.
2. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

3. 'Desertion.'—The offence of desertion from the Army or Navy consists in this, that the officer, soldier, or sailor is unlawfully absent from his duty, and has no intention of returning to it. Whether he departs without leave from his regiment, or, whether, having leave of absence, he overstays his leave, if his intention is not to return to his duty and his regiment, he is a deserter. This intention not to return is essential to desertion, and, without it, the offence becomes one which is known in Military Law as "absence without leave," an offence of a much lighter kind.¹

4. 'Soldier.'—The word 'soldier' must be interpreted as in the Explanation to s. 131, infra. The definition of the word 'soldier' given in the Indian Articles of War is expressly confined to those Articles and is a very limited one.²

5. 'The Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person instigated was an officer, etc., in the King's Army or Navy.
 (2) That the accused instigated such person to desert.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class.

¹ See the Army Act (VIII of 1911), ss. 29 and 114.

² Sri Narayana, (1919) P. L. R. No. 102 of 1929.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted the desertion of—, an officer (or soldier, or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 135 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

136. Whoever,¹ except as hereinafter excepted, knowing or having reason to believe that an officer, soldier or sailor, in the Army or Navy of the Queen,² has deserted, harbours³ such officer, soldier or sailor, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour is given by a wife to her husband.

COMMENT:

A person harbouring a deserter is an 'accessory after the fact.' The gist of the offence is concealment of a deserter to prevent his apprehension. Exception is made only in the case of a wife. The word 'harbour' is defined in s. 216-B, but that definition is only applicable to ss. 212, 216 and 216-A.

The offence under this section is also punished by the Indian Army Act, 1911, s. 30.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 139, infra.

2. 'The Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.

3. 'Harbours.'—That is, conceals such deserter; or aids or assists him in concealing himself, or aids or assists in his rescue.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question was an officer, etc., in the King's Army or Navy.

(2) That such person had deserted.

(3) That the accused harboured such person.

(4) That the accused when he so harboured knew or had reason to believe that such person was a deserter.

(5) That the accused is not the wife of such person.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, knowing, or having reason to believe that—, an officer (or soldier, or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor had deserted, harboured such officer (or soldier, or sailor), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 136 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

137. The master or person in charge of a merchant vessel, on board of which any deserter from the Army or Navy of the Queen is concealed, shall, though ignorant of such concealment, be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, if he might have known of such concealment but for some neglect of his duty as such master or person in charge, or but for some want of discipline on board of the vessel.

Deserter concealed on board merchant vessel through negligence of master.

¹ See the Army Act, 1890 (53 Vic., c. 4), s. 153 (2).

COMMENT.

Under this section the captain of a merchant vessel in which a deserter has concealed himself is punished for his criminal negligence in allowing the deserter to be on board.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question is a deserter from the King's Army or Navy.

(2) That such deserter was concealed in a merchant vessel.

(3) That the accused was, at the time of such concealment, the master or person in charge of such vessel.

(4) That the accused was guilty of neglect of duty, as such master or person in charge; or was guilty of want of discipline on board.

(5) That such neglect of duty, or want of discipline, was the cause of such concealment.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That—, a deserter from the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor, had concealed himself on or about the—day of—, at—, on board—a merchant-vessel of which you are the master (or person in charge) through your neglect of duty as such master (or person in charge) [or through your want of discipline on board the said vessel] and that you have thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 137 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

138. Whoever¹ abets² what he knows to be an act of insubordination by an officer, soldier or sailor, in the Army or Navy of the Queen,³ shall, if such act of insubordination⁴ be committed in consequence of that abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Abetment of act of insubordination by soldier or sailor.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the master or person in charge of a merchant ship on board of which a deserter has concealed himself. The master is liable even though he is ignorant of such concealment.

In this section it is expressed as part of the definition of the offence that the abettor knows the quality of the act abetted, that is, he knows it to be an act of insubordination.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 139, infra.

2. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

3. 'The Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.

4. 'Act of insubordination.'—Any wilful breach of discipline on the part of a soldier or sailor will constitute an act of insubordination. The Army Act of 1890, s. 10, defines what insubordination is. It says:—

"Every person subject to Military Law who commits any of the following offences; that is to say:—

(1) Being concerned in any quarrel, fray or disorder refuses to obey any officer (though of inferior rank) who orders him into arrest, strives or uses or offers violence to any such officer; or

(2) Strives or uses or offers violence to any person, whether subject to Military Law or not, in whose custody he is placed, and whether he is or is not his superior officer; or

(3) Resists an escort whose duty it is to apprehend him or leave him in charge; or

(4) Being a soldier, breaks out of barracks, camp, or quarters, shall on conviction by Court-martial be liable, if an officer, to be cashiered, or to suffer such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned, and if a soldier, to suffer imprisonment, or such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned."

The Indian Army Act, 1911, s. 28, also specifies the cases of insubordination.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the act was one of insubordination.

(2) That the person guilty of such act was an officer, etc., in the King's Army or Navy.

(3) That the accused abetted such officer in doing such act.

(4) That the accused at the time knew the same to be an act of insubordination.

(5) That such act of insubordination was committed in consequence of such abetment.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, abetted what you knew to be an act of insubordination by—, an officer (or soldier, or sailor) in the Army (or Navy) of the King-Emperor and such act of insubordination was committed in consequence of the said abetment, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 138 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Application of foregoing sections to the Indian
Marine Service.

138-A. The foregoing sections of this Chapter shall apply as if Her Majesty's Indian Marine Service were comprised in the Navy of the Queen.

COMMENT.

This section was inserted by the Indian Marine Act, 1887.¹ It merely extends the significance of the expression "Navy of the Queen."

139. No person subject to any Articles of War for the Army or Navy of the Queen, or for any part of such Army or Navy, is subject to punishment under this Code for any of the offences defined in this Chapter.

COMMENT.

The object of this section is to specify definitely that persons subject to Military Law will not be dealt with under the Code for offences defined in this Chapter.

¹ Act XIV of 1887, s. 79.

140. Whoever, not being a soldier in the Military or Naval service of the Queen,¹ wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or token used by such a soldier,² with the intention that it may be believed that he is such a soldier, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The gist of the offence herein made penal is the intention of the accused wearing the dress of a soldier for the purpose of inducing others to believe that he is in service at the present time. Merely wearing a soldier's garb without the specific intention is no offence. Otherwise actors putting on every kind and shade of uniform will be hauled up under this section. Similarly persons using cast-off uniforms of soldiers will not be liable.

No fraudulent intention is made a part of the definition.

1. 'The Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.

2. 'Soldier.'—This section, assuming that soldiers only and not sailors wear a distinguishing dress, accoutrements, etc., provides a punishment for those who personate soldiers.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused wore the garb or carried the token in question.

(2) That such garb or token resembled that used by soldiers.

(3) That the accused was not a soldier.

(4) That the accused wore the garb or carried the token with the intention that it might be believed that he was a soldier, etc.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, not being a soldier in the Military (or Naval) service of the King-Emperor, on or about the—day of—, at—, wore (specify the garb) [or carried —, a token resembling (specify it) (or used by such soldier)] with the intention that it might be believed that you were such a soldier, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 140 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY.

THESE offences hold a middle place between State offences on the one hand, and crimes against person and property on the other. Many of the offences made by the assembly of persons who, whether they assemble tumultuously or otherwise, have a common unlawful purpose in their minds, the execution of which will disturb public order and excite alarm.¹

This Chapter deals with assemblies as a menace to the public peace, in a simple form, by persistence in such menace by rioting in a simple form so deals (s. 149) with the offence for any offence committed by the members comprising it. The remaining sections deal with connected offences and with offences connected with affrays.²

As to the duty to give information of offences punishable under ss. 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148, see the Code of Criminal Procedure, ss. 44 and 45.

As to dispersion of unlawful assemblies, see the Code of Criminal Procedure, Chapter IX.

141. An assembly of five or more¹ persons is designated an "unlawful assembly," if the common object² of the persons composing that assembly is—

*First.*³—To overawe by criminal force, or show of criminal force, the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or the Government of any Presidency, or any Lieutenant-Governor, or any public servant in the exercise of the lawful power of such public servant; or

*Second.*⁴—To resist the execution of any law, or of any legal process; or

*Third.*⁵—To commit any mischief or criminal trespass, or other offence; or

*Fourth.*⁶—By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force to any person, to take or obtain possession of any property or to deprive any person of the enjoyment of a right of way, or of the use of water or other incorporeal right of which he is in possession or enjoyment, or to enforce any right or supposed right; or

*Fifth.*⁷—By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to compel any person to do what he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do what he is legally entitled to do.

*Explanation.*⁸—An assembly, which was not unlawful when it assembled, may subsequently become an unlawful assembly.

¹ M. & M. 118.

² Rasul, (1888) P. R. No. 4 of 1889.

140. Whoever, not being a soldier in the Military or Naval service of the Queen,¹ wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or token used by such a soldier,² with the intention that it may be believed that he is such a soldier, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The gist of the offence herein made penal is the intention of the accused wearing the dress of a soldier for the purpose of inducing others to believe that he is in service at the present time. Merely wearing a soldier's garb without the specific intention is no offence. Otherwise actors putting on every kind and shade of uniform will be hauled up under this section. Similarly persons using cast-off uniforms of soldiers will not be liable.

No fraudulent intention is made a part of the definition.

1. 'The Queen.'—See s. 13, supra.

2. 'Soldier.'—This section, assuming that soldiers only and not sailors wear a distinguishing dress, accoutrements, etc., provides a punishment for those who personate soldiers.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused wore the garb or carried the token in question.

(2) That such garb or token resembled that used by soldiers.

(3) That the accused was not a soldier.

(4) That the accused wore the garb or carried the token with the intention that it might be believed that he was a soldier, etc.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, not being a soldier in the Military (or Naval) service of the King-Emperor, on or about the—day of—, at—, wore (specify the garb) [or carried —, a token resembling (specify it) (or used by such soldier)] with the intention that it might be believed that you were such a soldier, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 140 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

No one is a member of an unlawful assembly unless he is aware of the facts that render that assembly an unlawful one and intentionally joins or continues in it.¹

In order to find the common object of an unlawful assembly at the beginning, it is not a legitimate method merely to take all the actual offences committed by it in the course of the riot, and to infer that all these were originally part of its common object, but must normally be based on more evidence than the mere acts themselves.²

3. First clause.—The third clause of s. 121-A provides for a conspiracy to overawe Government of India.

'To overawe.'—A person kept by superior influence in awe, so that he fears to do that which he has a mind and will to do, and which the law empowers him to do, is overawed. But the common object which makes an assembly 'unlawful' is an intent to overawe by criminal force, or by show of criminal force. To carry a conviction under this head the common object of the persons composing the assembly must have been to overawe a public servant; the mere fact that their action did overawe such public servant is not in itself sufficient. A crowd of persons, assembling to see what the police officers were doing in arresting a person who had escaped from lawful arrest, who do not use force or show of force, does not form an unlawful assembly.³

As to the definition of 'criminal force' see. s. 350; of 'Government of India,' s. 16; of 'Government,' s. 17; of 'Presidency,' s. 18; of 'public servant,' s. 21.

4. Second clause.—Resistance to some law or legal process connotes some overt act, and mere words, when there is no intention of carrying them into effect, are not sufficient to prove an intention to resist. The conduct of an assembly and refusal of the members of it to disperse after being ordered to do so will constitute an overt act and establish a common object to resist within the meaning of this clause.⁴

'Law.'—A notification issued by an executive authority in exercise of a power conferred by statute is as much a part of the law as if it had been included within the body of the statute at the time of its enactment.⁵

Under this clause, resistance to the execution of the law is intended.⁶

Cases.—Resistance to an unlawful search.—Where a number of persons made an attempt to search a house which was being made by officers, who had written orders directing them to do so, it was held that the persons were convicted under s. 143.⁷

Where a number of persons, of their property and of their rights, real or supposed, resisted the execution of an order which was made by authority by a Collector, and in so resisting did not use more force than was for the purpose.⁸

Resistance to an order under Police Act.—Where the S. Police issued a notice under s. 30 of the Police Act, prohibiting the formation of associations, or assemblies started or formed by any class

¹ Ganapathi Sarma, (1922) M. W. N. 104.

² Ibid.

³ Lalji, (1924) 23 A. L. J., R. 32.

⁴ Per Mullick, J., in Abdul Hamid, (1922) 2 Pat. 134.

⁵ Per Mullick and Coutts, JJ., in ibid.

Das, J. contra.

⁶ Uma Charan Singh.

⁷ Narain, (1875) 7 N. W.

⁸ Nikka Jogi, (1883) 1

Charan Singh, sup.

No one is a member of an unlawful assembly unless he is aware of the facts that render that assembly an unlawful one and intentionally joins or continues in it.¹

In order to find the common object of an unlawful assembly at the beginning, it is not a legitimate method merely to take all the actual offences committed by it in the course of the riot, and to infer that all these were originally part of its common object, but must normally be based on more evidence than the mere acts themselves.²

3. First clause.—The third clause of s. 121-A provides for a conspiracy to overawe Government of India.

'To overawe.'—A person kept by superior influence in awe, so that he fears to do that which he has a mind and will to do, and which the law empowers him to do, is overawed. But the common object which makes an assembly 'unlawful' is an intent to overawe by criminal force, or by show of criminal force. To carry a conviction under this head the common object of the persons composing the assembly must have been to overawe a public servant; the mere fact that their action did overawe such public servant is not in itself sufficient. A crowd of persons, assembling to see what the police officers were doing in arresting a person who had escaped from lawful arrest, who do not use force or show of force, does not form an unlawful assembly.³

As to the definition of 'criminal force' see. s. 350; of 'Government of India,' s. 16; of 'Government,' s. 17; of 'Presidency,' s. 18; of 'public servant,' s. 21.

4. Second clause.—Resistance to some law or legal process connotes some overt act, and mere words, when there is no intention of carrying them into effect, are not sufficient to prove an intention to resist. The conduct of an assembly and refusal of the members of it to disperse after being ordered to do so will constitute an overt act and establish a common object to resist within the meaning of this clause.⁴

'Law.'—A notification issued by an executive authority in exercise of a power conferred by statute is as much a part of the law as if it had been incorporated within the body of the statute at the time of its enactment.⁵

one.⁶

Cases.—Resistance to an unlawful search.—Where a number of persons resisted an attempt to search a house which was being made by officers, who had not the right to search them, it was held that the persons convicted under s. 143.⁷ It was held that their property and of their rights, real or supposed, resisted the execution of an order which was made without authority by a Collector, and in so resisting did not use more force than was necessary for the purpose.⁸

Resistance to an order under Police Act.—Where the Superintendent of Police issued a notice under s. 30 of the Police Act, prohibiting any processions, associations, or assemblies started or formed by any class of persons within a certain

¹ Ganapathi Sarma, [1923] M. W. N. 104.

² Ibid.

³ Lalji, (1924) 23 A. L. J., R. 32.

⁴ Per Mullick, J., in Abdul Hamid, (1922) 2 Pat. 134.

⁵ Per Mullick and Coutts, JJ., in ibid.

Das, J. contra.

⁶ Uma Charan Singh, (1901) 29 Cal. 244.

⁷ Narain, (1875) 7 N. W. P. 209.

⁸ Nikka Jogi, (1883) 1 Weir 64. See Uma Charan Singh, sup area, otherwise than under a license, for a period of three months, it was held that if five persons joined or remained in any unlicensed procession, association, or assembly within such area, after it was ordered to disperse, and if such persons were acting together with the common object that the person who had convened the assembly or association or promoted the procession should resist the execution of the Superintendent's order, then each of such five persons would be a member of an unlawful assembly unless he was unaware of the fact that no license had been obtained.¹

5. Third clause.—This clause specifies only two offences, viz., mischief and criminal trespass, but the words "or other offence" seem to denote that all offences are included though only two are enumerated in a haphazard way. This construction is borne out by the fact that the word "offence" has been given a wider significance in this clause (see s. 40). 'Offence' under this clause means a thing punishable under the Code, or under any special or local law if punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine (s. 40).

As to the definition of 'mischief,' see s. 425; of 'criminal trespass,' s. 441.

An assembly of five or more persons becomes an unlawful assembly if the common object is not to arrest persons who commit an offence but to subject to humiliation persons who intervene on behalf of the offenders.²

6. Fourth clause.—The act falling within the purview of this clause is made punishable owing to the injurious consequences which it is likely to cause to the public peace. But this clause does not take away the right of private defence of property which belongs naturally to every man and which has been legalized and justified by the Code. It ought not to affect cl. (2) of s. 105, which allows a person to recover the property carried away by theft.

This clause is meant to prevent the resort to force in vindication of supposed rights. It makes a distinction between an admitted claim or an ascertained right and a disputed claim.³

'To enforce any right or supposed right.'—This would seem to make a division into (1) rights in actual enjoyment when interfered with; (2) rights claimed though not in actual enjoyment when interfered with.⁴ The phrase 'to enforce a right' can only apply when the party claiming the right has not possession over the subject of the right, and therein lies the distinction between enforcing a right and maintaining a right.⁵ The true import of the phrase relates to an initial act when it is done in furtherance of any right and not to an act when it is done to maintain a position already achieved in the lawful exercise of that right.⁶ A person entitled to the land, but not in possession of it, may take peaceable possession, but if he enters by force in such a manner as to provoke a breach of the peace, then he takes the consequences, because he has no right to take the law in his own hands.⁷ Persons who are not animated with the intention to enforce a right, or supposed right, but to maintain undisturbed the actual subsisting enjoyment of a right which is being at the time exercised, do not, in preventing an encroachment, commit an offence under this section.⁸ Thus, a tenant is justified in resisting an illegal distraint.⁹ If persons are rightfully in possession of land, and find it necessary to protect themselves from aggression they are justified in taking

¹ Held by Mallick and Coutt, JJ. (Das, J. dissentienti), in Abdul Hamid, (1922) 2 Pat. 134.

² Rameshday Ram, (1926) 31 C. L. J. 476.

³ Gulam Hossain, (1909) 11 Bom. L. R. 549.

⁴ Ganowari Lal Das, (1889) 16 Cal. 208, 219.

⁵ Ramchandra Prasad Singh, (1913) 17 C. W. N. 1122; Sarduldas Singh, (1913) 17 C. C. 21.

⁶ Erly Nath, (1924) 10 W. N. 589, 27 O. C.

292.

⁷ Ramchandra Appay, Criminal Appeals Nos. 146-149 of 1911, decided on 21st June, 1911, by Chandavarkar and Hayward, JJ.

⁸ Shunker Singh v. Burnah, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 25; Birjoo Singh v. Khub Lal, (1873) 19 W. R. 68; Deonath Ghattack v. Rajesomkar Singh, (1878) 3 Cal. 573; Biku Noer v. W. J. Marshman, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 369.

⁹ (1875) 1 Weir 66.

precautions and using such force as is necessary to prevent the aggression.¹ But when a body of men are determined to vindicate their rights, or supposed rights, by unlawful force, and when they engage in a fight with men, who, on the other hand, are equally determined to vindicate by unlawful force their rights or supposed rights, no question of self-defence arises. Neither side is trying to protect itself but each side is trying to get the better of the other.² The question as to who was in actual occupation just before the occurrence took place is of paramount importance, and a right to possession, or constructive possession, is not generally of much importance.³

"The words... 'to enforce a right or supposed right' show that it is perfectly immaterial whether the act which one seeks to prevent by the use of criminal force or show of criminal force is legal or illegal, the test of criminality being the determination to use criminal force and act otherwise than in due course of law so as to threaten the public peace."⁴ "The natural tendency of the law of all civilized states is to restrict, within constantly narrowing limits, the right of self-help... In the domain of... defined by the law itself. opponent of the accused category of those in which self-defence is permitted."⁵

Cases.—Disputes regarding possession of land.—Where there was a dispute of long-standing between the accused and certain other parties regarding the possession of certain land, and the accused went to sow the land with indigo, accompanied by a body of men armed with clubs and who kept off the opposite party by brandishing their weapons while the land was being sowed, it was held that they were guilty of the offence.⁶ Where two parties were entitled to joint possession of a property but one party having been out of possession their servants with thirty or forty other men went armed with clubs to take forcible possession of the property and succeeded in getting it without having had to use any force, it was held that the servants were guilty of this offence.⁷ Where the accused, who were found to be in possession of the disputed land, went upon it in a large body armed with clubs prepared in anticipation of a fight, and were reaping the paddy grown by them, when the complainant's party came up and attempted to cut the same, whereupon a fight ensued and one man was seriously wounded and died subsequently, it was held that the common object was not to enforce a right, but to maintain undisturbed the actual enjoyment of a right, and that the assembly was not, therefore, unlawful.⁸

Procession.—Where the accused assembled and forcibly interrupted a procession upon the ground that it was a nuisance or annoyance to them or their community, it was held that their act clearly fell within clause 4 of s. 141.⁹ A headman and eighteen villagers conducted a funeral procession along a public road with the object of vindicating their right to use the road, and intending to resist obstruction. It was not proved that the party was armed, but some of its members used threatening language. It was held that the use of threats made the funeral party an unlawful assembly.¹⁰ Where a party goes out armed for the express purpose of having a fight and its object is not so much to conduct a religious procession as to have a

¹ Narsang Pathakhai, (1890) 14 Bom. 441; Pachkauri, (1897) 24 Cal. 686; Fouzar Rai, (1917) 4 P. L. W. 111, 3 P. L. J. 419.

² Prag Dal, (1898) 20 All. 459; Mohar

³ Per Holloway, J., in (1873) 7 M. H. C. App. 33.

⁴ Peary Mohun Sircar, (1883) 9 Cal. 629.

⁵ Espin Bekari Guka v. Pranshal Majumdar, (1906) 11 C. W. N. 176.

⁶ Siljhi Malis, (1909) 26 Cal. 863.

⁷ (1869) 5 M. H. C. App. 6, 1 Weir 27.

⁸ New Eyre Yawar, (1905) U. B. R. 21.

fight, the members of the party constitute an unlawful assembly and if they use force or violence, they are guilty of rioting under s. 147 of the Code.¹

Illegal removal.—Paddy belonging to a society to which the first accused belonged was stored in a granary in a street. The treasurer of the society attempted to forcibly take possession of the paddy with his servants, whereupon all the accused resisted him, and maintained the possession of the first accused, some blows being struck. It was held that no offence was committed.²

Illegal construction of a dam.—The complainant's party without the permission of the accused constructed a dam across a pyne exclusively belonging to the accused who had obtained an injunction from the Civil Court restraining the complainant's party from interfering with the accused in their use and occupation of the pyne. The accused in attempting to cut the dam were opposed by the complainant's party two of whom were struck by the accused and the accused were convicted of rioting and of causing grievous hurt. It was held that after the Civil Court decree and injunction the accused could not be held to be enforcing a right within the meaning of clause (4) of this section and the presence of the complainant's party in opposing the accused was a criminal trespass which entitled the accused to a right of private defence.³

7. Fifth clause.—This clause is very comprehensive and applies to all the rights a man can possess, whether they concern the enjoyment of property or not. It differs from the preceding clause in the omission of any reference to a 'right or supposed right.'

The mere use of criminal force or show of criminal force by any person to take possession of any property is not sufficient to bring a case within this clause, unless some criminal intent is proved against the persons so using force or show of force.⁴ Where, therefore, a District Board decided to replace a bridge across a khal which was out of repair by means of a road with pipes passing underneath for the flow of water, and the owners of the bed of the khal objected to the laying of the pipes on the ground that it would obstruct the flow of water and removed the pipes placed there by the District Board, it was held that the owners could not be convicted.⁵

8. Explanation.—An assembly which is lawful in its inception may become unlawful by the subsequent acts of its members.⁶ It may turn unlawful all of a sudden and without previous concert among its members.⁷ But an illegal act of one or two members, not acquiesced in by the others, do not change the character of the assembly.⁸

An assembly which is lawful in itself does not become unlawful merely because the members know that their assembly would be opposed and a breach of the peace would be committed.⁹ The appellants assembled with others for a lawful purpose, and with no intention of carrying it out unlawfully, but with the knowledge that their assembly would be opposed, and with good reason to suppose that a breach of the peace would be committed by those who opposed it. It was held that they could not be rightly convicted of an unlawful assembly.¹⁰

An assembly which is not unlawful in its inception does not become an unlawful assembly because of its refusal to obey an order to disperse.¹¹

¹ Dilli, (1925) 2 O. W. N. 589.

² Ayya Annaswamy Aiyar, (1901) 25 Mad. 624.

³ Rammandan Prasad Singh, (1913) 17 C. W. N. 1132.

⁴ Addala Bhusa v. Kali Das De, (1907) 12 C. W. N. 96.

⁵ Ibid.

⁶ Khemee Sing, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 19;

Lokenath Kar, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 2.

⁷ Ragho Singh, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 507.

⁸ Dinobundo Rai, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 19.

⁹ Beatty v. Gillbanks, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 308.

¹⁰ Ibid.

¹¹ Girdhara Singh, (1921) 4 U. P. L. R. (L.) 11.

"No man can foresee at the commencement what course they, i.e., assemblies, will take, or what consequences will ensue. Though cases may occur in which the object of such assemblies is at first defined and moderate, they rapidly enlarge their powers of mischief; and from the natural effects of the excitement and ferment inseparable from the collection of multitudes in one mass, the original design is quickly lost sight of, and men hurry on to the commission of crimes, which at their first meeting they had never contemplated. The beginning of tumult is like the letting out of water; if not stopped at first, it becomes difficult to do so afterwards; it rises and increases, until it overwhelms the fairest and the most valuable works of man."¹

9. Section 142.—Section 141 having explained what an unlawful assembly is, this section declares who may be said to be a member of such an assembly. Any one who joins an unlawful assembly or continues in it is a member of such assembly.

'Continues.'—Although individuals may in the first instance have associated themselves with a mob from motives perfectly innocent, nevertheless, if the mob is or becomes an unlawful assembly and the individuals in question take part in its proceedings, they will be liable as members of an unlawful assembly.² Where certain persons had assembled to prevent a procession by force from passing over a certain street, and they were ordered by the police to disperse but neglected to do so, it was held that they were guilty of the offence of being members of an unlawful assembly.³

Exercising of lawful rights.—When an attack is made on persons acting in the lawful exercise of their right over property, they are entitled to the right of private defence, and the only question that arises thereafter is whether any member of the party individually exceeded the right. Persons exercising their lawful rights are not members of an unlawful assembly, nor can the assembly become unlawful by their repelling an attack made on them by persons who had no right to obstruct them, nor by exceeding the lawful use of their right of private defence. In such a case each is liable only for his individual acts done in excess of such right.⁴

Statutory application.—See the Rangoon Police Act (Burma Act IV of 1899), s. 38 (2).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the assembly in question consisted of five or more persons.

Where, of five persons convicted, it was found as regards two of them that there had been no common object, it was held that the conviction of the others could not be maintained, as there must have been five persons who had a common object before there could be an unlawful assembly and rioting.⁵

(2) That the object of the persons so assembled (either at the time it became an assembly, or during the time that it continued to be assembled) was any of the five objects mentioned in s. 141.

(3) That such object was common to the persons assembled.⁶

The essence of the offence is the common unlawful purpose and the accused cannot be convicted if the common object proved is different from the common object in the charge or for which he has been tried.⁷

If the common object fails and the substantive charge is disbelieved the accused should be acquitted. It is not proper for an appellate Court, while disbelieving the alleged common object of an unlawful assembly, to find out a different

¹ 6 P. L. T. 310.

² Vyapuri Chetti, (1909) 5 M. L. T. 285.

³ Bhagiram Dome v. Atar Dome, (1888) 15 Cal. 338.

⁴ Loganathaiyar, (1909) 6 M. L. T. 17.

⁵ Kunja Bhuiya, (1912) 39 Cal. 896; Ambika Singh, (1921) 1 Pat. 212; Bhagwat Jha, (1923)

common object regarding which the accused were never called upon to plead nor tried and to affirm the conviction.¹

(4) That the accused joined, or continued in, such assembly.

(5) That he did so intentionally.

(6) That he did so being aware of the above facts.

... compoundable—Any
... gives power to a Magistrate to disperse unlawful assemblies by using civil or military force.²

Joint trial.—As a matter of procedure it is irregular to treat both parties to a riot as constituting one unlawful assembly, and to try them together inasmuch as they do not have one common object.³ Members of each faction may be called as witnesses against their opponents.⁴

Charge.—The charge should state the common object of the assembly.⁵ Omission to state it does not vitiate a conviction if there is evidence on the record to show it.⁶ Such an omission is a mere irregularity which will vitiate the trial only if it has caused miscarriage of justice on the merits; and the test of such a miscarriage is whether the accused were prejudiced by the omission.

The charge should run thus:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the——day of——, at——, were a member of an unlawful assembly, the common object of which was (specify the object), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 143 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

144. Whoever, being armed with any deadly weapon, or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, is a member of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Joining unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapon.

COMMENT:

The risk to the public tranquillity is aggravated by the intention of using force evinced by carrying arms. This section, therefore, provides for an enhanced punishment where the member of an unlawful assembly is armed with a deadly weapon.

Scope.—The enhanced punishment under the section can only be inflicted on that member of an unlawful assembly who uses a weapon of offence. The word 'whoever' justifies this interpretation.

1. 'Weapon of offence.'—That is, a weapon which under the present circumstances and at the present time (during the existence of the unlawful assembly) is an offensive weapon, notwithstanding that it might be otherwise at a different

¹ Rahimuddin v. Asgarali, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 31.

² Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 127—132.

³ Suroop Chander Paul, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 75.

⁴ Mahtab Hussain, (1869) 1 N. W. P. 293; Newab, (1881) P. R. No. 26 of 1881.

⁵ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9; ibid., 10; Tafazzul Ahmed Chowdhry, (1899) 26 Cal. 630.

Reference
uary 1911.

time and place.¹ A crowd of about 100 persons, including the accused, had assembled together armed with bill-hooks and sticks, but it dispersed at once on seeing the Police. On these facts the Magistrate assumed that the intention of the members of the crowd was to use criminal force, and having regard to the weapons with which they were armed, he convicted the accused under this section. The High Court held that the prosecution had failed to show that the common object of the crowd was such as would constitute it an unlawful assembly as defined by s. 141, and that the accused were entitled to be acquitted.²

Sections 114 and 144.—When one person instigates another to join an unlawful assembly armed with a deadly weapon and afterwards joins the unlawful assembly himself, he may be punishable under this section, read with s. 114, even though he was not himself armed with a deadly weapon.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (6) as in s. 143; and further

(7) That the accused was armed with a deadly weapon, or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate.

Charge—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being armed with a deadly weapon, to wit—, [or armed with something which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, to wit—] were a member of an unlawful assembly, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 144 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

145. Whoever joins or continues in an unlawful assembly, knowing that such unlawful assembly has been commanded in the manner prescribed by law to disperse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Joining or continuing in unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse.

COMMENT.

This section and s. 151 are connected with each other so far as the principle underlying both of them is concerned. Section 127 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that "if a police-station may command or more persons likely to cause a riot, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly."

Section 188 of the Penal Code provides for the disobedience of any lawful order promulgated by a public servant. This section and s. 151 deal with special cases as the disobedience may cause serious breach of the peace.

'Commanded in the manner prescribed by law to disperse.'—This expression means, in the city of Bombay, commanded as prescribed in s. 40 (1) of the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902. It cannot be construed in a wider sense so as to include a command by a Magistrate to disperse without any order having been given by an officer in charge of a police-station.⁴

¹ M. & M. 123.

C. W. N. 250.

² Peelimuthu Tavan, (1900) 24 Mad. 124.

³ Keshav Gorind, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R.

⁴ Srihari Shome v. Lal Khan, (1900) 5 350, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 47.

passers-by commits the offence of rioting.¹ Where a husband and his friends took possession of his wife by force and violence they were held guilty of rioting.² Actual use of force, and not merely a show of force, is necessary. Where a number of men who were assembled at a certain place ran away on being attacked by the opposite party, they were held not guilty of rioting.³

'Violence.'—This word is not restricted to force used against persons only, but it extends also to force used against inanimate objects.⁴ Thus, if an unlawful assembly came together for the purpose of pulling down a man's house, and proceeded to carry out the object, they could be said to have used violence. Similarly, where the accused struck at the door of the complainant who fled away to save himself from being beaten, it was held that they had used violence.⁵ Pulling down a toddy shop and cutting and destroying spatts of toddy trees are enough to show that violence was used.⁶

'Unlawful assembly.'—See s. 141, supra.

'Any member thereof.'—Whether only one, or more than one, of the persons assembled use the force, the penal consequences apply equally to all. It will be otherwise, however, if the force or violence is used for a distinct purpose... as if it consists of a mere affray or assault upon each other, or upon bystanders, by some members of the assembly.⁷ If any person encourages, or promotes, or takes part in riots, whether by words, signs, or gestures, or by wearing the badge or ensign of the rioters, he is himself considered a rioter. Active participation in actual violence is not necessary. Some may encourage by words, others by signs, and others again may actually cause hurt and yet all would be equally guilty of rioting.⁸

2. 'In prosecution of the common object.'—Section 141 indicates what objects are deemed unlawful. If the common object of an assembly is not illegal, it is not rioting if force is used by any member of that assembly.⁹ If the common object is not unlawful then there can be no unlawful assembly and consequently no rioting. Thus, resistance to the execution of an illegal warrant within reasonable bounds does not amount to rioting because the common object is not unlawful; but when the right of resistance is exceeded and a severe injury, not called for, is inflicted, the person who inflicts such injury may be convicted of such injury.¹⁰ Similarly, resistance to a search without a search warrant does not amount to rioting.¹¹ Where a warrant of attachment was signed, not by the Munsiff, but by the Sheristadar, and did not bear the seal of the Court, and the accused were charged with rioting with the common object of illegally rescuing the attached property, it was held that the omission of the seal rendered the attachment illegal, and that, therefore, the common object charged was not an unlawful common object and consequently the charge of rioting was not sustainable.¹² Although in ascertaining whether the object of the members composing an assembly is such as to constitute an unlawful assembly, all the circumstances must be regarded which tend to show what that object is, and the result of such consideration may be so negative the view that the object is such as to render the assembly unlawful, till when once the offence of rioting or any other offence is brought home to a member of an unlawful assembly, it rests with him to establish that the apparent

¹ Sujatali Nyamatali, (1921) 24 Bom. R. 110.

² Askur, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) Cr. 12.

³ Mahomed Ishaq Khan, (1904) 1 A. L. J. R. 82.

⁴ Samaruddi, (1912) 40 Cal. 367; Rasul, (1898) P. R. No. 4 of 1899.

⁵ Venkatarubbaier, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 87.

⁶ Marimuthu Naidu, (1923) 32 M. L. T.

315.

⁷ M. & M. 124.

⁸ Ganu, (1875) Unrep. Cr. C. 99.

⁹ Jagarnath Mandhata, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 233; Parmeshwar Singh, (1899) 4 C. W. N. 345.

¹⁰ Uma Charan Singh, (1901) 29 Cal. 244.

¹¹ Bajrangi Gope, (1910) 38 Cal. 304.

¹² Khidir Buz, (1918) 3 P. L. J. 636.

offence is no offence, by reason of the act which constitutes the offence being justifiable under the provisions relating to the right of private defence.¹

Acts done by some members of an unlawful assembly outside the common object of the assembly nor of such a nature as the members of the assembly could have known to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object are only chargeable against the actual perpetrators of those acts.²

Sudden quarrel.—If a number of persons assembled for any lawful purpose suddenly quarrel without any previous intention or design, they do not commit a riot in the legal sense of the word.³ Similarly, if a fight were to spring up between two of the persons unlawfully assembled, this would only make them individually responsible, and not convert the assembly into a riot.⁴ It is, however, not necessary that there should be a common object prior to the commencement of the fight. It is also immaterial that the accused conceived the idea of injuring suddenly after the accused went to the scene of offence.⁵

Forcible entry.—A plea of right to possession is no answer to a charge of rioting by making a forcible entry on land cultivated by a trespasser, who is in possession and opposes the entry.⁶

Private defence.—It is often very difficult to decide how far the right of private defence may be urged as justification or palliation. But it is settled that there can be no right of private defence where the riot is premeditated on both sides.⁷ Where both parties are armed and prepared to fight, it is immaterial who is the first to attack, unless it is shown that a particular party was acting within the legal limits of the right of private defence.⁸

The illegality of certain act or acts opposed by criminal force is no defence to a charge of rioting, unless the circumstances are such that a right of self-defence arises.⁹

If the common object of an assembly is to enforce the right or supposed right of private defence of person or property, and force is used in prosecution of a common object to enforce that right by means of criminal force, or show of such force, rioting is committed, within the terms of the law, unless circumstances exist which give occasion for the exercise of the right of private defence and this right is exercised within the limits prescribed by law.¹⁰

The party of the accused accompanied by R went armed with clubs to fish in a tank in which R had a two-annas share. The complainant, who, with some other co-sharers, represented an eleven-annas interest in the tank, went there with some of these co-sharers, to protest on the ground that the accused had no share or interest in the tank. A fight ensued in the course of which some of the complainant's party received slight injuries. It was held that the accused were guilty of rioting and voluntarily causing hurt.¹¹ The accused went with three ploughs on land to which the complainant had the right of possession, and of which he was in possession till such entry, and began to plough up the land, to uproot some castor plants, and to throw them away. While they were thus in actual but temporary occupation, the complainant and his party went on the land and tried to unyoke the cattle, whereupon a riot took place. It was held that the accused were guilty

¹ Rasul, (1888) P. R. No. 4 of 1889.

² Agra, (1914) P. R. No. 37 of 1914, P. L. R. No. 219 of 1915, P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 69 of 1914.

³ Khajah Noorul Hossein v. Fabre-Tonnerre, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 26; Government v. Doolubh, 2 N. A. R. 883.

⁴ Muzhur Hossein, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 208.

⁵ Golla Hanumappa, (1911) 35 Mad. 243.

⁶ Appavu Nayak, (1882) 6 Mad. 245; Sajawara, (1903) 6 P. L. R. 47. But see Ram

Kishan Singh, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 335, which justifies such entry by an auction-purchaser.

⁷ Prag Dut, (1898) 20 All. 459.

⁸ Kales Beparee, (1878) 1 C. L. R. 521; Saadullah, (1923) 6 L. L. J. 170.

⁹ (1873) 7 M. H. C. App. 35; 1 Weir 58.

¹⁰ Rasul, sup.

¹¹ Anant Pandit v. Madhusudan Mandal, (1899) 26 Cal. 574; Ganouri Lal Das, (1889) 16 Cal. 206; Alladad, (1869) P. R. No. 1 of 1870.

of rioting and that their action in beating the complainant's party was not justified by the fact of their having obtained temporary occupation.¹ Where more than twenty-five persons went in a body to enforce the right or supposed right of one of them to an animal by removing it from the house of a third person, and after they had removed it and gone some distance, they were followed by that person, who was consequently attacked and beaten by some of them and died by a blow on the head, it was held that the assembly was an unlawful assembly.²

The accused, on receiving information that the complainant's party were about to take forcible possession of a plot of land, which was found by the Court to be in the possession of the accused, collected a large number of men, some of whom were armed, and went through the village to the land in question. While they were engaged in ploughing, the complainant's party came up and interfered with the ploughing. A fight ensued, in the course of which one of the complainant's party was grievously wounded and subsequently died, and two of the accused's party were hurt. It was held that the accused were justified in taking such precautions as they thought were required to prevent the aggression, and that they could not be held to be members of an unlawful assembly.³ Where the accused were maintained in possession of certain lands, including a homestead, under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the opposite party unlawfully attempted to take possession of some huts standing thereon, whereupon the accused came with an armed body and demolished the huts, and on being resisted by the opposite party wounded some of them, it was held, by the majority of the Court, that they were justified in taking precautions and using such force as was necessary to prevent aggression by the opposite party.⁴

Where, on K being assaulted by B, a number of persons rushed to the scene and a fracas occurred in which B was killed, and K and the other persons forming the assembly were convicted of rioting, it was held that they were not guilty of rioting as the common object of the crowd was to rescue K and not to assault B.⁵

See Comment and Cases on ss. 99 and 141, supra.

CASES.

Resistance to distraint.—Where a landlord, who had not tendered to his tenant such a lease as the latter was bound to accept under the Madras Rent Recovery Act (Mad. Act VIII of 1865), distrained his cattle for arrears of rent, the assistance of the Police having been procured for the purpose, and the tenant with others forcibly obstructed the removal of the cattle, it was held that they were guilty of rioting.⁶ But obstruction offered to a distraint by a landlord when no rent was in arrear was held to be no offence.⁷

Resistance to a public officer.—N, S and G were appointed special constables under s. 17 of the Police Act, 1861. A Police Inspector accompanied by some police went to their village and informed them that they had been so appointed, and requested them to accompany him to a Police Station which they declined to do. The Inspector then had N arrested, whereupon N shook himself free, and N, S and G with other persons, who had assembled, abused and threatened the police and compelled them to withdraw from the village. It was held that the refusal of N to accompany the Inspector was not an offence for which N could be arrested, and, as the police when obstructed were not acting in lawful discharge of their duty, none of the persons concerned could be convicted of an offence under s. 353, but they were guilty of rioting under this section.⁸

¹ Jairam Mahton, (1907) 35 Cal. 103.

² Agra, (1914) P. L. R. No. 219 of 1915, P. W. R. Cr. No. 69 of 1914, P. R. No. 37 of 1914.

³ Pachkauri, (1897) 24 Cal. 686; Fateh Singh, (1913) 41 Cal. 43; Samba Pillai, [1916] 2 M. W. N. 213; Fouzdar Rai, (1917) 4 P. L. W.

III, 3 P. L. J. 419; Sunder Buteh Singh, (1918) 3 P. L. J. 653.

⁴ Porek Nath Sircar, (1905) 33 Cal. 295.

⁵ Ambika Singh, (1921) 1 Pat. 212.

⁶ Eamayya, (1859) 13 Mad. 148.

⁷ (1875) 8 M. H. C. App. 11; 1 Weir 50.

⁸ Raman Singh, (1900) 28 Cal. 411.

Where a Sub-Inspector of Police, on receiving information of the commission of a dacoity, reached the house of one of the alleged offenders, accompanied by the complainant and the village officers, but without a search warrant, whereupon they were beaten by the accused who were charged with, and convicted of, rioting, with the common object of resisting the search, assault and causing hurt, under ss. 147, 323 and 353; it was held that the search was illegal, and that the common object having failed, the conviction under s. 147 was bad.¹ But where certain Police officers acting bona fide under a defective search warrant were resisted by more than five persons and hurt was caused, the former Chief Court of the Punjab held that they were guilty of an offence under s. 147 read with s. 99 if the common object was to cause hurt and hurt was caused.² A complaint was lodged against two persons under s. 498 for abduction of K, complainant's daughter-in-law, the Magistrate ordered the issue of a warrant for the arrest of K, apparently intending to act under s. 90 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, but the warrant erroneously charged K herself with an offence under s. 498. Under this warrant the Head Constable arrested K and had taken her to a distance of about 200 kadams when a large concourse of people assembled, amongst whom were the accused, who took away the woman from the custody of the Head Constable and the constables with him, and inflicted certain injuries upon them. It was held that the accused were rightly convicted of an offence of rioting.³

Preventing cow-killing.—Where several Hindus, acting in concert, forcibly removed an ox and two cows from the possession of a Mahomedan, not for the purpose of causing 'wrongful gain' to themselves or 'wrongful loss' to the owner of the cattle, but for the purpose of preventing the killing of the cows, it was held that they were guilty not of dacoity but of rioting.⁴ But the authority of this case has been shaken by a subsequent decision of the same High Court. In the later case a large body of Hindus, acting in concert, and apparently under the influence of a religious feeling, attacked certain Mahomedans who were driving cattle along a public road, and forcibly deprived them of the possession of such cattle under circumstances which did not indicate any intention of subsequently restoring such cattle to their lawful owners. It was held that the offence of which the Hindus were guilty was dacoity and not merely rioting.⁵

Recovering possession of cattle.—Persons whose common object was by means of criminal force to recover possession of their cattle seized for trespass, and who made use of such force and took away their cattle, were held guilty of rioting.⁶

In the absence of a definite finding that five or more people took part in the occurrence, a conviction for rioting cannot be sustained.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that five or more persons were assembled.

(2) That such assembly was, when it was convened, or subsequently became unlawful, having any one of the five objects specified in s. 141.

(3) That such object was the common object of those composing such assembly.⁸

¹ Bojrange Gope, (1910) 38 Cal. 304.

² Gaman, (1913) P. R. No. 16 of 1913.

³ Attar Singh, (1917) P. R. No. 9 of 1918.

⁴ Raghunath Rao, (1892) 16 All. 22. This case has not been followed in Parichat, (1908) 5 N. L. R. 17, where it was held that a man who from conscientious objection to the killing of cattle took a buffalo from its owner without his consent, caused wrongful loss, and committed theft, though his object was to benefit the animal, not to injure the owner.

⁵ Ram Baran, (1893) 15 All. 299.

⁶ Boloo Sheikh, (1854) W. R. (Gap No.) Cr. 21.

⁷ Ramanrami Teran, (1921) 14 L. W. 588, 30 M. L. T. (H. C.) 18; Sinnarami Mudali, (1922) 16 L. W. 526; Ala Muhammad, (1923) 6 L. L. J. 475.

⁸ Sabir, (1894) 22 Cal. 276; Aminulla, (1922) 35 C. L. J. 353, 26 C. W. N. 636.

It is essential to sustain a conviction that the persons forming the unlawful assembly should be animated by a common object, and in the absence of such a finding the conviction is not sustainable and ought on that ground alone to be set aside.¹ Where the common object has not been sustained, the High Court in a reference under s. 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot invent another common object in order to support the conviction.²

(4) That the accused, or any member of such unlawful assembly, used force or violence.

(5) That such force or violence was used in the prosecution of such common object.

In cases of rioting it often happens that the Court may consider that the story told by the prosecution is false in some of its details, but is nevertheless sufficient to establish the guilt of the accused. But it is not permissible to have a conviction upon a story which is not true, as being the case they had to meet.³

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable⁴—Any Magistrate.

Separate trial.—Where two opposite factions commit a riot, it is irregular to treat both parties as constituting one unlawful assembly, and to try them together, as they had not one common object within the meaning of s. 141; and each party should be tried separately.⁵

Cumulative sentences.—Separate sentences may be passed under this section and s. 323 (causing hurt)⁶; or under this section and s. 325 (causing grievous hurt).⁷ The Calcutta High Court in an early case held that a double sentence under this section and s. 353 was illegal where the force which was used, and which formed one of the component elements of the offence of rioting, was criminal force used to public servants.⁸ But in a later case it laid down that separate sentences might be passed.⁹ Though under s. 146 the use of force or violence is a necessary ingredient of the offence of rioting, yet separate sentences passed on those who actually used force or violence are not illegal.¹⁰ Where an accused person was found with several others to have entered upon another person's land with the common object of cutting crops standing on it, and in prosecution of that object hurt was caused, it was held that the accused could not be convicted and sentenced for criminal trespass under s. 447, in addition to a conviction and sentence for rioting under this section, the common object of the riot and the intention in the criminal trespass being substantially the same in the case.¹¹ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly was to assault the Police Officers in discharging

¹ Poresh Nath Sircar, (1905) 33 Cal. 295.

² Akbar Molla, (1923) 38 C. L. J. 379.

³ Banga Hadua, (1909) 11 C. L. J. 270.

⁴ This offence cannot be compounded under any circumstances. It is ultra vires of a Magistrate to allow a non-compoundable offence to be compromised on the grounds that the offence committed might probably in the end turn out to be a compoundable one or that the consequence of his action might probably, in his view, be better for the complainant; Hira Singh, (1907) P. R. No. 11 of 1907.

⁵ Sheikh Bazu, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 47, P. R. No. 26 of 1881; Saifulla, (1882) P. R.

No. 15 of 1882; Nga Shwe Ya, (1884) S. J. L. B. 275; Nga Shwe Zan, (1885) S. J. L. B. 331; Nath Singh, O. S. C. 75.

⁶ Poresh Nath Sircar, (1905) 33 Cal. 295.

⁷ Pershad, (1885) 7 All. 414, F. R., Bishe-shar, (1887) 9 All. 645; Tolha, (1895) P. R. No. 8 of 1895; Bhagwan Singh, (1900) P. R. No. 4 of 1901; Bhagwandin Singh, O. S. C. 125.

⁸ Ramdihal, (1898) 3 C. W. N. 174.

⁹ Prolash Chandra Kundu, (1914) 41 Cal. 836.

¹⁰ Kapil Mandal v. Rabhani Sheikh, sup.

¹¹ Bhup Singh, (1903) 8 C. W. N. 305.

their duty and hurt was actually caused to some of them, separate sentences under this section and s. 332 were disallowed and the sentence under s. 332 was only maintained.¹ Under the amended s. 35, Criminal Procedure Code, separate sentences may be passed subject to s. 71 of the Penal Code.

No separate sentences should be passed for rioting and theft, when it is not shown that any one of the rioters individually committed theft.²

As regards punishment, see s. 71, supra.

Charge.—The common object of the assembly must be stated in the charge in order that the accused person might have an opportunity of meeting it.³ A conviction for rioting based upon a charge which does not specify the common object of the assembly charged with rioting is improper.⁴ But the omission to set out the common object does not necessarily make the conviction bad. It is necessary to see whether or not the accused has been misled by the omission and the omission has caused a failure of justice.⁵ It is not a general proposition of law that a conviction under this section cannot be supported whenever the common object, as stated in the charge, is not precisely made out. The question in each case is whether the common object established agrees in essential particulars with that laid in the charge. Where the common object set out in the charge was to assault the complainant and his party, who were cutting the paddy on their land, and thereby to forcibly oust them, but the common object established by the facts found was to maintain possession of the land by the accused, it was held that the common object in the charge had not been substantially made out and that the conviction under this section was bad.⁶ Where the common object charged was "by means of criminal force to obtain possession of certain lands which comprised two plots, one of fifteen cottahs and the other of five cottahs, and it was found by the Court that the offence was committed for obtaining possession of the five cottahs plot, it was held that the variance between the common object alleged and that found was not such as to invalidate the conviction.⁷ Where a charge, as drawn up by the Magistrate, alleges several alternative common objects of the unlawful assembly, it is incumbent on the appellate Court to determine, whether it is sustainable, and, if so, which of the common object stated has been made out.⁸ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly is clearly set out in the charge and there is no question in the lower Courts as to the common object so set out, a conviction for rioting with the object set out is good even though there might be no express finding as to the common object, if the accused has not been in any way prejudiced by the absence of such finding.⁹ Where the charge did not specify the property, the taking possession of which was stated to be the common object of the unlawful assembly, and its specification would have altered the whole complexion of the case, it was held that the omission had prejudiced the accused and was not cured by s. 537, cl. (a), of the Code of Criminal Procedure.¹⁰ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly was stated in the charge to have been to cause obstruction to measurement and demarcation of Khas Mahal land, it was held that if it was not established that the land was in the actual possession of the Government, the charge as laid was not proved.¹¹

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

¹ Gowardhan Das, (1907) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 38 of 1907

² Mithoo Singh v. Gopal Lal, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 761.

³ Sabir, (1899) 22 Cal. 276; Behari Mahton, (1884) 11 Cal. 106.

⁴ Chunder Coomar Sen, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 603; Poresh Nath Sircar, (1905) 33 Cal. 295; Panchanan Bose, (1919) 30 C. L. J. 19.

⁵ Budhu v. Mustt. Lachmania, (1905) 9 C. W. N. 599; Gowardhan Das, sup.;

Kudrulu, (1912) 39 Cal. 781.

⁶ Silajit Mahto, (1909) 36 Cal. 865; Ritbaran Singh, (1917) 4 P. L. W. 120.

⁷ Dabbon Sheikh, (1910) 14 C. W. N. 422.

⁸ Manaruddi, (1908) 35 Cal. 718.

⁹ Dasorathi Mahapatra v. Roghu Sahu, (1908) 8 C. L. J. 69, 12 C. W. N. 944; Harinder Singh, (1917) 2 P. L. J. 541; Dalshinamurthi Rajah, (1917) 7 L. W. 83.

¹⁰ Poresh Nath Sircar, sup.

¹¹ Panchanan Bose, sup.

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, viz., in—, committed the offence of rioting, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 147 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

148. Whoever is guilty of rioting, being armed¹ with a deadly weapon² or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence under the last section. Enhanced punishment is provided if a person is armed with a deadly weapon. This section bears the same relation to s. 147 just as s. 144 does to s. 143.

1. 'Being armed.'—If one member of an unlawful assembly is armed with a deadly weapon, the other members cannot on that account be charged under this section. It is only the actual person so armed who can be charged under it.

2. 'Deadly weapon.'—Such as fire-arms, swords, etc. The question whether or not a club is a deadly weapon is a question of fact to be determined on the special circumstances of each case.² Stout male bamboos have been held to be deadly weapons.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (5) as in s. 147; and further, (6) That the accused was armed with a deadly weapon, or with something which was likely to cause death, when used as a deadly weapon.

A charge under this section read with s. 149 is incongruous and improper. A person can be convicted under this section only where there is a finding that the particular accused was present in the mob armed with a deadly weapon.⁴

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and did, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, viz., in—, commit the offence of rioting with a deadly weapon (or with something which used as a weapon of offence was likely to cause death) to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 148 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.⁵

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Every member of unlawful assembly guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object.

149. If an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly¹ in prosecution of the common object of that assembly,² or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to

¹ Sabir, (1894) 22 Cal. 276; Ram Saran Rai, (1890) 19 A.W.N. 77; Bhunjun Pauray, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 8. See, however, Srihari Shome v. Lal Khan, (1900) 5 C.W.N. 250, as regards s. 144.

² Nathu, (1892) 15 All. 19.

³ Krishna Chetti, (1882) 1 Weir 70.

⁴ Jivan Raul, (1922) 4 P. L. T. 502.

⁵ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9 and 10; (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 17.

their duty and hurt was actually caused to some of them, separate sentences under this section and s. 332 were disallowed and the sentence under s. 332 was only maintained.¹ Under the amended s. 35, Criminal Procedure Code, separate sentences may be passed subject to s. 71 of the Penal Code.

No separate sentences should be passed for rioting and theft, when it is not shown that any one of the rioters individually committed theft.²

As regards punishment, see s. 71, supra.

Charge.—The common object of the assembly must be stated in the charge in order that the accused person might have an opportunity of meeting it.³ A conviction for rioting based upon a charge which does not specify the common object of the assembly charged with rioting is improper.⁴ But the omission to set out the common object does not necessarily make the conviction bad. It is necessary to see whether or not the accused has been misled by the omission and the omission has caused a failure of justice.⁵ It is not a general proposition of law that a conviction under this section cannot be supported whenever the common object, as stated in the charge, is not precisely made out. The question in each case is whether the common object established agrees in essential particulars with that laid in the charge. Where the common object set out in the charge was to assault the complainant and his party, who were cutting the paddy on their land, and thereby to forcibly oust them, but the common object established by the facts found was to maintain possession of the land by the accused, it was held that the common object in the charge had not been substantially made out and that the conviction under this section was bad.⁶ Where the common object charged was "by means of criminal force to obtain possession of certain lands which comprised two plots, one of fifteen cottahs and the other of five cottahs, and it was found by the Court that the offence was committed for obtaining possession of the five cottahs plot, it was held that the conviction was not such as to in

Magistrate, alleges several alternative common objects of the unlawful assembly, it is incumbent on the appellate Court to determine, whether it is sustainable, and, if so, which of the common object stated has been made out.⁸ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly is clearly set out in the charge and there is no question in the charge as to the property, the taking possession of which was stated to be the common object of the unlawful assembly, and its specification would have altered the whole complexion of the case, it was held that the omission had prejudiced the accused and was not cured by s. 537, cl. (a), of the Code of Criminal Procedure.¹⁰ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly was stated in the charge to have been to cause obstruction to measurement and demarcation of Khas Mahal land, it was held that if it was not established that the land was in the actual possession of the Government, the charge as laid was not proved.¹¹

The charge should run thus :—
I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

¹ Gowardhan Das, (1907) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 33 of 1907.

² Mithoo Singh v. Gopal Lal, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 761.

³ Sabir, (1899) 22 Cal. 276; Behari Mahton, (1894) 11 Cal. 106.

⁴ Chunder Coomur Sen, (1899) 3 C. W. N.

Kudrutulla, (1912) 39 Cal. 781.

⁵ Silajit Mahko, (1909) 36 Cal. 865; Rit

V. N. 422.

Shu Sahu,

Harinder inamurthi

C. W. N. 599; Gowardhan Das, sup.;

¹⁰ Poresh Nath Bircar, sup.

¹¹ Panchanan Bose, sup.

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, viz., in—, committed the offence of rioting, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 147 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

148. Whoever is guilty of rioting, being armed¹ with a deadly weapon² or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Rioting, armed with deadly weapon.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence under the last section. Enhanced punishment is provided if a person is armed with a deadly weapon. This section bears the same relation to s. 147 just as s. 144 does to s. 143.

1. 'Being armed.'—If one member of an unlawful assembly is armed with a deadly weapon, the other members cannot on that account be charged under this section. It is only the actual person so armed who can be charged under it.

2. 'Deadly weapon.'—Such as fire-arms, swords, etc. The question whether or not a club is a deadly weapon is a question of fact to be determined on the special circumstances of each case.² Stout male bamboos have been held to be deadly weapons.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (5) as in s. 147; and further,

(6) That the accused was armed with a deadly weapon, or with something which was likely to cause death, when used as a deadly weapon.

A charge under this section read with s. 149 is incongruous and improper. A person can be convicted under this section only where there is a finding that the particular accused was present in the mob armed with a deadly weapon.⁴

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and did, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, viz., in—, commit the offence of rioting with a deadly weapon (or with something which used as a weapon of offence was likely to cause death) to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 148 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.⁵

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Every member of unlawful assembly guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object.

149. If an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly¹ in prosecution of the common object of that assembly,² or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to

¹ Sabir, (1894) 22 Cal. 276; Ram Saran Rai, (1899) 19 A.W.N. 77; Bhujjun Parray, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 8. See, however, Srilari Shome v. Lal Khan, (1900) 5 C.W.N. 250, as regards s. 144.

² Nathu, (1892) 15 All. 19.

³ Krishna Chetti, (1882) 1 Weir 70.

⁴ Jivan Raut, (1922) 4 P. L. T. 502.

⁵ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9 and 10; (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 17.

their duty and hurt was actually caused to some of them, separate sentences under this section and s. 332 were disallowed and the sentence under s. 332 was only maintained.¹ Under the amended s. 35, Criminal Procedure Code, separate sentences may be passed subject to s. 71 of the Penal Code.

No separate sentences should be passed for rioting and theft, when it is not shown that any one of the rioters individually committed theft.²

As regards punishment, see s. 71, supra.

Charge.—The common object of the assembly must be stated in the charge in order that the accused person might have an opportunity of meeting it.³ A conviction for rioting based upon a charge which does not specify the common object of the assembly charged with rioting is improper.⁴ But the omission to set out the common object does not necessarily make the conviction bad. It is necessary to see whether or not the accused has been misled by the omission and the omission has caused a failure of justice.⁵ It is not a general proposition of law that a conviction under this section cannot be supported whenever the common object, as stated in the charge, is not precisely made out. The question in each case is whether the common object established agrees in essential particulars with that laid in the charge. Where the common object set out in the charge was to assault the complainant and his party, who were cutting the paddy on their land, and thereby to forcibly oust them, but the common object established by the facts found was to maintain possession of the land by the accused, it was held that the common object in the charge had not been substantially made out and that the conviction under this section was bad.⁶ Where the common object charged was "by means of criminal force to obtain possession of certain lands which comprised two plots, one of fifteen cottahs and the other of five cottahs, and it was found by the Court that the offence was committed for obtaining possession of the five cottahs plot, it was held that the variance between the common object alleged and that found was not such as to invalidate the conviction.⁷ Where a charge, as drawn up by the Magistrate, alleges several alternative common objects of the unlawful assembly, it is incumbent on the appellate Court to determine, whether it is sustainable, and, if so, which of the common object stated has been made out.⁸ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly is clearly set out in the charge and there is no question in the lower Courts as to the common object so set out, a conviction for rioting with the object set out is good even though there might be no express finding as to the common object, if the accused has not been in any way prejudiced by the absence of such finding.⁹ Where the charge did not specify the taking possession of which was stated to be the common object, the omission of such specification would have altered the whole complexion of the charge, and the omission had prejudiced the accused and was not cured by the Code of Criminal Procedure.¹⁰ Where the common object of an unlawful assembly was stated in the charge to have been to cause obstruction to measurement and demarcation of Khas Mahal land, it was held that if it was not established that the land was in the actual possession of the Government, the charge as laid was not proved.¹¹

The charge should run thus:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

¹ Gowardhan Das, (1907) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 38 of 1907.

² Mithoo Singh v. Gopal Lal, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 761.

³ Sabir, (1899) 22 Cal. 276; Behari Mahton, (1884) 11 Cal. 106.

⁴ Chunder Coomar Sen, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 605; Poreah Nath Sircar, (1905) 33 Cal. 295; Panchanan Bose, (1919) 30 C. L. J. 19.

⁵ Budhu v. Musti Lachminia, (1905) 9 C. W. N. 599; Gowardhan Das, sup.

Kudrutulla, (1912) 39 Cal. 781.

⁶ Silajit Mahto, (1909) 36 Cal. 865; Baran Singh, (1917) 4 P. L. W. 120.

⁷ Babbon Sheikh, (1910) 14 C. W. N. 422.

⁸ Manaruddi, (1908) 35 Cal. 718.

⁹ Dasarathi Mahapatra v. Rojhu Sahu, (1908) 8 C. L. J. 69, 12 C. W. N. 914; Harinder Singh, (1917) 2 P. L. J. 541; Dakshinamurthi Rajali, (1917) 7 L. W. 83.

¹⁰ Poreah Nath Sircar, sup.

¹¹ Panchanan Bose, sup.

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, viz., in—, committed the offence of rioting, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 147 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

148. Whoever is guilty of rioting, being armed¹ with a deadly weapon² or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence under the last section. Enhanced punishment is provided if a person is armed with a deadly weapon. This section bears the same relation to s. 147 just as s. 144 does to s. 143.

1. 'Being armed.'—If one member of an unlawful assembly is armed with a deadly weapon, the other members cannot on that account be charged under this section. It is only the actual person so armed who can be charged under it.

2. 'Deadly weapon.'—Such as fire-arms, swords, etc. The question whether or not a club is a deadly weapon is a question of fact to be determined on the special circumstances of each case.² Stout male bamboos have been held to be deadly weapons.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1) to (5) as in s. 147; and further,

(6) That the accused was armed with a deadly weapon, or with something which was likely to cause death, when used as a deadly weapon.

A charge under this section read with s. 149 is incongruous and improper. A person can be convicted under this section only where there is a finding that the particular accused was present in the mob armed with a deadly weapon.⁴

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and did, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, viz., in—, commit the offence of rioting with a deadly weapon (or with something which used as a weapon of offence was likely to cause death) to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 148 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.⁵

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Every member of unlawful assembly guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object.

149. If an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly¹ in prosecution of the common object of that assembly,² or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to

¹ Sabir, (1894) 22 Cal. 276; Ram Saran Rai, (1899) 19 A.W.N. 77; Bhunjun Pauray, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 8. See, however, Srihari Shome v. Lal Khan, (1900) 5 O.W.N. 250, as regards s. 144.

² Nath, (1892) 15 All. 19.

³ Krishna Chetti, (1882) 1 Weir 70.

⁴ Jivan Raut, (1922) 4 P. L. T. 502.

⁵ (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9 and 10; (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 17.

be committed^{2b} in prosecution of that object, every person who, at the time of the committing of that offence, is a member of the same assembly, is guilty of that offence.

COMMENT.

Principle.—This section creates no offence, but like s. 34, is merely declaratory of a principle of the common law, which at any rate in England has prevailed. Its object is to make clear that an accused person whose case falls within its terms cannot put forward the defence that he did not with his own hand commit the offence committed in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly or such as the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object.¹ "Section 149 declares in substance that every member of an unlawful assembly is responsible for an offence committed by another member, or the other members, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, or one which he must have known was reasonably likely to be committed in the prosecution of such common object. In other words, this provision, so to speak, takes him out of the region of abetment, and makes him responsible as a principal, for the acts of each, and all, merely because he is a member of an unlawful assembly."²

A person cannot be tried and sentenced under this section alone. There must be some substantive offence charged to be read with this section.³

Section 34 and this section deal with liability for constructive criminality, i.e., liability for an offence not committed by the person charged.

Scope.—This section is not intended to subject a member of an unlawful assembly to punishment for every offence which is committed by one of its members during the time they are engaged in the prosecution of the common object. It is divided into two parts: (1) an offence committed by a member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of that assembly; and (2) an offence such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object. In order to bring a case within the first part the act must be within the second, namely, offences which the parties knew to be likely to be committed in the prosecution of the common object. But... there may be cases which would come within the second part, and not within the first... Persons assemble with a view to attack and plunder the house of a particular person; that would be an unlawful assembly, and the common object of the assembly would be house-breaking or the other offences which would be included in such acts, as attacking and plundering a man's house; but from some cause, such as a show of resistance, they might not continue to prosecute that common object; and before they had dispersed, and whilst they continued to be an unlawful assembly, some of them might plunder another house, and thereby commit an offence. Such a case might come within the second part."⁴

In Sabid Ali's case, Phear, J., says that inasmuch as the continuance of the unlawful assembly is by the definition of s. 141 made contemporaneous with the prosecution of the common object, it seems tolerably clear that the Legislature must have employed the words 'prosecution of the common object' with some difference of

¹ Bisheshwar, (1887) 9 All. 645; Theethumalai Gounder, (1924) 47 Mad. 746, r.n.

² Per Straight, J., in Ram Pariah, (1883) 5 All. 121, 123.

Theethumalai Gounder, sup.; Chhedi

Singh, (1924) 3 Pat. 870.

⁴ Per Couch, C. J., in Sabid Ali, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 5, 10; Krishnarao Narayanarao, (1903) 5 Bom. L. R. 1023.

meaning in the two parts of the section. Also the mere fact that the Legislature thought fit to express the second alternative appears to show very distinctly that it did not intend the words 'in prosecution' which are found in the first to be equivalent to 'during the prosecution'; for if they were, then the second alternative would have clearly been unnecessary. An offence in order to be committed in the prosecution of the common object must be immediately connected with that common object by virtue of the nature of the object. An offence will fall within the second alternative, if the members of the assembly, for any reason, knew beforehand that it was likely to be committed in the prosecution of the common object, though not knit thereto by the nature of the object itself.

In dealing with cases under this section, while on the one hand it is necessary for the protection of the accused that he should not, merely by reason of his association with others as members of an unlawful assembly, be held criminally liable for offences committed by his associates, which he himself neither intended, nor knew to be likely to be committed, on the other hand, it is equally necessary for the protection of the peace that members of an unlawful assembly should not lightly be let off from suffering the penalties for offences for which, though committed by others, the law has made them punishable by reason of their association with the actual offender with one common object. These two cases respectively emphasize the necessity of keeping these considerations in view. Members of an unlawful assembly may have a community of object only up to a certain point, beyond which they may differ in their objects, and the knowledge possessed by each member of what is likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object will vary, not only according to the information at his command, but also according to the extent to which he shares the community of object, and as a consequence of this the effect of this section may be different on different members of the same unlawful assembly.

Ingredients.—The section has the following essentials:—

1. Commission of an offence by any member of an unlawful assembly.

2a. Such offence must have been committed in prosecution of the common object of that assembly; or

2b. The offence must be such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed.

1. 'Offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly.'—As to the meaning of 'offence' see s. 40; and of 'unlawful assembly,' s. 141. This section only applies where there is an unlawful assembly.²

The word 'offence' does not include offences under a special Act. This section, therefore, cannot be applied to offences created by the Indian Railways Act, 1890. Where the accused were members of an unlawful assembly some other members of which removed railway rails, sleepers, etc., and there was no evidence that the accused themselves took any active part in any act specified by s. 126 of the Indian Railways Act, it was held that the accused could not be held constructively guilty of an offence under the Railways Act.³

2a. 'In prosecution of the common object of that assembly.'—The test whether an offence is committed in prosecution of the common object is whether the common object is prosecuted in fact as well as in the intention of the doer. When that is the case, every person who is engaged in prosecuting the same object may well be held guilty of an offence which fulfils or tends to fulfil the object which he is himself engaged in prosecuting. No offence, however, executes or tends to execute the common object, unless the commission of that offence is involved in the common object. When this is not the case, the offence committed not being committed in prosecution of the common object, in its strict sense, may yet fall under the second branch.¹ The existence of a common object before the commencement of the fight is not necessary. It is enough if the common object is adopted by all the accused.² See ss. 34 and 111, supra.

² Jahiruddin, (1894) 22 Cal. 306; Adul Mohamed, (1908) 8 C. L. J. 561. See also Ram Sarup Rai, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 98.

³ Maulor, (1923) 6 L. L. J. 434.
⁴ Aydoosa, (1922) 17 L. W. 21, (1922) M. W. N. 800.

The expression 'common object' is not used in the same sense as 'the common intention' in s. 34, which means the intention of all whatever it may have been. The expression refers to one of the five objects mentioned in s. 141.

2b. 'Or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed.'—The word 'or' divides the definition into two branches.³ It is not used in an alternative sense.⁴ The expression 'such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed' imports at least an expectation founded upon facts known to all the members of the assembly that an offence of the particular kind committed would be committed: something more than a speculation that such an offence might happen to be committed.⁵

This section does not subject any person to the consequences of an offence which, though committed in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly, he himself had not directly contemplated, unless it were proved that he knew it to be likely that such offence would be so committed.⁶ The word 'knew' is advisedly used, and cannot be made to bear the sense of "might have known."⁷ If the offence be such as the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed by a person engaged in prosecuting the common object, and acting with the purpose of executing it, it may fairly be imputed to the other members of the assembly.

Culpable homicide.—To bring the offence of murder within this section, it must either necessarily flow from the prosecution of the common object or it must so probably flow from the prosecution of the common object that each member might antecedently expect it to happen. The offence of murder, as strictly defined by the Code, requires a previous intention or knowledge in the perpetrator; and to 'know' that murder is likely to be committed, is to know that some member of the assembly has such previous intention or knowledge. This interpretation of the section, so far as murder is concerned, is confirmed by comparing ss. 398 and 396 with s. 148 and this section.⁸ Members of a party setting out heavily armed for the purpose of committing dacoity must know that there is every likelihood of something occurring either on their way or at the scene of dacoity to interfere with their criminal plans and that their deliberate intention is to use their arms wherever necessary, either to effect the object in view or to avoid the risk of capture at any stage of the adventure, and therefore if some of the members of the party fire upon the police killing any one, all are guilty of the offence of murder under this section and s. 302.⁹

In order to sustain a conviction under this section and s. 304, it must be shown that there was an unlawful assembly whose common object was to commit an offence under s. 304 and that the accused was one of them.¹⁰

Where a prisoner is constructively guilty of murder under s. 34, it is doubtful if he can be said to have committed the offence of murder within the meaning of this section, so as to make the other prisoners, by a double construction, guilty of murder.¹¹

¹ Madat Khan, (1887) P. R. No. 61 of 1887; Essai, (1888) P. R. No. 4 of 1889; Dhian Singh, (1915) P.W.R. (Cr.) No. 17 of 1915; P. R. No. 16 of 1915.

² Golla Hanumappa, (1911) 35 Mad. 213.

³ Madat Khan, sup.

⁴ Sabul Ali, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 5, 11.

⁵ Madat Khan, sup.

⁶ Sabul Ali, sup.; Hardoo Singh, (1920) 3

U. P. L. R. (P.) 29.

⁷ Sabul Ali, sup., p. 12.

⁸ Ibid.; Mahmadkhan Sultan Khan, (1907)

9 Bom. L. R. 153; Imamdin, (1920) 3

L. J. 215.

¹⁰ Dhian Singh, sup.

¹¹ Ramanarayan Terao, (1921) 20 M.L.T. 18.

¹² Jalaboo Mahlon, (1882) 8 Cal. 739, 732.

CASES.

Act done in prosecution of common object.—Where persons joined an unlawful assembly for the purpose of committing an assault, and, instead of preventing those armed from using their weapons, encouraged them to do so, they were held to be in the same position as those members of the unlawful assembly who assembly used spears and deliberately pierced another man through the chest and abdomen, with the knowledge that death was likely to ensue, although without proof of any intention to cause death, all the members of the unlawful assembly were held guilty of murder.³ Where a small compact body of men armed with clubs, and headed by a man carrying a gun, endeavoured to take forcible possession of certain lands, and one of the opponents was shot by their leader, it was held that all of them were guilty of murder.⁴ The accused's cattle were doing considerable damage to the crops belonging to complainants who drove them to the cattle-pound. While they were on the way to the pound the accused came armed with clubs, to rescue the cattle. At the command given by one of them, the others assaulted the deceased and beat him with the result that he died. It was held that the offence was committed in pursuance of the common object and each one of the accused was guilty of an offence under s. 302.⁵ When a number of persons set out to abduct women and two of them are armed with pistols the obvious inference to be drawn is that the pistols were intended to be used, if necessary, to overcome any resistance that might be offered. The members of the gang would, therefore, know that murder was very likely to be committed.

A person retiring from a fight has no further common object with those who continue it.—A large body of men belonging to one faction waylaid another body of men belonging to a second faction, and a fight ensued, in the course of which a member of the first mentioned faction was wounded, and retired to the side of the road, taking no further active part in the affray. After his retirement, a member of the second faction was killed. It was held that the wounded man had ceased to be a member of the unlawful assembly when he retired wounded, and that he could not, under this section, be made liable for the subsequent murder.⁶

Persons having no common object to do a particular offence are not liable for commission of it by others.—Where six persons at first united in abusing another and afterwards one of the six ordered him to be seized,—three others executed the order, and in doing so killed the person abused,—it was held that the remaining two accused were not liable to punishment, as the party had no illegal object in common until the deceased was ordered to be seized, and the evidence went to show that they took no part in it, but were merely unarmed spectators.⁷ Similarly, where a number of persons went together to eject a man from a piece of land, the title of which was in dispute, and upon a vigorous resistance being made, one of the party who was armed with a gun, fired at, and killed, the resisting person, it was held that he was guilty of murder, but that the other members of the unlawful assembly were not guilty of murder under this section as the act of killing was not the common object of the assembly, or "likely to be committed in the

³ Dushrath Roy, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 58.

(Cr.) 37

⁴ Chandrasekhar Das, (1875) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 15.

⁵ Rasul Khan, (1915) 13 A. L. J. R. 470.

⁶ Kabil Cazez, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 1; Raghunandan, (1912) 15 O. C. 183.

⁷ Foiz Ali, (1864) 1 W. R. (Cr.) 20.

prosecution of that object."¹ A murder was committed by one of a number of persons concerned in an unlawful assembly, one or two of them being armed with consideration whether such persons knew that a deadly weapon was likely to be used with a fatal result in the prosecution of their common object; and that though it might be presumed in the case of a number of persons armed with deadly weapons going out to commit an act of violence, that they knew that those weapons might be used with a fatal result, the presumption was still one of fact and must be reasonable in the particular circumstances of the case.² A gang of persons, making preparations to commit dacoity was discovered in the limits of a certain village and was pursued by villagers who seized and arrested two accused who were members of the gang. Shortly afterwards, a dacoit at large fired a gun and killed one of the villagers. It was held that the two accused were not guilty of murder as there could be no common object between them and the other after they separated.³ M and his party were ploughing certain disputed land when the members of the complainant's party came up to interfere with them and to turn them out. The Sessions Judge found that the latter were not justified in forcibly preventing the ploughing of M's party and that on the other hand M was not justified in striking B (one of the complainant's party) on the head and thereby causing his death. It was held that as the members of the deceased's party were the aggressors, their object having been to dispossess the other party from the land, M's party were perfectly justified in exercising their right of private defence, and if M exceeded that right, he, and he alone, was guilty of the offence and this section did not operate to make M's companions equally guilty with him, as they were not at the time members of an unlawful assembly.⁴

Where, after the object of an unlawful assembly was accomplished, and the opposite party driven away, one of the members entered into an altercation with another and wounded him with a fish-spear, it was held that he alone was responsible for the offence.⁵

Where a riotous mob started pelting stones, etc., with the intention of wreaking vengeance on the proprietor of a Dramatic Troupe for his refusal to give away the day's takings to the Congress and Khilafat funds, but when the police started fire, the common object changed into one of vengeance on the Deputy Superintendent consequent on one of the mob having been shot dead, it was held that persons who were present in the mob only at the first attack could not be held guilty of offences committed in the second attack and conversely those present only at the second attack could not be held guilty of the offences committed in the first attack.⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that there was an unlawful assembly.

(2) That the accused was a member of that unlawful assembly (s. 142).

(3) That he had intentionally joined or continued in such unlawful assembly.

(4) That an offence was committed by a member of such assembly.

(5) That such offence was committed (a) in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, or (b) such as the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object, etc.

¹ Sabid Ali, (1873) 11 Beng. L. R. 347, 20 W. B. (Cr.) 5. See Chundersungjee, (1869) Unrep. Cr. C. 14.

² Rama Muppan, (1879) 3 Mad. Jor. 416. See Ram Khelawan Singh, (1909) 13 C. W. N. 827.

³ Hari Bijal, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 906, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 118.

⁴ Mihan Singh, (1914) P. R. No. 26 of 1914.

⁵ Binod, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 68.

⁶ Ganapathi Sarma, (1922) 17 L. W. 107.

It is essential to prove that the person sought to be charged with an offence by the aid of this section was a member of the unlawful assembly at the time the offence was committed, and the burden of proof lies on the prosecution. Moreover, before an offence under any other section can be imputed under this section to all the persons who were members of an unlawful assembly at the time of its commission, it is necessary to show, among other things, that the offence sought to be imputed has been committed by a member of the assembly either known or unknown.¹

Procedure.—Same as that for the offence committed. Not compoundable.

The Calcutta High Court has held that where a person is charged by implication under this section, he cannot be convicted of the substantive offence.²

charge.³ The same is the view of the Patna High Court.⁴ Where the accused have been acquitted of rioting they cannot be convicted of grievous hurt under s. 325 by the application of this section, where it has not been found that they or any of them were members of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object, of which grievous hurt was caused by any other member of the same assembly, or the offence was such as each member of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object.⁵

Charge.—An accused person is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact value of the charge brought against him, where it is sought to implicate him for acts not committed by himself, but by others with whom he was in company.⁶ It is obligatory to set out the common object in the charge, otherwise the conviction would be vitiated.⁷ Where there is no count in the charge that the common object of the unlawful assembly was to commit dacoity, or to cause hurt for the purpose of committing theft, no conviction for dacoity by force of s. 34 or this section can be sustained.⁸ The former Chief Court of the Punjab ruled that it was not always necessary that the common object should be set out in the charge, but it was desirable to do so where the nature of the case allowed or required it. In any case such an omission was not a fatal defect and was curable under s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁹ The omission of this section from a charge does not create an illegality by reason of s. 233, Criminal Procedure Code. It is only an irregularity coming under s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.¹⁰

The charge should run thus:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were a member of an unlawful assembly, and in prosecution of the common object of which, viz., in—, one of the members—, caused (specify the offence) to—, and you are thereby, under s. 149 of the Indian Penal Code, guilty of causing the said (offence) an offence punishable under s.—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).¹¹

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

¹ Rasul, (1888) P. R. No. 4 of 1889.

² Rearudd, (1912) 16 C. W. N. 1077; Baij Nath, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 588.

³ Theethumalai Gounder, (1924) 47 Mad. 746, F.B.

⁴ Rulal Singh, (1923) 5 P. L. T. 189.

⁵ Abhi Misser v. Lachmi Narain, (1900) 27 Cal. 566.

⁶ Behari Mahlon, (1884) 11 Cal. 106.

⁷ Kudrutulla, (1912) 39 Cal. 781.

⁸ Kottoora Thevan, (1923) 46 M. L. J. 311.

⁹ Dhian Singh, (1915) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 17 of 1915.

¹⁰ Theethumalai Gounder, sup.

¹¹ (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr. L.) 1.

Punishment.—See s. 71, supra.

150. Whoever hires or engages, or employs, or promotes,¹ or connives² at the hiring, engagement or employment of any person to join or become a member of any unlawful assembly,³ shall be punishable as a member of such unlawful assembly, and for any offence⁴ which may be committed by any such person as a member of such unlawful assembly, in pursuance of such hiring, engagement or employment, in the same manner as if he had been a member of such unlawful assembly, or himself had committed such offence.

COMMENT.

Object.—The object of this section is to bring within the reach of the law those who are really the originators and instigators of the offences committed by hired persons. The ordinary law of abetment might be sufficient to punish those who, by hiring or engaging others, instigate them to join an unlawful assembly. But if the prime agent keeps aloof, and the work of hiring, although known to him, is left entirely to his managers or servants, he will probably succeed in evading the ordinary law. The terms of this section, therefore, extend not only to acts of instigation by the master, but to acts of instigation when done by others (his agents) and knowingly permitted, or connived at, by him.

1. 'Promotes.'—This word indicates cases of active assistance in hiring.

2. 'Connives.'—That is, passively allows.

3. 'Any unlawful assembly.'—This section refers to a particular unlawful assembly. Where, therefore, it is found that any person has hired or engaged any other person or persons to join or become members of a particular unlawful assembly he is liable for any offence committed by any member of that unlawful assembly in the same way as if he had been a member of that unlawful assembly or himself had committed such offence. Where a Magistrate only found that "what the accused has been doing is collecting and harbouring men for the purpose of committing a riot should he find it in his interest to do so," and there was no finding that there had been any unlawful assembly, composed of persons said to have been hired by the accused, and in the course of which some offence had been committed for which the accused would have been responsible equally with those who were members of that unlawful assembly, not that an unlawful assembly made up of the elements provided for by s. 141 was in the contemplation of the accused, it was held that the accused could not be convicted of having committed an offence under this section or s. 157.¹

4. 'Offence.'—See s. 40, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused hired or engaged, etc., the person in question, or that he promoted, or connived at, such hiring, etc. In the case of connivance it should also be proved (a) that the accused was legally bound to prevent the hiring; (b) that he was physically able to prevent it; and (c) that he did not prevent it, or do all that lay in his power towards preventing it.

(2) That such hiring, etc., was to join, or to become member of, an unlawful assembly.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Not compoundable. See the offence committed.

¹ Ram Lochan Sarcar, (1901) 29 Cal. 214.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, hired (or engaged, or employed [or promoted (or connived at the hiring or engagement, or employment)] of one AB to join as (or become) a member of an unlawful assembly, and that the said AB as a member of such unlawful assembly in pursuance of such hiring (or engagement or employment) committed (specify the offence and the person), and that you have thereby committed an offence punishable under ss. 150 and—of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

151. Whoever knowingly joins or continues in any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, after such assembly has been lawfully commanded to disperse,¹ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—If the assembly is an unlawful assembly within the meaning of section 141, the offender will be punishable under section 145.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section consists in the disobedience to the mandate of the law, which has ordered the assembly to disperse. Section 145 provides for the punishment of a person who joins or continues in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse. The 'assembly' under this section need not be an 'unlawful assembly.' It must only be an assembly likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace.

1. 'After such assembly has been lawfully commanded to disperse.'— d any unlawful disturbance of
 of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.¹ If, upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station, whether within or without the presidency-towns, may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person not being an officer or soldier in His Majesty's Army or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteer Act (XX of 1860) acting as such, for the purpose of and confining the persons or that they may be punished according to law.² If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed, and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force.³

The expression "lawfully commanded to disperse" means, in the City of Bombay, commanded as prescribed in s. 40 of the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902.⁴

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 127.

² INI, s. 128.

³ INI, s. 129.

⁴ Keskar Gorind, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R. 350,
6 Bom. Cr. C. 47.

Case.—Refusal to disperse.—Where the object of only three persons was to draw a crowd and their action was such as was calculated to and did draw a crowd of fifty or sixty persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, it was held that the gathering constituted an assembly of five or more persons within the meaning of this section and a refusal to disperse after being lawfully commanded by an officer superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station rendered the members liable to punishment.¹

A procession of Hindus, some of them carrying and using various musical instruments, was about to pass in front of a mosque, with the probable consequence in the circumstances that a serious riot would have resulted, when they were confronted by a Sub-Inspector of Police, who ordered the leaders of the procession to stop the music and that the crowd should disperse. The leaders of the procession did not obey the order of the Sub-Inspector, but on the contrary advanced a short distance playing on a drum. Subsequently, however, on a show of force being made by the police the procession laid down their musical instruments and dispersed; it was held that the two leaders of the procession were guilty under this section.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the assembly was composed of five or more persons.

(2) That such assembly was likely to cause a disturbance of the peace.

It is not sufficient to establish, on a charge under this section, merely that in the opinion of the Magistrate the particular assembly was likely to cause such a disturbance: it is necessary to establish to the satisfaction of the Court that the assembly was in fact likely to cause it.³ The opinion of the police-officer dispersing it is admissible.⁴

(3) That such assembly had been commanded to disperse.

(4) That such command was lawful.

(5) That the accused joined, or continued in, such assembly, after it had been so commanded to disperse.

(6) That the accused did so knowingly.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about _____, at _____, in an assembly of five or more persons, did unlawfully assemble, after knowing that such assembly was likely to cause a disturbance of the peace, and thereby committed an offence under section 147 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

152. Whoever assaults¹ or threatens to assault, or obstructs or attempts to obstruct, any public servant² in the discharge of his duty as such public servant, in endeavouring to disperse an unlawful assembly³ or to suppress a riot⁴ or affray,⁵ or uses, or threatens, or attempts to use criminal force⁶ to such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years or with fine, or with both.⁴

Assaulting or obstructing public servant who is suppressing riot, etc.

¹ Tucker, (1882) 7 Bom. 42.

² Raghunath Vensik Dhulekar, (1924) 47 All. 205.

³ Murlidhar, (1887) P. R. No. 23 of 1887; Girdhara Singh, (1921) 3 L. L. J. 529.

⁴ Tucker, sup.

COMMENT .

The last section punished disobedience to the order of a public servant commanding an assembly to disperse : this section punishes more severely persons who assault a public servant endeavouring to disperse an unlawful assembly. This section is intended to prevent the use of force on a public servant in order to prevent him from discharging his duty.

1. ' Assaults.'—See s. 351, infra.
2. ' Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.
3. ' Unlawful assembly.'—See s. 141, supra.
4. ' Riot.'—See s. 146, supra.
5. ' Affray.'—See s. 159, infra.
6. ' Criminal force.'—See s. 350, infra.

PRACTICE .

Evidence.—Prove (1) that an unlawful assembly was held.

(2) That an endeavour was being made to disperse it.

(3) That the person endeavouring so to disperse it was a public servant.

(4) That such public servant was then acting in the discharge of his duty as such public servant.

(5) That the accused assaulted, or threatened to assault, or obstructed or threatened to obstruct such public servant, whilst so discharging his duties, or, that he used, or threatened to use, or attempted to use, criminal force to such public servant, whilst so discharging his duties.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—This section contemplates an assault or obstruction to some particular public servant. Where, therefore, the charge against the accused as framed was merely to the effect that they assaulted and obstructed members of the police force in the discharge of their duties, etc., the conviction under this section was not upheld.¹

The charge should run thus :—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, assaulted (or threatened to assault, or used, or threatened to use, criminal force to)—, a public servant, in the discharge of his duty as such public servant in endeavouring to disperse an unlawful assembly (or to suppress a riot or affray) and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 152 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

153. Whoever malignantly,¹ or wantonly,² by doing anything which is illegal,³ gives provocation to any person intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation⁴ will cause the offence of rioting to be committed, shall, if the offence of rioting be committed in consequence of such provocation, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both ; and, if the

Wantonly giving provocation, with intent to cause riot—
if rioting be committed ;

¹ Ferasat, (1891) 19 Cal. 105.

offence of rioting be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

if not committed,

COMMENT.

This section punishes a person who does acts which provoke others to commit rioting but which do not amount to abetment. It is divided into two parts. If rioting is committed the punishment is more severe.

1. 'Malignantly' implies a sort of general malice.¹ According to Webster the adverbs 'maliciously' and 'malignantly' are synonymous. Malice is not, as in ordinary speech, only an expression of hatred and ill-will to an individual, but means an unlawful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse.² Malignant means extreme malevolence or enmity; violently hostile or harmful. A riot took place between Hindus and Mussalmans. The excitement caused by the riot had not entirely subsided, when the accused composed and published a poem, giving an account of the outbreak, and incidentally extolling certain classes of the Hindu community, namely, the Ghatīs and Kamatis, for the brave resistance which they had offered to the Mahomedan rioters. The poem extolled the Ghatīs and Kamatis and then followed these lines:—

"May God give glory to you, confer joy on you night and day, Fight again for your country's good."

The poem was written in Gujarati, a language not ordinarily spoken by the Ghatīs and Kamatis or even by the Mahomedans. It did not appear that any copies of the work were distributed among the people who had taken part in the riot. Nor did any fresh riot take place subsequently to the publication of the work. The accused were prosecuted and convicted under s. 117 and this section, on the ground that the lines quoted above, especially the words "Fight again," were a direct instigation to the Ghatīs and Kamatis to renew the disturbances. It was held that the meaning of the passage complained of was to be gathered from the whole poem. The general spirit of the poem was clearly in favour of peace and reconciliation. It consisted from beginning to end of a lamentation over the riots, and the destruction and death they had caused, and of repeated counsel to peace and harmony between Hindus and Mahomedans. And there was nothing to indicate that the author's intention was to instigate the Hindus or provoke the Mahomedans to renew the disturbances. The words "Fight again" were, no doubt, objectionable, but it would not be a proper construction of the words to allow them to override the whole context of the work.³

2. 'Wantonly' Means recklessly,⁴ thoughtlessly, without regard for right or consequence. This section is far larger, vaguer, implied by the word 'malignantly' the word 'malignantly' occurs once again in s. 270.

Where certain persons taking part in a religious procession gratuitously disobeyed the orders of the police concerning the manner in which such procession was to be conducted, with the result that a riot was only averted by bringing armed police upon the scene, it was held that the persons concerned acted 'wantonly' within the meaning of this section.⁵

3. 'Illegal'.—An offence under this section requires that the offender should do something illegal by doing which he malignantly or wantonly gives provocation to any person intending or knowing it to be likely that a riot would be the result.⁶ As to the meaning of 'illegal,' see s. 43, supra. A Mussalman

¹ Kahanji, (1893) 18 Bom. 752, 775;
Hussain Bakhsh, (1907) 29 All. 569, 571.

² Bromage v. Prosser, (1825) 4 B. & C. 247.

³ Kahanji, supra.

⁴ Hussain Bakhsh, supra.

⁵ Ibid.

⁶ Khurshid Singh, (1886) 6 A. W. N. 23.

procession passed by the door-way of the accused, outside which he had, without any permission, erected a screen and inside which was an image of the goddess Bhawani. The accused was asked to close the door or to put up a screen for a few minutes while the procession passed by, and he refused to do so. The Magistrate convicted the accused on the ground that "by this illegal omission of respect to the religious feelings of the Mussalmans, he provoked a riot." It was held that the conviction was wrong.¹

4. 'Gives provocation to any person, etc.'—The provocation should have been given with the intention or knowledge that it is likely to cause rioting. Where a Mahomedan killed a cow not in the presence of any Hindu, but the Hindus came to know of it subsequently, it was held that no offence was committed under this section on hearing of it by any Hindu.² Where the natural and probable effect of reading a pamphlet was to give provocation to the feelings of certain Hindus, it was held that such provocative offence under this section.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—(1) That the accused did an act which was illegal.

(2) That he did so malignantly or wantonly.

Very strong evidence is necessary to prove this.⁴

(3) That the illegal act was the cause of provocation.

(4) That the accused, when giving such provocation, intended or knew that it was likely that such provocation would cause a riot to be committed. Prove also whether riot was or was not committed in consequence of such provocation.

If the riot was not committed, the accused would be liable under the first clause; if it was, then the offence would be punished under the second clause.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant (if riot be committed), otherwise, summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate—Triable summarily, if riot not committed.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, malignantly (or wantonly)

Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

153-A. Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representations, or otherwise, promotes¹ or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes² of Her Majesty's subjects shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section to point out, without malicious intention

¹ Khushal Singh, (1886) 6 A. W. N. 23

² Rahimatalli Mahomedalli Mulla, (1919)

³ Abdullah, (1919) 17 A. L. J. R. 200, 1

22 Bom. L. R. 166, 5 Bom. Cr. C. 175.

U. P. L. R. 85.

⁴ Kahanji, (1893) 18 Bom. 758.

in such land, shall be punishable with fine not exceeding one thousand rupees, if he or his agent or manager,¹ knowing that such offence is being or has been committed,² or having reason to believe³ it is likely to be committed, do not give the earliest notice thereof in his or their power to the principal officer at the nearest police-station, and do not, in the case of his or their having reason to believe that it was about to be committed, use all lawful means in his or their power to prevent it and, in the event of its taking place, do not use all lawful means in his or their power to disperse or suppress the riot or unlawful assembly.

COMMENT:

Many duties of the police are by law imposed on landholders. The present section proceeds apparently upon a presumption that, in addition to any such duty, the owner or occupier of land is cognizant in a peculiar way of the designs of those who assemble on his land, and is able not only to give the police notice, but also to prevent and to disperse and suppress the assembly.¹ Under s. 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code village headmen, accountants, landholders and others are bound to report certain matters to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

The section contemplates three different breaches of duty:

- (1) Omission to give notice of a riot or unlawful assembly;
- (2) Abstention from preventing it; and
- (3) Negligence to suppress it.

1. 'Unlawful assembly.'—See s. 141, supra.

2. 'Riot.'—See s. 146, supra;

3. 'An interest in land' means any fragment of the ownership. The section would, therefore, apply to tenants and mortgagees, remaindermen and reversioners; but not to one merely entitled to a charge on land or to an easement.²

It is impossible to punish in every case every person who has any interest in the land. The responsibility depends on the fact of the person who caused the riot being himself the person who has an interest in the land, or an agent or a manager of such person, and one of the facts to be proved is whose agent or manager the person fomenting the riot is;

4. 'Agent or manager.'—The criminal liability of a person for the acts and omissions of an agent or manager depends upon the question by whom the latter was appointed. Where, therefore, it was shown that three Hindu pardanashin ladies had the management of the estate and were responsible for the appointment of the agent who had fomented the riot, and that their adopted sons had nothing to do with such appointment, though they took some share in the active management of the estate, it was held that the ladies were alone liable.³ The accused was the sole proprietor of a village. A serious riot involving loss of life took place at that village, and the accused's agent instead of doing anything to prevent or suppress the riot accompanied the rioters and stood close by, while the riot was going on, after which he absconded. The accused, who had no knowledge that a riot was likely to be committed, was convicted under this section and fined. It was held

¹ M. & M. 128. See Doma Sahu, (1917)
2 P. L. J. 83.

³ Stokes.

² Siva Sundari Chowdhrahi, (1912) 39
Cal. 834.

that the landlord was liable under this section for the acts of commission as well as omission not only of himself, but of his agent or manager.¹

5. 'Knowing that such offence, etc.'—The Allahabad High Court has ruled that it is not necessary, in order to render the owner of land on which a riot takes place criminally liable, that he should be aware of the likelihood of such an occurrence. That his manager should have taken an active part in the riot is sufficient to warrant the conviction of the owner under this section.² Similarly, the Calcutta High Court has decided that knowledge, on the part of the owner or occupier of the land, of the acts or intentions of the agent, is not an essential element of an offence under this section, and he may be convicted under it though he may be in entire ignorance of the acts of his agent or manager.³

The owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held cannot be convicted under this section unless there is a finding that the riot was premeditated.⁴

6. 'Reason to believe'—See s. 26, supra.

Co-sharer.—A non-resident partner who has taken no active part in the management of the estate cannot, like a resident sharer, be convicted under this section.⁵

No delay in prosecution.—Prosecutions under this and the following sections should be instituted without delay, having regard to the object of the law laid down in these sections which is to impress upon landholders their responsibilities and obligations in respect of riots or unlawful assemblies committed under the circumstances mentioned in those sections and thus serve as wholesome warnings not only to persons concerned but also to others.⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that a riot took place.

(2) That the land upon which it was committed was owned or occupied by accused; or, that the accused had, or claimed, an interest in the land upon which it was committed.

(3) That the accused (or his agent or manager) knew that it was being, or had been, committed; or had reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed.

(4) That the accused (or his agent or manager) omitted to give the earliest notice in his power to the principal officer at the nearest police station.

(5) That the accused (or his agent or manager) omitted to use all lawful means in his power to prevent such riot, or to suppress it if it had taken place.⁷

Evidence taken in another case to which the accused were not parties was held inadmissible to convict them under this section. The records of another case would not of themselves be legal evidence for the conviction.⁸

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class.

155. Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of any land respecting which such riot takes place or who claims any interest in such land, or in the

Liability of person for whose benefit riot is committed.

¹ Kazi Zeamuddin Ahmed, (1901) 28 Cal. 504.

² Payag Singh, (1890) 12 All. 550.

³ Kazi Zeamuddin Ahmed, sup.; Nripendra Bhushan Ray v. Gobinda Bandhu Majumdar, (1923) 39 C. L. J. 236; Lekhraj, (1904) 1 A. L. J. R. 145 (n); Raja Bhagwan Bakhsh, (1905) 8 O. C. 418.

⁴ Surroop Chunder Paul, (1869) 12 W. R.

(Cr.) 75.

⁵ Radha Nath Chowdhry, (1880) 7 C. L. R. 239.

⁶ Eshak Meah, (1902) 7 C. W. N. 245; Sarat Chandra Shah Chowdhry, (1902) 7 C. W. N. 301.

⁷ See Tarakant Das, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 691.

⁸ C. G. D. Betts and Mahomed, (1871) 6 Beng. L. R. App. 83, 15 W. R. (Cr.) 6.

subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any benefit therefrom, such person shall be punishable with fine, if he or his agent or manager, having reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed, or that the unlawful assembly by which such riot was committed was likely to be held, shall not respectively use all lawful means in his or their power to prevent such assembly or riot from taking place, and for suppressing and dispersing the same.

COMMENT:

Under the preceding section the owner of land is punishable for the taking place of an unlawful assembly or riot on his land. This section requires that the unlawful assembly or riot should take place in the interest of the owner or any person claiming interest in the land. The section, therefore, imposes unlimited fine. The preceding section referred to an unlawful assembly as well as a riot: this section refers to riot only.

The principle on which this and the following sections proceed is to subject to fine all persons in whose interest an affray is committed and the agents of such persons, unless it can be shewn that they did what they lawfully could do to prevent the offence.

A Zemindar ought not to be made liable under this section for a sudden and unpremeditated riot which there was no reason to infer he could have anticipated or thought likely to happen.¹

PRACTICE:

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the riot was committed.

(2) That it took place with respect to some land, or that it arose out of some dispute.

(3) That the accused was the owner or occupier of such land, or claimed an interest therein, or claimed some interest in the subject of such dispute.

No conviction could be made unless it is shewn that the accused had property in the land.²

(4) That such riot was committed for the benefit or on behalf of the accused, or that the accused accepted or derived some benefit therefrom.

(5) That the accused or his agent or manager had reason to believe (a) that such riot was likely to be committed; or (b) that the unlawful assembly, which committed such riot, was likely to be held.

(6) That the accused, his agent, or manager did not respectively use all lawful means, etc., (a) to prevent such assembly or riot from taking place; or (b) for suppressing and dispersing the same.

Procedure.—By Magistrate or Sessions Judge—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary trial.

Where there is no evidence to show that an absentee co-sharer in a zemindary takes an active part in the management, and a resident co-sharer has been sentenced to pay a fine under s. 155, the non-resident zemindar ought not to be convicted under this section.³

156. Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of any land respecting which such riot takes place, or who claims any interest in such land, or

Liability of agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit riot is committed.

¹ Hernand Roy, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 54.

² Pranatha Nath Roy Chowdhry, (1913) 17

C. W. N. 1247.

³ Harendra Lal Roy, (1894) 8 C. W. N. 209.

in the subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any benefit therefrom, the agent or manager of such person shall be punishable with fine, if such agent or manager, having reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed, or that the unlawful assembly by which such riot was committed was likely to be held, shall not use all lawful means in his power to prevent such riot or assembly from taking place and for suppressing and dispersing the same.

COMMENT.

The last section punished the owner of land or any person claiming an interest in it; this section punishes the agent or manager of such person.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—For points necessary to be proved see s. 155. See also Brac's case,¹ which lays down that to constitute an offence under this section it must be shown by legal evidence (1) that a riot was committed; (2) that the riot, if committed, was committed for the benefit of the accused; and (3) that the accused had reason to believe that a riot was likely to be committed.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

157. Whoever harbours, receives or assembles in any house

Harbouring persons or premises in his occupation or charge, or hired for an unlawful assembly, under his control, any persons, knowing that such persons have been hired, engaged or employed, or are about to be hired,¹ engaged or employed, to join or become members of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section, as compared with s. 150, is of a wider application. It provides for or assembling an offence. 1

of facts which in law would go to constitute an unlawful assembly.²

1. 'Hired, etc., or about to be hired, etc.'—Under this section, it must be proved that the persons were hired or about to be hired for the purposes specified therein. It is not sufficient to show that some of the accused's servants have been taken from a district where men bear a well-known character as lathials (men with clubs) and had been in his service some time before the riot.³

PRACTICE;

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the house or premises in question was or were in the occupation or charge of, or under the control of, the accused.

(2) That the accused harboured, received, or assembled therein the persons in question.

(3) That such persons had been hired, engaged, or employed, or were about to become so, to join or become members of an unlawful assembly.

¹ (1883) 10 Cal. 338.

² Ram Lochan Sarker, (1901) 29 Cal. 214.

³ Radda Nath Chowdhry, (1880) 7 C. L. R. 289.

(4) That when the accused did as in (2) he knew that such persons had been so hired, etc., for that purpose.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Summary trial.

158. Whoever is engaged or hired, or offers or attempts to be hired or engaged, to do or assist in doing any of the acts specified in section 141, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both; and whoever, being so engaged or hired as aforesaid, goes armed, or engages or offers to go armed, with any deadly weapon¹ or with anything which used as a weapon of offence is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section is intended to punish those persons who hire themselves out as members of an unlawful assembly or assist any such members. It is divided into two parts. Higher penalty is awarded where the accused is armed with a deadly weapon.

1. 'Deadly weapon.'—Such as, firearms, swords, etc. Whether a particular thing is a deadly weapon or not is a question of fact depending upon the special circumstances of each case.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the engagement or hiring of the accused; or the offer or attempt by the accused to become so.

(2) That the object of such engagement or hiring was to do, or assist in doing, an act which would make an assembly an unlawful one (see s. 141).

Prove also (for the last part of the section) whether the accused went or offered to go armed with a deadly weapon.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons (if the case comes under the first clause) or Warrant (if under the second).—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Summary trial.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the — day of —, at —, engaged or hired (or offered to do or assist in doing) — do or assist in doing those specified in s. 141 and used as a weapon of offence under s. 158 of the Indian Penal Code, and you were armed with a deadly weapon on the said charge.

159. When two or more persons,¹ by fighting in a public place,² disturb the public peace,³ they are said to "commit an affray."

Affray.

160. Whoever commits an affray, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees, or with both.

Punishment for committing affray.

COMMENT.

The word 'affray' is derived from the French word effraier, to terrify, and, in a legal sense, it is taken for a public offence to the terror of the people. From this definition it seems clearly to follow, that there may be an assault which will not amount to an affray; as where it happens in a private place, out of the hearing or seeing of any, except the parties concerned; in which case it cannot be said to be to the terror of the people.¹ No quarrelsome or threatening words whatsoever shall amount to an affray.² An affray is an offence against the public peace because it is committed in a public place and is likely to cause general alarm and disturbance.

Ingredients.—The section has three essentials:—

1. Fight between two or more persons.
2. Such fight must be in a public place.
3. The fight must disturb the public peace.

1. 'Two or more persons.'—The fight must be between two or more persons.

2. 'Public place.'—"A public place is one where the public go, no matter whether they have a right to go or not... Many shows are exhibited to the public on private property, yet they are frequented by the public—the public go there."³ It is obvious that what is a public place may vary from time to time, and what the Court has to consider is, was a particular place at the time public?—a place where the public undoubtedly were.⁴ Where a quarrel arose between four persons stationed at the entrance of a temple for the purpose of collecting fees and three other persons who wished to enter the temple without previous payment of the fee demanded, it was held that this offence was committed.⁵ Where two persons met and after abuse came to blows and each struck the other down while others had also joined the fight and one of them died of the injuries received, but there was no evidence as to who the assailant was, it was held that any offence beyond an affray had not been committed.⁶

Public places.—An omnibus,⁷ a railway platform,⁸ a public urinal,⁹ a goods-yard of a railway station,¹⁰ an unfenced compound,¹¹ a place forming part of the compound of a Hindu temple,¹² harbour premises,¹³ are public places.

Not public places.—A private chabutra adjoining a public thoroughfare,¹⁴ a railway station and platform at a time when no train is due except a goods-train,¹⁵ and a private garden,¹⁶ are not public places.

3. 'Disturb the public peace.'—It is essential that there must be a disturbance of the public peace.

Affray and riot.—An affray differs from a riot. The former cannot be committed in a private place, and does not require five or more persons; the latter requires at least five persons, and can be committed in a private place.

Affray and assault.—An affray differs from an assault. The one must be committed in a public place: the other may take place anywhere. The former

¹ I Hawk., s. l. p. 487.

² Ibid., s. 2; Angappanasari, (1893) 1 Weir

* Per Grove, J., in Wellard, (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 63, 67, Hari Singh v. Jadu Nandan, (1903) 31 Cal. 542; Musa, (1916) 40 Mad. 556; Gorindarajulu, (1915) 39 Mad. 886; Ramkaranlal, (1916) 13 N. L. R. 68.

* Wellard, sup., p. 66.

* (1879) 1 Weir 71.

* Langar, (1912) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 32 of 1912.

¹ Holmes, (1853) 3 C. & K. 369.

⁶ Ex parte Davis, (1857) 26 L. J. Exch. 393.

* Harris, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 282; but see Orchard, (1848) 3 Cox 248.

¹⁰ Cawayi v. G. I. P. Ry., (1902) 4 Bom. L. R. 290, 26 Bom 609.

¹¹ Har Singh v. Jadu Nandan, sup.

12 Musa, sup

10. 2000, 2001, 2002

14 .

1. 11. 11.

10

is regarded as an offence against the public peace; the latter, against the person of an individual. An affray is nothing more than an assault committed in a public place and in a conspicuous manner, and is so called because it affrighteth and maketh men afraid.

[PRACTICE.]

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused and another person, or other persons, were fighting.

In an affray specific evidence as to the acts of each fighter cannot be expected; mere general evidence as to the accused taking part in it will be sufficient.¹

(2) That such fight was in a public place.²

(3) That the fight disturbed the public peace.³

A conviction under this section, on a prosecution initiated by the police, would be no bar to a subsequent trial under s. 323 on a complaint laid by the party injured.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

¹ Moher Sheikh, (1893) 21 Cal. 392.

² Vadde Ramugadu, (1882) 1 Weir 71.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Ram Sukh, (1924) 47 All. 284.

CHAPTER IX.

OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS.

THIS Chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

"Those offences which are common between public servants and other members of the community, we leave to the general provisions of the Code. If a public servant embezzles public money, we leave him to the ordinary law of criminal breach of trust. If he falsely pretends to have disbursed money for the public, and by this deception induces the Government to allow it in his accounts, we leave him to the ordinary law of cheating. If he produces forged vouchers to back his statement, we leave him to the ordinary law of forgery. We see no reason for punishing these offences more severely when the Government suffers by them than when private people suffer. A Government, indeed, which does not consider the sufferings of private individuals as its own, is not only selfish but short-sighted in its selfishness. The revenue is drawn from the wealth of individuals, and every act of dishonest spoliation which tends to render individuals insecure in the enjoyment of their wealth is really an injury to the revenue. On every account, therefore, we think it desirable that the property of the state should, in general, be protected by exactly the same laws which are considered as sufficient for the protection of the property of the subject."¹

The fact that transgression by a public servant may always be punished by dismissal from the public service explains the comparative leniency of some of the punishments provided by this Chapter and the absence of any notice of certain malpractices.

161. Whoever, being or expecting to be¹ a public servant,²

Public servant
taking gratification other than legal remuneration in respect of an official
act.

accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain³ from any person, for himself or for any other person,⁴ any gratification⁵ whatever, other than legal remuneration,⁶ as a motive or reward⁷ for doing or forbearing to do any official act⁸ or for showing or forbearing to show, in the exercise of his official functions, favour or disfavour to any person, or for rendering or attempting to render any service or disservice to any person, with the Legislative or Executive Government of India,⁹ or with the Government of any Presidency,¹⁰ or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanations.—"Expecting to be a public servant." If a person not expecting to be in office obtains a gratification by deceiving others into a belief that he is about to be in office, and that he will then serve them, he may be guilty of cheating, but he is not guilty of the offence defined in this section.

¹ Note E, p. 121.

"Gratification." The word "gratification" is not restricted to pecuniary gratifications, or in money.

"Legal remuneration." The words "legal remuneration" are not restricted to remuneration which a public servant can lawfully demand, but include all remuneration which is permitted by the Government which he serves, to accept.

"A motive or reward for doing." A person who receives a gratification as a motive for doing what he does not intend to do, or as a reward for doing what he has not done, comes within these words.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, a munsiff, obtains from Z, a banker, a situation in Z's bank for A's brother, as a reward for A for doing some service for Z. A has committed the offence.

(b) A, a public servant, obtains from Z, a subsidiary Power, accepts a sum of money from Z. It does not appear that A accepted this sum as a motive or reward for doing or forbearing to do any particular official act, or for rendering or attempting to render any particular service to that Power with the British Government. But it does appear that A accepted the sum as a motive or reward for generally showing favour in the exercise of his official functions to that Power. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(c) A, a public servant, induces Z erroneously to believe that A's influence with the Government has obtained a title for Z, and thus induces Z to give A money as a reward for this service. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT.

Bribery or corruption on the part of a public servant is made an offence under this section. Not only a public servant in esse but also one who expects to be a public servant in posse comes within the purview of this section.

1. 'Expecting to be.'—If a person expecting to be appointed to a public office obtains money from another as the price of favour to be shewn to that other in the exercise of his functions in that office, he is surely as corrupt as one who does the same being actually in office. It must be proved of course that he gave the other party reason to believe that he was about to obtain the office, it must be proved also, . . . that he himself expected to obtain it. In practice the provision would probably be brought into action only against persons who after having obtained the office have committed the offence.

2. 'Public servant.'—A person who de facto, though wrongly, discharges the duties of an office through which he apparently figures as a public servant, may be tried for getting a bribe.² See s. 21, supra, as to the definition of 'public servant.'

3. 'Obtains, or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain.'—The use of these words shows that solicitation by a public servant or other person was contemplated in framing the provisions of the Penal Code on the subject, and there is nothing in the Code to except from the definition of abetment the species of abetment involved in compliance with the corrupt wishes of the principal offender.³ A mere asking is sufficient to constitute an attempt.⁴

¹ 2nd Rep., s. 66.

² Bamkisto Doos, (1871) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 27.

³ Ma Ka, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896)

158.

⁴ Baldeo Sahai, (1879) 2 All. 253.

It is not necessary for the prosecution to show how the illegal gratification came to be demanded or obtained, so long as it can be clearly established by evidence that it was obtained.¹

4. 'Any other person.'—The other person may or may not be a public servant, and therefore wholly unconnected with the official conduct.²

5. 'Gratification' includes all gratifications of appetite and all honorary distinctions.

The words of the section exclude the defence that the benefit bargained for was to go to somebody else, and also the notion that an officer is protected if he agrees to let his official acts be swayed by the motive of accepting a gratification to be used for advancing some public not private object, such as, charity, science, or religion. The mahars of a village having been suspended from their office, a meeting of the villagers was held at the house of the village Patel to consider the question of their restoration to office, and an agreement was come to that they should be restored on their paying Rs. 300 towards the repair of a temple. It was held that the Patel being a public servant had committed this offence.³

Cases.—A putwari who took grain as a consideration for showing favour to the giver in discharge of his functions as a putwari was guilty of an offence under this section.⁴ The taking of a bribe by a head clerk to influence a Principal Sudder Ameen in his decisions was sufficient for a legal conviction whether the head clerk did or did not influence or try to influence that officer.⁵ A kulkarni of a village who accepted a gratification for allowing a person to work for him was guilty of an offence under this section.⁶ It was held that he had committed this offence.⁶ Where the Colonel of a regiment accepted a gratification for allowing a person to work for him was guilty of an offence under this section.⁷

as gamblers, and afterwards released them on payment of a sum of money by the latter, it was held that the offence committed was that of taking a bribe as regards the constable, and abetment of that offence as regards the others.⁸ Where a Subordinate Judge went in company with a litigant in his Court to a cloth shop and accepted a present of cloth which was paid for by that litigant to gain favours with the judge in his suit, it was held that the judge was guilty of an offence under this section.⁹

6. 'Legal remuneration' means what is given to a public servant by the Government which he serves or by any person having authority from that Government to give,—or what is given to him by any person whosoever, if the Government permits him to accept the gift.¹⁰

The word "Government" in the definition of "legal remuneration" includes a Court of Wards,¹¹ the Senate of the Allahabad University,¹² an employer of

¹ Tapeswri Prasad, (1916) 15 A.L.J.R. 127.

² Bhagwandas Kanji, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 331, 31 Bom. 335.

³ Appaji bin Yadarao, (1896) 21 Bom. 517, 520; Amiruddin Salehoy, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 534, 543, 544.

⁴ Mudsood-Deen, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 148.

⁵ Kaleechurn Serishtadar, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 10.

⁶ Krishnaji Ganesh, (1898) Unrep. Cr. C. 955.

⁷ Wataler, [1914] 3 K. B. 1283.

⁸ Mahomed Hossein, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 49.

⁹ Bhimrao Narsimha Hublikar, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 120.

¹⁰ M. & M. 135.

¹¹ Bombay Court of Wards Act (Bom. Act I of 1903), s. 21 (2); Central Provinces Government Wards Act (XXIV of 1899), s. 12; the United Provinces Court of Wards Act (U. P. Act III of 1899), s. 39; the Ajmere Government Wards Act (Aj. Act I of 1899), s. 12.

¹² The Allahabad University Act (Allah. Act I of 1887), s. 18 (2).

a railway servant,¹ and a municipal board under the United Provinces Municipal Act.²

7. 'A motive or reward.'—It is essential that a bribe should be obtained 'as a motive or reward.'³ This phrase evidently means "on the understanding that the bribe is given in consideration of some official act or conduct." Such an understanding need not be proved by explicit evidence of any precise agreement. It may be inferred from circumstances.⁴ A bribe is not the less a bribe because its payment is postponed.⁵ When a bribe has been given it is immaterial to inquire what, if any, effect the bribe had on the mind of the receiver.

The explanation of this phrase given in the section will not allow a public servant to justify his acceptance of a gift or bribe by urging that the order passed by him was nevertheless a just one and against the very person from whom he received the bribe. Thus, it guards against such a plea as was set up as an excuse for Lord Bacon. "It is pretended," says Hume in his History, "that Bacon had still, in the seat of justice, preserved the integrity of a Judge, and had given just decrees against those very persons from whom he had received the wages of iniquity."

"The term 'reward' is manifestly intended to apply to a 'past service.' What is forbidden speaking generally is the receiving any gratification 'as a motive' to do, 'or a reward' for having done any such thing as is described in the definition."⁷

8. 'Official act.'—It must be an act or omission in connection with the official functions of the accused. If it is not an act of official duty the receipt of money may be some other offence, but it is not a bribe, e.g., if a police-man arrests a man outside his jurisdiction and releases him on receiving a sum of money, this is not a bribe, for it is no part of his official duty to make the arrest. He may be liable for some other offence. Some village watchmen found a widow at the shop of a certain goldsmith at night, and the goldsmith gave them a reward to hold their tongues and to prevent them from being disgraced. It was held that they were not guilty of any offence.⁸ Because to keep silence on a private matter, which is in no way concerned with any matter of the police, much less of crime, and which the watchmen had no business to make the subject of official report, or mention to any person, is unconnected with the "doing or forbearing to do any official act," or with "showing or forbearing to show, in the exercise of their official functions, favour or disfavour to any person." Where two of the accused offered a gratification to a public servant in consideration of his not proceeding against them and the other accused whose papers and books he had seized for bringing them to legal punishment, it was held that the offence committed did not fall under this section and s. 109, but under s. 214.⁹

The Allahabad High Court has held that it is sufficient if the accused thought that a particular public servant had an opportunity to show him favour in the exercise of his official functions, although he might in reality have no such opportunity.¹⁰ This view seems to be unsound. The Madras High Court held in a case, where the charge against a karnam was that he received a bribe from a villager on the understanding that he would get him some darkhast land, that it did not constitute an offence under this section as getting a darkhast land was not the official act of a karnam.¹¹ The same is the view of the Lahore High Court.¹²

¹ The Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 137 (1).

² U. P. Act II of 1916, s. 84.

³ Upendra Nath Chowdhury, (1916) 21 C. W. N. 552.

⁴ Elaganesadas Kanji, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 331, 31 Bom. 335.

⁵ Indra Nath Banerjee v. E. C. Rooke, (1909) 14 C. W. N. 101.

⁶ Harrington v. The Victoria Graving Dock

Co., (1878) 3 Q. B. D. 549; Shipway v. Broadwood, (1899) 1 Q. B. 369 followed in Indra Nath Banerjee v. E. C. Rooke, sup.

⁷ 2nd Rep. s. 67.

⁸ Abdul Aziz, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 179.

⁹ Meeraj, (1880) P. R. No. 15 of 1881.

¹⁰ Kishan Lal, (1904) 1 A. L. J. P. 267 (N).

¹¹ Pulipati Venkiah, (1921) 47 M. L. J.

662.

¹² Ajudhia Parshad, (1921) 1 L. C. 227.

It is an offence even when the act to be done in return for the bribe is a just and proper act. It is not necessary to show that as a matter of fact favour was shown to the person who offered the bribe. It is sufficient if the person giving the gratification is led to believe that the official act would go against him if he did not give gratification.¹

The performance of the act which is consideration for the bribe is not essential.

9. 'Government of India.'—See s. 16, supra.

10. 'Presidency.'—See s. 18, supra.

Accomplice.—The mere presence of a person on the occasion of the giving of a bribe, and his omission to promptly inform the authorities, do not constitute him an accomplice, unless it can be shown that he somehow co-operated in the payment of the bribe, or was instrumental in the negotiations for the payment.²

Abetment.—A person offering a public servant an illegal gratification for any of the purposes stated in the section is liable for abetment of an offence under this section.³ See ill. (a) to s. 116. A mere offer to pay an illegal gratification to a public servant, although no money or other consideration is actually produced, amounts to an attempt to bribe.⁴ If a party offers a bribe to a judge, meaning to corrupt him in a case depending before him; and the judge taketh it not; yet this is an offence punishable by law, in the party that offers it.⁵ To bribe or to attempt to bribe a public servant is only punishable under the Penal Code as an abetment of the substantive offence of a public servant accepting or attempting to obtain an illegal gratification. Illustration (a) to s. 116 is only an example of abetment of an offence under this section. There are many other ways of instigating a public servant to commit an offence under this section besides by means of a direct offer of a bribe.⁶ If a public servant allows illegal gratification to be delivered, but not in order to its acceptance, but merely for the purpose of having complete evidence of the transaction, the person offering the gratification will be punished for abetment under s. 116.⁷ Even if a public servant is corrupt and solicits a bribe directly or indirectly, the giving him of a bribe is none the less an abetment of his offence.⁸ A person offered a bribe to a Magistrate by thrusting currency notes into his hands. His defence was that he did so with a view to lay a trap as the Magistrate was known to be a corrupt official. It was held that his act amounted to abetment of the offence under this section.⁹ The authors of the Code, however, say: "The person who, without any demand express or implied on the part of a public servant, volunteers an offer of a bribe, and induces that public servant to accept it, will be punishable under the (law of abetment) as an instigator. But the person who complies with a demand, however signified, on the part of a public servant, cannot be considered as guilty of instigating that public servant to receive a bribe. We do not propose that such a person shall be liable to any punishment...We are strongly of opinion that it would be unjust and cruel to punish the giving of a bribe in any case in which it could not be proved that the giver had really by his instigations corrupted the virtue of a public servant, who, unless temptation had been put in his way, would have acted uprightly."¹⁰

¹ Bhimrao Narasimha Hublikar, (1924) 27 Bom. L. R. 120.

² Deodhar Singh, (1899) 27 Cal. 144; Deo Nandan Pershad, (1906) 33 Cal. 649; Maganlal, (1889) 14 Bom. 115; Khadam Ali, (1919) P. W. R. (Cr.) No 15 of 1918.

³ Maganlal, sup.; Ahad Shah, (1917) P. R. No. 18 of 1918.

⁴ Rameshwar Singh, (1924) 3 Pat. 647.

⁵ Vaughan, (1769) 4 Burr. 2494, 2501.

⁶ Amiruddin Salebhoy, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 534, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 207.

⁷ Raghudatt Singh, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 154; Ngā Hnin, (1917) 9 L. B. R. 52; Ahad Shah, sup.

⁸ Ma Ka, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 158.

⁹ Lakshminarayana Aiyar, [1917] M. W. N. 831, 22 M. L. T. 373.

¹⁰ Note E, pp. 126, 127.

Separate Conviction.—Where a certain sum of money is paid to a public servant as illegal gratification on one day and a certain sum on another day for the same purpose, the offence of receiving illegal gratification becomes a continuous offence and there ought not to be separate convictions for offences under this section and s. 165 for the same offence.¹

162. Whoever accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person,¹ any gratification whatever as a motive or reward for inducing, by corrupt or illegal means, any public servant to do or to forbear to do any official act, or in the exercise of the official functions of such public servant to show favour or disfavour to any person, or to render or attempt to render any service or disservice to any person with the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any member of the Senate of the Allahabad University, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

A person, who accepts for himself or for some other person, a gratification for inducing, by corrupt or illegal means, a public servant to forbear to do a certain official act, is punishable under this section.² Under this section the public servant is to be induced by corrupt or illegal means. The next section deals with the case where the public servant is induced by personal influence.

To admit solicitation of a bribe by a third person without the privity or connivance of the public servant concerned as an excuse for giving a bribe to such public servant is an absolute absurdity.³

1. 'For any other person.'—These words must be read so as to include everyone other than the actual recipient of the gratification.⁴

Amenament.—The words "or with any member of...University" were inserted by Act XVIII of 1887, s. 18 (2).

PRACTICE

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused accepted, or obtained, or agreed to accept, or attempted to obtain, from some one, for himself or for some one else, a gratification.

(2) That he accepted, etc., the same, as a motive or reward to induce, by corrupt or illegal means, a public servant (a) to do or forbear to do an official act; or (b) to show, in the exercise of his official functions, favour or disfavour to some person; or (c) to render, or attempt to render, any service or disservice to some person, with the Legislative, or Executive Government, etc., or with any public servant as such.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

¹ Jagat Chandra Sarma v. Lal Chand Das, (1901) 6 C. W. N. 332.

² Olakoy Churn Chuckerbutty, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 19; Hira Lal, (1918) 1 L. R. No. 63 of 1918, P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 18 of 1918.

³ Ma Ka, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 158.

⁴ Nemichand, Criminal Appeal No. 47 of 1915, decided on 16th January 1916 (Unrep. Bom).

A conviction under this section cannot be had if the evidence does not show the person or persons from whom the gratification was obtained, or the public servant to be influenced in the exercise of his public functions.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, being a public servant in the—Department, accepted (or obtained, or agreed to accept, or attempted to obtain) from—for yourself (or for—) a gratification (this should be specified) as a motive or reward for inducing, by corrupt or illegal means,—a public servant, to do (or to forbear to do) an official act, viz.—[or to show favour (or disfavour) to—] [or to render (or attempt to render) a service (or disservice) to—] with the Legislative (or Executive) Government of India (or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, etc.) and thereby committed an offence under s. 162 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

163. Whoever accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gratification whatever, as a motive or reward for inducing, by the exercise of personal influence, any public servant to do or to forbear to do any official act, or in the exercise of the official functions of such public servant to show favour or disfavour to any person, or to render or attempt to render any service or disservice to any person with the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any member of the Senate of the Allahabad University, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION.

An advocate who receives a fee for arguing a case before a Judge, a person who receives a bribe for influencing a public servant to do or to forbear to do any official act, or in the exercise of the official functions of such public servant to show favour or disfavour to any person, or to render or attempt to render any service or disservice to any person with the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any member of the Senate of the Allahabad University, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 162 and this section apply to cases where the person exercising or professing to exercise personal influence is a third person. If he does not, the offence is committed under either of the other two sections. He may, however, be guilty as an abettor of the offence under s. 162 if he induces or attempts to induce the public servant to influence a public servant. Under this section it is taken for granted that the person exercising or professing to exercise personal influence is a third person. Both these sections apply to attempts.

Amendment.—The words “or with any member of the Senate of the Allahabad University” inserted by Act XVIII of 1887, s. 18 (2).

¹ Setul Chunder Bose, (1885) 10 B.L.R. 100.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 162 except that in (2) proof of “personal influence” should be given instead of “corrupt or illegal means.”

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—See s. 162 and substitute for “by corrupt or illegal means” the words “by the exercise of personal influence.”

164. Whoever, being a public servant, in respect of whom either of the offences defined in the last two preceding sections is committed, abets the offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for abetment by public servant of offences defined in section 162 or 163.

ILLUSTRATION.

A is a public servant. B, A's wife, receives a present as a motive for soliciting A to give an office to a particular person. A abets her doing so. B is punishable with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or with fine, or with both. A is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section is one of the ‘express provisions’ made by the Code for the punishment of abetment. Enhanced punishment is provided for an offence which would have been punishable under the provisions of abetment of an offence. See s. 109 and other sections of Chapter V.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was a public servant.

(2) That as such he abetted an offence punishable under s. 162 or this section. Establish abetment under s. 107.

(3) That an offence under s. 162 or this section was committed.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, being a public servant in the—Department, abetted the commission of the offence punishable under s. 162 (or s. 163) by—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 164 of the Indian Penal Code, and within—of the High Court.)
[omit these words if not committed to Court of Session]] on the said charge.

Public servant obtaining valuable thing without consideration, from person concerned in proceeding or business transacted by such public servant.

165. Whoever, being a public servant, accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, for himself, or for any other person, any valuable thing without consideration, or for a consideration which he knows to be inadequate, from any person whom he knows to have been, or to be, or to be likely to be concerned in any proceeding or business transacted or about to be transacted by such public servant, or having any connection with the official functions of himself or of any public servant to whom he is subordinate, or from any person whom he knows to be interested in or related to the person so concerned, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, a Collector, hires a house of Z, who has a settlement case pending before him. It is agreed that A shall pay fifty rupees a month, the house being such that, if the bargain were made in good faith, A would be required to pay two hundred rupees a month. A has obtained a valuable thing from Z without adequate consideration.

(b) A, a Judge, buys of Z, who has a cause pending in A's Court, Government promissory notes at a discount, when they are selling in the market at a premium. A has obtained a valuable thing from Z without adequate consideration.

(c) Z's brother is apprehended and taken before A, a Magistrate, on a charge of perjury. A sells to Z shares in a bank at a premium, when they are selling in the market at a discount. Z pays A for the shares accordingly. The money so obtained by A is a valuable thing obtained by him without adequate consideration.

COMMENT.

The mere taking of presents by a public functionary, when it cannot be proved that such presents were corruptly taken, is made penal by this section. Under s. 161 the gratification is taken as a motive or reward for doing or forbearing to do an official act; under this section the question of motive or reward is not material as the section prohibits the taking of a thing without consideration from a person having any connection with the official functions of the public servant. There is no absolute prohibition, but the limit is drawn by the framers of the Code who say:

"Absolutely to prohibit all public functionaries from taking presents would be to prohibit a son from contributing to the support of a father, a father from giving a portion with a daughter, a brother from extricating a brother from pecuniary difficulties. No Government would wish to prevent persons intimately connected by blood, by marriage or by friendship, from rendering services to each other; and no tribunals would enforce a law which would make such services a crime. Where no such close connection exists, the taking of presents by a public functionary is generally a time, a wreath of flowers, a slice of betel-nut, a drop of attar of roses poured on his handkerchief, are presents which it would in this country be held churlish to refuse, and which cannot possibly corrupt the most mercenary of mankind. Other presents, of more value than these, may, on account of their peculiar nature, be accepted, without affording any ground for suspicion. Luxuries socially consumed, according to the usages of hospitality, are presents of this description; it would be unreasonable to treat a man in office as a criminal, for drinking many rupees-worth of champagne in a year, at the table of an acquaintance; though if he were to suffer one of his subordinates to accept even a single rupee in specie, he might deserve exemplary punishment."¹ If a public servant was allowed to take presents he might be induced to take a bribe in the shape of presents.

A police-officer, employed to bring up each case with the witnesses for trial, asked for and obtained one rupee from the prosecutor in a case after the prosecution had ended. It was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section, and not under s. 161.²

¹ Note E, pp 123, 124.

² Kampta Prasad, (1877) 1 All. 530.

This section does not prohibit a sale or purchase by a public servant, at a fair price, to or from a person transacting business before him.¹

If a person, being in any way connected with the official functions of a public servant, induces him to accept anything for an inadequate consideration, he abets the offence mentioned in this section.

By the Regulating Act, 1772² and the East India Company Act, 1793,³ the receiving of gifts by any one holding any office under the Crown is punishable as extortion.

PRACTICE:

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is a public servant.

(2) That he has accepted or obtained, or has agreed to accept, or has attempted to obtain, for himself or for some one else, a valuable thing.

(3) That he gave no consideration for it, or gave a consideration which he knew to be inadequate.

(4) That the person from whom the accused accepted, etc., the same, was known to the accused to have been, or then was, or was likely to be, concerned in a proceeding or business transacted or about to be transacted by himself, or which had a connection with the official functions of himself, or of a public servant to whom the accused was subordinate or from person known to the accused to be interested in, or related to, the person so concerned. As to the non-admissibility of the evidence of similar but unconnected instances of receiving illegal gratifications, see Vyapoory Moodeliar's case.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, being a public servant in the—Department, accepted (or obtained, etc.,) for yourself (or for—) a valuable thing, viz.,—, without consideration (or for consideration which you knew to be inadequate) from—whom you knew to have been concerned in a proceeding (or business transacted by you), viz.,—, [whom you knew to be interested in, or related to, the person so concerned] and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 165 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

166. Whoever, being a public servant, knowingly disobeys any direction of the law¹ as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will, by such disobedience, cause injury² to any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, being an officer directed by law to take property in execution, in order to satisfy a decree pronounced in Z's favour by a Court of Justice, knowingly disobeys that direction of law, with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause injury to Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT.

The offence made punishable by this section consists, not in an inadvertent or even careless, but in a wilful departure from the direction of the law intending

¹ Stokes, Vol. I. p. 151.

² 13 Geo. III., c. 63, ss. 23 to 25.

³ 33 Geo. III., c. 52, ss. 62 to 64.

⁴ (1881) 6 Cal. 653.

to cause injury to any person. There must be a wilful disobedience of an express direction of the law, and a disobedience to an order is not sufficient, even though that order may be one that is given under a provision of law.¹ A mere breach of departmental rules will not bring a public servant within the purview of this section.

1. 'Direction of law.'—It may be a direction given by a written law or a mandate proceeding from a competent authority which the public servant is bound by law to obey—as a writ or order for the liberation of a person from prison.²

If the direction of law given by a special Act is violated, the punishment will be under that Act. Thus, a postal official absenting himself from his station without leave would be charged under the Post Office Act and not under this section.³

Where a peon whose duty it was to require the signature of a person on whom a notice was served represented the notice to be a warrant and arrested him, it was held that he had disobeyed a direction of law and that he was guilty under this section.⁴

2. 'Injury.'—See s. 44, supra.

English law.—Neglect of official duty is a misdemeanour according to the English law, if the discharge of such duty is not attended with greater danger than a man of ordinary firmness and activity may be expected to encounter.

Statutory application.—See the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 162; the Indian Christian Marriage Act (XV of 1872), s. 72.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is a public servant.

(2) That he conducted himself in the particular manner charged.

(3) That such conduct was in the exercise of his public duties as such servant.

(4) That such conduct was in disobedience to a direction of law

(5) That when the accused disobeyed such direction of law, he did so knowingly.

(6) That when the accused was guilty of such disobedience, he thereby intended or knew that he was likely thereby to cause an injury.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

Charge.—The charge should be stated as nearly as possible in the language of the section of the Act which is disobeyed.⁵ The particular direction of the law should be specified.⁶ The charge should run thus—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, did (or omitted to do, as the case may be) such conduct being contrary to the provisions of Act—, section —, and known by you to be prejudicial to—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 166 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.⁷

¹ Appaji Narayan, (1895) Cr. R. No. 27 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 764.

² M. & M. 139.

³ Pirasami Naick, (1877) 1 Weir 72.

⁴ Rangasami Nayudu, (1910) 20 M. L. J.

568, 7 M. L. T. 429.

⁵ (1865) 2 W.R. (Cr. L.) 2.

⁶ Karm Din, (1890) P. R. No. 34 of 1890.

⁷ Crim. P. C., Sch. V, No. xxviii (1) (4).

167. Whoever, being a public servant,¹ and being, as such public servant, charged with the preparation or translation of any document,² frames or translates that document in a manner which he knows or believes to be incorrect, intending thereby to cause,³ or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause, injury⁴ to any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The preceding section dealt generally with the disobedience of any direction of law; this section deals with a specific instance, viz., that of framing an incorrect document with intent to cause injury. This section is similar to s. 218.

1. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

2. 'Preparation or translation of any document.'—"Making what purports to be a copy of a document is not included in the words 'preparation or translation of any document,' nor in the words 'frames or translates that document.'"¹

As to the meaning of "document," see s. 29, supra.

Submitting a false report.—Where an amin, who was entrusted with the execution of a warrant for the attachment of moveable property, submitted a report to the Court with a certificate, falsely stating in them that certain persons forcibly rescued the attached property, while it was in fact released by an amicable arrangement with the consent of the judgment-creditor, it was held that he was a public servant charged with the preparation of a document within the meaning of this section and was liable to be punished under it.²

Incorrect copy of an entry.—The accused, a village putwari, prepared an incorrect copy of an entry in his roznamcha for a plaintiff in a civil suit. The entry related to a contract between the plaintiff and another. It was held that the accused had committed an offence under this section of framing an incorrect document.³

3. 'Intending thereby to cause.'—"Where an act, in itself indifferent, if done with a particular intent becomes criminal, there the intent must be proved and found; but where the act is in itself unlawful, . . . the proof of justification or excuse lies on the defendant; and, in failure thereof, the law implies criminal intent."⁴

4. 'Injury.'—See s. 44, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove (1) that the accused was a public servant.

(2) That he had the charge of the preparation or the translation of the document.

(3) That he had such charge, in his capacity of a public servant.

(4) That he framed or translated it in an incorrect manner.

(5) That he knew, or believed, that he was incorrectly framing or translating the same.

(6) That he did as above, with intent, or with knowledge that it was likely that he would thereby cause injury.

Procedure—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

¹ Per Barkley, J., in Deva Singh, (1878) P. R. No. 15 of 1879, at p. 43.

² Muthalagiri Raju, (1892) 1 Weir 74.

³ Hira Singh, (1872) P. R. No. 32 of 1872.

⁴ Per Lord Mansfield in Woodfall, (1770)

4 Burr. 2661, 2667.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being a public servant, to wit—, and being, as such public servant, charged with the preparation (or translation) of the document relating to—, framed (or translated) that document in a manner which you knew (or believed) to be incorrect, intending thereby to cause (or knowing it to be likely that you might thereby cause) injury to—and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 167 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

168. Whoever, being a public servant,¹ and being legally bound² as such public servant not to engage in trade, engages in trade,³ shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section punishes those public servants only who are legally bound not to engage in trade. It is in a way incomplete without the assistance of some other enactment or rule of law which imposes the legal prohibition required.

Public servants are not allowed to trade in order that they may not neglect their duties. Being in official position they could easily obtain unfair advantages over other traders.

1. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

2. 'Legally bound.'—See s. 43, supra.

3. 'Engages in trade.'—The Indian Penal Code contains no definition of the very general word 'trade,' and no explanation of the equally wide term 'engages in trade.' This section has been made the radix for a number of special enactments going to control the conduct of public servants in the matter of varied descriptions of traffic and money dealings.¹

A person engages in trade who habitually buys and sells with a view to profit. The word 'trade' does not include lending money at interest. Lending money at interest does not, therefore, amount to 'unlawfully engaging in trade.'²

There are various enactments prohibiting public officers from engaging in trade.³

¹ Narayan, (1910) 6 N. L. R. 114.

² Muhammada, (1903) P. R. No. 22 of 1903.

³ Governor-General, Governor, or Member of Council (33 Geo. III., c. 52; 3 & 4 Will. IV., c. 85); Revenue Officers (Act XVIII of 1881; Bom. Act V. of 1879; Beng. Reg. II of 1793; Mad. Regs. I and II of 1803); Officers of Government (Act I of 1846); XIV of 1846; XX of 1846; 1); the

Administrator-General (Act III of 1913);

Punjab Municipal Act, XX of 1891; Punjab Act III of 1911, s. 48; C. P. Municipalities Act XVI of 1903; Burma Municipalities Act (Burma Act III of 1898); Ajmere Municipalities Regulation V of 1886. See also the Bom. Port Trust Act (Bom. Act VI of 1879), s. 29; the Mad. Harbour Trust Act (Mad. Act

A Vice-Chairman of a Municipal Board was vested with authority to make contracts for the construction of municipal works, and to pass the contractor's bills and issue cheques for the payment of the same out of municipal funds. In pursuance of this authority, the Vice-Chairman gave two contracts for the construction of municipal drains to L, a regular contractor with the Board. L being without funds for the execution of the contracts, the Vice-Chairman, who had a private money-lending business, advanced money to L for that purpose, and subsequently passed L's bills and repaid himself from the realization of municipal cheques issued by him. It was held that the Vice-Chairman was guilty of an offence under this section.¹

Statutory application.—See the Madras City Municipal Act (Mad. Act IV of 1919) s. 359.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was a public servant.

(2) That he, as such, was legally bound not to engage in trade.

(3) That he did engage in trade.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being a public servant, to wit—, and being, as such public servant, legally bound not to engage in trade, did engage in trade, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 163 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

169. Whoever, being a public servant¹, and being legally bound² as such public servant not to purchase or bid for certain property, purchases or bids for that property, either in his own name or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both; and the property, if purchased, shall be confiscated.

¹ Public servant unlawfully buying or bidding for property.

COMMENT.

This section is merely an extension of the principle enunciated in the last section. It prohibits a public servant from purchasing or bidding for property which he is legally bound not to purchase.

1. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

2. 'Legally bound.'—See bound not to bid for property having purchased a pony, which have been convicted under this not be convicted under s. 406

a. The r h a Sub impounded
s. 19 of Ac reach of it must be legally was charged with that he should and that he could

CE.

a p to

for in q e (1) that as such, was l

(3) That he did purchase or bid for that property, either in his own name, or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, being a public servant in the—Department and being legally bound as such public servant not to purchase (or bid for) certain property, viz., —, purchased (or bid for that property) in your name [(or in the name of—)] or jointly or in shares with—] and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 169 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

170. Whoever pretends to hold any particular office as a public servant, knowing that he does not hold such office,¹ or falsely personates any other person holding such office,¹ and in such assumed character does or attempts to do any act under colour of such office,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description, for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 140 punishes the person who wears the garb or carries the token used by a soldier. This section punishes a person who does any act in the assumed character of a public servant.

Scope.—“Section 170... does not make the act of pretending to hold a particular office as a public servant punishable, unless the person in such assumed character does, or attempts to do, any act under colour of such office.”¹

Ingredients.—The section requires two things :—

1. A person (a) pretending to hold a particular office as a public servant knowing that he does not hold such office, or (b) falsely personating any other person holding such office.

2. Such person in such assumed character must do or attempt to do an act under colour of such office.

1a. ‘Pretends to hold any particular office as a public servant knowing that he does not hold such office.’—The particular office must be an existing office. If it is uncertain who legally fills the office, a person doing an official act in pursuance of what he honestly believes to be his lawful title to the office, does not come within the section.

As to the meaning of ‘public servant,’ see s. 21, supra.

1b. ‘Falsely personates any other person holding such office.’—‘Falsely’ does not mean ‘fraudulently.’ A fraudulent or dishonest intention is immaterial.² “‘To personate’ means to pretend to be a particular person.”³

2. ‘In such assumed character does or attempts to do any act under colour of such office.’—It is not necessary that the act done or attempted to be done should be such an act as might legally be done by the public servant personated.⁴ The accused was arrested when he was demanding one anna’s worth of fruit from a fruit-seller for one pice on the representation that he was a Head Constable, which in fact he was not. It was held that if he pretended to be a police-officer and as such

¹ Per Copleston, J. C., in Nga Pe, (1896)

1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 163; Umakant Balaant, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 222, 706.

² Tun Aung Gyan, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 222.

³ Per Coleridge, J., in Hague, (1864) 4 B. & S. 715, 720.

⁴ Aziz-ud-din, (1904) 27 All. 294.

police-officer tried to extort money or things from a fruit-seller, he committed an offence under this section, and it was not necessary that the act done under colour of office should be a legal act on the part of the accused.¹

'Colour of such office.'—An act is done 'under colour' of an office, if it is an act having some relation to the office, which the actor pretends to hold. If it has no relation to the office, as, if A pretending to be a servant of Government, travelling through a district, obtain money, provisions, etc., the offence may amount to cheating under s. 415, but is not punishable under this section.² The mere assumption of a false character without any attempt to do an official act is not sufficient. Where the accused went to the platform of a railway station and obtained admission on a pretence that he was a C. I. D. Officer without purchasing a platform ticket, it was held that his conviction under this section was wrong because the act of the accused did not assume an official authority.³ Where a person, pretending to be a police-officer, reprimanded some villagers on account deputed on such matters.⁴ The phrase 'an act under colour of such office' points to acts which could not have been done without assuming official authority or responsibility, and which might be done by a person in the exercise of his official character, doing them.⁵ Where connection with a record on behalf of another the offence under this section was not committed.⁶ Where a Village Revenue Officer, in the absence of the Village Magistrate, exercised the powers of a Village Magistrate, and it was found that he acted in good faith, it was held that a conviction under this section could not be sustained.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused personated some public servant or that he pretended to hold the office of a public servant.

(2) That he was not a public servant; or that he did not hold such office.

(3) That he acted falsely in such personation; or that he knew that he did not hold such office.

(4) That he, when assuming such character, did or attempted to do something under colour of such office.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, pretended to hold the office of—, as a public servant (or falsely personated—holding such office), and in such assumed character did (or attempted to do)—under colour of such office and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 170 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Wearing garb or carrying token used by public servant with fraudulent intent.

171. Whoever, not belonging to a certain class of public servants, wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or token used by that class of public servants, with the intention

¹ Aris-ud-din, (1901) 27 All. 294.

² M. & M. 142.

³ Suldeo Pathak, (1917) 3 P. L. J. 339.

⁴ P. L. W. 39.

⁵ Sadanand Dass, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 29.

⁶ Umakant Balvant, (1907) 9 Bom. L. R. 222, 706.

⁷ Ibid.

⁸ (1881) 1 Weir 74.

that it may be believed, or with the knowledge that it is likely to be believed, that he belongs to that class of public servants, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Under this section the offence is complete, although no act is either done or attempted to be done in the assumed official character. The mere circumstance of wearing such a garb, or using such a token, with the intention or knowledge supposed is sufficient. If any act is done then the preceding section will apply. The English law is to the same effect. If a person at Oxford, who is not a member of the University, go to a shop for the purpose of fraud, wearing a commoner's cap and gown, and obtain goods, this appearing in a cap and gown is a sufficient false pretence although nothing passes in words.¹ Under s. 140 the wearing of the garb or carrying of the token of a soldier is made punishable.

Intention is the gist of the offence under this section. The intention must be to practise deception by wearing the garb or carrying the token of a public servant. Where the accused was found carrying a police jacket under his arm, with intent that it should be believed that he was a police constable, it was held that he committed no offence under this section as he was not wearing the jacket.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused wore the garb, or carried the token in question.

(2) That such garb or token resembled that of a public servant.

(3) That the accused did not belong to the class of public servants, who use such garb or token.

(4) That he did as in (1) with the intention, or with the knowledge, that it was likely that it might be believed he was such public servant.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Sentence.—Where an accused person is convicted of wearing the garb of a Police Constable, and of personating by means of such garb a Police Constable, and, as such, ordering a person to be kept in custody, only one sentence ought to be passed on him under the provisions of s. 71 of the Code.³

¹ Barnard, (1837) 7 C. & P. 784.

² Tukaram, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 405.

³ Nga Po Kyaw, (1904) U. B. R. (P. C.) 17 (1904-1906) 3.

CHAPTER IX-A.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS.

171-A. For the purposes of this Chapter—

(a) "candidate" means a person who has been nominated as a candidate at any election and includes a person who, when an election is in contemplation, holds himself out as a prospective candidate thereat: provided that he is subsequently nominated as a candidate at such election;

(b) "electoral right" means the right of a person to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at an election¹.

COMMENT.

This Chapter has been introduced in the Code by the Indian Election Offences and Inquiries Act (XXXIX of 1920) to give effect to the recommendations of the Joint Select Committee appointed to report on the Government of India Act. In their report they observed: "The Committee are themselves firmly convinced that a complete and stringent Corrupt Practices Act should be brought into operation before the first election for the Legislative Councils. There is no such Act at present in existence in India, and the Committee are convinced that it will not be less required in India than it is in other countries." Act XXXIX of 1920 was, therefore, enacted to provide for the punishment of malpractices in connection with elections, and to make further provision for the conduct of inquiries in regard to disputed elections to legislative bodies constituted under the Government of India Act.

The Government of India thought it desirable that advantage should be taken of this opportunity to make election offences part of the general law of the land, not only in respect of Legislative bodies, but also in the case of elections to public bodies generally.

The Select Committee to which the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Bill was referred, in their report, say:—“We feel there are distinct advantages at present in the Bill as it is, and it is so important a part in the new public life of India that it should be markedly drawn to the danger of corrupt practices in relation to the franchise, whether that franchise relates to legislative or other bodies. We feel it is of the greatest importance that the principle of the purity of the franchise should be insisted on in the general criminal law of the country and that it should not be left to local legislatures to deal with the broad principles enacted in Part I of the Bill. There will be sufficient scope for those bodies in elaborating and supplementing the law as proposed in the Bill for we recognize that it is by no means exhaustive. Experience may no doubt show that minor offences will require to be provided against and that local conditions may need local treatment. We feel, however, that to lay down the broad basis of a law so necessary to protect the purity of the franchise is an appropriate piece of work for the Imperial Legislative Council.”

The present chapter, therefore, seeks to make punishable under the ordinary penal law, bribery, undue influence, and personation, and certain other malpractices at elections not only to the Legislative bodies, but also to membership of public authorities where the law prescribes a method of election; and, further, to debar persons guilty of such malpractices from holding positions of public responsibility for a specific period.¹

The new offences that are thus inserted in the Penal Code are bribery, undue influence, personation and deliberate false statements with the object of prejudicing a candidate at or in connection with elections.²

1. 'Election.'—'Election' is defined as including election to all classes of public bodies where such a system is prescribed by law (vide Explanation 3 to s. 21, supra).

171-B. (1) Whoever—

(i) gives a gratification to any person with the object of inducing him or any other person to exercise any electoral right or of rewarding any person for having exercised any such right; or Bribery.

(ii) accepts either for himself or for any other person any gratification as a reward for exercising any such right or for inducing or attempting to induce any other person to exercise any such right, commits the offence of bribery: provided that a declaration of public policy or a promise of public action shall not be an offence under this section.

(2) A person who offers, or agrees to give, or offers or attempts to procure, a gratification shall be deemed to give a gratification.

(3) A person who obtains or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain a gratification shall be deemed to accept a gratification, and a person who accepts a gratification as a motive for doing what he does not intend to do, or as a reward for doing what he has not done, shall be deemed to have accepted the gratification as a reward.

COMMENT.

This section defines the offence of bribery at an election.

'Bribery' is defined primarily as the giving or acceptance of a gratification either as a motive or as a reward to any person, either to induce him to stand as, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate, or to vote or refrain from voting at an election. It also includes offers or agreements to give or offer and attempts to procure a gratification for any person. Gratification is already explained in s. 161 and is not restricted to pecuniary gratifications or to gratifications estimable in money.³

Sub-clause (2).—Offers.—By this clause the attempt to corrupt is made equivalent to the complete act.

Treating.—Treating will be bribery if refreshment is given or accepted with the intent required by law.⁴ Treating of non-electors in order that they might influence voters⁵ or of women in order that they might influence their fathers or brothers would be illegal.⁶

The gist of the offence of treating is the corrupt inducement to the voter to vote or refrain from voting, which may be given at any time, although for obvious

¹ See the Statement of Objects and Reasons, G. L., 1920, Part V, p. 135, s. 4.

² Ibid., s. 7.

³ Ibid., s. 8.

⁴ Ibid., s. 9.

⁵ Longford, (1870) 2 O'M. & H. 6, 15.

⁶ Tamworth, (1889) 1 O'M. & H. 75, 86.

One H, one of the respondent's principal agents, and chairman of one of the district committees at the election, who was a Justice of the Peace, and a trustee of several charities, and a very influential person in the borough, stood with his gardener, J. M., just outside one of the polling stations, and spoke to many of the voters as they came to the poll, and solicited one voter, who was wearing the petitioner's colours, to vote for the respondent. When another voter wearing the petitioner's colours was coming out of the polling station, J. M. called out, "We shall know him and remember him another day." It was held, that though this conduct was highly improper, yet it did not amount by itself to undue influence so as to avoid the election.¹

When undue influence by the improper exercise of spiritual influence was proved to have been committed by agents of the respondents, the elections were avoided. In this case it appeared that a pastoral had been issued by the Catholic bishop to the clergy throughout certain constituencies, and was read by them from the altar a few days before the election. The pastoral denounced the political party to which the petitioners belonged, condemned their principles as unlawful and unholy, and threatened with spiritual injury and loss all persons who should vote for them.²

171-D. Whoever at an election applies for a voting paper or votes in the name of any other person, whether living or dead, or in a fictitious name, or who having voted once at such election applies at the same election for a voting paper in his own name ; and whoever abets, procures or attempts to procure the voting by any person in any such way, commits the offence of personation at an election.

COMMENT;

This section defines 'personation at election.' The offence is punishable under s. 171-F.

The definition of 'personation' closely follows the definition in s. 24 of the Ballot Act, 1872, and covers both a person who attempts to vote in another person's name, or in a fictitious name, a voter who attempts to vote twice and any person who abets, procures or attempts to procure such voting.³

1. 'Having voted once... applies at the same election for a voting paper.'—The offence of double voting can be charged not only under this section but also under s. 55 (1) of the Madras District Municipalities Act (Mad. Act V of 1920).⁴ It will be punishable also under similar provisions of the District Municipal Acts of other provinces.

Personation.—The usual method of voting at an election was for the voter to obtain a paper called the signature slip and thereupon to go to the election officer and obtain a voting paper. An applicant went to an election officer in charge of signature slips and produced a certain piece of paper bearing a certain number. The name L appeared in the electoral roll against that number and the applicant professed to be L. A patwari pointed out that the applicant was not L but was one M. After some dispute the applicant admitted that he was not L. It was held that the applicant was not guilty of an attempt to commit the offence of fraudulently applying for a voting paper and thereby personating at election.⁵ The Court observed: "In this case the obtaining of the 'signature slip' was an act which

¹ Lickfield, (1880) 3 O'M. & H. 138.

1920, Part V, p. 135, s. 10.

² North Meath, (1892) 4 O'M. & H. 130, 185; Day's EL. Cas. 132, 141.

³ Seetha Ayyar, [1924] M. IV. N. 268.

⁴ Maliban Singh, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 1102.

⁵ Statement of Objects and Reasons, G. L.

by itself would not have amounted to an application for a voting paper. The applicant was frustrated in the act of obtaining a signature slip. If he had not been frustrated, all that he would have committed was the obtaining of a signature slip on false pretences. The completion of this act would not have amounted to a on of a voter at a person who came forward to vote, he had, on the advice of others, put his name to a "signature sheet" in token that the thumb-mark made by the voter was that of the person entitled to vote under a certain name on the electoral roll. It was held that, inasmuch as the acts done by the applicant constituted the specific offence provided for by this section, he could only be tried for that offence, and could not be tried for abetment of the general offence provided for by s. 465 of the Code.²

171-E. Whoever commits the offence of bribery shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both :

Punishment for bribery.

Provided that bribery by treating shall be punished with fine only.

Explanation:—'Treating' means that form of bribery where the gratification consists in food, drink, entertainment, or provision.

COMMENT.

This section specifies the punishment which should be inflicted for the offence of bribery. Bribery by treating is punishable with fine only.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove, where the accused is the giver of the bribe, that he gave a gratification to a person with the object of (a) inducing him or any other person to exercise any electoral right, or (b) of rewarding any person for having exercised any such right.

Prove, where the accused is the acceptor of the bribe, that he accepted either for himself or for any other person any gratification as a reward (a) for exercising any electoral right, or (b) for inducing or attempting to induce any other person to exercise any such right.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Sanction.—Previous sanction is necessary for prosecution under this section.³

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge 'you' (name of the accused) as follows :—

(Where the accused is the giver of the bribe.)

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, gave a gratification, to wit—, to—with the object of [inducing him or—to exercise his electoral right] [or rewarding—for having exercised his electoral right] and thereby committed an offence under s. 171-E of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

¹ Malkhan Singh, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 1102.

² Ram Nath, (1924) 47 All. 263.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s 106; Ponnuswami Thevar, (1921) 15 L. W. 199, [1922] M. W. N 129.

Provided that if any person having incurred any such expenses not exceeding the amount of ten rupees without authority obtains within ten days from the date on which such expenses were incurred the approval in writing of the candidate, he shall be deemed to have incurred such expenses with the authority of the candidate.

COMMENT.

This section makes it illegal for any one, unless authorized by a candidate, to incur any expenses in connection with the promotion of the candidate's election.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused incurred or authorized expenses on account of the holding of any public meeting, or upon any advertisement, circular, or publication, or in any other way.

(2) That he did so for the purpose of promoting or procuring the election of a candidate.

(3) That he incurred or authorized the said expenses without the general or special authority in writing of the candidate.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Sanction.—Previous sanction is necessary for prosecution under this section.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you without the general (or special) authority in writing of—incurred (or authorized) expenses on account of the holding of a public meeting at—(or upon any advertisement, circular or publication Exhibit—, or in any other way whatsoever) for the purpose of promoting (or procuring) the election of—and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 171-H of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I thereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

171-I. Whoever being required by any law for the time being

Failure to keep election accounts. in force or any rule having the force of law to keep accounts of expenses incurred at, or in connection with, an election fails to keep such accounts shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

COMMENT.

This section punishes failure to keep accounts of expenses incurred in connection with an election, if such accounts are required to be kept by any law or rule having the force of law.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was required by any law for the time being in force or any rule having the force of law to keep accounts of expenses incurred at, or in connection with, an election.

(2) That he failed to keep such accounts.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—

Triable by: " " " " " "

Sanction.—Sanction is necessary for prosecution under this section.²

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

² Ibid.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you being required by law for the time being in force to wit—, (or by any rule having the force of law; to wit—,) to keep accounts of expenses incurred at (or in connection with) the election to wit—, failed to keep such accounts and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 171-I of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

CHAPTER X.

OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.

THIS Chapter contains those penal provisions which are intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempts of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of officers of Revenue, of officers of Police, and of other public servants are punishable under this head. * The penalties prescribed in this Chapter for particular offences obstructive of judicial proceedings must not be taken to interfere with other powers possessed by Courts of Justice and public functionaries to enforce their orders. They will not affect other coercive powers of the Courts of Justice to compel performance of their orders and decrees, whether by attachment and sale of property, by imprisonment or otherwise.¹

172. Whoever absconds in order to avoid being served with a summons, notice or order¹ proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order,² shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both ;

or, if the summons or notice or order is to attend in person or by agent, or to produce a document in a Court of Justice,³ with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Object.—The object of this section is to punish an offender for the contempt his conduct indicates of the authority whose process he disregards. The absconding must be with the intention of evading service.

Scope.—This section punishes the evasion of those orders which become binding from the moment they are served. It does not apply to orders which become binding without any kind of special service.

The second clause applies where the summons, notice or order is (1) for attendance in Court ; or (2) for production of a document.

Ingredients.—The section requires two things :—

1. Absconding in order to avoid being served with a summons, notice or order.

2. Such summons, notice or order must proceed from a public servant legally competent to issue it.

1. 'Absconding in order to avoid being served with a summons, notice or order.'—The term 'abscond' is not to be understood as implying that a person leaves the place in which he is to hide oneself ; and it matters not whether a person departs from a place or remains there, if he conceals himself : nor does the term apply only to the commencement of the process, but to the whole of the proceedings, if the person has concealed himself before process issues, he absconds."²

* M. & M. 143.

* Per Turner, C. J., Madapusi Srinivasa

Ayyangar, (1881) 4 Mad. 393, 397.

Refusal to accept a notice, abusing the process-server and walking inside the house does not amount to absconding.¹

'In order to avoid.'—The absconding must be with a purpose. This implies that the absconder knows, or at least has reason to believe, that the process has issued. He may abscond to avoid the issue of process, and this would not be an offence punishable under this section. When he knows, or has reason to believe, that it has issued, he may be unwilling to show contempt of the authority of the Court or officer who has issued it, and may comply with it, or so conduct himself that service may be effected; but he can hardly be said to be guilty of contempt of authority if he does not know, and has not reason to believe, the authority has been exercised, nor to be absconding to prevent the service of a process, if he does not know, nor has reason to believe, that it has issued.²

'Summons, notice or order.'—For the service of 'summons' see ss. 69-74, Criminal Procedure Code. A warrant addressed to a police-officer is not a 'summons, notice or order'³; nor a warrant addressed to a Nazir by a Civil Court for the arrest of a defendant in execution of a decree.⁴ Because from the wording of the section it appears that 'the summons, notice or order' therein referred to should be addressed to the same person whose attendance is required and who absconds to avoid being served with such 'summons, notice or order.' A warrant is not an order served on an accused, it is simply an order to the police to arrest him.⁵ But this section is held applicable to witnesses who abscond to evade the service of a warrant issued by a Magistrate under ss. 181 to 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code.⁶ This section was, however, held applicable where the accused who was placed in charge of certain attached property did not produce it for sale and evaded the service of notice to produce it.⁷

2. 'Proceeding from a public servant legally competent... to issue such summons, etc.'—The liability of the accused depends upon the legal competence of the officer to issue the 'summons, etc.'⁸

3. 'If the summons, etc., is to attend.'—This shows that existence of a summons, notice or order is necessary to constitute the offence. It is not sufficient to

Sec s. 20, supra, as to the meaning of 'Court of Justice.'

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the process in question was a summons, notice or order.

(2) That the same was issued by a public servant.

(3) That such public servant was legally competent as such to issue it.

(4) That such process was issued in order to be served on the accused.

(5) That the accused absconded in order to avoid being served with such process.

For the second clause of the section prove further—

(6) That the process required the attendance of the accused (either personally or by his agent) or required the production of a document by him (either personally or by his agent).

(7) That such attendance, or production was to be in a Court of Justice.

¹ Bhujang, (1924) 1 O. W. N. 159.

² Madapusi Srinivasa Ayyangar, (1881) 4 Mad. 393.

³ Womesh Chunder Ghose, (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 71; Amir Jan, (1875) 7 N. W. P. 302; Maghi Mamud, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 625.

⁴ Zahoor Ali Khan, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 97; Alla Bakhsh, (1890) P. R. No. 28 of 1890. See

Hira Lal, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 222.

⁵ Lakshmi, (1881) Unrep. Cr. C. 152, Cr. R. No. 21 of 1881.

⁶ Hossain Mahomed, (1888) 17 W. R. 100.

⁷ Cr. C.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.¹

173. Whoever in any manner intentionally prevents the serving on himself, or on any other person, of any summons, notice or order proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order, or intentionally prevents the lawful affixing to any place of any such summons, notice or order, or intentionally removes any such summons, notice, or order from any place to which it is lawfully affixed, or intentionally prevents the lawful making of any proclamation, under the authority of any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to direct such proclamation to be made,

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both ;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent, or to produce a document in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section punishes intentional prevention of the service of summons, notice or order. What is required is some act of opposition offered to the officer serving the summons.² A refusal to sign a summons,³ a refusal to receive a summons,⁴ throwing down of a summons after service,⁵ a refusal to accept a citation issued under s. 147 of the Land Revenue Act (U. P. Act III of 1901) or to sign the duplicate thereof,⁶ and a refusal to take subpoena under s. 160 of the Criminal Procedure Code,⁷ are held not to constitute the offence of intentionally preventing the service of a summons. The words "prevents the serving on himself" cannot be held applicable to a case where the summons is tendered and refused, inasmuch as tendering is in itself good service. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure the mere tender to a person of a summons is sufficient, and a refusal by him to receive it does not constitute the offence of intentionally preventing service thereof on himself under this section.⁸

Refusal to serve as special constables.—In a case of dispute regarding the right to the possession of an estate between two parties, one of whom was represented by the Court of Wards, the Magistrate of the District took up the cause of the

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See also ss. 476-479, 487.

² Uthudamawara, (1923) 1 Rang. 49.

³ Kalya bin Fakir, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 34; Khashal, (1869) Cr. R. for 1869, Unrep. Cr. C. 17; Bhobuneshwar Dutt, (1877) 3 Cal. 621; Krishna Gobinda Das, (1892) 20 Cal. 358.

⁴ Pennamalai Nadasu, (1892) 5 Mad. 192;

Ananta Kernaya, (1884) 1 Weir 80; Zapanis, (1920) 3 U. B. R. 202; Uthudamawara, supra; Debigir Tapdhari, (1924) 23 A. L. J. R. 148.

⁵ Arumuga Nadasu, (1881) 5 Mad. 200 (A). 1 Weir 79.

⁶ Ahmad Husain Khan, (1909) 31 All. 608.

⁷ Chandika Prasad, (1918) 21 O. C. 160.

⁸ See Sakdeo Rai, (1915) 40 All. 577.

latter, and alleging that it would be impossible to preserve the peace without employing a special police force, appointed the active men of the opposite party as special constables, and, on the latter refusing to serve as such, proceedings under this section were drawn up against them. It was held that the charge under this section had no relation to the offences alleged, and the proceedings thereunder were quashed.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the process in question was a summons, notice or order, or a direction for a proclamation.

(2) That the same was issued or made by a public servant legally competent to issue such process; or that such public servant was legally competent to direct such proclamation to be made, the same being lawful, and under his authority.

(3) That such summons, notice or order, was issued to be served either upon the accused, or upon some one else; or that such summons, notice or order, had been, or was to be, lawfully affixed to some place; or that such proclamation was about to be made.

(4) That the accused prevented such service of the summons, notice or order; or that he prevented the affixing of such process; or that he removed the same when so affixed; or that he prevented the making of such proclamation.

(5) That the accused did as above intentionally.

For the second clause of the section prove further—

(6) That the process, or proclamation required the attendance of the accused (either in person or by agent) or the production of a document; and

(7) That such process or proclamation was to attend, or to produce the document in a Court of Justice.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.²

174. Whoever, being legally bound to attend in person or by

Non-attendance in obedience to an order from public servant. an agent at a certain place and time in obedience to a summons, notice, order or proclamation proceeding from any public servant¹ legally competent, as such public servant, to issue the same,² intentionally omits to attend at that place or time, or depart from the place where he is bound to attend before the time at which it is lawful for him to depart,³

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A being legally bound to appear before the Supreme Court at Calcutta in obedience to a subpoena issuing from that Court, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

¹ Gopinath Paryah, (1886) 10 C. W. N. 532, 2 C. L. J. 535.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See ss. 476-78, 497.

latter, and alleging that it would be impossible to preserve the peace without employing a special police force, appointed the active men of the opposite party as special constables, and, on the latter refusing to serve as such, proceedings under this section were drawn up against them. It was held that the charge under this section had no relation to the offences alleged, and the proceedings thereunder were quashed.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the process in question was a summons, notice or order, or a direction for a proclamation.

(2) That the same was issued or made by a public servant legally competent to issue such process; or that such public servant was legally competent to direct such proclamation to be made, the same being lawful, and under his authority.

(3) That such summons, notice or order, was issued to be served either upon the accused, or upon some one else; or that such summons, notice or order, had been, or was to be, lawfully affixed to some place; or that such proclamation was about to be made.

(4) That the accused prevented such service of the summons, notice or order; or that he prevented the affixing of such process; or that he removed the same when so affixed; or that he prevented the making of such proclamation.

(5) That the accused did as above intentionally.

For the second clause of the section prove further—

(6) That the process, or proclamation required the attendance of the accused (either in person or by agent) or the production of a document; and

(7) That such process or proclamation was to attend, or to produce the document in a Court of Justice.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.²

174. Whoever, being legally bound to attend in person or by an agent at a certain place and time in obedience to a summons, notice, order or proclamation proceeding from any public servant¹ legally competent, as such public servant, to issue the same,²

intentionally omits to attend at that place or time, or depart from the place where he is bound to attend before the time at which it is lawful for him to depart,³

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A being legally bound to appear before the Supreme Court at Calcutta in obedience to a subpoena issuing from that Court, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

¹ Gopinath Paryah, (1886) 10 C. W. N. 32, 2 C. L. J. 555.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See ss. 476-78, 487.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—
 Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.¹

173. Whoever in any manner intentionally prevents the Preventing service of summons or other proceeding, or preventing publication thereof, serving on himself, or on any other person, of any summons, notice or order proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order, or intentionally prevents the lawful affixing to any place of any such summons, notice or order, or intentionally removes any such summons, notice, or order from any place to which it is lawfully affixed, or intentionally prevents the lawful making of any proclamation, under the authority of any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to direct such proclamation to be made,

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent, or to produce a document in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section punishes intentional prevention of the service of summons, notice or order. What is required is some act of opposition offered to the officer serving the summons.² A refusal to sign a summons,³ a refusal to receive a summons,⁴ throwing down of a summons after service,⁵ a refusal to accept a citation issued under s. 147 of the Land Revenue Act (U. P. Act III of 1901) or to sign the duplicate thereof,⁶ and a refusal to take subpoena under s. 160 of the Criminal Procedure Code,⁷ are held not to constitute the offence of intentionally preventing the service of a summons. The words "prevents the serving on himself" cannot be held applicable to a case where the summons is tendered and refused, inasmuch as tendering is in itself good service. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure the mere tender to a person of a summons is sufficient, and a refusal by him to receive it does not constitute the offence of intentionally preventing service thereof on himself under this section.⁸

Refusal to serve as special constables.—In a case of dispute regarding the right to the possession of an estate between two parties, one of whom was represented by the Court of Wards, the Magistrate of the District took up the cause of the

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See also ss. 478-479, 487.

² Uthudamawara, (1923) 1 Rang. 40.

³ Kalya bin Fakir, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr.

-Q.) 34; Khushal, (1869) Cr. R. for 1869,

Qarep. Cr. C. 17; Bhobunachar Dutt, (1877)

-3 Cal. 621; Krishna Gobinda Das, (1892) 20

-Cal. 358.

⁴ Purnanala Nadasa, (1892) 5 Mad. 199;

⁵ Chandika Prasad, (1818) 21 O. C. 159.

⁶ Ahmad Humain Khan, (1909) 31 All.

608.

⁷ Weir 79.

⁸ Sahdeo Esi, (1916) 40 All. 577.

latter, and alleging that it would be impossible to preserve the peace without employing a special police force, appointed the active men of the opposite party as special constables, and, on the latter refusing to serve as such, proceedings under this section were drawn up against them. It was held that the charge under this section had no relation to the offences alleged, and the proceedings thereunder were quashed.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the process in question was a summons, notice or order, or a direction for a proclamation.

(2) That the same was issued or made by a public servant legally competent to issue such process; or that such public servant was legally competent to direct such proclamation to be made, the same being lawful, and under his authority.

(3) That such summons, notice or order, was issued to be served either upon the accused, or upon some one else; or that such summons, notice or order, had been, or was to be, lawfully affixed to some place; or that such proclamation was about to be made.

(4) That the accused prevented such service of the summons, notice or order; or that he prevented the affixing of such process; or that he removed the same when so affixed; or that he prevented the making of such proclamation.

(5) That the accused did as above intentionally.

For the second clause of the section prove further—

(6) That the process, or proclamation required the attendance of the accused (either in person or by agent) or the production of a document; and

(7) That such process or proclamation was to attend, or to produce the document in a Court of Justice.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.²

174. Whoever, being legally bound to attend in person or by an agent at a certain place and time in obedience to a summons, notice, order or proclamation proceeding from any public servant¹ legally competent, as such public servant, to issue the same,²

intentionally omits to attend at that place or time, or depart from the place where he is bound to attend before the time at which it is lawful for him to depart,³

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A being legally bound to appear before the Supreme Court at Calcutta in obedience to a subpoena issuing from that Court, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

¹ Gopinath Paryak, (1886) 10 C. W. N. 22, 2 C. L. J. 555.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See ss. 476-78, 487.

(b) A being legally bound to appear before a Zila Judge, as a witness, in obedience to a summons issued by that Zila Judge, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT:

The offence contemplated by this section is an omission to appear at a particular time and at a particular place before a specified public functionary in obedience to a summons, notice, or order, not defective in form.

Ingredients.—The section requires three essentials.—

1. A person must be legally bound to attend at a certain place and time in obedience to a summons, notice, order or proclamation proceeding from a public servant.

2. The public servant must be legally competent to issue such summons, etc.

3. The person summoned must have (a) intentionally omitted to attend at that place or time, or (b) departed from the place where he was bound to attend before the time at which it was lawful for him to depart.

1. 'Legally bound to attend'—person... to attend, and refused or intentionally omitted to attend.¹

'Certain place and time.'—It must be proved that he had notice to appear at a certain time and place and omitted to do so.² Where a summons did not mention the place at which, or the time of the day when, the attendance of the person summoned was required, it was held that such person could not be punished under this section.³ Disobedience to a summons, directing a person to appear at such place in camp as the Magistrate might be on the date fixed, is not punishable.* A verbal order not specifying the particular day on which a person is to appear is not a lawful order.⁵

The place where a person is summoned to attend must be in British India. It is not, therefore, an offence to disobey a summons issued by a British Magistrate directing the person summoned to appear before him at a place outside the British territory.⁶

'Summons.'—A summons should be clear and specific in its terms as to the title of the Court, the place at which, the day and the time of the day when, the attendance of the person summoned is required, and it should go on to say that such person is not to leave the Court without leave, and, if the case in which he has been summoned is adjourned, without ascertaining the date to which it is adjourned.⁷ It must be one which could lawfully be issued: hence, a summons to take away a bundle of leases for distribution is not such a summons.⁸

Where a summons was not sealed as required by Madras Act III of 1863, s. 2, under which it was issued, a conviction was held to be bad.⁹

'Order.'—A verbal order given to a witness by a Court to attend on a particular day at a particular hour is an order the disobedience of which is punishable under this section.¹⁰ The order should be directed or addressed to the accused.¹¹

¹ (1870) 6 M. H. C. App. 10.

² Paranga, (1893) 16 Mad. 463.

³ Ram Saran, sup.

⁴ Chikka Honnappa, (1882) 1 Weir 97; Jangama Pallan, (1883) 1 Weir 93; Yellappa, (1883) 1 Weir 93.

⁵ Narasaiya, (1882) 1 Weir 100.

⁶ Guman, (1873) Unrep. Cr. C. 75; (1870) 5 M. H. C. App. 15; (1870) 1 Weir 87; (1872) 7 M. H. C. App. 3.

⁷ Firaha, (1870) P. R. No. 6 of 1870.

⁸ Jaisant, (1877) Colm. D. Cr. No. 89.

Order to attend necessary.—A Munsif called upon a Vakil to show cause why a report should not be made against him to the High Court for gross professional misconduct. The Vakil put in a written explanation and the matter was ordered to be put up on a certain date for orders. On the day fixed he did not appear and a proceeding was drawn up for his prosecution. It was held that as there was no order enjoining up on the Vakil to appear personally before the Munsif the proceedings should be quashed.¹

In the absence of an order in writing as required by s. 160, Criminal Procedure Code, a person who is asked orally to appear before a police-officer as a witness does not commit an offence under this section for non-appearance.²

Public servant.—See s. 21, supra. A receiver appointed under the Land Registration Act (Beng. Act VII of 1876, s. 56) is not a public servant within the meaning of this section.³

2. 'Legally competent, as such public servant.'—The public servant must be legally competent to issue summons, etc. If he is not legally competent to issue the summons, notice, or order in virtue of which the attendance of the accused is required, no offence is committed.⁴ Disobedience to a summons issued by a Village Magistrate who has no jurisdiction over the offence is not punishable under this section.⁵ Similarly, disobedience to an order of a police-officer which he is not competent to issue is not punishable under this section.⁶ The Chairman of a Municipality, although a public servant, is not legally competent as such to issue an order for attendance before him; and disobedience to such an order is not an offence within the meaning of this section.⁷ It was held similarly where a Tahsildar,⁸ a Mahalkari,⁹ a Mamlatdar,¹⁰ and a Receiver¹¹ having no jurisdiction issued summons for attendance; where a Collector issued a notice under s. 193 of the Land Revenue Act when there was no investigation, suit or other business before him¹²; and where a Sub-Deputy Collector issued a notice under s. 8 of the Chowkedaree Act (Beng. Act. VI of 1820) for attendance.¹³

The accused were appointed arbitrators in a civil suit. They were summoned to attend the Court on a certain day, but did not obey the summons. It was held that they could not be convicted under this section as the summons in question was a process not provided for by the law.¹⁴

3. 'Intentionally omits to attend at that place or time or departs... before time.'—The omission to appear in answer to the summons must be intentional.¹⁵ If the witness explains his inability to the process-server that he will not be able to attend, he does not "intentionally" disobey the summons.¹⁶ It must be proved that the non-attendance was in the nature of a wilful disobedience.¹⁷ Before conviction the Court is bound to decide whether there was an intentional disobedience to the summons after giving the accused an opportunity of explaining his absence.¹⁸ If a person is sufficiently incapacitated by illness to have given up his ordinary avocations, this would be sufficient excuse for him not to attend a Court in obedience to a summons. The mere fact that he was not so dangerously

¹ Prokash Chunder Sarkar, (1903) 7 C. W. N. 797.

² Virasami Pillai, (1895) 1 Weir 86.

³ Ebrahim Sircar, (1901) 29 Cal. 236.

⁴ Kashi Ram, (1871) P. R. No. 2 of 1871.

⁵ (1865) 1 Weir 87.

⁶ Chattar Singh, (1885) 5 A. W. N. 43.

⁷ Purshotam Valji, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 33.

⁸ Gopia, (1904) 24 A. W. N. 122; Khota Ram, (1907) P. R. No. 4 of 1907; Shiam Lal, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 680.

⁹ Venkaji Bhaskar, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 19.

¹⁰ Mahomed Ismail, (1873) Unrep. Cr. C. 70, Cr. R. of 1873.

¹¹ Ebrahim Sircar, sup.

¹² Waris Ali, (1916) 14 A. L. J. R. 1069.

¹³ Basat Ali, (1899) 3 C. W. N. cclxxi.

¹⁴ Kashi Ram, sup.; Kuria, (1875) P. R. No. 18 of 1875.

¹⁵ J. R. Das, (1923) 1 Rang. 549.

¹⁶ Banahar, (1900) D. D. No. 22 of 1880.

¹⁷ See Ghose, 27 of 1907.

ill that he could not be moved or that he did not send a man to inform the Court of his illness, would not render him punishable under this section.¹

A man in obedience to a summons attended a Magistrate's Court at 10 A.M., but finding the Magistrate not present in Court at the time mentioned in the summons, departed without waiting for a reasonable time. It was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.² But a person who departs without permission is not guilty under this section in the absence of a direction that he should not leave without permission.³

Public servant absent.—Where a public servant is absent on a date fixed in the summons, the person summoned cannot be convicted, though he purposely fails to attend.⁴

Appearance through a lawyer instead of in person.—Where a person did make an appearance, though not a personal appearance, on service of summons, it was held, under the circumstances, not to be an offence under this section.⁵ But having regard to Sch. V of the Code of Criminal Procedure, if a summons require appearance in person, the accused is legally bound to attend personally and cannot appear by agent unless exempted under s. 205.

The petitioner, a practising barrister of the High Court, was summoned under the Motor Vehicles Act, but being unable to appear owing to professional work on that day applied for adjournment through counsel, which was granted. He was then prosecuted for failing to attend in answer to the summons and convicted under this section and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 5 or to suffer two days' simple imprisonment. It was held, in revision, that there was no intentional omission to appear, that as an officer of the Court it was the duty of the advocate no less to the Bench than to his own client to be ready when the case in which he was briefed was called, and that finding himself unable to abandon his client's interests he had instructed counsel to represent the matter to the Court, and that no offence under this section was committed.⁶

Personal service necessary.—Before the provisions of this section can come into play, personal service of summons must be attempted.⁷ Where a summons was shown to a person and taken back, it was held that it had not been served so as to render that person liable under this section for non-attendance.⁸ Service of a notice on the pleader of a party is not sufficient in criminal cases.⁹ The mere affixing of summons to the house of the person required to attend is not sufficient. It should be proved that it was brought to the knowledge of the accused that he was required to attend.¹⁰

Escape from custody.—The section does not apply to the case of a defendant escaping from custody under a warrant in execution of a decree of a Civil Court.¹¹

Madras Regulation IV of 1816.—The provisions of this section are not in conflict with the special provisions of ss. 15 and 16 of Regulation IV of 1816 (Madras). In ordinary cases obedience to the summons of a Village Munsif should be dealt with under the Regulation. But if a charge is laid under the Penal Code the criminal Court must deal with it.¹²

¹ Bohra Hirbal, (1922) 20 A. L. J. R. 192.

² Kisan Bapu, (1885) 10 Bom. 93; Sutherland, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 20.

³ Narayanappa, (1890) 1 Weir 99.

⁴ Krishappa, (1896) 20 Mad. 31.

⁵ Durga Das Rakshit v. Umesh Chandra Sen, (1900) 27 Cal. 985.

⁶ J. R. Das, (1923) 1 Rang. 549.

⁷ Harynath Choudry, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 58; Firka, (1870) P. R. No. 6 of 1870.

⁸ Kuppan, (1867) 11 Mad. 137; Karsan- lal Danatram, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 20.

⁹ Saraswati Devi v. Maharaja Durga Churn Zaha, (1902) 6 C. W. N. 927.

¹⁰ Periannamalawaram, (1884) 1 Weir 84;

(1871) 6 M. H. C. App. 29; Ganapati Aiyar, (1882) 1 Weir 85.

¹¹ Sardar Pathu, (1863) 1 B. H. C. 33;

(1874) 7 M. H. C. App. 43; Dhola, (1870) P. R.

No. 27 of 1870. Contra, Heera Singh, (1870)

P. R. No. 1 of 1871.

¹² Ramachandrappa, (1883) 6 Mad. 249.

Madras Act III of 1869.—There are several cases deciding whether disobedience to a summons issued by a Tahsildar under Act III of 1869 is punishable under this section or not.¹

Statutory application.—See the Coroners Act (IV of 1871), s. 17; the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 40; the Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act (XXI of 1866), s. 11; the City of Madras Municipal Act (Mad. Act I of 1884), ss. 161, 454.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the obligation to attend was in obedience to a summons, etc.

(2) That such summons, etc., was issued by a public servant, legally competent as such, to issue the same.

(3) That the accused became thereby legally bound to attend, in person or by agent, at a certain place and time.

(4) That he omitted to attend at such place or time; or that he departed from the place before the time at which it was lawful for him to depart.

(5) That he did as above intentionally.

To bring the case within the second clause it must be further proved

(6) That the summons or notice was to attend in person or by agent in a Court of Justice.

It must be proved that it was brought to the knowledge of the accused that he was required to attend and that he intentionally omitted to do so.² The mere production of the summons to the accused with an endorsement of service is not sufficient proof of service in the absence of the evidence of the officer who is said to have served the summons.³

A summons directing a person to appear within a certain number of days does not comply with the requirement of this section.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is necessary.⁵

175. Whoever, being legally bound¹ to produce or deliver up any document to any public servant,² as such, intentionally omits so to produce or deliver up the same, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees or with both; or, if the document is to be produced or delivered up to a Court of Justice,³ with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, being legally bound to produce a document before a Zila Court, intentionally omits to procure the same. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

¹ (1871) 6 M. H. C. App. 44; Reddi Nara- suramayya, (1889) 1 Weir 95; Varathappa () Vaidu,
 Weir
 r 95;

.

also ss. 410-45, 457.

COMMENT.

A witness who having a document does not produce it comes under this section and not under O. XVI, rr. 17-18, of the Civil Procedure Code.¹

1. 'Legally bound.'—See s. 43, supra.

2. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

A Receiver appointed under the Land Registration Act (Beng. Act VII of 1876, s. 56) is not a public servant within the meaning of this section.²

The public servant must be legally competent to call for the document.

A person called upon by a Sub-Registrar to produce the original document which was registered in his office, to enable him to compare it with the copy of the deed in the Registration Office Register, which, it was suspected, was tampered with, is not legally bound to produce it, and he cannot, on his failure to do so, be convicted under this section.³

Where an accused, while on his trial for offences under ss. 471 and 193 of the Penal Code, being directed to produce a certain incriminating document, did not produce the document and in consequence the prosecution against him failed, it was held that he could not be convicted for his omission to produce it.⁴

3. 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

Statutory application.—See the Coroners Act (IV of 1871), s. 17; the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 83; 1894), s. 10; the Indian Works of Defence Act (VII Irrigation Act (Beng. Act III of 1876), s. 10; Punjab

The amendment of s. 135 of the Civil Procedure present Code, and the omission from r. 21 of all references to s. 188 or other sections of the Penal Code, indicate that a party to a suit, who fails to comply with an order for production or inspection of documents, can be punished only in the manner prescribed by that rule, and is not punishable under this section or any other section of the Code.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that it was a public servant, or a Court of Justice against whom the offence was committed.

(2) That the accused was legally bound to produce or deliver up the document in question to such public servant, or Court of Justice.

(3) That the accused omitted to produce, or deliver up the document.

(4) That the accused did so intentionally.

The prosecution must prove that the accused was in possession of the document required to be produced; when it is doubtful which of the two accused had the document, they could not be convicted.⁶

Procedure.—Not compoundable—Not compoundable—Triable by the Court subject to the provisions of Ch. XXXV of the Penal Code if committed in a Court, a Presidency Magistrate, or a second class—Triable summarily.

When any such offence as is described in this section is committed in the view or presence of any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court, the Court may cause the offender to be detained in custody; and at any time before the rising of the Court on the same day may, if it thinks fit, take cognizance of the offence and sentence the offender to a fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, and in default

¹ Preemchand Doulatram, (1887) 12 Bom. 83. See also Salig Ram, (1890) 10 A. W. N. 171.

² Ebrahim Sircar, (1901) 29 Cal. 236.

³ Asmatulla Sirdar, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 621.

⁴ Ishwar Chandra Ghoshal, (1908) 12 C. W. N. 1016, 8 C. L. J. 320.

⁵ Ram Chand, (1910) F. R. No. 15 of 1910.

⁶ Damri Ram, (1917) 4 P. L. W. 65

of payment, to simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, unless such fine be sooner paid.¹

A criminal Court inflicting a fine for contempt of Court should specifically record its reasons and the facts constituting the contempt, with any statement the offender may make, as well as the finding and sentence.²

A Court other than the High Court can try persons for offences committed before itself only in cases to which s. 477, or 480 or 485 of the Criminal Procedure Code is applicable, and none of the sections is applicable when the accused is charged under this section.³

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.⁴

176. Whoever, being legally bound to give any notice or to furnish information on any subject to any public servant,¹ as such, intentionally omits to give such notice or to furnish such information in the manner and at the time required by law,² shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the notice or information required to be given respects the commission of an offence, or is required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence,³ or in order to the apprehension of an offender, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Scope.—This section applies to persons upon whom an obligation is imposed by law to furnish certain information to public servants, and the penalty which the law provides is intended to apply to parties who commit an intentional breach of such obligation,⁵ and not where the public servants have already obtained the information from other sources.⁶

When once the information of the fact of the crime has reached the police, the object of the section has been fulfilled and no further duty imposed by it remains.⁷

Ingredients.—This section requires—

1. That a person must be legally bound to give any notice or to furnish information on any subject to a public servant.

2. That he has intentionally omitted to give such notice or information in the manner and at the time required by law.

1. 'Legally bound to give any notice or to furnish information to any public servant.'—See s. 43, supra. To bring home the charge to the accused he must be shown to be legally bound to furnish information. Mere servants, for instance, who are dependent on their master, do not come within the category of persons legally

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 480.

² Panchanada Tambiran, (1889) 4 M. H. C. R. 229.

³ Seahayys, (1889), 13 Mad. 24.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See also ss. 476-478, 480-482, 487.

⁵ Phool Chand Brojbassee, (1871) 16 W. R.

(Cr.) 35; Luchmun Pershad Gorgo, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 22; Kesree, (1866) 1 Agra 37.

⁶ Sashi Bhusan Chuckerbutty, (1878) 4 Cal. 623; Pandya Nayak, (1884) 7 Mad. 436; Gopal Singh, (1892) 20 Cal. 310; Sher Singh, (1888) P. R. No. 5 of 1889.

⁷ Sada, (1893) Unrep. Cr. C. 674.

bound to give information.¹ Several Acts have imposed obligations on persons to give notice or information to public servants, e.g., the Foreigners Act²; the Coroners Act³; the Criminal Tribes Act⁴; the Dramatic Performances Act⁵; the Indian Succession Act⁶; the City of Bombay Municipal Act⁷; the Land Acquisition Act⁸; the Code of Criminal Procedure⁹; the Indian Registration Act¹⁰; the Indian Mines Act¹¹; the Indian Works of Defence Act.¹²

See s. 21, supra, as to the meaning of 'public servant.'

Presumption of knowledge of an offence.—The refusal of a person to join in a dacoity does not imply a knowledge on his part of the commission of that offence or render him liable under this section.¹³

2. 'Intentionally omits to give such notice... in the manner and at the time required by law.'—Where a person is under a legal duty to report certain facts and fails to report them, he must be presumed to intend to conceal them.

bound to give information directed the village watchman to the knowledge of the others to make a report at the police-station and he neglected to do so, it was held that no offence was committed as it could not be said that the persons intentionally omitted to give the information.¹⁵

3. 'If the notice, etc., respects the commission of an offence or is required for... preventing the commission of an offence.'—This expression refers to the commission or prevention of some particular offence and not to the commission or prevention of offences generally. Thus, the information required to be given under s. 565 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be said to be required for the... though it may be... the Code or under imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards (s. 40).

C A S E S .

Omission to give information under s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code.—An omission by an owner of a house to give information of a sudden or unnatural death¹⁷ is not an offence under this section, because owners or occupiers of houses in a village are not owners or occupiers of land under s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁸ In order to support a conviction under this section against a person for not giving information of an occurrence falling under clause (d) of s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code, it is not necessary to show that the death actually occurred on his land, when the circumstances disclosed show that a body has been found under circumstances denoting that the death was sudden, unnatural, or suspicious; the finding of the body being a fact from which a Court might

¹ Thakur, (1911) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 17 of 1911.

² Act III of 1864, s. 20.

³ Act IV of 1871, s. 17.

⁴ Act XXVII of 1871, s. 9.

⁵ Act XIX of 1878, s. 7.

⁶ Act XXIX of 1925, s. 317 (3).

⁷ Bom. Act III of 1888, ss. 473, 153 (1), (2).

157.

⁸ Act I of 1894, s. 10 (2).

⁹ Act V of 1898, ss. 44 and 45 (a), (b), (d).

(1/1

¹⁰ Act XVI of 1909, s. 82.

¹¹ Act VIII of 1901, s. 11 (2).

¹² Act VII of 1903, s. 11.

¹³ See supra, s. 21, supra, as to the meaning of 'public servant.'

¹⁴

¹⁵

¹⁶

¹⁷

¹⁸

¹⁹

²⁰

²¹

²²

²³

²⁴

²⁵ reasonably infer, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the death took place there.¹

Liability of a Karnam.—A Karnam is legally bound to furnish true information regarding cultivation in his village.² But a Karnam who omits to submit cultivation accounts of his village in obedience to the orders of the Revenue Inspector is not guilty of an offence under this section.³

Punjab Land Revenue Act.—Accused, a Zahildar, was convicted under this section for failing to give information of two cases of house-breaking, it being his duty under Rule 25, framed under s. 28 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, "to report heinous crimes to the Police and Magistrate." It was held that having regard to s. 43 of this Code, though a Zemindar was required by virtue of the rule to report, such rule did not cast upon him a legal duty to report, such as was imposed by a direct and express enactment of the Legislature, so that he could be held guilty of the commission of a Zahildar, was convicted, under this section, of intentionally omitting to give information about a riot which occurred in his village which he was legally bound to furnish. It was held that even assuming that the duties and powers of a Zahildar's sarbarah were co-extensive with those of the Zahildar himself, the conviction could not be sustained, for a breach of the rules drawn up by the Local Government in regard to Zahildars, though it might subject the Zahildar to the displeasure of his employer and possibly endanger his emoluments or position, could not be held to amount to a violation of a legal obligation within the meaning of this section, regard being had to the definition of the terms "illegal" and "legally bound to do" in s. 43 of the Code.⁵

N. W. P. and Oudh Land Revenue Act.—A jamabandi prepared under rules made under s. 234 of the N. W. P. and Oudh Land Revenue Act III of 1901 is a register, and consequently if a Zemindar refuses to give the patwari of a village information as to the collection of rent made by him he is liable under this section.⁶

The Central Provinces Land Revenue Act.—The appointment of a Mukaddum-gumasta under s. 137 of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act does not absolve the Mukaddum from all responsibility to perform the duties laid on a Mukaddum by s. 141 of the Act. Where a Mukaddum has received information that a non-bailable offence has been committed in a village of which he is Mukaddum, and he is aware that the Mukaddum-gumasta has omitted to make any report, it is his duty to make the report himself and his omission to do so is an offence under this section.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused knew of the circumstance, or had information in question.

(2) That he was legally bound to give notice thereof, or to furnish such information.

(3) That such notice should have been given, or such information furnished, to a public servant.

(4) That he omitted to give such notice, or furnish such information, as required by law.

(5) That he omitted to do so intentionally.

For the second clause of the section prove further—

¹ Matuki Misser, (1885) 11 Cal. 619.

² Venkatanarasappa, (1891) 1 Weir 111.

³ Tolupur Bhagavannulu, (1897) 1 Weir 105.

⁴ Hari Singh, (1893) P. R. No. 25 of 1894.

⁵ Shah Muhammad, (1886) P. R. No. 19 of 1886.

⁶ B. Suraj Balhsh Singh, (1907) 10 O.C. 238.

⁷ Local Government v. Manisharsingh, (1911) 7 N. L. R. 101.

Explanation.—In section 176 and in this section the word “offence” includes any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460; and the word “offender” includes any person who is alleged to have been guilty of any such act.

COMMENT.

Section 176 deals with the omission to give information: this section, with the giving of false information. Under both the sections the liability depends upon legal obligation to give information. Persons who are not under any legal obligation to furnish information cannot be dealt with under these sections.

Scope.—This section contains two branches. The first branch—‘whoever being legally bound or with both’—deals with the simple case of a person make.¹ Under the second branch—‘or if information . . . or with both’—the venting ly, but to the tement, to give

Ingredients.—This section requires—

1. That a person must be legally bound to furnish information on a particular subject to a public servant.

2. That he must furnish, as true, information on that subject which he knows or has reason to believe to be false.

1. ‘Legally bound to furnish information . . . to any public servant.’—Sections 44 and 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code legally bind persons to give information regarding certain offences. See s. 43, supra, as to the meaning of ‘legally bound.’ See s. 21, supra, as to the meaning of ‘public servant.’

Offence is committed if there is legal obligation to give information.—False reports report as that which was made to him, was guilty under this section.⁴ Where a police-officer who was bound to communicate information to his superior officer regarding the commission of riot and to make an entry thereof in his diary, omitted to give such information, it was held that he was guilty under this section.⁵ Where a constable, whose duty it was to ascertain on his rounds whether certain notoriously bad characters were in their houses or not, falsely reported that they were, it was held that the offence fell within the first branch of this section.⁶

No offence where no legal obligation to give information.—False return to a superior.—Where the accused submitted to his official superior a false ‘nil’ return of lands in his enjoyment, and also made a false statement to the same effect

¹ Appayya, (1891) 14 Mad. 484; Suraji, (1873) Unrep. Cr. C. 76; Parmaya, (1885) Unrep. Cr. C. 210.

² Panatulla, (1887) 15 Cal. 386.

³ Luckhee Sing, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 23.

⁴ Muhammad Ismail Khan, (1897) 20 All. 151.

⁵ Syed Fulleh Mahomed, (1874) 21 W. R. (Cr.) 30.

⁶ Panatulla, sup.

to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The offence under the section consists in the refusal to answer a question which is relevant to the subject concerning which the public servant is authorized to inquire, or which at least touches that subject. If a person gives false answers then he will be guilty under s. 193 and not under this section.

Whether a person who has once committed an offence under the last section can be held to have committed a further offence under this section when he refuses to answer the questions put to him is undecided.¹

1. 'Legally bound to state the truth.'—A person who is examined by a police-officer under s. 161, Criminal Procedure Code, is not legally bound to state the truth. The legal obligation to speak the truth when so examined existed under the Code of 1882; but the effect of the omission of the word "truly" in s. 161 of the present Code has been to do away with his legal obligation.² A person cannot be convicted of this offence for refusing, when required by a police-officer, to look at the hands of a complainant and to answer whether there were any marks of tying with a rope on his hands.³

Sections 121 to 132 of the Indian Evidence Act⁴ enable witnesses to refuse to answer certain questions.

Where, in a murder case, a witness persisted in refusing to answer material and important questions put to him repeatedly by the Court with the result that the Judge's attempt to get at the truth was partially frustrated, it was held that the witness was guilty under this section.⁵

2. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

3. 'Refuses to answer any question.'—If a Judge asks questions with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against a witness, the witness is not bound to answer them, and cannot be punished for not answering them, under this section.⁶

This section has nothing to do with the conduct of the accused in Court. It has no application to a refusal to plead to a charge. An accused who, on being charged before a Village Panchayat Court, said that he would not make any reply and remained silent was held to have committed no offence under this section.⁷

Complainant.—A complainant is not a witness punishable for refusing to answer.⁸

Statutory application.—The Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 267 (3); the Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), s. 10.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was legally bound to state the truth to a public servant on the subject in question.

(2) That such public servant questioned him touching such subject.

(3) That such public servant was exercising his legal powers in putting such questions.

(4) That the accused refused to answer such questions.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by the Court in which the offence is committed, subject to the provisions of

¹ Bepin Chandra Pal, (1907) 7 C. L. J. 63.

² Sankarlinga Kone, (1900) 23 Mad. 544;

Sawant Virabai, (1899) 1 Weir 111; Gul

Hassan Shah, (1906) P. R. No. 27 of 1908.

³ Fakira, (1875) Unrep. Cr. C. 92.

⁴ Act I of 1872.

⁵ Har Narain, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 1100.

⁶ Hari Lakshman, (1885) 10 Bom. 185.

⁷ Tirumala Reddi, (1923) 46 M. L. J. 40.

⁸ Ganesh Narayan Sathé, (1889) 13 Bom.

181. Whoever, being legally bound by an oath or affirmation to state the truth on any subject to any public servant or other person authorized by law to administer such oath or affirmation,¹ makes to such public servant or other person as aforesaid, touching that subject, any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true,² shall be punished with imprisonment³ of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section may be compared with s. 191. It is more general. Under it a false statement to any public servant is punishable. Section 191 describes the offence in which the false statement is made at any stage of the judicial proceeding.

Ingredients.—This section requires—

1. That there must be a person legally bound by an oath or affirmation to state the truth on a subject to (a) a public servant, or (b) some other person authorized by law to administer such oath or affirmation.

2. That he must make to such public servant or other person as aforesaid a statement touching that subject which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true.

1. 'Legally bound by an oath or affirmation to state the truth on any subject to any public servant.'—See s. 43, supra, as to the meaning of 'legally bound.'

See s. 51, supra, as to the meaning of 'oath.'

See s. 21, supra, as to the meaning of 'public servant.'

'Authorized by law to administer such oath, etc.'—This section applies only where the public servant is "authorized by law to administer an oath"¹; it does not apply where the public servant administers the oath in a case wholly beyond his jurisdiction²; and also where he is not competent to take a statement on solemn affirmation.³ Where three persons, of whom one was a pleader, were tried together and convicted of having made false statements on solemn affirmation, about the same matter, in the course of an enquiry into the conduct of the pleader under the provisions of the Legal Practitioners Act, it was held that the conviction of the pleader was bad as his statement was improperly taken from him on solemn affirmation.⁴

In a petition of appeal from a conviction, the appellant falsely stated that the convicting Magistrate declined to summon his witnesses. The Magistrate to whom the appeal was preferred called upon the appellant to verify the allegation in the petition of appeal on solemn affirmation, and he did so. It was held that the appellant committed no offence under this section.⁵

2. 'Makes to such public servant... any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true.'—The making of a false statement with no knowledge one way or the other as to its truth constitutes it a false statement since the person making it does not believe it to be true.⁶

3. 'Shall be punished with imprisonment.'—The sentence must include a term of imprisonment, however short, to which a fine may be added.⁷

Bom. L.R.

¹ Subhaya, (1889) 12 Mad. 431.

² Echan Meeah, (1885) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 47.

³ (1889) 4 M. H. C. App. 18.

False statement on oath.—The Bombay and Calcutta High Courts have held that this section does not apply to cases in which a person gives a false statement on oath before a public officer in a stage of judicial proceeding, such person being liable to be convicted under s. 193, but only refers to cases in which the false statement is made in proceedings other than judicial proceedings.¹ The principle on which these rulings are based being that when the facts found constitute an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session, a Magistrate is not at liberty to pass over material points of the evidence before him, so as to withdraw the case from the cognizance of the proper tribunal. Although the wording of this section is apparently wide enough to admit false statements of every description, its action is restricted as regards those made under certain circumstances by the succeeding s. 193. Were it not so, a Magistrate acting under this section might try all cases of perjury himself instead of committing them, as he is no doubt bound to do, to the Court of Session. The Madras High Court has, however, held that a witness in a criminal case, who gives false evidence before a Magistrate, may be convicted by a Magistrate under this section though he might also have been charged under s. 193, and, if so charged, would only have been triable by the Sessions Court.² But in an earlier case it held that this section would appear to apply to cases in which the proceedings were not of a judicial character.³

Amendment.—The words "or affirmation" were inserted by Act X of 1873, s. 15.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused took the oath, or made the affirmation in question.

(2) That the same was legally binding upon him.

(3) That such oath or affirmation was administered by a public servant or by a person authorized by law to administer the same.⁴

(4) That the accused whilst so bound made the statement in question to such persons

(5) That such statement was made touching the subject on which he was thereby bound to state the truth.

(6) That what he so stated was false.

(7) That he then knew that his statement was false, or had reason to believe it was false, or did not believe it was true.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.⁵

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being legally bound by an oath to state the truth, on a certain subject, to wit—, to—, a public servant (or person authorized by law to administer such oath) did make to such public servant (or person as aforesaid) touching that subject, a statement, which was false, and which you knew (or believed) to be false, to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 181 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

¹ Andy Chetty, (1863) 2 M. H. C. 438.

⁴ Juggut Chunder Dutt, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 81.

⁵ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 105. See also ss. 476, 478, 487.

And I heroby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

False information with intent to cause public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person.

182. Whoever gives to any public servant any information¹ which he knows or believes to be false,² intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, such public servant—

(a) to do or omit anything which such public servant ought not to do or omit^{3(a)} if the true state of facts respecting which such information is given were known by him, or^{3(b)}

(b) to use the lawful power of such public servant to the injury or annoyance of any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A informs a Magistrate that Z, a police-officer, subordinate to such Magistrate, has been guilty of neglect of duty or misconduct, knowing such information to be false, and knowing it to be likely that the information will cause the Magistrate to dismiss Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A falsely informs a public servant that Z has contraband salt in a secret place, knowing such information to be false, and knowing that it is likely that the consequence of the information will be a search of Z's premises, attended with annoyance to Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(c) A falsely informs a policeman that he has been assaulted and robbed in the neighbourhood of a particular village. He does not mention the name of any person as one of his assailants, but knows it to be likely that in consequence of this information the police will make enquiries and institute searches in the village to the annoyance of the villagers or some of them. A has committed an offence under this section.

COMMENT.

The present section was substituted for the original section by Act III of 1895, s. 1. In the old section clause (b) stood first, and clause (a) second. The present alteration arose out of a case in which, information having been given by a man to the police that he had been robbed at a certain village, the police went down and made inquiries and gave a great deal of trouble and annoyance to the people. It turned out that the information was absolutely false, but on prosecution the High Court of Calcutta ruled that inasmuch as it was not intended, or could not be shown that it was intended, to injure or annoy any particular person, the case did not fall within the section in question.¹ The present section has been introduced to amend that, and to say that if such information is given the person giving it should be punished whether any particular person was aimed at or not. That is to say, it has been made an offence to give false information which misleads a public servant into doing what he ought not to do, whether that can be shown to be intended for the purpose of injuring any particular person or not.²

Object.—The intention of the legislature in drawing up this section is that a public servant should not be falsely given information with the intent that he

¹ Gulam Ahmed Kazi, (1887) 14 Cal. 314.

² The case of Gulam Ahmed Kazi is expressly overruled by ill. (c). The case of Periannan, (1881) 4 Mad. 241, may also be regarded as overruled.

should be misled by a person who believed that information to be false, and was intending to mislead him.

"Suppose a man, knowing the statement to be untrue, but intending the Magistrate to act upon it, informed the Magistrate of the district that a violent fire was raging in a city in the district of which he had charge. Now if the Magistrate believed that statement he would naturally send as many police as he could spare to assist in quelling the fire and keeping order. He might possibly also ask for the assistance of the military, if there were any in the neighbourhood. That would be a perfect example of a hoax, and I have not a doubt that it would come within s. 182, whether the Magistrate acted upon the information or not. To take another example of a case which in my opinion would come within the section, although the public servant was not induced to take action or to omit to take action upon the information given to him. Let us say that a man had absconded for an offence from Allahabad, and that it was surmised that he would seek to escape at one of the shipping ports. Information of his having absconded would be communicated to those ports, Calcutta amongst the number. A person who, knowing that that man had not been arrested, and intending that the authorities at Calcutta should cease to watch the outwardbound shipping, telegraphed to the authorities at Calcutta informing them that the absconder had been arrested elsewhere, would in my opinion have committed an offence under s. 182, although the public servant at Calcutta had not acted on the telegram, but had persisted in his surveillance of the outwardbound shipping."¹

Difference between s. 182 and s. 211.—The offence under this section is a distinct offence from that described in s. 211, which relates to an attempt to put the criminal Courts in motion against a person. The circumstances which are necessary to bring a case within this section involve different considerations from those that arise from s. 211. This section does not necessarily impose upon the person giving information to the officer criminal liability for mere want of caution before giving that information. There must be positive and conscious falsehood established.² See Comment on s. 211 where the difference between this section and s. 211 is discussed.

Scope.—A person can be prosecuted under this section even after the dismissal of his complaint to a Magistrate. A person gave false information to the police and subsequently made a complaint to a Magistrate and the Magistrate issued a summons to the accused to appear but the complainant did not appear at the time of the hearing and the police reported that the complaint was false. After the discharge of the accused the police-officer to whom the complainant had given information laid a complaint and preferred a charge under this section. It was held that the complainant's making a complaint to a Magistrate and then dropping the proceedings was no bar to the police-officer acting under this section.³

I: - "1. (a) The information must be given to a public servant.
2. The information must be given to a public servant who has been known or believed to be false by the giver.

3. The information must have been given with the intention to cause, or knowing it likely that it will cause, such public servant (a) to do or omit anything which he ought not to do or omit to do if the true facts were known to him, or (b) to use his lawful power to the injury or annoyance of any person.

1. 'Gives to a public servant any information.'—The expression 'gives information' means to volunteer information and is not intended to apply to a

¹ Budh Sen, (1891) 13 All. 351, 355; Ganesh L. R. 33.

Khanderao, (1889) 13 Bom. 506.

² Ramkrishna Yeshwant, (1906) 9 Bom. (1923) 46 All. 43.

³ Mula, (1918) 17 A. L. J. R. 32; Balkehi, statement made in answer to questions put by a public servant.¹ If the false information is given to a person who is not a public servant, the offence will be that of defamation.² In support of an application to transfer a case, a person swore to an affidavit and handed it over to the pleader of the applicant who filed it in Court. The affidavit contained allegations which were subsequently found to be false. The deponent was prosecuted under this section. It was held that the affidavit having been given to the applicant's pleader on his behalf and as it was open to the applicant to instruct his pleader not to file the same there was no information given to a public servant within the meaning of this section.³

See s. 21, supra, as to the definition of 'public servant.'

No offence under this section can be made out in respect of a false information given to a police officer of a Native State.⁴

Any information.—Any 'false' information given to a public servant, with the intent mentioned in the section, is punishable under it, whether that information is volunteered by the informant or is given in answer to questions put to him by the public servant.⁵

Statement made by an accused in his defence.—Statements made by a prisoner for the purposes of his defence do not fall under this section.⁶ Where the petitioner on being questioned by a Superintendent of Police whether he was the author of certain mischievous articles that appeared in a paper said he was not the author but some one else was when in reality he was the author, it was held that as the statement was given merely in defence or excuse he was not guilty of an offence under this section.⁷ In a petition of appeal from a conviction, the appellant falsely stated that the convicting Magistrate declined to summon his witness. The Magistrate to whom the appeal was preferred called upon the appellant to verify the allegations in the petition of appeal on solemn affirmation, and he did so. It was held that the appellant had not committed an offence under s. 181 or this section.⁸

Statement made by an accused in his application for transfer of the case.—Where the accused in support of an application for the transfer of the case against him to some other Magistrate made unfounded and defamatory allegations against the trying Magistrate, the Allahabad High Court held that he could not be prosecuted under this section.⁹ The Lahore High Court has dissented from this view. It has held that an application for transfer is not a part of the defence of an accused person and statements made by an accused in an affidavit in support of an application for transfer do not enjoy the immunity conferred by s. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code upon answers to questions put to the accused by the Court.¹⁰

Mere belief is not 'information' under this section.—Where a person falsely informed a Collector that certain Zemindars had usurped possession of certain land belonging to Government, with the intent "to give trouble to such Zemindars, and waste the time of the public authorities," it was held that as the information was no more than an expression of a private person's belief or opinion that the Collector might, if he chose, sustain a civil action against them, this was

¹ Mangu, (1914) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 35 of 1914, P. L. R. No. 227 of 1914.

² Santaram, (1887) Unrep. Cr. C. 315, Cr. R. No. 1 of 1887.

³ Katta Prakasham, (1924) 47 M. L. J. 658, [1925] M. W. N. 146.

⁴ Rambharati, Ruradharati, (1923) 25 Bom. L. R. 772, 7 Bom. Cr. C. 78.

⁵ Ramji Sajabharao, (1895) 10 Bom. 124; Bhikaji, (1877) Unrep. Cr. C. 124, Cr. R. No. 171 of 1877. In Nga Aung Po, (1905) U. B. R. (P. C.) 13, it is held that false answers to questions put by a police officer in the course of investigation of a cognizable offence do not fall under this section.

⁶ Daria Khan, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 123.

⁷ S. A. Gordon, Criminal Appeal No. 22 of 1910. Unrep. (Bom.). Per Batchelor and Davar, JJ., decided on the 10th March, 1910.

⁸ Subbayya, (1889) 12 Mad. 451.

⁹ Matan, (1910) 33 All. 163.

¹⁰ Ghulam Muhammad, (1922) 3 Lah. 46; Allah Wazai, (1925) 1 L. C. 521.

not the information contemplated by this section.¹ Where a person in whose house theft took place informed the police that he suspected two persons whom he named as the perpetrators of the crime, it was held that that did not amount to giving false information.²

Information must be given by the accused.—When the information on which proceedings are taken is not given by the accused, a conviction under this section cannot stand. One S made a report at a Police Station. On enquiry the investigating Police-officer came to the conclusion that the report was false and that it had been made at the instance of one U. The Sub-Inspector sent a report to the Assistant Superintendent of Police asking that action should be taken under this section against S and U. The Assistant Superintendent of Police declined to take action, but sent the report to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, who took cognizance of an offence against S and U under this section. It was held that the Sub-divisional Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take any action under this section. Report of a police-officer was not a complaint under s. 195 (1), Criminal Procedure Code. U, not having given the information himself, could not be prosecuted under this section.³

2. 'Knows or believes to be false.'—The information given should be information which the accused knew or believed to be false.⁴ But he cannot be convicted if he shows that he had reasonable grounds for believing the information to be true. He is not bound to show that it was in fact true.⁵

Where the accused falsely telegraphed to a District Magistrate that a town was attacked by a gang of 200 robbers, and the Magistrate put no faith in the telegram and took no action, it was held that the accused were guilty of the offence under this section.⁶ Where the accused got enlisted in the police force calling himself jat being an ahir, a caste whose enlistment was prohibited, it was held that this offence was committed.⁷ Where a person gave a false information to a Village Magistrate charging another with having committed an offence, he was held guilty under this section.⁸

3a. 'To do or omit anything which the public servant ought not to do or omit.'—It is not necessary that the public servant to whom false information is given should be induced to do anything or to omit to do anything in consequence of such information. The gist of the offence is not what action may or may not be taken by the public servant to whom false information is given; but the intention or knowledge (to be inferred from his conduct) of the person supplying such information.⁹ tion given. Ask if true facts were

The information must be information regarding a fact which would induce the public servant to do something which he would be legally competent to do if he had been cognizant of the true facts.¹⁰ A false report to the police regarding the commission of a non-cognizable offence does not come under this section.¹¹ Under this clause it is not necessary to show that the act done will be to the injury or annoyance of any third person.¹²

The words "ought not to do or omit" imply duty and exclude personal choice.

¹ Madho, (1882) 4 All. 498. See Santaram, (1887) Unrep. Cr. C. 315.

² Ananga Mohan Datta, (1917) 22 C. W. N. 478, 27 C. L. J. 230.

³ Budh Sen, sup.; Raghu Tiwari, (1893) 15 All. 336.

⁴ Manohar, (1918) 16 A. L. J. R. 614.

⁵ Algoo Lal, (1920) 18 A. L. J. R. 636.

⁶ Ganesh Khanderao, (1889) 13 Bom. 506.

⁷ Fateh Khan, (1890) P. R. No. 35 of 1890.

⁸ Budh Sen, (1891) 13 All. 351.

3b. 'To use the lawful power...to the injury.'—See s. 44, supra, as to the meaning of 'injury.' Where a person gives false information to an officer who can exercise his power to the direct and immediate prejudice of another against whom the information is levelled, this offence is complete.¹

Using lawful powers of a public servant to the injury of another.—Where a person made a petition to the police officer of having committed an offence and come within the purview of this section, intent to cause a public servant to use his lawful powers to the injury of another person.² P appeared before a District Magistrate and made a statement in which he accused a certain police-officer of having beaten him, demanded a bribe of him and locked him up in the police cell. He stated, however, that he did not wish to make a complaint, but only desired that an inquiry should be made. Nevertheless the Magistrate examined P on oath, and, subsequently, the charge having been found to be baseless, P was convicted under this section and s. 193. It was held that, inasmuch as P had expressly stated that he did not wish to make a complaint, the statement must be taken to have been made to the District Magistrate, not as a Magistrate, but as head of the district police, and the conviction under s. 193 could not be upheld.³

A person stated to a police-officer—"I find there has been a theft: I suspect the persons named, and I want an inquiry to be made." It was held that, if the statement was false, the offence committed fell under this section.⁴ Where a person falsely gave information to the police that a horse belonging to him had strayed, when in fact he had sold it some time previously, and did this with the intention that a person should be convicted of stealing it, it was held that he was guilty under this section.⁵

Statutory application.—See the Indian Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 244.

CASES.

Personation.—A personated B at an examination called the Vernacular Sixth Standard Examination. A passed the examination and obtained a certificate from the Educational authorities in B's name. B, thereupon, applied to the Assistant Collector to have his name entered in the list of candidates for Government service. He attached to this application the certificate issued in his name, and his name was ordered to be entered on the list of candidates. It was held that he was guilty under this section.⁶ B appeared before a Village Registrar and falsely personated W, and, in such assumed character, expressed a desire to execute a lease in favour of A, who was present and assented to take the lease. When B made some mistakes in giving the area of the land, C corrected him. E identified B as W before the Village Registrar and E and D assured the attesting witnesses that B was W. It was held that C, D and E could not be convicted under s. 82 (d) of the Registration Act, 1877, but that they were guilty of an offence under this section.⁷ A person signed a notice of transfer of survey numbers in the character of his father who was dead; and the declaration to the notice was signed by the accused who confirmed the assumed character. It was held that the accused was guilty of giving false information to a public servant.⁸

False statement in a petition.—An accused who has made a false statement in a petition to a public servant, with intent to cause him to use his lawful powers to the injury of another person, is guilty of an offence under this section, if he knows that the statement is false, and if he makes it with the intention that the public servant should use his lawful powers to the injury of another person.⁹

¹ Shripati bin Waman, (1897) Unrep. Cr. C. 946.

² Gopal Bhilaji, (1873) Unrep. Cr. C. 72.

³ Phulel, (1912) 35 All. 102.

⁴ Mathura Prasad, (1917) 39 All. 715.

⁵ Incha Ram, (1922) 44 All. 647.

⁶ Ganesh Khanderao, (1889) 13 Bom. 508.

⁷ Bala bin Kashaba, (1895) Unrep. Cr. C. 761.

⁸ Mulharji, (1882) Unrep. Cr. C. 182.

said that the Court was thereby induced to do what it ought not to have done.¹ It was held similarly where the false statement was made in a memorandum of appeal.²

Where a person submitted a petition of resignation to a Collector as the officer in charge of the Court of Wards and such petition contained an untrue account of an affray and defamatory statements and the District Magistrate ordered the petitioner's prosecution for giving false information under this section, it was held that no offence under it was committed.³

Income-tax return.—Where a person does not sign the declaration in his income-tax return as to his 'other sources of income' the mere mention of some source of income alone in a previous part of the return which was signed will not make the return 'false' within the meaning of this section.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person to whom the information was given was a public servant.

(2) That the accused gave the information in question to that public servant.

(3) That such information was false.

(4) That the accused knew or believed such information to be false when giving it.⁵ The fact that an information is shewn to be false does not cast upon the party who is charged with an offence under the section the burden of showing that, when he made it, he believed it to be true. The prosecution must make out that the only reasonable inference was that he must have known or believed it to be false.⁶

(5) That the accused intended thereby to cause, or knew that it was likely that he would thereby cause, such public servant to do or omit anything which such public servant ought not to do or omit if the true state of facts were known to him; or that he intended thereby to cause, or knew that it was likely that he would thereby cause, such public servant to use his lawful powers to the injury or annoyance of any person.

A decision in a previous case is not admissible to prove the falsity of the information given by the accused. Evidence must be adduced in their presence.⁷

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

Where as the result of a police investigation it appears that a complaint made to the police of the commission of an offence is false, it is not necessary that the complainant should be given any further opportunity of establishing the truth of the information.⁸

The Magistrate should enquire into and if necessary prosecute for making a false information.⁹

An acquittal under this section is no bar to a subsequent prosecution under s. 500.¹¹

Madras Rule.—When an offence falls under two sections of the Penal Code, the one general and cognizable by an inferior tribunal, the other specifying aggravated circumstances and cognizable by a superior tribunal only, the jurisdiction

¹ Sunt Lal, (1881) P. R. No. 41 of 1881; Gopal, (1879) P. R. No. 34 of 1879.

² Ghanaya, (1879) P. R. No. 17 of 1879.

³ Debi, (1918) 16 A. L. J. R. 105.

⁴ (1907) 17 M. L. J. 25 (M.)

⁵ Maulvi Abdool Lutef, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 31.

⁶ Rajan Kutti, (1903) 26 Mad. 640.

⁷ Ram Dass Boistub, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 35.

⁸ Rajku Tiwari, (1893) 15 All. 336.

⁹ Jamni, (1883) 5 All. 397.

¹⁰ Gati Mandal, (1905) 4 C. L. J. 65; Gunamony Sapur, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 758.

¹¹ Ramesh Lal v. Munaswar Singh, (1910) 37 Cal. 604.

cases in which a person simply neglects his property, and by allowing a wall or a gateway to remain in a dilapidated condition, renders theft or other crime more easy of commission than would otherwise be the case. The law does not contemplate that the physical barrier of a wall or a gate is the means of restraining persons from crime, and no order of this nature can be made on the mere ground of any such apprehension." In this case the accused were in possession of an inn where travellers put up. The Magistrate passed an order directing them to repair the gate of the inn within a month as it was apprehended that travellers' property would otherwise be stolen. The repairs required by the order were not made till after the expiry of the month and the accused were therefore convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was wrong.¹ A conviction in the absence of evidence as to the likely result of the disobedience of an order is bad in law.² Thus disobedience to an order under s. 111 of the Criminal Procedure Code prohibiting a person from holding a market on certain specified days was held not to be punishable in the absence of evidence showing that the disobedience was likely to lead to a breach of the peace.³ The accused were directed not to make any disturbance over a certain person's rights of a ferry and thereafter they being found plying another ferry at the site in question but not causing any disturbance were ordered to be prosecuted under this section. It was held that the order for prosecution was infructuous.⁴ Where proclamation and attachment were issued against an absconder attaching some undivided land of the joint family to which the absconder belonged, and one of the other members of the family cultivated the lands in spite of the order, it was held that he could not be convicted under this section.⁵ But if the act of disobedience fastened to cause annoyance it is sufficient under the section. Objectionable language near a liquor shop, such as "if you drink, you will be drinking the blood of your children," speaks for itself and no more evidence than the words used is required.⁶ The accused sold drink in his shop during a festival day in contravention of an order promulgated by the District Magistrate and he was convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was illegal as there was no question or proof of causing or tending to cause obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any one and as it does not follow as a matter of course that selling drinks will lead to riots or disturbance.⁷

Section not applicable to orders made in civil suits.—The section applies to orders made by public functionaries for public purposes and not to an order made in a civil suit between party and party.⁸ The operation of the section is limited

¹ Habibullah, (1896) 6 A. W. N. 251.

² Brojo Nuth Ghose, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 220. In this case it was said that although the establishment of a rival hat (bazaar) at a place near to an old hat (bazaar) and held on the same day might lead to the breach of the peace, but that should not alone form a sufficient ground for a conviction. The decision seems to give the go by to the words "tends to cause."

³ Shyamannand Das Paharaj, (1904) 31 Cal. 990; Ram Gopal Das, (1905) 32 Cal. 793; Parmeshwar Rai, (1922) 268. See Nand Kumar Bose, (1894) 149, in which a conviction was set aside in the absence of evidence that the disobedience caused annoyance, obstruction, or injury to human life, health or property. Bu (1865) 2 W. I. 149, in which a conviction was set aside on the ground that the order prohibiting the sale of opium was not a public order.

Unrep. Cr. C. 433, where a man held a caste feast contrary to orders of a Municipality when cholera was raging in the city.

⁴ Sujal Biswas v. Samiruddin Maulol, (1917) 22 C. W. N. 599.

⁵ Bisi Behari, (1917) 2 P. L. W. 179.

⁶ Govind Venkatesh Talgi, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 1017.

⁷ Yerlagadda Venkanna, [1925] M. W. N. 396.

⁸ Ch. rukanta De, (1890) 6 Cal. 445; (1896) Unrep. Cr. C. 864, of 1896; Hannant Chaugol, and Heaton, JJ., in Cr. 1906, decided on the 10th cases in which a person simply neglects his property, and by allowing a wall or a gateway to remain in a dilapidated condition, renders theft or other crime more easy of commission than would otherwise be the case. The law does not contemplate that the physical barrier of a wall or gate is a sufficient protection from crime, and no order of this nature can be made for the apprehension of any such apprehension." In this case the accused were in possession of the inn where travellers put up. The Magistrate passed an order directing them to repair the gate of the inn within a month as it was apprehended that travellers' property would otherwise be stolen. The repairs required by the order were not made till after the expiry of the month and the accused were therefore convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was wrong.¹ A conviction in the absence of evidence as to the likely result of the disobedience of an order is bad in law.² Thus disobedience to an order under s. 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code prohibiting a person from holding a market on certain specified days was held not to be punishable in the absence of evidence showing that the disobedience was likely to lead to a breach of the peace.³ The accused were directed not to make any disturbance over a certain person's rights of a ferry and thereafter they being found plying another ferry at the site in question but not causing any disturbance were ordered to be prosecuted under this section. It was held that the order for prosecution was infructuous.⁴ Where proclamation and attachment were issued against an absconder attaching some undivided land of the joint family to which the absconder belonged, and one of the other members of the family cultivated the lands in spite of the order, it was held that he could not be convicted under this section.⁵ But if the act of disobedience fastened to cause annoyance it is sufficient under the section. Objectionable language near a liquor shop, such as "if you drink, you will be drinking the blood of your children," speaks for itself and no more evidence than the words used is required.⁶ The accused sold drink in his shop during a festival day in contravention of an order promulgated by the District Magistrate and he was convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was illegal as there was no question or proof of causing or tending to cause obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any one and as it does not follow as a matter of course that selling drinks will lead to riots or disturbance.⁷

6, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 89; Nana v. Dwarikadas Dharamsi, 639 (n); Idy v. Sec., (1863) 17 M. (1901) 148. Hira, (1901) O. C.

Section not applicable to orders made in civil suits.—The section applies to orders made by public functionaries for public purposes and not to an order made in a civil suit between party and party.⁸ The operation of the section is limited

¹ Habibullah, (1886) 6 A. W. N. 251.

² Brojo Nath Ghose, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 226.

In this case it was said that although the establishment of a rival hat (bazaar) at a place near to an old hat (bazaar) and held on the same day might lead to the breach of the peace, but that should not alone form a sufficient ground for a conviction. The decision seems to give the go by to the words "tends to cause."

³ Shyamanand Das Paharaj, (1904) 31 Cal. 930; Nam Gopal Das, (1903) 32 Cal. 793; Parimeshwar Bai, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 268. See Nand Kumar Bose, (1869) 3 Begg. L. R. App. 149, in which a conviction for disobeying an order prohibiting the carrying of fire-arms was set aside in the absence of evidence to show that the disobedience would cause or tend to cause annoyance, obstruction, or injury to human life, health or safety; Shabuckram Jaloojee, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 32, where the conviction was set aside for refusal to remove and reconstruct roof drains; Harilal, (1889)

Unrep. Cr. C. 433, where a man held a caste feast contrary to orders of a Municipality when cholera was raging in the city.

⁴ Sujal Biswas v. Samiruddin Mandal, (1917) 22 C. W. N. 599.

⁵ Bisi Behari, (1917) 2 P. L. W. 179.

⁶ Gorind Venkatesh Yalgi, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 1047.

⁷ Yerlagadda Venkanna, [1925] M. W. N. 396.

⁸ Chandralanta De, (1890) 6 Cal. 445; Uluwagoria, (1896) Unrep. Cr. C. 861, Cr. H. No. 27 of 1896; Hanmant Chumprao, Per Aston and Heaton, JJ., in Cr. Rev. No. 157 of 1906, decided on the 10th September 1906; Mallapa Tavargi, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 676, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 89; Nandabhai Sadanand v. Deorkaldas Dharamsi, (1934) 8 Bom. L. R. 639 (s); Naniambund v. Thashithatha, (1915) 17 M. L. T. 391. See, however, Krishnaseth bin Narayanshet, (1863) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 46; Raghuvir Singh, (1911) 14 C. P. L. R. 174; Hira Lal, (1929) 21 O. C. 18.

restraining the holding of a hat or market²; a notice under Mad. Act V of 1884 calling upon a person to remove certain encroachments on a public road³; an order directing that all music should cease when any procession is passing a certain place of worship⁴; an order not to place stake-nets in a river⁵; an order issued by a revenue officer directing certain persons to pay their assessment to a specified individual⁶; a notice issued under s. 98 (2) of the Madras Local Boards Act (V of 1884) as amended by Act VI of 1900⁷; a permit to cut and transport timber issued under ss. 26 and 35 of the Forest Act⁸; an order under s. 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code⁹; an order under s. 147, Criminal Procedure Code, directing a person to remove a fence so as to allow of the use of an alleged right of way¹⁰; an order prohibiting the use of public roads between 9 p.m. and sunrise¹¹; an order which declared that, as between parties to a contention, certain land in dispute did not belong to the public¹²; an order forbidding the slaughter of cattle or sale of meat within a radius of three miles of a licensed slaughter-house¹³; an order directing a land-owner to find out a clue in a case of theft within fifteen days¹⁴; an order forbidding persons to enter a railway station except for bona fide purposes of travelling¹⁵; and an order directing a station-master to detain certain logs suspected to be stolen property¹⁶ are all held to be not valid orders under this section.

Order to be directed to the accused.—Where the accused was convicted of disobeying an order posted at a certain place by a Magistrate prohibiting people from burying and burning corpses there, it was held that the order, not having been served individually upon the accused, the conviction was illegal.¹⁷ The proprietor of a theatre, not in actual possession or management of the theatre at a time when a lawful order promulgated by a public servant was disobeyed, was held to have committed no offence under this section.¹⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the promulgation of the order.

(2) That it was promulgated by a public servant.

(3) That such public servant was lawfully empowered to promulgate the same.¹⁹

(4) That such order directed the accused to abstain from a certain act, or to take certain order, etc.

(5) That the accused knew of such direction to him.²⁰

(6) That he disobeyed such direction.

(7) That such disobedience caused, or tended to cause, obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of the same to a person lawfully employed; or that such disobedience caused, or tended to cause, danger to human life, health, or safety; or that such disobedience caused, or tended to cause, a riot or an affray.²¹

¹ Parmeshwar Rai, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 268.

² Subramanian, (1898) 20 Mad. 1.

³ Muthialu Chetti v. Bapun Saib, (1880) 2 Mad. 140; Sundram Chetti, (1883) 6 Mad. 203, r. s.

⁴ (1878) 1 Weir 138.

⁵ Ramachandra Nayako, (1884) 1 Weir 139.

⁶ Shunmugam Pillai, (1902) 1 Weir 140.

⁷ Venuri Pichayya, (1896) 1 Weir 140.

⁸ Nagoji Ramachandra, (1898) 1 Weir 143.

⁹ Lutchmiah Maistry, (1893) 1 Weir 143.

¹⁰ Komul Kisto Bonick, (1883) 12 C. L. R. 231.

¹¹ Unnoda Proshad Dutt v. Ramee Shama Soondaree, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 20.

¹² Nga Po Naing, (1896) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 179.

¹³ Bakshi Ram, (1880) 3 All. 201.

¹⁴ Roma, (1913) 35 All. 136.

¹⁵ Bichal Nath, (1913) 16 O. C. 371.

¹⁶ Sukar Budhia, (1870) Unrep. Cr. C. 30. See for further cases Comment on the word 'order.'

¹⁷ Krishna Shet, (1890) Cr. R. No. 59 of 1890, Unrep. Cr. C. 527.

¹⁸ Subun Singh, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 67; Nagappa Thevan, (1913) 38 Mad. 602.

¹⁹ Ramtonoo Singh, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 49; Abelakh Lall v. Sirmam Singh, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 60.

²⁰ 4 M. H. C. App. 5; Anant Shitaram, (1899) 1 Bom. L. R. 624; Nandkumar Bose, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. App. 149; Shabuckram Bukooler, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 32; Ramtonoo Singh, sup. Harilal, (1889) Unrep. Cr. C. 433; Brojo Nath Ghose, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 226; Shyamanand Das Paharaj, (1904) 31 Cal. 990; Ram Gopal Daw, (1905) 32 Cal. 793.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

In order to sustain a charge under this section the order disobeyed must be in writing and duly promulgated and directed to the accused.¹

Where an executive officer makes an order or issues a notification it is not within the province of judicial authority to question the propriety or legality of such order or notification, until an attempt is made to enforce the exaction of a penalty against a person committing a breach of such order or notification. It then becomes the duty of the judicial authority to consider whether the order is properly made or not.² A Magistrate is not competent to try and convict a person under this section of disobedience to an order issued by himself as Magistrate under s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code.³

Order under appeal.—A Magistrate is not warranted in convicting and imprisoning a person for disobeying an order the legality of which is then under the consideration of an appellate Court.⁴

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate is required.⁵ A prosecution under this section should not be launched unless all the elements necessary for a conviction are present.⁶ The complaint for an alleged disobedience of an order under s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, must show that the disobedience caused, or tended to cause, obstruction, annoyance or injury or a riot. Whether a complaint in writing is necessary where an order is promulgated by Government is open to question. Under the old s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code it was held that where the order was not promulgated by any public servant but by Government, no sanction was required as a condition precedent to prosecution for disobeying the order.⁷

Punishment.—Rigorous imprisonment can only be inflicted if the case comes within the latter part of the section.⁸

189. Whoever holds out any threat of injury¹ to any public servant,² or to any person in whom he believes

Threat of injury to public servant.

that public servant to be interested, for the purpose of inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of the public functions of such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 503 defines criminal intimidation. That section is general in its character : whereas this section deals with criminal intimidation of a public servant.

Under this section there must be 'a threat of injury either to the public servant or to any one in whom he (the accused) believes that public servant to be interested.' What the section deals with are menaces which would have a tendency to induce the public servant to alter his action because of some possible injury to himself or to some one in whom the accused believes he has an interest.³ Where the accused more than once, and in a loud tone, said to the Magistrate and other police-officers that he and others would obstruct the carrying of a Hindu God

¹ Mul Raj, (1905) P. R. No. 36 of 1905.

² Parmeshwar Rai, (1922) 3 P. L. T. 268.

³ South, (1900) 24 Mad. 70.

Cr. C.

⁴ Ratanvar Mahadervar Charan, (1866) 3 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 32.

⁵ Amirkhan, (1856) Unrep. Cr. C. 273 ;

Prasanna Jha, (1909) 14 C. W. N. 234 ; Kruppa ; Ami ; Aiyar, (1915) 28 M. L. J. 505.

SS4.

H. C.

⁸ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 185.

along the road, even though a riot might take place, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.¹ It is essential to prove the exact words used by an accused in threatening a public servant in order to enable the Court to ascertain whether in fact a threat of injury to the public servant was really made by the accused.²

1. Mere empty threats, which are often effusions of passion unattended with any formal intention of harm, should be distinguished from threats really calculated to cause the person to whom they are held out to be in fear of the injury threatened.³ Where the endorsement on a summons was to the effect that after tender of the summons to the witness, the accused, the son of the witness, and the owner of the house came up, abused the process-server and asked him to get out of the house and that the witness immediately after received the summons and hatta and signed his name, it was held that no offence was committed.⁴

1. 'Injury.'—See s. 44, supra.

2. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused held out the threat.

(2) That such threat was of injury.

(3) That the person threatened was a public servant, or some person in whom the accused believed such public servant was interested.

(4) That the purpose for which such threat was held out was to induce such public servant to do, or to forbear, or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of his public functions.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, held out threat of injury to a public servant, to wit—, [or to—in whom you believed that a public servant, to wit—, was interested] for the purpose of inducing that public servant to do an act, to wit—, [or to forbear or delay to do—], connected with the exercise of the public functions of such public servant and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 189 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

190. Whoever holds out any threat¹ of injury² to any person for the purpose of inducing that person to refrain or desist from making a legal application for protection against any injury to any public servant³ legally empowered, as such, to give such protection, or to cause such protection to be given, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The object of this section is to prevent persons from threatening any other with a view to inducing him to refrain from applying for protection to public servant for any injury.

¹ Amir Khan, (1886) Unrep. Cr. C. 273;

² 2nd Rep., s. 123.

Pratap Jha, (1909) 14 C. W. N. 234.

³ Mateshri Bakht Singh, (1888) 8 All. 350.

⁴ Kuppusami Aiyar, (1915) 28 M. L. J. 505.

person for the possession of certain church property, excommunicated him for withholding it, it was held that the clergyman had committed an offence under this section.¹

1. 'Threat.'—See s. 189, supra.
2. 'Injury.'—See s. 44, supra.
3. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused held out the threat.

(2) That such threat was of an injury.

(3) That the purpose for which such threat was held out was to induce the person threatened, to refrain or desist from making a legal application for protection against some injury.

(4) That the person to whom such legal application was about to be made was a public servant.

(5) That such public servant was legally empowered, as such, to give the protection, or to cause the same to be given.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, held out a threat of injury, to wit—, to—, for the purpose of inducing him to refrain or desist from making a legal application for protection against such injury to a public servant legally empowered to give such protection (or to cause such protection) to be given, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 190 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

¹ De Cruz, (1884) 8 Mad. 140.

CHAPTER XI.

OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

THE Code treats the giving and the fabricating of false evidence in exactly the same way, and marks the grades of those offences on the principle that the law ought to make a distinction between the kind of false evidence which produces great evils and the kind of false evidence which produces comparatively slight evils. As plaints and written statements are verified by the civil suitors who present them, the Code renders punishable the deliberate assertion of falsehoods in pleadings.

191. Whoever being legally bound by an oath or by any express provision of law to state the truth, or being bound by law to make a declaration upon any subject,¹ makes any statement which is false,² and which he either knows or believes to be false, or does not believe to be true,³ is said to give false evidence.

Explanation 1.—A statement is within the meaning of this section, whether it is made verbally or otherwise.

Explanation 2.—A false statement as to the belief of the person attesting is within the meaning of this section, and a person may be guilty of giving false evidence by stating that he believes a thing which he does not believe, as well as by stating that he knows a thing which he does not know.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A, in support of a just claim which B has against Z for one thousand rupees, falsely swears on a trial that he heard Z admit the justice of B's claim. A has given false evidence.

(b) A, being bound by an oath to state the truth, states that he believes a certain signature to be the handwriting of Z, when he does not believe it to be the handwriting of Z. Here A states that which he knows to be false, and therefore gives false evidence.

(c) A, knowing the general character of Z's handwriting, states that he believes a certain signature to be the handwriting of Z; A in good faith believing it to be so. Here A's statement is merely as to belief, and is true as to his belief, and therefore, although the signature may not be the handwriting of Z, A has not given false evidence.

(d) A, being bound by an oath to state the truth, states that he knows that Z was at a particular place on a particular day, not knowing anything upon the subject. A gives false evidence whether Z was at that place on the day named or not.

(e) A, an interpreter or translator, gives or certifies as a true interpretation or translation of a statement or document, which he is bound by oath to interpret or translate truly, that which is not and which he does not believe to be a true interpretation or translation. A has given false evidence.

COMMENT.

The offence of giving false evidence is known as 'perjury' under the English law.

Scope.—The words of this section are very general, and do not contain any limitation that the false statement made shall have any bearing upon the matter in issue. It is sufficient if the false evidence is intentionally given, that is to say, if the person making the statement makes it advisedly knowing it to be false and with the intention of deceiving the Court and of leading it to be supposed that that which he states is true.¹

English law.—According to common law a statement on oath or affirmation, taken before a competent tribunal, and known by the person making it to be false, is perjury is consolidated by 1 & 2 Geo. V., c. 6.

Difference between Indian and English law.—(1) According to common law the false statement must have reference to some judicial proceeding; and the false evidence must be given before a competent tribunal. In the Code this distinction only exists in reference to the degree of punishment imposed.²

(2) According to common law perjury must be proved by two witnesses, or by one witness with proof of other material and relevant facts substantially confirming his testimony. Under the Penal Code no particular number of witnesses in any case is required to prove any fact.

(3) The common law requires that the matter sworn to must be material to the cause depending in the Court. According to the Penal Code it is not necessary that the statement should be material, but that would be considered in awarding punishment.³

(4) In England, an oath, or an affirmation rendered equivalent to it by law, is an essential element of the offence. It is immaterial whether the fact which is sworn to be in itself true or false. In India, an oath is merely one of the forms by which a party may be bound to speak the truth. Even if an oath were improperly administered by an incompetent person, still the offence would be committed, if the party giving the false evidence were bound by an 'express provision of law to state the truth.'

Ingredients.—The offence under this section involves three ingredients:—

1. A person must be legally bound (a) by an oath, or any express provision of law, to state the truth, or (b) to make a declaration upon any subject;
2. he must make a false statement; and
3. he must know or believe it to be false, or must not believe it to be true.

1. 'Legally bound by an oath or by any express provision of law to state the truth... or to make a declaration upon any subject.'—It is necessary that the accused should be legally bound by an oath before a competent authority. If the Court has no authority to administer an oath to a witness the proceeding will be coram non jure and a prosecution for false evidence will not stand.⁴ Section 4 of the Indian Oaths Act of 1873 specifies the Courts and persons who have authority to administer oaths and affirmations. Section 5 enumerates the persons by whom oaths or affirmations must be made

¹ Mahomed Hossain, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) 37.

² See per Jenkins, C. J., in Bal Gangadhar

Cal. 633; Radhika Mohan Kuri v. Lal Mohan

Sha, (1893) 20 Cal. 719; Mata Dayal, (1897) 24 Cal. 755; Chota Jadub Chunder, (1864) W. R. (Gap No.) Cr. 15; Niaz Ali, (1882) 5 All. 17; Kandhaiya Lal, (1899) 19 A. W. N. 87; Luzumandas, (1869) Unrep. Cr. C. 25; Jibhai Vaja, (1874) 11 B. H. C. 11; Fatteh Ali, (1894) P. R. No. 15 of 1894.

Oath under foreign law.—Perjury cannot be assigned on a foreign affidavit taken before a person not authorized to administer an oath by English law.¹ There is no provision in the Penal Code which constitutes it an offence to give false evidence before a Court in a Native State where the oath is not administered under the provisions of law in force in British India, but under the law of that State in relation to proceedings before that Court.²

Want of jurisdiction.—If the Court administering the oath is acting beyond its jurisdiction a conviction will not be sustained.³ The test of jurisdiction is whether or not the Court had power to enter upon the inquiry.⁴

A pleader giving a false explanation on solemn affirmation, when asked to explain his conduct under the Legal Practitioners' Act⁵; an heir of an employee in the Telegraph Department, supporting his claim before the District Judge by false witnesses, under an oath, the Judge having no authority to administer it⁶; a Native Christian giving false evidence, though solemnly affirmed under Act V of 1810, the Act not being applicable to him, but only to Hindus and Mahomedans⁷; a person making a false statement before a person purporting to act under the Registration Act but not legally authorized to do so⁸; a person making a false statement in an application for a new trial,⁹ or in a verified petition presented under s. 19 of the Income-tax Act to a Tahsildar, who was not an officer competent to receive such a petition¹⁰; and a person making false accounts with the intention of producing them before a Forest Officer not empowered by law to hold an investigation,¹¹ were all held to have committed no offence under this section.

By an oath.—An oath or solemn affirmation is not a sine qua non to the offence of giving false evidence.¹² The offence may be committed although the person giving evidence has neither been sworn nor affirmed.¹³ By s. 14 of the Oaths Act¹⁴ every person giving evidence on any subject, before any Court, is bound to state the truth. The idea of the oath, namely, that the person swearing renounces the mercy and imprecates the vengeance of Heaven if he do not speak the truth, the idea of binding the conscience of the witness, which still prevails in England, and which in former time led to the swearing of Hindus on the Tulsi and Ganges water, and of Mahomedans on the Koran, finds no place in the Oaths Act. The superstitious or religious sanction has been disregarded and the legal sanction alone is relied upon. See s. 51, supra, for the definition of 'oath.'

Any express provision of law.—Under this clause sanction of an oath is not necessary, but there must be a specific provision of law compelling a person to state the truth. It must be proved that the false statement was made under the sanction of law.¹⁵ Where the accused is not bound by any express provision of law to state the truth he cannot be charged for giving false evidence. Thus, where a person after acquittal was examined on oath to enable the Court to take cognizance of an offence under s. 190 (c), Criminal Procedure Code, it was held that though the Magistrate might examine the person for that purpose, yet he could not

¹ Haran Mandal, (1868) 2 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 1.

² Mooneppa Oodian, Subbroya Oodian, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 326.

³ Ramajirav Jibhajirav, (1875) 12 B. H. C. 1.

⁴ (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 2.

⁵ Chait Ram, (1883) 6 A.H. 103; Bharmabhin Nangappa, (1886) 11 Bom. 702, p. v.; Shet...

⁶ James Bolton, (1841) 1 Q. B. D. 66.

⁷ Kotha Subba Chetti, (1883) 6 Mad. 232.

⁸ Chait Ram, sup.

⁹ Fedamuttu, (1868) 4 M. H. C. 185.

¹⁰ Radhika Mohan Kuri v. Lal Mohan Sha, (1893) 20 Cal. 719.

¹¹ ...

¹² ...

¹³ ...

¹⁴ ...

¹⁵ ...

examine him on oath under the Oaths Act, as he was not a witness in any case at the time, and that he was not legally bound to state the truth.¹ Intentional omission to make statements required by s. 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure amounts to an offence under s. 193.²

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 161.—Under s. 161, cl. (2), of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, which reverts to the language of the Code of 1872, a person is no longer bound by law to tell the truth when questioned by a police-officer, and he will not be liable to be prosecuted for giving false evidence.³ The Code of 1882 contained the word 'truly' after the word 'questions' in this clause, but this word has been omitted in the present Code.⁴

A statement made to an investigating police-officer under s. 161 and recorded by him under the provisions of s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be made the foundation of an order for the prosecution under s. 193 of the Penal Code of the person making it.⁵ But it is submitted that a person making such a statement may come within s. 203 of the Penal Code.

Declaration upon any subject.—In certain cases the law requires a declaration from a person of verification in a pleading—and if such declaration is made falsely it will come under this clause. The words "any subject" denote that the declaration must be in connection with a subject regarding which it was to be made.

'Any statement.'—It is not necessary that the false evidence should be material to the case in which it is given.⁶ "The framers of the Code used the word 'material,' where it was intended to be an essential of the offence, and advisedly omitted it when such was not their intention... I do not say that the question of materiality may not be matter for the consideration of the jury. For the giving false evidence, to come within s. 193, must be an intentional giving; and in deciding whether or not it was intentional, the jury would have to consider whether or not the subject-matter of the statement were material to the result of the proceeding, inasmuch as if that subject-matter were wholly immaterial, they might well attribute the statement to indifference or carelessness on the part of the prisoner."⁷ Where the act made essential, and need not therefore be averred. Cases may arise in which materiality may not be essential to the offence, but it must be taken into consideration in arriving at the intention with which the false statement was made.⁸

2. 'Makes any statement which is false.'—It must be shown that the statement said to have been false, could not but be false. It is not sufficient to show that the probabilities are that the statement was false.⁹ The accused stated on oath that he wrote a certain document. Another person swore that he and not the accused had written the document. The handwriting expert gave his opinion that the handwriting on the document was not similar to the acknowledged handwriting of the accused and the trial Court after comparing the various handwritings had come to the conclusion that the handwriting on the document resembled that of

¹ Hari Charan Singh, (1900) 27 Cal. 455.

² Bapayya Dayaram, (1886) 10 Bom. 288, Paupayya v. Narasannah, (1880) 2 Mad. 216

³ Kasim Khan, (1881) 7 Cal. 121, v.n.

⁴ The following cases decided when the Code of 1882 was in force are no longer of any authority: Parshram Raysingh, (1883) 8 Bom. 216; Iemal valad Fataru, (1887) 11 Bom. 659; Nathu Sheekh, (1884) 10 Cal. 405; Bailanta Bauri, (1889) 16 Cal. 349; Bhagwan-tia, (1892) 15 All. 11; Bhajan, (1893) 13 A. W. N. 124.

⁵ Muhammad Usman, (1908) 28 A. W. N.

22.

⁶ Parbutty Churn Sircar, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 84; Shub Prosad Giri, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 69; Damodar Ramchandra Kulkarni, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C) 68.

⁷ Per Scotland, C. J., in Aidrus Sahib, (1862) 1 M. H. C. 38, 41, 42.

⁸ Tookaram, (1862), Unrep. Cr. C. 2; Brahmdeo Singh, (1920) 2 P. L. T. 380.

⁹ Hira Nand Ojha, (1906) 10 C. W. N. 1099; Lalmon Nonsa, (1922) 4 P. L. T. 683, 1 Pat. L. R. (Cr.) 142.

the other person and not of the accused. It was held that a conviction under s. 193 could not stand.¹

Direct proof of the falsity of the statement on which the perjury is assigned is essential. But, as legitimate evidence for this purpose, the law makes no distinction between the testimony of a witness directly falsifying such statement and the contradictory statement of the person charged although not made on oath. Such a statement, when satisfactorily proved, is quite as good evidence in proof of the charge as the criminatory statement of a person charged with any other offence and on precisely the same ground,—that it is an admission of the accused person inconsistent with his innocence.²

See the heading 'Nature of proof' in the Commentary on s. 193, p. 406.

3. 'Which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true.'—The false evidence must be intentionally false to the knowledge or belief of the person giving it.³ The matter sworn to must be either false in fact, or, if true, the accused must not have known it to be so.⁴ A man may be guilty of this offence if he swear that he believes or thinks a fact to be true when it is not.⁵

It is a false statement made under a verification that constitutes an offence and not a verification on oath or by solemn affirmation.⁶

'Does not believe to be true.'—The making of a false statement, without knowledge as to whether the subject-matter of the statement is false or not, is legally a giving of false evidence.⁷ Where a man swears to a particular fact without knowing at the time whether the fact be true or false, it is as much perjury as if he knew the fact to be false, and equally indictable.⁸ But a man cannot be convicted of perjury for having acted rashly and credulously and having failed to make reasonable enquiry with regard to the facts alleged by him to be true. It must be found that he made some statement which he knew or believed to be false or which he did not believe to be true.⁹

Written statements.—A person filing a written statement in a suit is bound by law to state the truth and if he makes a statement which is false to his knowledge or belief, or which he believes not to be true, he is guilty of giving false evidence.¹⁰ A statement, though contrary to fact, but merely made for the purpose of his case, cannot be made the subject of a prosecution. But a litigant in making allegations as to material and substantial facts which go to support his claim as a plaintiff, on the one hand, or to meet a claim against him as a defendant on the other, is bound to truly state them, and if he does do so, and if it can be shown that he has intentionally asserted things which are false to his knowledge, he is within the scope of this section. The very essence of crimes of this kind is not how they may injure this or that party to the litigation, but how they may deceive and mislead the Court, and thus produce the most mischievous consequences to the administration of civil and criminal justice.

The verification of an application, in which the applicant makes a false statement, does not subject him to punishment for this offence, if such application does not require verification.¹¹

Criminating statement is no justification.—When a party makes a false statement while legally bound by solemn affirmation, the fact that the statement was

¹ S. C. Gupta, (1923) 1 Rang. 290.

² Ross, (1871) 6 M. H. C. 342.

³ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

⁴ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

⁵ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

⁶ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

⁷ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

⁸ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

⁹ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁰ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹¹ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹² "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹³ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁴ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁵ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁶ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁷ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁸ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

¹⁹ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

²⁰ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

²¹ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

²² "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

²³ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

²⁴ "The law of evidence," 10th ed. p. 100.

one tending to criminate himself will not justify his acquittal on a charge of giving false evidence.¹

Illegality of trial does not purge perjury.—The fact that the trial in which false evidence is given is to be commenced de novo owing to irregularity does not exonerate the person giving false evidence in that trial from the obligation to speak the truth, and he is liable for giving false evidence.²

But in a Bombay case the proceedings in the trial in which false evidence was given were subsequently annulled in consequence of the sanction for the prosecution being insufficient and the High Court held that the conviction of the accused must be reversed as the false statement was not made in a stage of a judicial proceeding.³

Non-liability of the accused for giving false evidence.—The authors of the Code himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer... questions [put by the Court] with giving or from himself

Abetment.—There can be no offence of the abetment of giving false evidence unless the person charged with abetment intended, not only that the statement should be made, but that the statement should be made falsely.⁷

Where an accused asked a witness to suppress certain facts in giving his statements which he himself knew to be false, he was held guilty under ss. 109 and 193.⁸ Where C falsely represented himself to be U, and the writer of a document signed by U, and T, knowing that C was not U, and had not written such document, adduced C as U as the writer of that document, it was held that T was guilty of abetment of giving false evidence.¹⁰

CASES.

False evidence.—A person making a false statement before a Police Patel acting under s. 13 of Bom. Act VIII of 1867¹¹; before a Sub-Registrar¹², and before a Registrar of Deeds, even though no oath or affirmation be administered to him¹³; a witness falsely deposing in another's name¹⁴; a person falsely verifying his complaint¹⁵; a person in an application for execution of a decree intentionally omitting to state an adjustment between the parties after decree, whether such adjustment has or has not been previously certified to the Court¹⁶; a person making a false statement on oath before a Magistrate acting under s. 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code¹⁷; a person making false statements in an application for mutation

¹ (1867) 3 M. H. C. App. xxxix.

² Vinayami, (1890) 19 Mad. 375; Batesar Mandal, (1884) 10 Cal. 604.

³ Rajyalal Taju, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.)

374. Note G, p. 131.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 342 (2).

⁵ Ram Kailashan, (1906) 28 All. 703.

⁶ Nim Chand Mockherjee, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

⁷ Andy Chetty, (1863) 2 M. H. C. 433.

⁸ Rajvi, (1893) Unrep. Cr. C. 632.

⁹ Chandi Churn Nautik, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

¹⁰ Irtasapa, (1880) 4 Bom. 479.

¹¹ Juggai Chander Dutt, (1866) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 81. See Narayanaswamy Iyer, [1912] M. W. N. 1107.

¹² (1863) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9.

¹³ Prerna Bhatia, (1862) 1 B. H. C. 69.

¹⁴ Laxmanadas, (1869) Unrep. Cr. C. 25.

¹⁵ Espejo Doyarum, (1886) 10 Bom. 283.

¹⁶ Alaga Kone, (1892) 16 Mad. 421; Suyya Terna, (1905) 29 Mad. 42.

of names under s. 42 of the Bengal Land Registration Act¹; an official making a false return of the service of summons²; and a false return to a warrant of sale³ were held guilty of giving false evidence.

False statement in the application of an accused.—The Allahabad High Court has held that a person seeking by an application in revision to get rid of a conviction standing against him is incapable of tendering his own affidavit in support of such application, and consequently if he did tender such an affidavit, he could not be prosecuted for false statements which might be contained therein.⁴ It has similarly held that where an accused person applies for the transfer of the case pending against him to some other Court, supporting his application by an affidavit, he cannot, or at least ought not to, be prosecuted under s. 193 in respect of statements made therein.⁵ The Lahore High Court has dissented from this view. It has held that an application for transfer is not a part of the defence of an accused person and statements made by an accused in an affidavit in support of an application for transfer do not enjoy the immunity conferred by s. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code upon answers to questions put to the accused by the Court.⁶ Further, it has held that there is no law which confers upon an accused person immunity from prosecution in respect of a false statement in an affidavit tendered by him in support of his application for transfer; and that such statement can be the subject-matter of a charge for perjury.⁷

False balance-sheet.—The making of a false balance-sheet is not an offence within this section but s. 418.⁸

False darkhast.—Signing and verifying a darkhast containing false statements is an offence under this section; and it makes no difference that at the time when the signature and verification were appended the darkhast was blank.⁹

Evidence under illegal pardon.—Evidence of an accused person illegally pardoned, cannot be used against him, or subject him to a prosecution for giving false evidence.¹⁰

Irregular trial.—H, a Police Constable, procured a warrant to be illegally issued, without a written information or oath, for the arrest of S, upon a charge of "assaulting and obstructing him, H, in the discharge of his duty." Upon such warrant S was arrested and brought before Justices, and was, without objection, tried by them and convicted. H was afterwards indicted for perjury committed on the said trial of S, and convicted. It was held that H was rightly convicted, notwithstanding that there was neither written information nor oath to justify the issue of the warrant.¹¹

192. Whoever causes any circumstances to exist, or makes any false entry in any book or record, or makes

Fabricating false evidence.

any document containing a false statement,¹ intending that such circumstance, false entry or false statement may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant² as such, or before an arbitrator, and that such circumstance, false entry or false statement, so appearing in evidence, may cause any person who in such proceeding is to form an opinion upon the

¹ Naloo Patra, (1910) 38 Cal. 368.

² Shama Churn Roy, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 475.

27. ³ Chenanna Gourd, (1903) 1 Weir 155.

⁴ Barkat, (1897) 19 All. 200.

⁵ Bindeshri Singh, (1906) 28 All. 331.

⁶ Ghulam Muhammad, (1922) 3 Lah. 46; Allah Wazir, (1925) 1 L. C. 522.

⁷ Pir Qadir Balkh Shah, (1924) 1 L. C.

⁸ Moss, (1893) 16 All. 88.

⁹ Ratanchand Dhannam, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 886.

¹⁰ Dala Jiva, (1885) 10 Bom. 190.

¹¹ Hughes, (1878) 4 Q. B. D. 614.

evidence, to entertain an erroneous opinion touching any point material³ to the result of such proceeding, is said "to fabricate false evidence."

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A puts jewels into a box belonging to Z, with the intention that they may be found in that box, and that this circumstance may cause Z to be convicted of theft. A has fabricated false evidence.

(b) A makes a false entry in his shop-book for the purpose of using it as corroborative evidence in a Court of Justice. A has fabricated false evidence.

(c) A, with the intention of causing Z to be convicted of a criminal conspiracy, writes a letter in imitation of Z's handwriting, purporting to be addressed to an accomplice in such criminal conspiracy, and puts the letter in a place which he knows that the officers of the police are likely to search. A has fabricated false evidence.

COMMENT.

The wording of this section is so general as to cover any species of crime which consists in the endeavour to injure another by supplying false data upon which to rest a judicial decision.

Ingredients.—The offence defined in this section contains the following ingredients:—

1. Causing of any circumstance to exist, or making of
 - (a) any false entry in a book or record, or
 - (b) a document containing a false statement
2. That such circumstance, false entry, or false statement must have been intended to appear in evidence in
 - (i) a judicial proceeding, or
 - (ii) a proceeding taken by law before a public servant or an arbitrator.
3. That such circumstance, false entry or false statement so appearing in evidence, might cause any person, who, in such proceeding, is to form an opinion upon the evidence, to entertain an erroneous opinion.
4. The formation of opinion should be touching any point material to the result of such proceeding.

1. 'Causes any circumstance to exist, or makes any false entry in any book or record, or makes any document containing a false statement.'—The person accused must be proved to have done any of these things. A person commits the offence of fabricating false evidence, if he makes a document which, though it may not contain any false statement in express terms, yet contains false recitals which imply such a false statement.¹

Mere indiscretion in signing a fabricated document without knowing its content will not render a person liable.² Intention is the gist of the offence under this section. See s. 193, infra.

2. 'That such circumstance, etc., may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding or in a proceeding before a public servant, etc.'—Judicial proceeding—The Code of Criminal Procedure says that 'judicial proceeding' includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be legally taken on oath [s. 4 (m)]. The power to take evidence on oath, which includes affirmation as well,³ is the characteristic test of 'judicial proceeding.'

¹ Mohadeo Mitter v. Narayan Ram Sha, (1905) 10 G. W. N. 220.

² Jai Jai Ram, (1919) 17 A. L. J. R. 574.

³ The General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (36).

Magistrate to discover the writer of a scandalous petition¹; a preliminary inquiry by a subordinate Magistrate, under the direction of a District Magistrate, into the circumstances of a complaint against the police²; the recording of a statement by a third class Magistrate having no authority to carry on the preliminary inquiry in the case³; and a reference to a District Judge by the telegraph authorities of a letter for verification⁴, were held to be not judicial proceedings.

The Calcutta High Court has held that execution proceedings subsequent to the trial of a suit are not judicial proceedings.⁵

The Bombay High Court has ruled that execution proceedings are judicial proceedings for the purpose of this section and s. 193. It is not essential for the purposes of these sections that the judicial proceedings in which the person intends to use the false evidence must be pending at the date of the fabrication.⁶ It is enough that there is a reasonable prospect of such a proceeding having regard to the circumstances of the case and that the fabricated document is intended to be used in such proceeding.⁷

'Proceeding...before a public servant.'—As to the definition of 'public servant' see s. 21, supra. The provisions of this section are not confined to false evidence to be used in judicial proceedings. Where, therefore, the accused, in order to save an estate from forfeiture, made a false entry of rent received in a public book kept by him for the purpose of informing the Collector as to the rents which had been paid into the Collectorate and as to what estates the rents were in arrear, so that he might take steps to enforce payment, it was held that the accused had committed an offence under this section.⁸ N, one of the accused, was proposing to sell some property to B. An agreement, dated 23rd May was written out by N on a stamp paper of Rs. 5. The sale having fallen through, it became necessary to apply to the Collector for a refund of the stamp duty. N took advice with regard to this and was told that no refund would be made after two months. M, the other accused, gave him this advice and also told him that he might alter the date in the document from 23rd May to 23rd September. This was unnecessary as the period was six months and not two. It was held that they were guilty of fabricating and abetting the fabrication of false evidence.⁹

No fabrication if public servant not authorized to hold investigation.—The making up falsely of accounts with the intention of producing them before a Forest Officer not empowered by law to hold an investigation and take evidence was held not to be a fabrication of false evidence.¹⁰ If the proceedings in which evidence is given are not judicial proceedings or are ultra vires, no offence is committed.¹¹

The evidence fabricated should be admissible evidence.—If the evidence fabricated is not admissible in evidence then there is no fabrication of false evidence under this section.¹² The soundness of this view is doubted by the Calcutta High Court,¹³ and the former Chief Court of the Punjab dissented from this view. The Chief Court held that a person was guilty of fabricating false evidence when he made a false entry in a document intending that it should appear in evidence

¹ Jibhai Vaja, (1874) 11 B. H. C. 11.

² P. v. ... (1874) 22 Mad. 223.

³ P. v. ... 150.

⁴ P. v. ... 702.

⁵ P. v. ... 702.

⁶ P. v. ... 1907.

⁷ P. v. ... 1907.

⁸ P. v. ... 1907.

⁹ P. v. ... 1907.

¹⁰ P. v. ... 1907.

¹¹ P. v. ... 1907.

¹² P. v. ... 1907.

¹³ P. v. ... 1907.

¹⁴ Mohesh Chandra Chaudhuri, (1915) 28 C. L. J. 213.

¹⁵ Ramajirav Jivajirav, (1875) 12 B.H.C. 1.

¹⁶ Babu Ram, (1911) 8 A.L.J.R. 674; Phule,

(1912) 11 A. L. J. R. 15.

¹⁷ Gauri Shankar, (1883) 6 All. 42; Zakir

Hussain, (1893) 21 All. 159; Chandra Kumar

Misrar, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 46; Dabee Mahlo,

(1882) 10 C. L. R. 433; Keilayum Putter, (1870)

5 M. H. C. 373.

¹⁸ Mahammad Kazem Ali v. Joraddi Naskor,

(1910) 46 Cal. 936. See also Baroda Kanta

Sarkar, (1915) 18 Cr. L. J. 620.

¹⁹ Juggun Lall, (1880) 7 C. L. R. 356.

and mislead the Judge or Magistrate and the mere fact that the entry was not legally admissible in evidence could not affect his guilt.¹

Cases.—Where a police-officer, who had suppressed a document, made a false entry in his diary . . . documents, intending that su . . . he had so forwarded the do . . . be admissible evidence and as the entry would not be admissible in his behalf, though contrary to his intention, he was not liable.² Where a police-officer made a false entry in the special diary relating to a case which was being investigated by him, but the document in which the alleged false entry was made was not one which was admissible in evidence, it was held that he was not guilty under this section.³ Similarly, where a person made a false statement in the recital of title to property in a document when such statement was not admissible in evidence against the person or persons against whose interest such statement was made, it was held that he was not guilty.⁴

On an indictment for perjury committed on the hearing of a charge of assault by a husband on his wife, an assignment of perjury in a statement by the prisoner, as a witness for the husband, that he had seen the wife committing adultery (of which he had told the husband), was held bad for immateriality as the supported statement would not be legally relevant to the charge of assault as affording no ground of legal justification.⁵

3. 'That such circumstance . . . may cause any person who, in such proceeding is to form an opinion . . . to entertain an erroneous opinion.'—The false evidence must lead to the formation of an erroneous opinion. If a document does not lead to the forming of an erroneous opinion touching a particular point but leads rather to the forming of a correct opinion, then this offence is not committed.⁶

4. 'Touching any material point.'—False evidence under this section should be material to the case in which it is given though not so under s. 191.⁷ The word 'material' means of such a nature as to affect in any way, directly or indirectly, the probability of anything to be determined by the proceeding, or the credit of any witness, and a fact may be material although evidence of its existence was improperly admitted.⁸ Hawkins⁹ says that he "cannot find this matter anywhere thoroughly settled or debated, and therefore shall leave it to every man's own judgment, which, from the consideration of the circumstances of each particular case, may generally, without any great difficulty, discern whether the matter in which perjury is assigned, were wholly impertinent, idle, and insignificant, or not, which seems to be the best rule for determining whether it be punishable as perjury or not."

All false statements wilfully and corruptly made by a witness as to matters which affect his credit are material, and he is liable to be convicted of perjury in respect of such statements.¹⁰ Every question on cross-examination of a witness which goes to his credit is material.¹¹ Again, "if a witness is allowed to give evidence, though it may afterwards turn out that his testimony ought not to have been admitted, perjury may nevertheless be assigned upon his answer . . . It does not lie in the witness's mouth to say that this evidence was immaterial, especially

¹ Amolak Ram, (1917) P. W. R. (Cr.) No.

² Badri Prasad, (1917) 40 All. 35.

³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

²⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

³⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁴⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁵⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁶⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁷⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁸⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

⁹⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁰⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹¹⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹²⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹³⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁴⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵¹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵² 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵³ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁴ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁵ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁶ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁷ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁸ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁵⁹ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

¹⁶⁰ 1917 P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 1212.

when, if believed, it might most seriously have injured the party against whom it was given.¹

The evidence fabricated must be material. Perjury The accused had sworn that, when a plea of guilty to his will. It was held that, as such statements affected the accused's credit as a witness, they were material, and he was rightly convicted of perjury.² Upon the trial of one S for robbery, the accused, in support of an alibi, swore, first, that S was in a certain house at the time of the robbery; secondly, that S had lived in that house for the last two years; and, thirdly, that he had never been absent from it more than two or three nights together during that time. In fact S had been confined in prison during one out of those two years. It was held that the second and third allegations were material as tending to render more credible the truth of the first, and that the prisoner was rightly convicted of perjury assigned upon them.³ On the trial of A for perjury, in an affidavit made by him, the signature to the affidavit was proved to be in A's handwriting, but there was no evidence that A was the person who swore to the truth of the affidavit. The defendant was then called as a witness, and swore that the affidavit was used before the taxing master when A was present, and that it was then publicly said that it was A's affidavit. The defendant was then indicted for perjury committed on A's trial, and the indictment alleged that it was a material question on such trial whether A was so present before the taxing master; and whether the affidavit was then used in A's presence, and whether it was then stated publicly that the affidavit was A's. It was held that the above questions were material on the trial of A.⁴ The prisoner was sued for debt under the name of 'Burnard Edward Mullany.' The Judge asked the prisoner what his name was. The prisoner replied 'Edward.' To questions by the plaintiff's attorney the prisoner denied that his name was 'Burnard,' and said that his name was 'Edward' only. The Judge struck out the cause. The prisoner was indicted for perjury; and it was proved that his real name was 'Burnard,' but that he had latterly been known by the name of 'Burnard Edward.' It was held that the Judge having acted upon them, these statements were sufficiently material to sustain a conviction for perjury.⁵ In an action by an executrix, for goods sold, she falsely swore on cross-examination, that she had never been tried at the Old Bailey and had never been in custody at the Thames Police Station. It was held, on the trial of an indictment for perjury, that this evidence was material.⁶

No fabrication if no erroneous opinion could be formed touching any point material to the result of a proceeding.—Where a person produced, as evidence in a suit, a registered deed of sale in which the property sold was wrongly numbered, and which was corrected by himself subsequent to registration⁷; where a Takul presented a valalutnamah falsely purporting to have been executed before an officer and to bear his signature⁸; where there was a dispute as to the ownership of articles in a box in the accused's house and he made a hole in the wall of the house, and removed the articles he claimed, his object being to make it appear that there had been a theft, but he did not charge anyone with having committed the theft⁹; where a pollicari, knowing that certain documents were forged made entries in his papers corresponding to and based on those documents¹⁰; and where

¹ Per Cockburn, C. J., in Gibbons, (1862) 31 L. J. (M. C.) 94, 102; Phillips, (1851) 21 L. J. (M. C.) N. 8, 18.

² Baker, (1895) 1 Q. B. 787.

³ Tyson, (1867) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 107.

⁴ Allop, (1869) 11 Cox 264. See Charles Noyce, (1868) 11 Cox 12.

⁵ Mullany, (1865) 34 L. J. (M. C.) 111.

⁶ Lacey, (1850) 3 C. & K. 26.

⁷ Fairbairn, (1882) 5 All. 217.

⁸ Kelaram Putter, (1870) 5 M. H. C. 372.

⁹ Thornham, (1882) 10 C. L. R. 187.

¹⁰ Ramchand, (1850) P. R. No. 26 of 1850.

a labuliat was made and signed by the lessees alone with the intention of causing it to be believed that an agreement to let, therein recited, had been made by the agent of the land-owner and with her assent,¹ it was held that there was no fabrication. Certain cattle were sold in a market on the 21st of March 1917. A clerk, whose duty it was to register sales of cattle held at that market and give receipts to the purchaser, gave a receipt on the 27th March, most probably, and dated it the 27th March, but subsequently altered the date to the 21st, the actual date of sale. It was held that there was no case of fabricating false evidence, for the alteration of the date was not intended to lead any one to form an erroneous opinion touching the date of sale, but the contrary.²

English cases.—Where a witness being asked, whether such a sum of money between the parties, answered that it was, one of them by agreement, it was held that he could not be punished for perjury.³ Where a witness being asked by a Judge and that the manner of bringing them was only a circumstance.⁴ Where a witness swore that a person drew his dagger and wounded J, whereas in truth he beat him with a staff, it was held he was not guilty of perjury because the beating only was material.⁵ On the trial of one B, charged with garrote robbery on W, the prisoner cross-examined W, as to whether he had not met him the evening before the robbery along with one M, and proposed to them to commit a burglary. The prosecutor denying this, the prisoner called M as his witness, who swore that he did meet the prosecutor along with the prisoner the night before the burglary, and that the prosecutor did propose to them to commit a burglary. On the trial of M for perjury, it was held that the evidence was not material.⁶

Non-liability of the accused for fabricating false evidence.—The authors of the Code say: "We do not propose to punish him for fabricating evidence with the view of escaping punishment, unless he also contemplated some injury to others as likely to be produced by the evidence so fabricated. . . If A, after having stabbed Z, in order to escape detection, disposes of Z's body in such a manner as is likely to lead a jury to think the death accidental, we do not propose to punish A as the fabricator of false evidence."⁷

Statutory application.—Judicial proceedings.—Proceedings held under certain Acts of Legislature have been enacted to be "judicial proceedings" within the meaning of this section.⁸

And, similarly, persons making false statements, in the course of enquiries conducted under certain Acts of Legislature are treated as having given false evidence within the meaning of this section.⁹

¹ Jowahir Singh, (1892) P. R. No. 16 of 1894.

² Badri Prasad, (1917) 40 All. 35.

³ 1 Hawk. P. C., Perjury, c. 27, s. 8, p. 433, 2 Roll. 42, Laiston's case.

⁴ 2 Roll. 41, 1 Hawk. P. C., c. 27, s. 8.

⁵ 1 Hawk. P. C., Perjury, c. 27, s. 8, pp. 433, 434.

⁶ Murray, (1858) 1 F. & F. 80.

⁷ Note G, p. 131.

⁸ The Coroners' Act (IV of 1871), s. 8; the Broach and Kaira Encumbered Estates Act (XXI of 1881), s. 34; the Sindh Encumbered Estates Act (XX of 1896) s. 36; the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1870), s. 196; the Bombay Salt Act (Bom.

Act II of 1899), s. 53, the Oudh Talukdars Relief Act (XXIV of 1870), s. 16; the Bundelkhand Encumbered Estates Act (U. P. Act I of 1903), s. 33; the Punjab Minor Canals Act (Punjab Act III of 1903), s. 62; the Indian Income-tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 37.

⁹ The Government Savings Banks Act (V of 1873), s. 7, the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876), s. 2; the Broach and Kaira Encumbered Estates Act (XXI of 1881), s. 6; the Indian Christian Marriage Amendment Act (II of 1891), s. 5; the Sindh Encumbered Estates Act (XX of 1896), s. 6; the Bundelkhand Encumbered Estates Act (U. P. Act I of 1903), s. 8.

193. Whoever intentionally¹ gives false evidence in any stage of a judicial proceeding,² or fabricates false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of a judicial proceeding,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and whoever intentionally gives or fabricates false evidence in any other case,⁴ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation 1.—A trial before a Court-martial is a judicial proceeding.

Explanation 2.—An investigation directed by law preliminary to a proceeding before a Court of Justice, is a stage of a judicial proceeding, though that investigation may not take place before a Court of Justice.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, in an enquiry before a Magistrate for the purpose of ascertaining whether Z ought to be committed for trial, makes on oath a statement which he knows to be false. As this enquiry is a stage of a judicial proceeding, A has given false evidence.

Explanation 3.—An investigation directed by a Court of Justice according to law, and conducted under the authority of a Court of Justice, is a stage of a judicial proceeding, though that investigation may not take place before a Court of Justice.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, in an enquiry before an officer deputed by a Court of Justice to ascertain on the spot the boundaries of land, makes on oath a statement which he knows to be false. As this enquiry is a stage of a judicial proceeding, A has given false evidence.

COMMENT.

This section specifies the punishment which should be inflicted for offences described in ss. 191 and 192. If the offences are committed in any stage of a judicial proceeding they are more severely punishable than when they are committed in a non-judicial proceeding.

1. 'Intentionally.'—Intention is the essential ingredient in the constitution of this offence.¹ Proof of corrupt intention is not necessary. It is enough to prove intention, and if the statement was false, and known or believed by the accused to be false, it may be presumed that in making that statement he intentionally gave false evidence.² False evidence is intentionally given if the person making the statement makes it advisedly, knowing it to be false, and with the intention of deceiving the Court and of leading it to be supposed that that which he states is true.³ The Court may infer the corrupt intention from surrounding circumstances.⁴ If, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, it appears

¹ Munni Buxh, (1898) 3 C. W. N. 81; Azibulla Sarcar v. Uday Sontkal, (1908) 13 C. W. N. 422; Rattan Singh, (1911) P. L. R. No. 72 of 1911, P.W.R. (Cr.) No. 14 of 1911.

² Amere Ali Khan, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 133; Nga Yon, (1918) 3 U. B. R. 84.

³ Dadu Ram, (1904) 26 All. 502.

⁴ Rhuttan Ram, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 63.

that the falsehood was not wilful, but rather proceeded from inadvertence or a mistake as to the true nature of the question, the evidence could not be considered to be false evidence intentionally given. An inconsistent statement made during cross-examination is not perjury if it is the result of confusion or mistake.

A man cannot be convicted of perjury for having acted rashly, or for having failed to make reasonable inquiry with regard to the facts alleged by him to be true.¹

2. 'Gives false evidence in any stage of a judicial proceeding.'—By 'any stage of judicial proceeding' is meant any step taken by the Court in the course of administration of justice in connection with a case pending.²

An inquiry under s. 11 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation is not a 'judicial proceeding' within the meaning of this section.³ This section does not apply to a false deposition given before a Court of a Native State.⁴

3. 'Fabricates false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of a judicial proceeding.'—The word 'fabrication' refers to the fabrication of false evidence; and if the evidence fabricated is intended to be used in a judicial proceeding, the offence is committed as soon as the fabrication is complete; it is immaterial that the judicial proceeding has not yet been commenced.⁵

It is not essential to show that any actual use has been made of the evidence fabricated. The mere fabrication is punishable under this section: the use of the fabricated article is punishable under s. 196.

The misreading of a document for the information of the Magistrate by a witness does not amount to fabricating false evidence.⁶

4. 'Intentionally gives or fabricates false evidence in any other case.'—A conviction may be had under this section, even if the evidence be given in matters not judicial, but it must be proved that the false statement was made under the sanction of law.⁷

Explanation 2.—A Court holding a preliminary inquiry under s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a stage of a judicial proceeding under this explanation, and a person giving false evidence in the course of it commits an offence under this section.⁸

The Bench case, laid down that a statement of police investigation under s. 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code is a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of this explanation.⁹

Amendment.—The words "or before a Military Court of Request" after "Court-Martial" were repealed by Act XIII of 1889.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the following points for giving 'false evidence'.—

(1) That the accused was legally bound to state the truth, either by an oath or by an express provision of law,¹⁰ or

That the accused made the declaration in question

(2) That he made such statement or declaration whilst so bound.¹¹

(3) That such statement, or declaration, was made in a stage of judicial proceeding.¹²

(4) That the statement or declaration is false.

¹ Muhammad Ishaq, (1914) 36 All. 362.

² Abdullah Khan, (1909) 37 Cal. 52.

³ Purshottam Ishwar Amin, (1920) 23 Bom. L. R. 1, F.B.

⁴ Munwar Khan, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 24.

P. (A

(5) That the accused when making such statement or declaration, (a) knew it to be false, or (b) believed it to be false, or (c) did not believe it to be true.¹

(6) That he made such false statement intentionally.

If the case falls under the second part of the section it is not necessary to prove (3).

Prove the following points for 'fabricating false evidence':—

(1) That the accused (a) caused a certain circumstance to exist, or (b) made the false entry, or (c) made the document to contain a false statement.

(2) That he did as in (1) intending that such circumstances, entry, or statement should appear in evidence (a) in a judicial proceeding, or (b) in a proceeding taken by law, before a public servant, or (c) in a proceeding before an arbitrator.

There must be a distinct finding to this effect. Where the accused by falsely representing to the Marriage Registrar that a certain marriage had been solemnized, induced the Registrar to make a false entry of the registration of the marriage, it was held that he could not be convicted of the offence of fabricating false evidence under this section in the absence of a finding that the intention of the accused was that the false entry in the marriage register might appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding or some other proceeding of a like nature as contemplated by s. 192.²

In the absence of a finding that the intention of the accused was that the false entry in the marriage register might appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding or some other proceeding of a like nature no conviction can be made.³

(3) That the person conducting the judicial or other proceeding had to form an opinion upon the evidence in which such false evidence appeared.⁴

(4) That the accused intended that person to entertain an erroneous opinion upon the evidence.

(5) That such erroneous opinion touched a point material to the result of such proceeding.⁵ It should be distinctly shown whether the evidence on which perjury is assigned is material in respect of matters in issue in the cause.⁶

If the case fall under the second part of the section it is not necessary to prove (a) in (2).

Nature of proof.—"The true rule (in a case of giving false evidence) is that no man can be convicted of giving false evidence except on proof of facts which, if proved as true show not merely that it is incorrect

made on oath

s, it seems to conviction can stand; because, assuming all true, it is possible that no crime was committed."

According to the Indian Evidence Act no particular number of witnesses is required to prove any fact, though perjury according to English law must be proved by two witnesses, or by one witness, if the statement is contained in a document or by one witness, if the statement is made orally. The provisions peculiar to the Indian law do not seem to be founded on substantial justice may well be administered the criminal law in India.⁷

¹ Maharaj Misser, (1871) 7 Beng. L. R. App. 66, 16 W. R. (Cr.) 47; Amere Ali Khan, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 133; Bankatram Lachiram, (1904) 8 Bom. L. R. 379; Prakash Chandra Sarkar, (1905) 2 C. L. J. 101.

² Mohamed Siddiq, (1907) 11 C. W. N. 911.

³ Ganeshi, (1905) 25 A. W. N. 52.

⁴ Ganga Sahai, (1902) 23 A. W. N. 68.

⁵ Ball, (1854) 6 Cox 360.

⁶ Mohamed Siddiq, sup.

⁷ Per Norman, J., in Ahmed Ally, (1869)

11 W. R. (Cr.) 25, 27; Padarath Singh v. Ratan Singh, (1919) 5 P. L. J. 23; Gupta, (1923) 1 Rang. 290. The Judicial Commissioner of Oudh has held that to justify a conviction for perjury it is not necessary to prove that the statement is impossible, it is sufficient to prove it is incredible: Mohammad Ismail

Bom. L. R.

The statement which the accused is charged with having made before a Magistrate should be clearly proved to have been made by him.¹ No evidence which does not profess to give the exact words used by the accused can alone be a safe foundation for a conviction.² But it is sufficient if a witness states from recollection the evidence the defendant gave, though he did not take it down in writing, and cannot say with certainty that it was all the evidence the defendant gave, if he can say with certainty that it was all he gave on that point, and that he said nothing to qualify it.³

The prosecution should make out that there was on the day stated in the charge a judicial proceeding pending, and that the prisoner in the course of that proceeding made the statement alleged to be false.⁴

Proceedings in a trial.—The proceedings in a criminal trial, when necessary to be proved, should be proved by their production.⁵

The record of proceedings in the Small Cause Court is not admissible in evidence unless authenticated by the signature of the presiding Judge.⁶

Deposition.—When a person is charged with giving false evidence upon a deposition, it is necessary to prove that he is the person who made the statement in the proceeding, (e.g., on the commission of the offence) and that he gave it on oath or affirmation, and that the memorandum signed by the Magistrate and the Magistrate's signature thereto is proved, then the deposition is proof of what the person charged with perjury stated, and he is concluded by it.⁷ It is always necessary to prove the deposition alleged to contain the false statement.⁸ If the deposition on which the prosecution is based is not properly taken the conviction cannot be sustained, e.g., if it is not read over and interpreted to the witness in accordance with the provisions of O. XVIII, r 5, of the Civil Procedure Code before it is signed by him⁹; or if it is not read over to him in the presence of the accused or his pleader in accordance with the provisions of s 360 of the Criminal Procedure Code,¹⁰ though it is read over by himself.¹¹ There can be no conviction under this section based on a false statement which is not made and recorded with all due formalities in the manner required by law.¹² The deposition

Act.¹³

Where the false evidence is alleged to have been given in a deposition in a case in which the law requires the evidence to be taken down in writing, a certified copy of the deposition must be placed on the record. The certified copy should also show on the face of it that it is a copy of part of the record in a specified proceeding. The mere production of a certified copy is not sufficient to show that the accused is the person who made the statement. There must be oral evidence of some nor Vakils were present is not a valid deposition has been commented on in Bogra, (1910) 34 Mad. 141, where it is held that where a witness admits that the deposition was not 730n.

(1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. L.) 16.

Mad. 308, that the deposition read over by a clerk at a place where neither the Judge nor Vakils were present is not a valid deposition one, who heard the deposition given, that the accused is the person whose evidence is therein recorded.¹

The record of a previous deposition given by the accused is relevant and necessary evidence. Such record is not inadmissible under s. 145 of the Evidence Act.²

The failure of a civil Court to make a memorandum of the evidence of the accused when examined before it does not vitiate the deposition, if the evidence itself was duly recorded in the language in which it was delivered in such Court.³

Powers of appellate Court.—"It is an unusual and not... a proper procedure for an Appellate Court which did not hear the evidence to order a prosecution for perjury in the lower Court on materials which were not before that Court and which the witness had no opportunity of explaining while in the box."⁴

Contradictory statements.—Where a person makes two contradictory statements, he may now be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.⁵ Thus the confusion created by the vast array of conflicting rulings of the different High Courts is done away with.

A statement made by an approver, to whom a pardon has been tendered not in the course of any 'inquiry' under the Criminal Procedure Code, cannot form the basis of an alternative charge of an offence punishable under this section.⁶

If one of the statements is made before a Magistrate not having authority to carry on preliminary inquiry in the case and the other before a Magistrate having jurisdiction, there will not be a sufficient basis for an alternative charge of giving false evidence.⁷ But where a witness had made one statement on oath before a Third Class Magistrate under s. 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and again another and totally inconsistent statement at the trial of the case before a First Class Magistrate, it was held that he could be convicted under the second—if not under the first—paragraph of this section.⁸ A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that although a statement which is made in the course of a police investigation under s. 164, Criminal Procedure Code, is not evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding but comes within the words "evidence in any other case."

framed, under s. 236 of the Criminal Procedure Code.⁹ Where an accused person is examined by a Magistrate for the purpose of obtaining information on which proceedings can be taken, the statement made by him is not evidence in the trial, though he is not a witness. If the accused be said at the trial to have given evidence, though he was examined on a preliminary inquiry, the statement given by him is evidence, though he was not a witness. If the statement given by him was bad and that a conviction and sentence based on it is contrary to another statement made by the accused when examined as a witness at the trial, without any proof or finding that the second statement was false, could not be maintained.¹⁰ It is not necessary

¹ Mi Shue Ke, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 208.

² Gannoo Mahto, (1908) 9 C. L. J. 378.

³ Beharee Lall Bose, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 60.

⁴ Per Holmwood, J., in Loke Nath Saki, (1906) 10 C. W. N. 1091, 1093.

⁵ Vide ill. (b) to s. 236, Criminal Procedure Code.

⁶ Moilal Hiralal, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R. 884, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 96.

⁷ Bharna Ningappa, (1886) 11 Bom. 702. r. B. Shetappa Satapa Mudanavar, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 753.

⁸ Khem, (1899) 22 All. 115; Tasadduk

Husain, (1908) 28 A. W. N. 73. See Kadir Meerah, (1909) 5 M. L. T. 356, in which the statement made by the accused before a police-officer making investigation under s. 174, Criminal Procedure Code, was held to be evidence. Magistrate was not invalid.

⁹ Purshottam Jahar, Amin, (1920) 23 Bom. L. R. 1, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 1, r. B. overruling; Muggappa, (1893) 18 Bom. 377, r. B. Patra; (1925) O. W. N. 637.

¹⁰ Hari Charan Singh, (1900) 27 Cal. 453.

that the contradictory statements must have been made at different inquiries or trials to render a person liable to conviction.¹ The accused deposed before a Magistrate that he had seen P and others gambling in a certain place. The deposition was read over to the accused and acknowledged by him to be correct. In his cross-examination some days after he deposed that he did not know P and had never seen him gambling. He was charged and convicted under this section of having intentionally given false evidence in that he made two contradictory statements one of which he either knew or believed to be false or did not believe to be true. On the question being raised, on revision, whether the conviction was legal or illegal, by reason of the fact that the contradictory statements were made before the same Magistrate and in the course of one and the same trial, it was held by two judges that the conviction was legal.² The fact of a witness having made contradictory statements before the committing Magistrate and in Court would not alone justify any step to prosecute him for perjury. Under exceptional circumstances such step may be taken.³

With respect to the kind or amount of confirmatory proof required, it must be considered in each case whether the particular evidence offered is sufficient conviction can be had upon the ground that one of them is necessarily false.⁵ An opportunity should always be given to the accused to explain what he meant by two apparently contradictory statements.⁶

It is necessary to prove that both the contradictory statements were such that a charge of perjury might have been made in regard to either of them, or in the alternative.⁷

although the Court "may believe that on the one or the other occasion the prisoner swore what was not true, it is not a necessary consequence that he committed perjury; for there are cases in which a person might very honestly and conscientiously swear to a particular fact from the best of his recollection and belief, and from other circumstances at a subsequent time be convinced that he was wrong and swear to the reverse without meaning to swear falsely either time."⁸ "The Court dealing with them (contradictory statements) should not convict unless fully satisfied that the statements are from every point of view irreconcilable, and if the contradiction consists in two statements opposed to each other as to matters of inference or opinion on which a man may take one view at one time and a contrary view at another, there can be no perjury, unless he has on oath stated facts on which his first statement was based and then denied these facts on oath on a subsequent occasion."⁹ Ordinarily it would be inadvisable to launch a prosecution for perjury under such circumstances as it compels a witness to adhere to his original lie under penalty of a prosecution if he tells the truth.¹⁰

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Presidency Magistrate, or first class Magistrate.

¹ Palani Palagan, (1902) 26 Mad. 55, Bhaahyam Ayyangar, J., dissentiente. The opinion of Bhaahyam Ayyangar, J., is followed in Lachmi Narain, (1913) 16 O. C. 81. See Habibullah, (1884) 10 Cal. 937.

² Palani Palagan, sup.

³ See Tripura Sankar Sarkar, (1910) 14 C. W.N. 787.

2 P. L. W. 176; Barkat Ram, (1911) P. L. R. No. 158 of 1911, P. W. R. No. 38 of 1911.

⁶ Fazal Din, (1921) 3 L. L. J. 442.

⁷ Hari Charan Singh, (1900) 27 Cal. 455, Asa Nand, (1904) 5 P. L. R. 261.

⁸ Per Jenkins, C. J., in Bankatram Lachinram, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 379, 397, 28 Bom. 533.

⁹ Per Chandavarkar, J., in ibid., p. 382.

¹⁰ Dad, (1901) P. R. No. 21 of 1901.

the case.¹ Ordinarily it is inadvisable to launch a prosecution for perjury under such circumstances as will compel a witness to adhere to his original lie under penalty of a prosecution if he tells the truth.² Where a witness makes a statement which is false and at once admits this, and states what is the real truth, he should not be prosecuted for giving false evidence.³

No Court should entertain an application to prosecute made by persons who are not parties to the suit out of which the proceedings for giving false evidence arise.⁴ A complaint should only be made after careful consideration, and having in view the ends of justice and not in order to assist the private ends of individuals. It is desirable in most cases that the Court should have all the facts before it.⁵

A prosecution for perjury should be instituted as soon as possible. An officer other than he who tried the case in which perjury was committed does not act without jurisdiction, if he files a complaint to prosecute, but it is very much more satisfactory that the complaint should be made by the very judge in whose Court an offence has actually taken place.⁶

A complaint for an offence under this section, must specify the false evidence the accused is charged with. The exact words upon which the prosecution is based, and the exact offences which the Magistrate is to investigate should be pointed out.⁷ The particular words which constitute perjury should be specified,⁸ so that the accused person should not be taken by surprise.⁹ The accused should be in a position to know what statements alleged to be false are.¹⁰

Although notice is not invariably necessary, the grant of an order sanctioning prosecution is a judicial act, and there may be circumstances in which a proper discretion cannot be said to have been exercised unless the persons sought to be prosecuted have been given an opportunity to be heard.¹¹ Before taking action against a person for fabrication of false evidence, it is necessary that he should be given an opportunity to substantiate his allegations.¹² Before filing a complaint against a party he must be previously heard and a judgment formed upon legal evidence. In cases in which upon a report from the Police, the complainant form his judgment. In cases, ho complainant and hears the evidence and acquits or discharges the accused, no notice to the complainant is necessary.¹³ When a civil Court takes action under s. 476 to prosecute a person for perjury such Court is bound to set forth in its order the specific assignments of perjury alleged against the accused. Failure to do so is a material irregularity within the meaning of s. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.¹⁴

Accused must have full notice of the case against him.¹⁵ Complaint to prosecute should not be lightly launched in cases where the Court would have to determine the question by merely weighing the evidence on both sides.¹⁶ The

¹ Cherani Lal v. Ram Lal, (1912) 9 A. L. J. R. 538.

² See Dad, (1901) P. R. No. 21 of 1901; See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

(Cr.) 32, Gobardhone Chowkidar v. Habibullah, (1897) 3 C. W. N. 35; Seshayya v. Subbarayudi, (1925) M. W. N. 470.

³ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

⁴ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

⁵ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

⁶ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

⁷ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

⁸ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

⁹ See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

See Chandrasekhar v. P. R. No. 2 of 1900.

(1896) 18 All. 358.

¹¹ Seshayya v. Subbarayudi, sup.

¹² See Sheik Beari, (1887) 10 Mad. 232.

¹³ See Kashi Shukul, (1916) 39 All. 605A.

¹⁴ See Rajhal Chandra Laha, (1909) 36 Cal. 604, 9 C. L. J. 690.

¹⁵ See Padarath Singh v. Ratan Singh, (1919) 5 P. L. J. 23.

prosecution for perjury is an exceptional measure and sanction ought not to be granted when material has only been provided by an unnecessary examination or oath. Magistrates should not be encouraged to make unnecessary examinations on oath in order to obtain material for a prosecution for perjury in case the approver should subsequently refile from his statement.¹

A Court filing a complaint in respect of contradictory statements must be competent to file a complaint in respect of each of the statements.² When contradictory statements, forming the basis of an alternative charge of giving false evidence, are made before different Courts, the complaint of each of those Courts is necessary before the Court can take cognizance of the charge of giving false evidence.³

A Court should not file a complaint when the case in which perjury is committed has gone to a higher tribunal.⁴

Notice.—Where a Judge issues a notice to the accused to show cause why his prosecution under this section should not be launched, he must allow sufficient time for the notice to be served upon the accused and should not file a complaint before the notice has been served.⁵

Calcutta Rule.—When, during the investigation of a complaint under Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code, it may appear to the Magistrate that a witness is giving false evidence, so that criminal proceedings against such witness are likely to be necessary, the Magistrate will exercise a sound discretion in taking down, under s. 359, at least the evidence of this particular witness at length in the manner prescribed in ss. 356, 357 and 360.⁶

The Punjab Rules.—The attention of all Magistrates is called to the law regarding 'giving or fabricating false evidence' contained in ss. 191 to 196 of the Indian Penal Code.

2. It may add too much to the already heavy work of Magistrates to prosecute every person who is guilty of these offences, but it is prejudicial to the interests of justice to allow any gross case to pass unnoticed. It is the duty, therefore, of every judicial officer to bring every case which happens in his Court to the notice of the Magistrate of the District. The Magistrate of the District will decide whether a prosecution should be instituted.

3. It should be remembered that the provisions of s. 487 of Act V of 1891 make it clear that a Court before which the offence of giving false evidence has been committed is precluded from trying the offence itself.

4. Attention is also called to s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which so far protects witnesses that no prosecutions are to be instituted in the Criminal Courts except with the sanction of the Court before or against which the offence was committed, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate. The offence is one against public justice, and the prosecution is not left to the discretion of individuals. Such sanctions remain in force for a period of only six months, but the Chief Court has power, on good cause being shown, to extend the time.

5. Sub-section 7 of s. 195, clearly defines, for purposes of this section, to what Court any Court is subordinate. Thus, a District Magistrate, (or any other Collector of whatever grade is subordinate to the Collector.

¹ Nga Bo Gyn. (1925) 3 Rang. 224.

² See Redds Rams Redds, (1914) 27 M. L. J. 586.

³ See Purshottam Ishvar Amin, (1920) 23 Bom. L. R. 1, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 1, r.r.

⁴ Birendra Nath Das Gupta, (1914) 18 C. W. N. 1342.

⁵ See Umarbhavi, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 404, Cr. R. No. 65 of 1888.

⁶ C. H. C. R. & O., Ch. I, Rule 43, p. 16.

6. It has been noticed that Magistrates sometimes sanction the prosecution of witnesses for perjury in cases committed to the Court of Session; such action is improper and is likely to prejudice either the prosecution or the accused—generally the hands of any steps

The above-mentioned rules will have to be amended in consonance with the amended s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

When proceedings to be instituted.—Proceedings under s. 476, Criminal Procedure Code, should not be taken against a person for giving false evidence or fabricating a false document under this section until the case in which the said evidence was given or such document was used, has been finally decided.²

Charge.—In framing a charge for giving false evidence, the charge should be precise. The charge should show the particular matter in respect of which the accused is put upon his trial; and only so much of the prisoner's statements ought to be set out as is necessary in order to show the particular false statements relied on by the prosecution.³ It should contain a distinct assertion with regard to each statement intended to be characterised as perjury.⁴ It should specially state that the accused is charged with having uttered, and in fact used by the accused the following words:⁵

“I, the accused, do hereby give evidence to put the prosecution on such a charge could be properly had only on proof that the accused person had made each and every statement contained in the document.”⁷

The charge should specify not only the judicial proceeding in the course of which the statement was made, but the particular statement and the occasion when the offence is committed is to give notice not only to the accused but to the jury.

and the occasion when the offence is committed is to give notice not only to the accused but to the jury.

on different occasions, each occasion should form the subject of a separate charge in the charge.¹¹

Central Provinces Circular.—In prosecutions for giving false evidence, under ss. 193, 194 and 195 of the Indian Penal Code, the particular statements alleged to be false must invariably be set out in the charge, to enable the accused to understand fully the offence with which he stands charged.¹²

Form.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused person) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, in the course of the trial of—, before—, stated in evidence that (mention here the false statement) which statement you either knew or believed to be false, or did not believe to be true, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 193 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

¹ P. C. C. R. & O Vol. II, No. 27, p. 187.

² Gendun Singh, (1905) 3 C. L. J. 302.

³ Soonder Mohoorce, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.)

25.

⁴ Kalichurn Lahoree, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.)

14.

⁵ Doulat Moonashee, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.)

95.

⁶ Moharaj Misser, (1871) 10 W. R. (Cr.) 47.

⁷ Boodhun Akir, (1872) 17 W. R. (Cr.) 32;

Mungul Dass, (1875) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 28; Mi Shwe Ke, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 268.

⁸ Isab Mandal, (1900) 28 Cal. 348.

⁹ Fakir Biswas, (1868) 1 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 13.

¹⁰ Moharaj Misser, sup.

¹¹ Ram Dhari Singh, (1917) 4 P. L. W. 44.

¹² Feojdar Roy, (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr.) 14.

¹³ C. P. Cr. C. No. 15 (4), p. 28.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.¹

Punishment.—A false statement by a witness, as to his position or character ought not to be punished so severely as a false charge on a false claim.²

A deliberate mis-statement made in a Court of Justice, whether it tends to endanger the life and property of others, or to defeat and impede the progress of justice, is not an offence which should be lightly passed over. But for a simple mis-statement from which no such inferences can be drawn, a comparatively light sentence will suffice, particularly where the prisoner pleads guilty and throws himself at the mercy of the Court.³

Although a person under examination as a witness is bound by his affirmation to tell the truth, if he is examined on a point on which he is likely to criminate himself, his position should be explained to him by the Magistrate, as otherwise false punishment.⁴

I under ss. 193, 194, 195, ... addition to fine to be whipped, or to imprisonment not exceeding seven years, or to whipping and imprisonment not exceeding five years, or to transportation for not more than seven years.

Attempt.—The term of imprisonment for attempting to fabricate false evidence for the purpose of being used in a stage of judicial proceeding cannot extend beyond one-half of seven years⁵

194. Whoever gives or fabricates false evidence, intending

Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of capital offence.

thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely¹ that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence² which is capital by the law of British India or England,³ shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine;

and if an innocent person be convicted and executed in consequence of such false evidence, the person who gives such false evidence shall be punished either with death or the punishment herein before described.

If innocent person be thereby convicted and executed.

COMMENT.

This is an aggravated form of the offence of giving or fabricating false evidence made punishable by s. 193.

To constitute an offence under this section the accused must give false evidence intending thereby, that is, by giving such false evidence, to cause or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby, that is, by giving such false evidence, cause some person to be convicted of a capital offence. It is not necessary under this section ¹ Criminal Procedure Code, Sch. V, xxviii (5).

² Revak Goallah, (1366) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 95;

Govind Sahoo, (1864) W. R. (Gap. No.) Cr. 14.

³ Gurjoon Aheer, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 37 (55)

⁴ Jaddoonath Dutt, (1878) 2 C. L. R. 181.

⁵ III of 1901, ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

⁶ Soodur Putnaick, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 59.

Court can infer that it was the intention of the accused to stick to the false evidence right up to the trial of the case.¹ But the Bombay High Court has held that as the words "in any stage of judicial proceeding" occurring in s. 193 are not repeated in this section, the latter, therefore, refers only to the final stage, that is, the trial of the case.² Where an accused had, in a preliminary inquiry before a Magistrate, made a deposition in which he falsely stated that he had seen the persons charged before the Magistrate in the act of committing a murder, it was held that this section was inapplicable, as the natural consequence of such false evidence would be nothing graver than a committal of the persons charged to the Court of Session, and not necessarily a conviction, and it must be presumed that the accused intended the natural, that is, the ordinary consequences.³

1. 'Intending thereby to cause or knowing it to be likely, etc.'—When the proceeding in which evidence is given is one in which a conviction is not possible, it is difficult to affirm that the accused had such intention or knowledge as is necessary under this section. A person giving false evidence before a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry into a charge of murder does not commit the offence under this section. He may be guilty under s. 193.⁴ The offence of a person accusing another falsely of murder to a police-officer in an enquiry under s. 174 of the Criminal Procedure Code would not fall under this section, the reason being that it is difficult to affirm the existence of an intention to cause, or of knowledge that the false evidence is likely to cause, a person to be convicted of a capital offence, when the proceeding in which the evidence is given is one in which such a conviction is not legally possible.⁵

Where a witness stated on oath before the Sessions Court, during the trial of a prisoner for murder, that another had committed the murder, whereas, before the Magistrate he had stated, as was the fact, that the prisoner had committed it, it was held that he was guilty under s. 193 and not under this section, as he did not know that he would cause a conviction for murder.⁶

2. 'Offence' means a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

3. 'Capital by the law of British India or England.'—The following offences are punishable with death under the Penal Code:—

- (1) Waging war against the King (s. 121).
- (2) Abetting mutiny actually committed (s. 132).
- (3) Giving or fabricating false evidence upon which an innocent person suffers death (s. 194).
- (4) Murder (s. 302).
- (5) Abetment of suicide of a minor, or insane or intoxicated person (s. 305).
- (6) Dacoity accompanied with murder (s. 396).
- (7) Attempt to murder by a person under sentence of transportation, if hurt is caused (s. 307).

The following are capital offences under the English law:—

- (1) High treason.⁷
- (2) Murder.⁸
- (3) Piracy with violence.⁹
- (4) Burning or destroying ships of war, arsenals, magazines, etc.¹⁰
- (5) Several offences relating to the army and navy.¹¹

¹ Nim Chand Mookerjee, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 41.

² Gokaldas, (1874) Unrep Cr. C. 80, Cr. R. of 1874.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Muhammad, (1886) P. R. No. 32 of 1886.

⁵ Muhammad Hayat, (1921) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 6 of 1922.

⁶ Hardyal, (1869) 3 Beng. L. R. (A. Cr. J.) 35.

⁷ 30 Geo. III, c. 48; 54 Geo. III, c. 146; 33 & 34 Vic., c. 23, s. 31.

⁸ 24 & 25 Vic., c. 100, s. 1.

⁹ 7 Will. IV, and 1 Vic., c. 18, s. 2.

¹⁰ 12 Geo. III, c. 24.

¹¹ 44 & 45 Vic., c. 58, ss. 4, 6 (1) 7, 8 (1) 9 (1), 12 (1); 29 & 30 Vic., c. 109, ss. 2-7, 10, 13, 19, 30, 34 and 52 (1).

Amendment.—The words "by the law of British India or England" were substituted for the words "by this Code" by Act IX of 1890, s. 149.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 193 and further—

That the accused when giving or fabricating the same, intended thereby to cause, or knew that it was likely he would thereby cause, the person in question to be convicted of capital offence under the Indian Penal Code, or under the English law.¹

For the second clause prove further—

(1) That capital punishment was carried into effect; and

(2) that the person executed was an innocent person.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate is required.²

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, in the course of the trial of—, before—, gave false evidence (or fabricated false evidence) intending thereby to cause (or knowing it to be likely that you will thereby cause)—to be convicted of the offence of—which by the law of British India (or England) is capital, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 194 of the Indian Penal Code and within the cognizance of the Court of Session.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

Punishment.—As for whipping, see the Whipping Act (IV of 1909). As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

195. Whoever gives or fabricates false evidence intending

Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment.

thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence¹ which by the law of British India or England is not capital, but punishable with transportation for life, or imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, shall be punished as a person convicted of that offence would be liable to be punished.

ILLUSTRATION.

A gives false evidence before a Court of Justice, intending thereby to cause Z to be convicted of a dacoity. The punishment of dacoity is transportation for life, or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, with or without fine. A, therefore, is liable to such transportation or imprisonment, with or without fine.

COMMENT.

This section is similar to the preceding section except as regards gravity of the offence in respect of which the perjury is committed. It stands midway between s. 193 and s. 194.

1. 'Offence' means anything punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

Amendment.—The words "by the law of British India or England" were substituted for the words "by this Code" by Act IX of 1890, s. 149.

¹ Naurang, (1906) 3, A. L. J. R. 110 (n). also ss. 476-478, 487.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See

CASES.

Where the accused was convicted under this section for burning his house with the object of getting another convicted of the offence, and the act was done in a most open manner, and no complaint was made by the accused, it was held that the conviction could not be upheld, because there was no evidence of intention to convict.¹ In the case of a person who burnt his own house, and charged another with the act, it was held that he should not be convicted under this section, but under s. 211.² But where A, with a view to having B convicted, assisted in concealing stolen railway pins in his house and field, it was held that A was properly convicted of an offence under this section.³ Where false coins were made by the accused only for the purpose of passing them secretly into the house of his enemy in order to get him into trouble, it was held that he had committed an offence under this section although he was guilty under s. 232 or 235.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 193, and further—

That the accused when giving or fabricating the same, intended thereby to cause, or knew that it was likely he would thereby cause, the person in question to be convicted of an offence punishable with transportation for life (or imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards) under the Indian Penal Code or the English law.

To sustain a conviction it is not only necessary to prove that the accused spoke falsely, but also that he knew he was speaking falsely.⁵

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.⁶

Charge.—Similar to one under s. 195 except that the offence is not capital but one punishable with transportation for life or imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards.

Punishment.—As for whipping, see the Whipping Act (IV of 1903). As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901).

196. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true or genuine evidence¹ any evidence which he knows to be false or fabricated,² shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave or fabricated false evidence.

COMMENT.

This section makes it an offence to corruptly use any evidence which the person using it knows to be false or fabricated. There must, therefore, be knowledge of its falsity and in addition the element of corruption.

The section applies to those who make use of such evidence as is made punishable by ss. 193, 194 and 195. "It must be read with ss. 191 and 192, and can only apply to the use of evidence which was false evidence within the meaning of s. 191 or fabricated evidence within the definition laid down in s. 192."³

The section may include also the case of suborning false witnesses and attempting to use their evidence. There must be a use or an attempt or offer to use the evidence in a judicial proceeding or on some other occasion.

¹ Said Dyal, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 168.

² Elagunna Adu, (1867) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 63.

³ Rameshwar Rai, (1877) 1 All. 379.

⁴ Lal Chand, (1912) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 17 of 1912.

⁵ A. Gopalaswami Naidu, (1909) 6 M.L.T. 51.

⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.

⁷ Per Hutchins, J., in Lakshmaji, (1894) 7 Mad. 259, 260.

The section does not apply to subornation of perjury. It must be shewn that the accused made some use of the false evidence after it was in existence.¹

If a person calls witnesses in support of a statement which he makes, and causes those witnesses to come into the box for the purpose of giving evidence which he knows to be untrue, and they give that evidence, and the jury find that they knew it to be untrue, that is evidence on which a jury may find that he solicited them; but the jury must be satisfied that he knew that the statement which they were called to make must be untrue to their own knowledge.²

1. 'Corruptly uses or attempts to use as true... evidence.'—The word 'corruptly' is applied to the doing of acts with the intent of gaining some advantage inconsistent with official duty or the rights of others.³ It is not intended to connote a motive necessarily connected with the passing of money as an inducement to the person impugned to use or attempt to use the fabricated evidence. An intention to procure a false conviction is a corrupt intention.⁴ The desire to screen an offender from the legal consequences of his act could well be designated a corrupt motive, and it would not require evidence to satisfy the Court that the witness in giving false evidence had that desire. The use of false evidence with the knowledge that it is false must ordinarily be corrupt from its very nature, and the onus lies on the accused to show that there are circumstances in the case which prevent its being corrupt. The fact that he was defending himself against a criminal charge is not enough. An accused person who uses fabricated evidence as genuine in his defence may be liable for using it corruptly. In support of an alibi on a charge of assault the accused produced a cattle-pound receipt and called the Patil of another village to prove that he was there at the time of the offence. The defence was not believed, and the accused was tried for corruptly using false evidence as true. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section.⁵

The word 'corruptly' occurs in this section, and ss. 198, 200, 219 and 220. It is used to denote that those whose duty it is, not to judge of the credibility of evidence, but to submit it for the consideration of judicial and other functionaries, on behalf of their clients, do not incur the penalties for using false evidence.⁶

The word 'corruptly' is not used in the sense of 'fraudulently' or 'dishonestly.' Where the accused used the evidence of an Hospital Assistant and a compounder for the purpose of producing the out-door Register of a dispensary containing false entries to the effect that he was present and treated there on certain days when in reality he was not, it was held that in order to bring him within the section there should have been evidence that the two witnesses had been induced to come forward by some corrupt motive, e.g., bribery.⁷

2. 'Any evidence which he knows to be false or fabricated.'—The word 'evidence' does not include a document. Where the accused used in a civil suit a document as genuine which he knew to be a forged document, it was held that he should be charged under s. 471 and not under this section.⁸ Where a person used in Court false documents as true besides swearing to their authenticity, he was held guilty of this offence.⁹ Where a prisoner produced as evidence an account book, one page of which had been fraudulently abstracted, and another substituted for it, it was held that he was not guilty of the offence of attempting to use, as genuine, fabricated evidence, unless he knew of the forgery and intended to use the forged evidence for the purpose of affecting the decision on the point at issue when

¹ Sheik Suffuruddee, (1862) 1 Ind. Jur. (O. R.) 122.

² Gungamma, (1860) 3 Mad. Sec.

³ Livingstone.

⁴ Faza Ahmad, (1913) P. R. No. 1 of 1914, P. L. R. No. 139 of 1914.

⁵ Rama Nana Hagarne, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R. 987, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 112.

⁶ M. & M. 164.

⁷ Bhausing Jalamsing, (1909) Criminal Application for Revision No. 26 of 1909, decided on the 31st March 1909, per Scott, C. J., and Chandavarkar, J. Unrep. Bom.

⁸ Ekerode Chunder Mozumdar, (1850) 5 Cal. 717.

⁹ Oodun Lal, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 17.

the book was tendered.¹ A brought a suit upon a bond and at the trial sought to support his claim by a letter fabricated probably for the purpose of enabling him to get the bond registered. A was convicted under this section. It was held that if the letter was fabricated for use before the Registrar, it was no valid objection to the conviction.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the piece of evidence in question is false or fabricated.

(2) That the accused used, or attempted to use, such false or fabricated piece of evidence.

(3) That he used, or attempted to use, such evidence, as true or genuine evidence.

(4) That when the accused used such evidence, or attempted to do so, he knew it to be false or fabricated.

(5) That when the accused so used, or attempted to do so, he acted corruptly.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable or not according as the offence of giving such evidence is bailable or not—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.³

The complaint must state that the accused knowing that a particular document was false used the same as genuine evidence.⁴

Charge.—The charge should contain the words “punishable under ss. 193 and 196 of the Indian Penal Code, etc.,” as the section does not specify accurately the amount of punishment.⁵

Using or attempting to use false evidence are distinct offences and should be charged separately.⁶

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901).

197. Whoever issues or signs any certificate required by law to be given or signed,¹ or relating to any fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence, knowing or believing that such certificate is false in any material point,² shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

COMMENT.

Several laws require a certificate of some matter to be given. The offence of certifying in any of these, knowing or believing that the certificate is false, is put on the same footing as the offence of giving false evidence.

The certificate must, however, be false in a material point. The issuing or signing must be by the officer, or person authorized to certify.

Ingredients.—This section has two essentials.—

1. Issuing or signing of a certificate—

(a) required by law to be given or signed, or

(b) relating to a fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence.

¹ Muddoo Soodun Shaw, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 23.

² Lakshnaji, (1884) 7 Mad. 289. See also Silandar Khan, (1887) 7 A. W. N. 285.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.

⁴ Kalyanji v. Ram Deen Lala, (1924) 21 L. W. 664.

⁵ (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 9.

⁶ Ibid.

2. Such certificate must have been issued or signed knowing or believing that it is false in any material point.

1. 'Issues or signs any certificate required by law to be given or signed.'—The word 'issues' means something different from using. It is the putting forth for the purpose of being used, and is preliminary to it.

'Certificate' is a testimony given in writing to declare or verify the truth of anything,¹ e. g., a certificate of administration,² of marriage,³ of adjustment of decrees,⁴ or a certificate authorizing a judgment-debtor to mortgage land ordered to be sold,⁵ or that a case is fit for appeal to the King in Council.⁶

The word 'certificate' does not mean certification under this section and s. 198. The certificate, in respect of which a man may be punished under this section and s. 198, if it is false to his knowledge or belief, must be either one (a) that is required by law to be given or signed, or (b) that relates to any fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence. One or other of these requirements must be fulfilled before a man can be dealt with under this section and s. 198. A, purporting to represent a decree-holder in a certain suit, signed and filed a petition in the Court, stating, contrary to the fact, that B, the judgment-debtor, had paid off the decretal amount to the decree-holder through him. B was found

Acts is not a certificate within the meaning of this section.⁸

'Required by law to be given or signed.'—Several Acts require the giving of certificates by various functionaries, e. g., the Christian Marriage Act (XV of 1872), ss. 17, 41, 61; the Indian Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 262; the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 381, the Indian Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 60; the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 2, 9f; O. XLV, r. 3; the Administrator-General's Act (III of 1913), s. 31; the Legal Practitioners' Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 7.

2. 'Knowing or believing that such certificate is false in any material point.'—The certificate must be false in respect of a material point. Falsity in any other respect will be of no avail.

Intent to injure.—Under this section proof of intent to cause injury is not necessary.⁹

Statutory application.—The Burma Steam Boilers and Prime Movers Act, s. 12.¹⁰

CASES.

False declaration.—A person signed a notice of transfer of survey numbers in the character of his father who was dead, and the declaration to this notice was signed by the accused, who confirmed the assumed character. It was held that the accused could not be convicted under this section but could be convicted of giving false information to a public servant.¹¹

Incorrect copy.—A copyist who made an incorrect copy of a document filed with a record was held to have committed an offence under this section.¹²

Abetment of the issue of a false certificate of summons.—Although there was no village-watchman in the village of the name appearing on the receipt

¹ Wharton, 12th Edn., p. 150.

² Act II of 1874, ss. 36, 37.

³ Act XV of 1872.

⁴ Civil Procedure Code O. XXI, r. 2.

⁵ Ibid., r. 83.

⁶ Ibid., O. XVI, r. 7.

⁷ Mahabir Thakur, (1916) 23 C. L. J. 423,

20 C. W. N. 520.

⁸ Bal Krishna Gir, (1917) 3 P. L. W. 201.

⁹ Deva Singh, (1878) P. R. No. 16 of 1870.

¹⁰ Burma Act II of 1910.

¹¹ Mulharji, (1882) Unrep. Cr. C. 182.

¹² Deva Singh, supra.

acknowledging due service, the prisoner was acquitted in the absence of proof of guilty knowledge or belief, it being probable that he (an utter stranger in the village) was deceived by the villagers.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the document in question purports to be a certificate.

(2) That such certificate is required by law to be given or signed, or that it related to some fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence.

(3) That such certificate is false.

(4) That it is false in a material point.

(5) That the accused issued or signed the same.

(6) That he, when doing so, knew or believed, such certificate to be false.²

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, issued (or signed) a certificate [required by law to be given (or signed)] (or) [relating to—a fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence] knowing or believing that such certificate is false in a material point, to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 197 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance [or cognizance of the Court of Session.]

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

198. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use any such certificate, as a true certificate, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Using as true a certificate known to be false.

COMMENT.

This section is connected with the last section just as s. 196 is connected with ss. 193, 194 and 195.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1), (2), (3) and (4) as in s. 197, and further—

(5) That such false certificate was signed or issued.

(6) That the accused used or attempted to use such false certificate.

(7) That he did so corruptly.

(8) That he, when using such false certificate, knew it to be false in a material point.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, corruptly used (or attempted to use) as true a certificate [required by law to be given and signed] (or) [relating to a fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence] but which is false in a material point, to wit—, and known by you to be the same, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 198 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance [or cognizance of the Court of Session].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

¹ Kissamulla, (1865) 3 W. R. (Cr.) 37.

² Ibid.

199. Whoever, in any declaration made or subscribed by him, which declaration any Court of Justice, or any public servant or other person, is bound or authorized by law to receive as evidence¹ of any fact, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true,² touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made or used,³ shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

COMMENT.

Object.—"It was intended by the section to make the penalty attached to the offence of giving false evidence applicable to declarations which, although not compellable, have, on being made, the same effect as the compulsory declarations referred to in ss. 51 and 191."¹ It subjects any person who makes a false declaration, which declaration may be used as evidence of the matters stated in it, to the penalties for perjury. Section 191 deals with compulsory declarations, this section treats of voluntarily false declarations.

Ingredients.—This section requires three essentials.—

1. Making of a declaration which a Court or a public servant is bound or authorized by law to receive in evidence.

2. Making of a false statement in such declaration knowing or believing it to be false.

3. Making of such statement touching any point material to the object of the Court of Justice or public servant or other person is bound or authorized by law to receive as evidence."² 'Declaration' means any statement of fact in the form simply of a declaration, which, for the purpose of proof of the fact declared to, has by itself all the legal force of evidence given on oath or the solemn affirmation substituted for an oath; in short, a declaration receivable in lieu of personal testimony.³ A statement made by a witness in a criminal trial not upon oath or solemn affirmation is not a declaration.⁴

See also Explanation to s. 200 as to the meaning of 'declaration.'

¹ 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

² 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

³ 'Bound or authorized by law to receive as evidence.'—A declaration must be one which is admissible in evidence, and which the Court before which it is filed is bound or authorized by law to receive in evidence.⁴ It includes as affidavit in cases in which evidence may be given by affidavit.⁵ A person making on oath a false statement in the nature of an affidavit in the course of a criminal proceeding before

¹ Per Scotland, C. J., and Ellis, J., in A. Vedamuttu, (1868) 4 M. H. C. 183.

² Ibid., p. 187; Ismail, (1914) 8 B. L. T. 82.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Ram Prasad, (1912) 35 All. 58.

⁵ Palaniappa Chetty v. Annamalai Chetty, (1904) 14 M. L. J. 74.

⁴ Iswar Chunder Guha, (1887) 14 Cal. 633; Ramaswamy Chetty, (1902) 1 Weir 176.

⁵ Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, (1894) 22 Cal. 131.

⁶ Ram Bhowas Koorur, (1890) 7 C. L. R. 536.

unless his evidence be given under the sanction of an oath on the Holy Gospel.¹ If the Court or public servant is not authorized by any provision of the law, or any rules having the force of law, to receive a declaration in evidence but does receive one, the person making it will not be liable.² The accused made a false declaration before a Mamlatdar with a view to obtain a certificate of solvency for the purpose of securing a licence from the Abkari authorities. It was held that no offence was committed under this section inasmuch as no Court or public servant was either bound or authorized by law to receive the declaration in evidence.³ Similarly, where the accused reported falsely to a Revenue Surveyor that his father had died, in order to have his own name entered in the revenue register as owner of a certain garden and lands, it was held that he had committed an offence under s. 182 and not under this section.⁴

2. 'Makes any statement which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false, etc.'—There must be a deliberate false statement.

3. 'Touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made.'—This provision as to proving materiality shows that the section has no reference to the examination of the witness in a judicial proceeding.⁵

Applications for execution.—This section does not apply to applications for execution containing false averments.⁶

The Special Marriage Act III of 1872.—Every person making, signing or attesting any declaration or certificate prescribed by this Act, containing a statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be deemed guilty of the offence described in this section (s. 21).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made, or subscribed the declaration in question.

(2) That a Court of Justice, etc., was bound or authorized to receive such declaration as evidence.

(3) That the accused made the statement in question contained in such declaration.

(4) That such statement is false.

(5) That such false statement touched a point material to the object of such declaration.

(6) That when making such false statement, the accused knew that it was false, or believed it to be false, or did not believe it to be true.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.⁷

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.⁸ There must be proper materials before an action is taken.⁹

Charge.—The accused is entitled to know the exact words which are alleged to have been used by him and which are sought to be made the subject of a charge of perjury.¹⁰

The charge should run thus:

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

¹ A. Vedamuttu, (1868) 4 M. H. C. 185.

² Abdul Majid v. Krishna Lal Nag, (1893) 20 Cal. 724; Jangar Chunder Guho, (1887) 14 Cal. 653.

³ Rajappa Ramappa Kalal, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 222, 3 Bom. Cr. C. 43.

⁴ Ismail, (1914) 9 B. L. T. 82.

⁵ A. Vedamuttu, sup.

⁶ Bapuji Dayaram, (1886) 10 Bom. 288.

⁷ Crim. P. C., s. 195 See ss. 476-478, 487.

⁸ See Abdul Wahid Khan v. Abdullakhan, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 211.

⁹ Ibid.

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, in a declaration made (or subscribed) by you before—, made a false statement, which you knew (or believed) to be false or did not believe to be true, touching a point material to the object for which the declaration was made, to wit—, and which declaration was by law receivable as evidence, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 199 of the Indian Penal Code and within [my cognizance] (or) [cognizance of the Court of Session].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

200. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true any such declaration, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Using as true such declaration knowing it to be false.

Explanation.—A declaration which is inadmissible merely upon the ground of some informality, is a declaration within the meaning of sections 199 and 200.

COMMENT.

This section bears the same relation to the last section as s. 198 does to s. 197 or s. 196 to ss. 193, 194 and 195. The person who uses a false declaration is made liable as one who makes it.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the declaration is false.

(2) That a Court of Justice, etc., was bound or authorized by law to receive the same in evidence.

(3) That such declaration is false in a material point.

(4) That the accused made such false declaration, or attempted to do so.

(5) That he did as in (4) corruptly.

(6) That when he so used or attempted to use the same, he knew of the falseness thereof.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.¹

Charge.—See s. 199.

Punishment.—As for whipping, see the Whipping Act (IV of 1909).

201. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed,¹ causes any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear, with the intention of screening the offender² from legal punishment, or with that intention gives any information respecting the offence which he knows or believes to be false,

Causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender—shall, if the offence which he knows or believes to have been committed is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

If a capital offence;

¹ See Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.

unless his evidence be given under the sanction of an oath on the Holy Gospel.¹ If the Court or public servant is not authorized by any provision of the law, or any rules having the force of law, to receive a declaration in evidence but does receive one, the person making it will not be liable.² The accused made a false declaration before a Mamlatdar with a view to obtain a certificate of solvency for the purpose of securing a licence from the Abkari authorities. It was held that no offence was committed under this section inasmuch as no Court or public servant was either bound or authorized by law to receive the declaration in evidence.³ Similarly, where the accused reported falsely to a Revenue Surveyor that his father had died, in order to have his own name entered in the revenue register as owner of a certain garden and lands, it was held that he had committed an offence under s. 182 and not under this section.⁴

2. 'Makes any statement which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false, etc.'—There must be a deliberate false statement.

3. 'Touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made.'—This provision as to proving materiality shows that the section has no reference to the examination of the witness in a judicial proceeding.⁵

Applications for execution.—This section does not apply to applications for execution containing false averments.⁶

The Special Marriage Act III of 1872.—Every person making, signing or attesting any declaration or certificate prescribed by this Act, containing a statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be deemed guilty of the offence described in this section (s. 21).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made, or subscribed the declaration in question.

(2) That a Court of Justice, etc., was bound or authorized to receive such declaration as evidence.

(3) That the accused made the statement in question contained in such declaration.

(4) That such statement is false.

(5) That such false statement touched a point material to the object of such declaration.

(6) That when making such false statement, the accused knew that it was false, or believed it to be false, or did not believe it to be true.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.⁷

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.⁸ There must be proper materials before an action is taken.⁹

Charge.—The accused is entitled to know the exact words which are alleged to have been used by him and which are sought to be made the subject of a charge of perjury.¹⁰

The charge should run thus:

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

¹ A. Vedamuttu, (1869) 4 M. H. C. 185.

² Abdul Majid v. Krishnas Lal Nag, (1893) 20 Cal. 724; Jagrar Chander Guha, (1897) 14 Cal. 653.

³ Rajappa Ramappa Kalit, (1915) 17 Bom. L. R. 222, 3 Boma. Cr. C. 43.

⁴ Ismail, (1914) 8 B. L. T. 82.

⁵ A. Vedamuttu, sup.

⁶ Dasaji Dasaram, (1898) 10 Bom. 284.

⁷ Crim. P. C., s. 193. See ss. 476-478, 487.

⁸ See Abdul Wahid Khan v. Abdullah Khan, (1923) 21 A. L. J. B. 211.

⁹ Ibid.

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, in a declaration made (or subscribed) by you before—, made a false statement, which you knew (or believed) to be false or did not believe to be true, touching a point material to the object for which the declaration was made, to wit—, and which declaration was by law receivable as evidence, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 199 of the Indian Penal Code and within [my cognizance] (or) [cognizance of the Court of Session].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

200. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true any such declaration, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Using as true such declaration knowing it to be false.

Explanation.—A declaration which is inadmissible merely upon the ground of some informality, is a declaration within the meaning of sections 199 and 200.

COMMENT.

This section bears the same relation to the last section as s. 198 does to s. 197 or s. 196 to ss. 193, 194 and 195. The person who uses a false declaration is made liable as one who makes it.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the declaration is false.

(2) That a Court of Justice, etc., was bound or authorized by law to receive the same in evidence.

(3) That such declaration is false in a material point

(4) That the accused made such false declaration, or attempted to do so.

(5) That he did as in (4) corruptly.

(6) That when he so used or attempted to use the same, he knew of the falseness thereof.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.¹

Charge.—See s. 199.

Punishment.—As for whipping, see the Whipping Act (IV of 1909).

201. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed,¹ causes any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear, with the intention of screening the offender² from legal punishment, or with that intention gives any information respecting the offence which he knows or believes to be false, shall, if the offence which he knows or believes to have been committed is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

Causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender—

if a capital offence;

¹ See Criminal Procedure Code, s. 193.

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment for any term not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of the imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, knowing that B is innocent of screening B for seven years

COMMENT.

Object.—This section relates to the destruction of any evidence of the commission of an offence, and includes also the giving of false information with the intention of screening an offender. Sections 202 and 203 relate to the giving or omitting to give such information, and s. 204, to the destruction of documentary evidence. There are three groups of sections in the Code relating to the giving of information. Firstly, ss. 118-120 deal with concealment of an offence; secondly, ss. 176, 177, 181 deal with giving of false information; and thirdly, ss. 193-195 deal with causing disappearance of evidence.

This section is intended to reach acts to which ss. 193-195 do not extend, and not to include acts falling under those sections.¹ This section is an attempt to define the position known in English law as that of an accessory after the fact. It is settled law that a principal cannot be convicted as an accessory after the fact.²

Principle.—Whenever an offence has actually been committed by any person, other than the offender, knowing or having reason to believe that the offence has been committed by another person, and that he is assisting that person to escape, he is liable to be punished as an accessory after the fact.

This section does not refer to cases where a person causes the disappearance of evidence of an offence committed by himself, nor can a person be convicted of abetting such.³ But it applies to persons other than the actual criminals who, by their causing evidence to disappear, assist the principals in escaping the consequences of their offence.⁴ It does not apply to a case where the person, who is the probable or possible offender, makes statements exculpating himself by inculpating another.⁵ Where, notwithstanding circumstances of

¹ Mussanmat Sharina, (1884) P. R. No. 43 of 1884.

² Samantha Dhupi, (1915) 23 C. L. J. 333, 20 C. W. N. 165.

³ Kashinath Dinakar, (1871) 8 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 126; Ghanasham Ramachandra Mantri, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 538; Ram Khilawan, (1906) 28 All. 705; Ghasia Kewat, (1899) 12 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 17.

⁴ Ramsoonder Shootar, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 52; (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr. L.) 5; Kishna, (1850)

2 All. 713; Lalli, (1885) 7 All. 749; Dungar, (1886) 8 All. 252; Toray Ali, (1895) 22 Cal. 638; Fakir-ud-din, (1877) P. R. No. 4 of 1877; Mir Afzal, (1881) P. R. No. 25 of 1881; Ramaswami Goundan, (1903) 27 Mad. 271; Ahmed, (1924) 1 L. C. 454; Kudaon, (1925) 21 N. L. R. 86. But see Lambaya, (1925) Unrep. Cr. C. 709, Cr. R. No. 66 of 1895.

⁵ Behala Bibi, (1881) 6 Cal. 789.

grave suspicion, it is impossible on the record, as it stands, to hold that a person is the murderer or one of the murderers, his conviction under this section and s. 203 is not vitiated by the existence of such circumstances.¹

1. 'Knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed.'—

It must be proved that an offence, the evidence of which the accused is charged with causing to disappear, has actually been committed,² and that the accused knew, or had information sufficient to lead him to believe, that the offence had been committed.³ Under the Code no man can be tried for any delusion or misconception of mind, however culpable and criminal such delusion or misconception may appear to be.⁴ The words 'knowing or having reason to believe' conclusively negative and preclude the view that the provisions of this section are applicable in cases in which an offence has not been committed. For, it is impossible for any one to know, or to have reason, or sufficient cause, to believe that an offence has been committed when it has not been committed. A person may fancy that he knows or has reason to believe an offence to have been committed, when it has not been committed, but he is mistaken in so fancying. He may, under the influence of such a mistake, remove something which he supposes to have been committed, and he may be morally blamable for so doing. But it is beyond the province of criminal legislation to punish a man for a delusion, or even for an act which has not caused any actual harm to the public or any individual member of society.⁵

As to the word 'offence,' see Explan. to s. 203, infra.

2. 'Causes any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear with the intention of screening the offender.'—The expression 'any evidence of the commission of that offence' clearly refers, not to evidence in the extensive sense in which that word is used in the Indian Evidence Act, but to evidence in its primary sense as meaning anything that is likely to make the crime evident such as the existence of a wounded corpse, or of blood stains, fabricated documents or similar material objects indicating that an offence had been committed. The statements of a witness and Panchnamas do not... constitute such evidence.⁶ The act committed must have been done with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment: mere knowledge that it is likely to do so is not sufficient.⁷ A person cannot be convicted of screening an offender when the offender himself has been tried and acquitted of the offence,⁸ or when the offence is that of suicide.⁹

Where a person, through fear, did not interpose to prevent the commission of a murder, and afterwards helped the murderers in concealing the body, it was held that he was not guilty of abetment of murder, but was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁰ A person who assists the actual murderers in removing the corpse of their victim to a distance from the place where the murder was committed is prima facie guilty of an offence under this section, until he can establish that he acted under compulsion.¹¹ But where the accused, finding in her house the dead body of a girl, who had been murdered by her son, locked the outer door without moving the corpse or concealing it, it was held that she was not guilty of an offence under this section.¹²

Offender himself causing the disappearance of evidence not liable.—Where a person pushed a woman, and she fell into a boat and died instantaneously, and afterwards the prisoner set the boat with the corpse in it afloat down the river, and so concealed the evidence of his offence¹³; and where A and B, after causing the death

¹ Teprinesa, (1918) 46 Cal. 427.

² Abdul Kadir, (1880) 3 All. 279, F. B.

³ Matuki Misser, (1885) 11 Cal. 619.

⁴ Abdul Kadir, sup.

⁵ Ibid.

⁶ Anverkhan Mahamudkhan, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R. 823, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 72.

⁷ Toolshee Rai, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 186; 52.

Pelkoo Nushyo, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 43.

⁸ Abdul Kadir, sup.

⁹ Thakri, (1911) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 17 of 1911.

¹⁰ Chakrabarti v. P. N., (1880) 6 W. R. 100.

¹¹ Ibid.

¹² Ibid.

¹³ Ibid.

of U in B's field, removed C's body to C's field,¹ it was held that no offence under this section was committed.

Keeping out of the way a witness to the commission of an offence is not causing disappearance of evidence.—Where the accused having reason to believe that a murder had been committed and that B, the wife of the murdered man, was aware of the fact, took B away from the village where it was likely that inquiries would be made, and kept her out of the way lest she should give information, it was held that the taking of measures to keep a person out of the way who was possessed of knowledge of the occurrence of a crime and who was likely to communicate that knowledge to others, did not amount to causing disappearance of evidence within the meaning of the law.²

Accessory offence.—A conviction of the accessory offence under this section is not illegal merely because it is suspected, but not proved or admitted, that the accused committed, or was one of the several persons who committed, the principal offence.³ A person can be charged with the offence of murder, and, in the alternative, with the offence of causing evidence to disappear with the intention of screening the offender.⁴ The mere fact that the accused is probably or possibly the principal offender does not prevent his conviction.⁵ Where an accused person has been acquitted of a charge of committing a crime, the fact that he had been suspected and tried of the principal offence would not prevent his conviction under this section, if there is clear proof that he has caused evidence to disappear in order to screen some unknown offender from legal punishment.⁶

The Calcutta High Court does not share this view. It has held that this section applies merely to the person who screens the principal or actual offender and not to the principal or actual offender himself. The accused in that case were charged with murder, and also with causing the disappearance of the corpse of the deceased with the intention of screening the murderer from punishment under this section. The evidence for the prosecution pointed conclusively to one or other of them being the actual murderer; but it was impossible upon the evidence to say which of them caused the death. They were acquitted of the charge of murder, but convicted of the charge under this section. It was held that the conviction could not stand.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that an offence has been committed.⁸ Mere rumour of suspicion is not sufficient.⁹

(2) That the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that such offence has been committed.¹⁰

(3) That the accused caused evidence thereof to disappear; or gave false information respecting such offence, knowing or having reason to believe, the same to be false.¹¹

(4) That the accused did as in (3) with intent to screen the offender from legal punishment.¹²

The following must be proved as an aggravating circumstance:—

(5) That the offence in question was punishable with death, or transportation for life, or with imprisonment extending to ten years.

¹ Kishna, (1880) 2 All. 713.

² Muhammad Balah, (1882) P. R. No. 21 of 1882.

³ Lumba, (1895) Cr. R. No. 56 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 799. Muddun Mohun Bose, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.) 22; Nazra, (1902) P. R. No. 6 of 1902.

⁴ Hannappa Rudrappa, (1923) 25 Bom. L. R. 231, 7 Bom. Cr. C. 58.

⁵ Nya Lung Kyaw Zan, (1902) 1 L.B.R. 316.

⁶ Bucha, (1903) P. R. No. 1 of 1901.

⁷ Torap, Ali, (1895) 22 Cal. 638; Sumanta Dhup, (1915) 20 C. W. N. 165, 23 C. L. J. 333.

⁸ Mula Singh, (1895) P. R. No. 19 of 1895. ⁹ Kandipuri Lalshamma, (1893) 1 Weir 180.

¹⁰ Tara Chand, (1867) P. R. No. 7 of 1867.

¹¹ (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 1; Hardul Surma, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 68.

¹² Subbramanya Pillai, (1866) 3 M. H. C. 251; Mir Afzal, (1881) P. R. No. 25 of 1881.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, in cases falling under the first clause; by Court of Session, or Presidency Magistrate, or first class Magistrate, in cases falling under the second; and by Magistrate, Presidency or first class, or by Court by which the offence is triable in cases falling under the third.

Five persons were charged under s. 302 with murder, and two of them were convicted. The evidence established that the other three had assisted in removing the body, knowing that a murder had been committed. Without any further charge being made, they . . . "disappeared" . . . "disappearance of evidence. It was . . . having been made was warranted . . .

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, knowing (or having reason to believe) that certain offence, to wit—, punishable with—, has been committed, did cause certain evidence of the said offence to disappear, to wit—, [or knowingly gave false information, to wit—] with the intention of screening the said (name of the person committing the offence) from legal punishment, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 201 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words) on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901).

202. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that

Intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform.

an offence has been committed,¹ intentionally omits to give any information respecting that offence which he is legally bound² to give, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the illegal omissions of those who are by some law bound to give information, when such omissions are intentional. It is analogous to s. 176. The offence under it will generally be committed by public servants and private persons bound to give information under ss. 44 and 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

1. 'Knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed.'—Under this section, where the corpus delicti is not established, there can be no conviction for intentional omission to give information respecting an offence which has not been proved to have been committed.³

As to the definition of 'offence,' see Explan. to s. 203, infra.

Where a Police Patel failed to report the arrival at his village of dacoits and supplied them with food and drink, it was held that he could not be convicted under this section as there was nothing to show that an offence was committed by persons who visited the village.⁴ Where, from the fact of the Police Patel ordering the kulkarni to write a report regarding a suspicious death in his village, his good faith was apparent, and it did not appear that he had an intention to omit the report, it was held illegal to convict him of an intention to evade the law about the first report.⁴

2. 'Legally bound.'—See s. 43, supra.

¹ Begu, (1925) 6 Lah. 226

² Ram Ruckia Sing, (1865) 4 W. R. (Cr.) 29.

³ Bala, (1881) Unrep. Cr. C. 160.

⁴ Mkatu Balaji, (1895) Unrep. Cr. C. 782.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the offence, which was not informed about, has been committed.¹

(2) That the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that such offence had been committed.²

(3) That he omitted to give information thereof.

(4) That such omission was intentional.

(5) That the accused was legally bound to give the information which he omitted to give.³

Proc. ... compoundable—
 Triable by ... jury trial.
 See ...

203. Whoever,¹ knowing or having reason to believe² that an offence has been committed³ gives any information respecting that offence which he knows or believes to be false,⁴ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—In sections 201 and 202 and in this section the word 'offence' includes any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460.

COMMENT.

Principle.—A person who knowing that an offence has been committed volunteers information which he knows or believes to be false, obstructs justice, and is therefore punished whether any intention to screen the offender can be proved against him or not, and whatever be the offence which the latter has committed.

Object.—The object of the legislature is not to insure general veracity or the making of correct statements in regard to supposed offences, or offences the commission of which might be falsely or incorrectly reported, but to discourage and punish the giving of false information to the police in regard to offences which were actually committed, and which the person charged knew, or had reason to believe, had been actually committed.⁴

1. 'Whoever.'—That is, a person other than the offender.

2. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra. A belief that an offence has very probably been committed is not enough.

3. 'An offence has been committed.'—It must be proved not only that ... been committed ... accused knew ... mitted.⁵

¹ Ramswami Udayan, (1894) 1 Weir 181.
² Nga Saw, Nga Po On, (1904) 11 Burma L. R. 8, 15.
³ Woodley Chand Mookhopadhyay, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 31; Shir Muhammad, (1857) P. R. No. 20 of 1857; Mir Afzal, (1831) P. R.

No. 25 of 1831.

⁴ Joyramain Patro, (1873) 20 W. R. (Cr.) 66. See Teprinsasa, (1918) 46 Cal. 427.

⁵ Joyramain Patro, sup.; (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 1.

The word 'offence' here denotes a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

4. 'Gives any information...which he knows or believes to be false.'—Wilful giving of false information in respect of the commission of an offence is made punishable.

Where a body was found with wounds on the neck and throat which indicated that the deceased had met with foul play, and a village watchman having inspected the body informed at the thana that the deceased had died of cholera and there was nothing suspicious in the appearance of the body, he was convicted under this section.¹

Statement to police.—This section does not apply to the case of a person who gives false evidence as a witness to the police in the course of their investigation in reply to questions put to him. It only contemplates information volunteered by some person. Where the accused, while being examined by the police in answer to questions put to him, falsely stated that certain persons had committed theft and melted stolen property, it was held that he could not be convicted under this section.²

Explanation.—The Explanation to this section was added by Act III of 1894, s. 6.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that an offence has been committed.

(2) That the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that such offence had been committed.

(3) That he gave the information.

(4) That such information was with respect to that offence.

(5) That the information so given is false.

(6) That when he gave such information he knew or believed it to be false.³

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, knowing that on or about the—day of—, at—the offence of—was committed by—gave information respecting the said offence, to wit—, which you knew or believed to be false, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 203 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

204. Whoever secretes or destroys any document¹ which Destruction of document to prevent its production as evidence.

he may be lawfully compelled to produce as evidence in a Court of Justice,² or in any proceeding lawfully held before a public servant,³ as such, or obliterates or renders illegible the whole or any part of such document with the intention of preventing the same from being produced or used as evidence⁴ before such Court or public servant as aforesaid, or after he shall have been lawfully summoned or required to produce the same for that purpose, shall

¹ Cheetour Chowkeedar, (1864) 1. W. R. (Cr.) 18.

² Sarju Sonar, (1910) 7 A. I. J. R. 1160 ;
Nga Bo Luin, (1920) 3 U. B. R. 204.
³ (1868) 9 W. R. (Cr. L.) 2.

be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section may be compared with s. 175 as it is merely an aggravated form of the offence described in that section.

Scope.—The section applies whether the proceeding is of a civil or criminal nature. Special and local laws requiring production of documents and containing penalties for destruction or obliteration of such are not affected by it.

1. 'Secretes or destroys any document.'—See s. 40, supra, as to the definition of 'document.'

Secreting a document.—Where the plaintiff in a suit referred to arbitration by consent, with a view to prevent a witness from referring to an endorsement on a bond snatched up the bond which was lying beside the arbitrator, ran away, and refused to produce it, it was held that he had committed this offence.¹

Destroying document.—Where the Police Officer took down at first the report of the commission of dacoity made to him, but subsequently destroyed that report and framed another and a false report of the commission of a totally different offence, he was held guilty of this offence.² He had secreted or destroyed the first signed report.

The accused, a police-officer, drew up a panchnama and had it signed by a Panch. But finding that it was disfigured by interlineations and scratches, he had the document fairly written out again in textually the same form and had it signed by the same Panch. The rough document was thereupon destroyed. For doing this act, the accused was convicted of an offence punishable under this section. It was held that the accused committed no offence under it, for the fair document which the accused preserved and ultimately presented to the Court must be regarded as the only document which he was lawfully compelled to produce as evidence; and the former writing must be regarded merely as rough notes designed for the preparation of the fair document.³

The complainant purported to have committed an offence under s. 477, by wilfully and dishonestly destroying two documents, one said to be a written contract, by which the complainant's firm sold to the accused or to his firm certain quantity of shellac, and another spoken of sometimes as a tender and sometimes as a delivery order bearing endorsement in favour of the complainant's firm made by a certain person. It was held that if the documents were found not to be valuable security within the meaning of s. 477, still this section was applicable to the case.⁴

2. 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

3. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

4. 'With the intention of preventing the same from being produced as evidence.'—The act must have been done with the intention of preventing the production of the documents as evidence. Where a putwari was convicted of the Register of Mutations of a village and refused to produce in evidence, the conviction was set aside.⁵

There is no question here of the materiality of the evidence. Whether material or not, it must not be secreted or destroyed to evade production in a judicial or other proceeding, if the production may be lawfully compelled.

¹ Subramania Channapati, (1881) 3 Mad. 281.

² Muhammad Shah Khan, (1893) 20 All.

207.

³ Gangaram Tukaram, (1912) 14 Bom. L.R.

1163. 1 Bom. Cr. C. 234.

⁴ Debendra Nath Upadhyaya v. Bhagirathi Mahto, (1921) 33 C. L. J. 158.

⁵ Amir Chand, (1889) P. R. No. 24 of 1889.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused secreted or destroyed the document; or that he obliterated, or rendered illegible, the whole, or any part of such document.

(2) That he was lawfully compellable to produce the same as evidence (a) in a Court of Justice; or (b) in proceedings lawfully held by a public servant.

(3) That he did as in (1), with the intention of preventing the same from being produced or used as such evidence; or that he did as in (1) after he had been lawfully summoned or required to produce the same for that purpose.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, [secreted (or destroyed) a document, to wit—, which you may be lawfully compelled to produce as evidence in a Court (or in any proceeding lawfully held before a public servant, to wit—)] (or) [obliterated (or rendered illegible) the whole (or a part) of such document with the intention of preventing the same from being produced (or used) as evidence before a Court (or in any proceeding lawfully held before a public servant, to wit—)] (or) [obliterated (or rendered illegible) the whole (or a part) of such document after you were lawfully summoned (or required) to produce the same] and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 204 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

205. Whoever falsely personates¹ another, and in such assumed character² makes any admission or statement, or confesses judgment, or causes any process to be issued or becomes bail or security, or does any other act in any suit or criminal prosecution,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

False personation for purpose of act or proceeding in suit or prosecution.

COMMENT.

The offence punishable under this section is not merely cheating by using a fictitious name, but by falsely assuming to become other real person and in that character making an admission, confessing judgment, or causing any process to be issued, etc.

The offence of false personation is dealt with in ss. 140, 170, 171, 416, and in this section.

1. 'Personates.'—Personation is an assumption of the name and character of another, a pretence of being another. "To 'personate' means to pretend to be a particular person."¹

Where A personated B at a trial with B's consent, which was given to save himself from the trouble of making an appearance in person before the Magistrate, it was held that A was guilty of an offence under this section, and B was guilty of abetment.² Where A presented a petition in the name of B who was ill, it was held that A was not guilty, because the mere fact as above disclosed was insufficient to show any intention on the part of A to falsely personate B.³

2. 'Assumed character.'—It is necessary that the accused should have assumed the name and character of the person he is charged with having personated.⁴

¹ Per Crompton, J., in Hague, (1864) 4 B. & S. 715, 720.

² Suppakon, (1868) 1 M. H. C. 430.

³ Narain Achary, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr. C.) 80.

⁴ Ibid.

3. 'Criminal prosecution.'—A prosecution under Act III of 1852 is a criminal prosecution within the meaning of this section.¹

Fraudulent gain.—This offence is committed, even though the individual personated consents to the personation. Any fraudulent gain or benefit to the offender is not an essential element of this offence.²

Personation of an imaginary person.—There is a conflict of decisions on the point whether a person commits an offence under this section by personating a purely imaginary person. The Calcutta High Court has in an old case held that a person by such personation commits this offence.³ The Madras High Court, dissenting from the above ruling, has held that "it is not enough to shew the assumption of a fictitious name. It must also, we think, appear that the assumed name was used as a means of falsely representing some other individual. It is not an uncommon thing for men to pass under names not their own for the purpose of disguise, in some instances from blameless, and in other instances indifferent or bad motives—'incog,' as the disguise is often termed in the former, and 'with or under an alias' in the latter instances. But, whatever the motive, the use of an assumed name without more is not a criminal offence. It only becomes a crime when connected by proof with some other act or piece of conduct; and the gist of the offence of false personation under s. 205, we think, is the feigning to be another known person. . . . There are sections of the Penal Code under which the false assumption of appearance or character may be an offence, though no individual is meant to be represented, or only an imaginary person. Such are the ss. 140, 170, 171 and 415; but they have no application to the present case, and the last section is made applicable to personation of an imaginary person by an express enactment."⁴

According to the English law such an assumption of an imaginary person does not amount to an offence. One Robert Martin, in payment for a pony and cart purchased by him from the prosecutor, drew a cheque in the name of William Martin, in the presence of the prosecutor upon a bank at which he had no account, and gave it to the prosecutor as his own cheque drawn in his own name. At the time he drew the cheque he knew that it would be dishonoured. It was held that he was not guilty of forgery.⁵

Liability under other Acts.—False personation before a registering officer⁶ and a Marriage Registrar⁷ is punishable under this section.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused falsely personated the person in question.

(2) That he made the admission, etc.

(3) That he made such admission, etc., in such assumed character.

(4) That such admission, etc., was made in a suit or a criminal prosecution.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.⁸

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, falsely personated (name) in (specify the suit or criminal proceeding) before (office of judge) and in such

¹ Ganga, (1871) Unrep. Cr. C. 59.

² Suppokon, (1868) 450.

Sertai, (1863) 1 Weir.

(1903) 5 Bom. L. R.

³ Bhillo Kharar, (11

⁴ Kadar Revuttan, 18,

in, (1879) 5 Q. B. D. 31.

XVI of 1908, s. 82. See Kalya Nara in of 1872, s. 67.

P. C. s. 193. See ss. 476-478, 487.

assumed character (specify the admission of statement made, or judgment confessed, or process caused to be issued, or bail or security given, or any other act done), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 205 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.¹

206. Whoever¹ fraudulently² removes³, conceals, transfers⁴ or delivers to any person any property or any interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property or interest therein from being taken as a forfeiture⁵ or in satisfaction of a fine under a sentence which has been pronounced, or which he knows to be likely to be pronounced, by a Court of Justice⁶ or other competent authority, or from being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which he knows to be likely to be made, by a Court of Justice in a civil suit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section and ss. 207 and 208 have the effect of rendering criminal all collusive modes by which creditors, or lawful claimants, may be defeated of their just remedies. Sections 421-424 deal with fraudulent transfers.

The concealment or removal of property contemplated in this section must be to prevent the property from being taken. Where the property is already taken and the removal is subsequent, no offence under this section is committed.²

Object.—The section awards a punishment for fraudulently removing or concealing property to prevent its seizure as a forfeiture in satisfaction of a fine or from being taken in execution of a decree. The Law Commissioners observe: "If...it is an offence against justice in a culprit to escape from custody in order to avoid execution of a sentence of imprisonment, and an offence to harbour or assist him, and that such offences are fit subjects of punishment, we think he ought to allow upon the same grounds that the removal or concealment of property, or any dealing with it in order to prevent the execution of a sentence, of fine, for example, instead of imprisonment, is an offence against justice and a fit subject of punishment."³

1. 'Whoever.'—The offence may be committed by any one and not necessarily by the owners of the property.

2. 'Fraudulently.'—There must be a fraudulent removal, sale, or transfer of property, or of some interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property from being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine.⁴

There is nothing to prevent a judgment-debtor from disposing of his interest in an attached debt. The Court should not presume a fraudulent intention because he does what he is entitled to do.⁵ A person who, to protect his own property not legally liable for the decree from confusion with property which is so liable, makes it over to another person, does not commit an offence under this section.⁶

¹ (1867) 8 W.R. (Cr. L.) 18; (1866) 5 W.R. (Cr. L.) 6.

² Murlu, (1898) 8 A. W. N. 237.

³ 2nd Rep. s., 162.

⁴ Balmaloond Brojoberi, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 65.

⁵ Ram Narain v. Joka Ram, (1905) 26 A. W. N. 26.

⁶ Basappa Shivappa, (1917) 19, Bom. L. R. 535, 4 Bom. Cr. C. 119.

A person who fraudulently removes property, intending thereby to prevent that property from being taken in execution of a decree made by a Collector, commits an offence under this section.¹

As to the definition of 'fraudulently,' see s. 25, supra.

3. 'Removes.'—The cutting and carrying of crops, which the accused knew to be under attachment, in execution of a certificate under the Public Demands Recovery Act,² was held to be an offence under the latter part of this section.³

4. 'Transfers.'—This word is not defined in the Code, but it has the same meaning as 'transfer of property' defined in s. 5 of the Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882. 'Transfer of property' means an act by which a living person conveys property, in present or in future, to one or more other living persons, and 'to transfer property' is to perform such act. A creditor commits no fraud, who anticipates other creditors and obtains a discharge of his debt by the assignment of any property, which has not already been attached by another creditor.⁴ Similarly, the assignment by the decree-holder of a decree obtained upon the basis of a debt which is under attachment does not per se amount to the commission of this offence inasmuch as such assignment cannot affect the rights of the attaching creditors.⁵

5. 'Forfeiture.'—The forfeiture must be under a sentence pronounced by a Court of Justice or other competent authority. The distraint of property by a Collector in the collection of land revenue cannot be described as forfeiture under a sentence pronounced or likely to be pronounced. Two tents were distrained under the orders of a Revenue authority for arrears of land revenue, and were committed to the care of a police officer. On the sale of the property arrived, the accused, who had concealed the tents, was charged with the offence of forfeiture. It was held that they were not guilty under this section.⁶

6. 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

Statutory application.—The section is made applicable to the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act,⁷ s. 55; the Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act,⁸ s. 67.

PRACTICE.

(1) That the accused had been, or was, to the knowledge of the Court, or other competent authority, that the decree or order had been, or was to the knowledge of the Court, or other competent authority, made.

(2) That it was a Court of Justice or other competent authority pronouncing or about to pronounce such sentence; or that it was a Court of Justice making or about to make such decree or order; such decree or order being in a civil suit.

(3) That the property in question or interest therein had become, or was likely to become, liable to be taken as a forfeiture of such fine, or taken in execution of such decree or order.

(4) That the accused removed, concealed, transferred or delivered such property or interest therein with intent thereby to prevent such property from being taken.

(5) That he did as above with intent to defraud.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

¹ Appa Mallya, (1876) Unrep. Cr. C. 110.
² Ram Narain v. Jolhi Ram, (1905) 26 A. W. N. 26.
³ Murli, sup.
⁴ Act III of 1913.
⁵ Act IV of 1914.

⁶ Beng. Act I of 1895.

⁷ Sunder Dasadh v. Sital Mahlo, (1900) 23 Cal. 217.

Krishna S. K.
389) 8

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, fraudulently removed (or concealed, or transferred, or delivered to—) your property (specify it) intending thereby to prevent the said property from being taken as a forfeiture (or fine), under the sentence which had been pronounced (or which you knew to be likely to be pronounced) by (specify the Court of Justice, etc.,) in criminal case No.—{(or from being taken in execution of the decree which had been made by (specify the Court) in Civil Suit No.—)}, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 206 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

207. Whoever¹ fraudulently² accepts, receives or claims any property or any interest therein, knowing that he has no right or rightful claim to such property or interest, or practises any deception touching any right to any property or any interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property or interest therein from being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine, under a sentence which has been pronounced or which he knows to be likely to be pronounced by a Court of Justice³ or other competent authority, or from being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which he knows to be likely to be made by a Court of Justice in a civil suit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section deals with the receiver, acceptor, or claimer of property to prevent its seizure as a forfeiture. It punishes the accomplice just as the preceding section punishes the principal offender.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 206, infra.
2. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.
3. 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the sentence of fine had been, or was to the knowledge of the accused likely to be, pronounced; or that the decree or order had been, or was to his knowledge, likely to be made.

(2) That it was a Court of Justice, or other competent authority, pronouncing, or about to pronounce such sentence; or that it was a Court of Justice making, or about to make, such decree or order in a civil suit.

(3) That the property in question or interest therein had become, or was likely to become, liable to be taken as a forfeiture for each such fine; or taken in execution of such decree or order.

(4) That the accused accepted, received or claimed such property or interest with intent to defraud; or that he practised a deception touching the right thereto.

(5) That he then had no right or rightful claim thereto.

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195. See Sunder Dasad v. Sital Mahto, (1900) 29 Cal. Laks. Bahrmaal. (1895) Unrep. Cr. C. 803; 217. See also ss. 476-478, 487.

(6) That he then knew he had no right or rightful claim thereto.

(7) That he did as above in order to prevent such property or interest from being so taken.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.¹

208. Whoever¹ fraudulently² causes or suffers a decree or order to be passed against him at the suit of any person for a sum not due, or for a larger sum than is due to such person or for any property or interest in property to which such person is not entitled, or fraudulently causes or suffers a decree or order to be executed against him after it has been satisfied,³ or for anything in respect of which it has been satisfied, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION.

A institutes a suit against Z. Z, knowing that A is likely to obtain a decree against him, fraudulently suffers a judgment to pass against him for a larger amount than is due to him, in order that B, either on his own account or in the proceeds of any sale of Z's property, may be enabled to pay the decree. Z has committed an offence under this section.

COMMENT.

This section prevents the abuse of getting some one to file a collusive suit for recovery of the whole property and suffering a decree to be passed. It punishes persons making fictitious claims in order to secure the property of the defendant against persons to whom he may become indebted in future.

1. 'Whoever.'—See s. 206, infra.

2. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra. Fraud is the essence of the offence under this section.

3. 'Satisfied.'—See s. 214, infra.

PRACTICE:

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused caused, or suffered, the decree or order to be passed against him.

(2) That such decree or order was for a sum not due by the accused; or for a sum larger than was due; or for property or interest therein to which the decree-holder was not entitled.

(3) That the accused did as in (1) with intent to defraud.

Or prove the following points:—

(1) That a decree against the accused had been satisfied.

(2) That he, afterwards, caused or suffered such decree or order to be executed against him.

(3) That such execution was for that in respect of which it had been so satisfied.

(4) That the accused did as above with intent to defraud.

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently caused (or suffered) a decree (or order), to wit—, in Suit No.— of the Court of—to be passed against you, and which was for a sum not due [or for a larger sum than is due to such person or for any property or interest in property to which the decree-holder was not entitled or fraudulently caused (or suffered) a decree (or order), to wit—, decree No.—, in Suit No.—, decided by the Court—on—, to be executed against you after it had been satisfied] and thereby committed an offence under s. 208 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

209. Whoever fraudulently¹ or dishonestly,² or with intent to injure³ or annoy any person,⁴ makes in a Court of Justice⁵ any claim which he knows to be false,⁶ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section relates to false and fraudulent claims in a Court of Justice.² It is much wider than the last section as it applies to a person who is acting fraudulently or dishonestly. Not only the claim must be false within the knowledge of the person making it, but the object of it must be to defraud, to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain, to injure or to annoy.³ The section punishes the making of a false claim. The offence will be complete as soon as a suit is filed. If a person applies for the execution of a decree which has already been executed, his act will be an offence under the next section.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

2. 'Dishonestly.'—See s. 24, supra.

3. 'Injure.'—See s. 44, supra.

4. 'Any person.'—It is not necessary that the party to whom the offender intends to cause wrongful loss or annoyance should be the party against whom the suit is instituted (Explanation in the Draft Code).⁴ The object of the suit may be to defraud a third party.

5. 'Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

6. 'Any claim which he knows to be false.'—A person who brings a claim in the Civil Court which he knows to be false commits an offence under this section. He does not by so doing, if he succeeds, commit the offence of extortion, or, if he fails, of attempting to commit extortion.⁵ An attempt to execute a decree cannot correctly be described as a false claim.⁶ The section is not limited to cases where the whole claim made by the defendant is false. The accused brought a suit against a person to recover Rs. 88-11-0, alleging that the whole of the amount was due from the defendant. The defendant produced a receipt purporting to have been ¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 105. See also ss. 476-478 and 487.

² Beegun Mahtoon, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.)

37. There appears to be a slip in the judgment reported, and consequently the latter part of the head-note is inaccurate.

⁴ 2nd Rep., s. 170.

⁵ Ibid., s. 166.

⁶ Khashai, (1917) 20 O. C. 129.

⁷ Beegun Mahtoon, sup.

made by the plaintiff for a sum of Rs. 71-3-3, and this amount was proved to have been paid to the accused. The accused was thereupon prosecuted and convicted under this section. It was contended on his behalf, in revisionary application, that because a part of the accused's claim was held to be well-founded and due and owing, he could not be convicted under this section. It was held that the conviction was right. Straight, J., said: "If that view were adopted, a man having a just claim against another for Rs. 5, may make claim for Rs. 1,000, the Rs. 995 being absolutely false, and he may escape punishment under this section."¹

A person cannot be convicted both of fraudulently and dishonestly making a false claim in a Court of Justice and of falsely attesting the plaint in the false case, the latter being an essential ingredient of the former offence.²

PRACTICE

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the claim in question was made in a Court of Justice.

(2) That the accused made such claim.

(3) That such claim was a false one.

(4) That the accused when making such claim knew it to be false.³

(5) That he made such claim, intending to defraud, or to cause wrongful gain or loss, or annoy the person in question.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.⁴

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently (or dishonestly or with intent to injure or annoy any person) made a claim, to wit—(state the particulars of the claim) in Suit No.—of—in the Court of—and which you knew to be false, and thereby committed an offence under s. 209 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

210. Whoever fraudulently¹ obtains a decree or order against Fraudulently obtaining decree for sum not due. any person for a sum not due, or for a larger sum than is due, or for any property or interest in property to which he is not entitled, or fraudulently causes a decree or order to be executed² against any person after it has been satisfied³ or for anything in respect of which it has been satisfied, or fraudulently suffers or permits any such act to be done in his name, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section is a counterpart of s. 208 in respect of fraudulent decrees, just as s. 207 is the counterpart of s. 206 in respect of fraudulent transfers and conveyances; the object of the Code being to penalise both parties alike. This section taken together with s. 208 will enable both plaintiff and defendant to a fraudulent or collusive suit or execution to be dealt with alike. Section 208 punishes the fraudulent defendant, this section, the fraudulent plaintiff.

¹ Bulaki Ram, (1880) 10 A. W. N. 1.

² Zar Muhammad Khan, (1901) 21 A. W. N.

³ Baisali, (1888) P. R. No. 28 of 1888.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 193.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra, as to the definition of 'fraudulently.' In this and in the corresponding s. 208 the intention to defraud is essential. The offence is committed when decree is fraudulently obtained and the fact that the decree has not been set aside, though admissible to prove that there was no fraud, is not a bar to a prosecution under this section.¹ If there is a mistake through misunderstanding but not fraud, no offence under this section is committed.²

2. 'Causes a decree or order to be executed.'—The mere presentation of an application for execution of a decree already executed will not be sufficient. The accused must have caused the decree to be executed against the opposite party 'after it has been satisfied.'³ The 'decree or order' must be that of a civil or Revenue Court. The orders of a criminal Court are merely declaratory and do not, therefore, come within this section.

3. 'After it has been satisfied.'—These words indicate only the fact of the satisfaction of the decree. The fact that the satisfaction is of such a nature that the Court executing the decree could not recognize it, not being certified to the Court, does not prevent the decree-holder from being properly convicted of an offence under this section.⁴ The words 'any Court' in s. 258 (O. XXI, r. 2), Civil Procedure Code, have no application to a criminal Court, investigating a charge of fraudulently executing a decree under this section. Those words do not bar any criminal remedy which an injured judgment-debtor may have against a fraudulent decree-holder, whether by a prosecution under ss. 193, 210, 406, or any other section of the Code.⁵

The word 'satisfied' in this section is to be understood in its ordinary meaning and not as referring to decrees, the satisfaction of which has been certified to the Court.⁶

M obtained a decree for the sale of half of certain property. He executed the decree thrice. First, he applied for the sale of the half but in his second application, which was infructuous, he applied for the sale of the whole property and actually got the same sold by his third application. On the judgment-debtor's objection, part of the property was exempted and the decree-holder was put on his trial for an offence under s. 193 which in appeal was changed to this section. It was held that the facts proved did not establish a criminal intention.⁷

When offence is complete.—The offence of fraudulently causing a decree, wholly or in part satisfied, to be executed is completed when application for execution has been presented and upon it the judgment-debtor has been summoned to show cause why it should not be executed. In such a case the offence is not complete until either the judgment-debtor has appeared and made no objection, or has made an objection which has been overruled, and the Court has thereupon proceeded to order execution.⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused obtained the decree or order or suffered or permitted the same to be done in his name.

(2) That such decree or order was for a sum not due; or that it was for a sum larger than what was actually due; or that it was for property, or an interest therein, to which he was not entitled.

(3) That the accused did as above with intent to defraud.

¹ Molla Fuzla Karim, (1905) 33 Cal. 193.

² Daya Ram, (1814) P. L. R. No. 64 of 1914, P.W.R. (Cr.) No. 11 of 1914.

³ Shama Charan Das v. Kasi Naik, (1896) 23 Cal. 971. See Beegun Mahtoon, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 37; Laln, (1885) P. R. No. 7 of 1885.

⁴ Madhub Chunder Mozumdar v. Novodeep Chunder Pundit, (1888) 16 Cal. 126; Muttura- man Chetty, (1881) 4 Mad. 325; Pillala, (1893) 19 Mad. 288; v. Dera

a. 288.

⁷ Mangat Rai, (1909) 7 A. L. J. R. 93.

⁸ Naurang Mal, (1902) P. R. No. 13 of 1902.

Or prove the following points:—

- (1) That the accused obtained the decree or order.
- (2) That he obtained satisfaction thereof.
- (3) That, after obtaining such satisfaction, he caused such decree or order to be executed, or suffered, or permitted the same to be so done in his name.
- (4) That such execution was so obtained, etc., for that in respect of which it had been so satisfied.
- (5) That the accused did as above with intent to defraud.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently obtained a decree (or order) in Suit No.—of—against—for Rs.—which was not due (or was a larger sum than was due) [or for any property or interest in property to which you are not entitled] [or fraudulently caused a decree (or order) to be executed against—after it had been satisfied (or fraudulently suffered or permitted any such act to be done in your name)] and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 210 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

211. Whoever, with intent to cause injury to any person,¹ institutes or causes to be instituted any criminal proceeding against that person,² or falsely charges any person with having committed an offence,² knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding or charge³ against that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both;

and if such criminal proceeding be instituted⁴ on a false charge of an offence punishable with death, transportation for life, or imprisonment for seven years or upwards, shall be punishable with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The section includes two distinct offences, namely, (1) actually instituting or causing to be instituted false criminal proceedings, and (2) preferring a false charge.⁵ The former assumes the latter, but the latter may be committed where no criminal proceedings follow. Difference is made in punishment according as the charge relates to offences punishable with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or more or otherwise. But under the second paragraph there should be an actual institution of a criminal proceeding on a false charge. The mere making of a false charge would be punishable under the first paragraph. Thus two conditions are necessary before the enhanced punishment provided in the second paragraph could be inflicted: (1) proceedings on the false charge should have been actually instituted, and (2) the false charge must be in respect of an offence punishable with death, transportation for life, or imprisonment for seven years or upwards.

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.

² Jay Muhammad Hasan, (1855) P. R. No. 1 of 1856; Nobukins Olowe, (1857) 8

W. R. (Cr.) 87; Rampat, (1900) P. R. No. 26 of 1900.

Sections 182 and 211.—The Bombay High Court has held that the criminal law makes a clear distinction between a false charge which comes under s. 211 and false information given to the police, in which latter case the offence falls under s. 182. A person prosecuting another under s. 182 need not prove malice and want of reasonable and probable cause, except so far as they are implied in the act of giving information known to be false, with the knowledge or likelihood that such information would lead a public servant to use his power to the injury or annoyance of the complainant. In an enquiry under s. 211, on the other hand, proof of the absence of just and lawful ground for making the charge is an important element.¹ The action which s. 211 renders penal is the action entailing very serious consequences and therefore more serious consideration is required on the part of the individual who takes it. It is sufficient, therefore, in such cases, for the prosecution to establish that there was no just and lawful ground for the charge taken and that the accused knew this. The prosecution must prove not malice or want of cause for giving the information, but a positive knowledge or belief of the falsity of the information given.² If the information conveyed to the police amounts to the institution of criminal proceedings against a defined person or amounts to the falsely charging of a defined person with an offence, then the person giving such information is guilty of an offence under s. 211. In such a case, s. 211 is, and s. 182 is not, the appropriate section under which to frame a charge. Section 182, when read with s. 211, must be understood as referring to cases where the information given to the public servant falls short of amounting to an institution of criminal proceedings against a defined person and falls short of amounting to the falsely charging of a defined person with an offence as defined in the Penal Code.³ Where a person specifically complains that another man committed an offence, and does so falsely with the object of causing injury to that person, he is guilty of making a false charge of an offence under s. 211 and not under s. 182.⁴

A petition made by a person to the police falsely stating that the petitioner suspects another person of having committed an offence and praying for an inquiry, does not amount to an institution of criminal proceedings against that person within the meaning of s. 211. The petitioner should be charged under s. 182 with having given false information with intent to cause a public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person.⁵ A First Class Magistrate cannot give himself jurisdiction to try an offence under s. 211 by treating it as an offence under s. 182.⁶

The Calcutta, Madras, and Allahabad High Courts differ from the view of the Bombay High Court. The Calcutta High Court has ruled that a prosecution for a false charge may be under s. 182 or s. 211, but if the charge is made to the police, it is under s. 211.

A First Class Magistrate to proceed under either section, although, in cases of a more serious nature, it may be that the proper course is to proceed under s. 211.⁸ Where a false charge is made to the police of a cognizable offence, the offence committed by the person making the charge falls within the meaning of s. 211 and not s. 182.⁹

¹ Raghavendra v. Kashinath Bhat, (1894) 19 Bom. 717.

² Ramkrishna Yeshwant Adarkar, (1906) 9 Bom. L. R. 33.

³ Apaya Taloba Munde, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R. 574, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 86.

⁴ Arjun, (1882) 7 Bom. 184; Arjun, (1863)

1 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 87.

⁵ Gopal Bhaskaji, (1873) Unrep. Cr. C. 79

⁶ Lalshman, (1893) Cr. R. No. 30 of 1893 Unrep. Cr. C. 670.

⁷ Sande Pandit Chatterjee, (1904) 30 C. 1

Cal. 184.

⁸ Girdhari Nask, (1901) 5 C. W. N. 727.

The Madras High Court has taken the same view as the High Court of Calcutta. It has held that there is no error in a conviction under s. 182, when the false charge made before the police is punishable under the final clause of s. 211. The High Court may quash the conviction and sentence for the minor offence and direct a trial before a tribunal having jurisdiction for the graver; but whether it will do so, or not, is a question not of law, but of expediency on the facts of the particular case.¹ A person making a false charge of theft to the police is liable to be punished both under ss. 182 and 211, though his primary object in making the charge may have been to protect himself rather than to injure the person falsely charged.² In a later case, however, it has held that for an offence under s. 182 it is only necessary that the information given by the accused to a public servant should be false to his knowledge, whereas to constitute an offence under s. 211, it is necessary that the accused should institute or cause to be instituted some criminal proceedings against another person or should falsely charge him with having committed an offence.³

The Allahabad High Court once held that where a specific false charge was made, the proper section, for proceedings to be adopted under, was s. 211.⁴ But this view is modified in a subsequent case in which Edge, C. J., says that "although it is difficult to see what case could arise under s. 211 to which s. 182 could not be applied, yet s. 182 would apply to a case which might not fall under s. 211. The information is given to a public servant who intends thereby to cause such public against a third person. The offence is towards the institution of such at all necessary that the public a information before instituting 182 against the person who had given such false information... In cases to which s. 211 especially applies, and in which a criminal proceeding has been instituted, a Court should, ... as a rule, proceed to determine such criminal proceeding instituted in it and should give the criminal Procedure Code of 1882 upon the prosecution of an offence under s. 182 or 211. It appears to us that it has been left to the discretion of the Court charges preferred in Court to a Magistrate, and s. 182 and s. 211. Information was given to the police.⁵

Punjab expressed its opinion similar to that of se where A falsely, and with intent to injure, informed the police that B had stolen property in his house. The police searched B's house, and the information proved to be false. It was held that A had instituted criminal proceedings and he was guilty of an offence under this section and not under s. 182.⁷

The former Chief Court of Lower Burma adopted the view of the Calcutta, Allahabad and Madras High Courts.⁸

Ingredients.—The necessary ingredients to constitute a false charge under this section are three:

1. An intention to cause injury to a particular person.

¹ (1872) 7 M. H. C. App. 5.

² Venkata Reddi, (1888) 1 Weir 120.

³ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁴ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁵ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁶ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁷ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁸ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁵ Hardwar Pal, (1912) 34 All 622, 627.

⁶ Muthra v. Rooria, (1870) P. R. No. 18 of 1870. See Todur Mal v. Mussammat Bholi,

(1882) P. R. No. 14 of 1882.

⁷ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

⁸ See Chandrasekhar v. N., 875.

2 Such injury should have been intended—

(a) by instituting or causing to be instituted criminal proceedings against that person, or

(b) by falsely charging him with having committed an offence.

3 Knowledge that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding or charge against that person.

1. 'Whoever with intent to cause injury to any person.'—The word 'whoever' indicates that the section applies to anyone who contravenes its provisions. The section applies not only to a private individual, but also to an officer who brings a false charge of an offence with intent to injure.¹ 'Intent to cause injury' is an essential part of the offence.² The phrase is precisely the same as the English legal term 'maliciously.' 'Injury' denotes any harm whatever, illegally caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or property (s. 44.)

2a. 'Institutes or causes to be instituted any criminal proceeding.'—The term 'institution' means the institution either by the accused himself, or by the Police or others in consequence of the accused's action, in some criminal Court.³ Institution of a criminal proceeding means laying of an information before a Magistrate.⁴ Under this section 'instituting a criminal proceeding' may be treated as an offence in itself apart from 'falsely charging' a person with having committed an offence.⁵ There are two modes in which a person aggrieved may seek to put the criminal law in motion: (1) by giving information to the police,⁶ and (2) by lodging a complaint before a Magistrate.⁷ A person who sets the criminal law in motion by making to the police a false charge in respect of a cognizable offence institutes criminal proceedings under the first part of this section; and it is not necessary that the complaint should be made to a Magistrate.⁸ But as the police have no power to take any proceedings in non-cognizable cases without the orders of a Magistrate, a false charge of such offence, made to the police, is not an institution of criminal proceedings but merely a false charge.⁹ The distinction between cognizable and non cognizable offences relates to the powers of the police only, and it will, therefore, seem that the false charge of any offence, whether cognizable or non-cognizable, before a Magistrate, is an institution of criminal proceedings.

If a person files an information before a Magistrate, disclosing circumstances of a civil nature, he cannot be proceeded with under this section if the circumstances alleged by him are found to be false.¹⁰

2b. 'Falsely charges any person with having committed an offence.'—"The words 'falsely charging' .. must be construed along with the words which speak of the 'institution of proceeding.' These latter words are obviously used in a technical and exclusive sense, and by parity of reasoning, the same restricted sense must be given to the words which relate to a false charge."¹¹ The words 'falsely charges' must be restricted to a charge made to some person in authority, that is to say, to some person who is in a position to get the offender punished. The charge must be embodied either in a complaint to a Magistrate or in a report of a cognizable offence to a police-officer.¹² The word 'charges' means something different from 'gives information.' The true test seems to be, does the person, who makes the statement which is alleged to constitute the 'charge,' do so with the

¹ Nabadeep Chunder Sirkar, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 2.

² Gopal Dhanuk, (1881) 7 Cal. 96.

³ Muhammad Hayat, (1921) P. W. R. No. 6 of 1922.

⁴ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

⁵ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

⁶ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

⁷ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

⁸ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

⁹ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

¹⁰ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

¹¹ Pratap Chandra V. P. Rao, (1908) 34 Cal. 100 (Cr.) 87.

Lala, (1890) Cr. R. No. 55 of 1890, Unrep. Cr. C. 521; Bonomally Sohas, (1868) 5 W. R. (Cr.) 32; Parahu, (1883) 5 All. 598; Nanjunda Rao, (1896) 20 Mad. 79; M. Chhoti Bai, (1906) 2 N. L. R. 119.

¹² Karim Buksh, sup.

¹³ Raghoo, (1865) Unrep. Cr. C. 3.

¹⁴ Per Ranade, J., in Karigouda, (1894)

19 Bom. 51, 69.

¹⁵ Gaya Barhai, (1922) 26 O. C. 44; Chhedi

Upadhyay, (1922) 4 P. L. T. 703.

intention and object of setting the criminal law in motion against the person against whom the statement is directed? Such object and intention may be inferred from the language of the statement and the circumstances in which it is made.¹ A petition was presented with the object of bringing to the knowledge of the authorities certain matters regarding which the petitioner had received information, in order that there might not be a repetition of an alleged tutoring of witnesses, and not with the object that the authorities should institute criminal proceedings. It was held that the petition did not amount to a 'charge' within the meaning of this section.²

Two out of three Judges comprising a Full Bench of the Madras High Court have held that the words 'false charge' must not be understood in any technical or restricted sense, but in their ordinary meaning of a false accusation made to any authority bound by law to investigate it or to take any steps in regard to it, such as giving information of it to superior authorities; and the institution of criminal proceedings includes the setting of the criminal law in motion. A complaint to a Village Magistrate, in such a case, amounts to a 'charge' and is also an institution of criminal proceedings. It would be otherwise if the offence complained of is one in regard to which the information need not, under s. 45 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be passed to the higher authorities.³ A complaint made to an executive officer as such which contains certain imputations against a person is not making a false charge.⁴

In the first part of this section the expressions "institutes or causes to be instituted any criminal proceeding" and "falsely charges" are used, and in the court that the uting proceed-

"and that only what is within the latter phrase was Wilson, J., who delivered the judgment of the reasoning in one sense and not in another. I agree that we must take it that the Legislature did not regard the two phrases as co-extensive in meaning, but considered that they were, or might be, cases to which the one would apply and not the other. But I do not think we are to suppose that the Legislature meant phrases to be mutually exclusive in meaning, so that the instituting of criminal proceedings must be by something which is not a charge, and a charge must be something which is not the institution of criminal proceedings.

First, because there is no mode by which dings except by making a charge;

does it all, to whatever length the

And secondly, because the last part of the section speaks of se charge."

that the charge was deliberately made before an
It is not officer of necessary

that a false charge is made though no prosecution is instituted, it is not necessary charge should not be pending at the time of the offender's trial.⁵ It is not necessary

¹ Rayan Kutti, (1903) 26 Mad. 640, 643;
Solaimulhu Pillai v. Marangai Moopan,
(1916) M. W. N. 272; Zorawar Singh, (1911)
S. A. L. J. R. 1106; Nihala, (1872) P. R.
No. 14 of 1872.

² Rayan Kutti, sup.

³ Sivan Chelli, (1909) 32 Mad. 258, F. B., per Benson and Munro, JJ., Sankaran Nair, per Benson and Munro, JJ., Gowda, (1908) all facts in this section

⁴ Zain-ul-Abdin v. Mistr Narab Din,
(1908) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 2 of 1909

⁵ Karim Buksh, (1888) 17 Cal. 574, 578,
F. R.

⁶ Subbanna Goundan, (1862) 1 M. H. C. 30.

⁷ Abul Hasan, (1877) 11 All. 497; Chenna
Malli Gowda, (1903) 27 Mad. 129; Bhairab
Chandra Barua, (1919) 46 Cal. 807.

⁸ Subbanna Goundan, sup.; Salik, (1877)
1 All. 527; Gati Mandal, (1905) 4 C. L. J. 88;
Bishoo Barik, (1871) 16 W. R. (Cr.) [77] 67;
Hukam Singh, (1886) P. R. No. 28 of 1886.

that summons should be issued upon such complaint¹; or that the statement made by the accused to the police officer should be reduced to writing in accordance with s. 154 of the Criminal Procedure Code.²

Bare statement is not a false charge.—A statement to the police of a suspicion that a particular person has committed an offence is not a charge within the meaning of this section, nor does it amount to an institution of a criminal proceeding, and a conviction cannot be had on proof that the suspicion was unfounded.³ A made a report to the police that his buffalo had been poisoned and that he suspected G of having administered the poison. The police made an inquiry and reported that there was no case of poisoning and the charge was struck out. G then brought a complaint under this section against A. It was held that the report to the police did not amount to a charge of a criminal offence.⁴ One G sent a registered letter to the Superintendent of Police complaining that the Sub-Inspector had exacted a bribe. An enquiry was made by the prosecuting Inspector, after which he moved the Court by means of a letter to prosecute G under this section. It was held that no offence under this section was committed as the section contemplated that the charge should be made to some person in authority who was in a position to get the offender punished.⁵ Something more is requisite than merely to falsely impute against a person that he has committed an offence. The 'charge' contemplated in this section appears both from the context and from the position of the section to be a charge made in order to the institution of criminal proceedings.⁶ If the statement is followed up by active steps against the person said to be suspected that is a charge.⁷

False charge should be made to a Court or to an officer having jurisdiction to investigate.—The false charge must be made to a Court or to an officer who has power to investigate and send it up for trial.⁸ It must be an accusation made with the intention to set the law in motion.⁹

A woman appeared before the Station Staff Officer and accused a non-commissioned officer of rape; and, after a military inquiry, the military authority held that the charge was false and directed the complainant to be prosecuted under this section. The conviction was set aside.¹⁰ Where the petitioner laid a charge of mischief by fire at a thana, which was reported to be false, and the District

Prosecution under s. 211, Indian Penal Code, sanctioned. To Babu M. N. Mukerjee for trial." It was held that the order of the District Magistrate was bad as the matter of the false charge had not come before him in the course of a judicial proceeding.¹¹

A person made a complaint to a District Registrar against the conduct of a subordinate officer. The latter had misappropriated a commission, and the District Registrar was satisfied as to the falsity of the complaint and made a report to himself as District Magistrate, and in this latter capacity passed the following order: "Read report of District Registrar. Prosecution of EB under ss. 211 and 182 of the Indian Penal Code sanctioned. Summon EB: ss. 182 and 211, Indian Penal Code." It was held that it was

¹ Hardeo Singh v. Hanuman Dat Narain, (1903) 26 All. 244, F. B.

² Mallappa Reddi, (1903) 27 Mad. 127.

³ Bramanund Bhattacharjee, (1881) 8 C.L.R. 233; Karigouda, (1894) 19 Bom. 51; Karim Balshah, (1904) P. R. No. 12 of 1905; Saminatha Thervan, [1912] M. W. N. 1125.

⁴ Abdul Ghafur, (1924) 6 Lah. 28.

⁵ Gaya Barkai, (1922) 26 O. C. 44.

⁶ Ghulam Hussain, (1878) P. R. No. 14 of 1879.

⁷ Hunooman Lall, (1872) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 5; Muthra v. Roora, (1870) P. R. No. 16 of 1870.

⁸ Jamoonah, (1881) 6 Cal. 620; Brojo Bashu Panda, (1908) 13 C. W. N. 398.

⁹ Mathura Prasad, (1917) 39 All. 715.

¹⁰ Jamoonah, sup.

¹¹ Haibat Khan, (1905) 33 Cal. 30.

clear from the record whether the District Magistrate purported to act under s. 195 or s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If he purported to act under s. 195, then the sanction would be without jurisdiction as to s. 182, Indian Penal Code, inasmuch as he was not the public officer concerned or the public officer to whom he was subordinate; and so far as the sanction related to this section it was equally without jurisdiction as there was no offence committed in or in relation to any proceedings in Court.¹

A peon sent a telegram to the Collector saying that the Tahsildar and certain others in his absence entered his house and forcibly inoculated his wife and children. The Collector sent the telegram to a Magistrate who examined the peon and certain witnesses who stated that they had heard that the complainant's house was forcibly entered into. Finding the statement false he directed the prosecution of the complainant and his witnesses. It was held that the complaint was no complaint in law and a prosecution could not be maintained against the peon under this section.²

Statement under s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code.—A statement under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code in answer to questions put by a police-officer making an investigation under s. 161 of that Code cannot be made the basis of a prosecution under this section.³ Such a statement is not a complaint or charge and cannot be made the basis of a prosecution for an offence under this section.⁴

'Offence' means a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law (s. 40). The criminal proceedings and false charges contemplated by this section mean proceedings instituted and charges made according to the provisions of criminal law in force in British India.⁵

3. 'Knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding or charge.'—This expression is the equivalent of the English technical phrase "without reasonable or probable cause," which means "an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. There must be: first, an honest belief of the accuser . . . based on a honest conviction . . . conclusion; . . . grounds; by this I mean such grounds as would lead any fairly cautious man in the defendant's situation so to believe; fourthly, the circumstances so believed and relied on by the accuser must be such as amount to reason the accused."⁶ "Unless the person making no just or lawful ground for it, he is not guilty of the offence, and cannot properly be convicted of it. It is not enough to find that he has acted in bad faith, that is, without due care or inquiry, or that he has acted maliciously, or that he had no sufficient reason to believe or did not believe the charge to be true. The actual falsity of the charge, recklessness in acting upon information without testing it, . . . charged, these are all . . . lusion must be, in order . . . knew that there was no just or lawful ground for proceeding. it may be difficult to prove this

¹ Elahi Bux, (1909) 11 C. L. J. 111.

² Chedi, (1910) 7 A. L. J. R. 618.

³ Chinna Ramana Gowd, (1908) 31 Mad. 566; Verupatti Penchalugaddi, (1902) 6 M. L. T. 133.

⁴ Krishna Baipadithaya, (1909) 8 M. L. T.

87, 20 M. L. J. 132.

⁵ Rambharthi Hirabharthi, (1923) 25 Bom. L. R. 772, 7 Bom. Cr. C. 78.

⁶ Per Hawkins, J., in Hicks v. Faulkner, (1878) 8 Q. B. D. 167, 171.

knowledge, but however difficult it may be, it must be proved, and unless it is proved the informer must be acquitted."¹

A person may in good faith institute a charge which is subsequently found to be false, or he may, with intent to cause injury to an enemy, institute criminal proceedings against him, believing there are good grounds for them, but in neither case has he committed an offence under this section. To constitute this offence it must be shown that the person instituting criminal proceedings knew there was no just or lawful ground for such proceedings.² It is not a sufficient ground that a person to whom a wrong has been done, or who conceives that a wrong has been done to him, makes a charge or complaint upon evidence or a statement which is not or ought not to be sufficient to satisfy a reasonable mind, if in truth he did not know, at the time he made the complaint, that there was no just and lawful ground for making it.³

The failure to prove a case by the complainant is not the same thing as the institution of a maliciously false case, so as to make him liable for an offence under this section.⁴

In the absence of any special circumstances to rebut it, the judgment of one competent tribunal against the complainant, affords a very strong evidence of reasonable and probable cause.⁵

4. 'If such criminal proceedings be instituted.'—There is a divergence of views between the Calcutta, Madras and Patna High Courts on the one hand, and the Allahabad High Court on the other, as to the question whether the latter part of this section applies to such cases of complaints to the police which are disposed of without a formal magisterial inquiry. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court⁶ has held that the latter part of this section would apply to such cases when the charge related to the more serious offence. This Full Bench case is followed by the Madras High Court in *Nanyunda Rau's case*⁷ in which it is said: "We are unable to find any warrant for holding that the words 'the institution of criminal proceedings' should be limited to the bringing of a charge before the Magistrate, or to action by the Magistrate against the person charged."

the Magistrate." "The test to apply is,—did the person who makes the charge intend to set the criminal law in motion against the person against whom the charge is made?"⁸

The Patna High Court has followed the Calcutta ruling.⁹ Where a person who gives false information as to the commission of an offence merely states that he suspects a certain other person to be the offender, it may be that he would not be liable under this section, but where it is clear that the informant's intention was not merely that the police should follow up a clue but that they should put the alleged offender on trial, the informant is guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁰

The Allahabad High Court has, on the other hand, held that to constitute the offence defined in the second paragraph of this section, it is necessary that criminal proceedings should be instituted. Where the offence committed does not go further than the making of a false charge to the police, the making of such

¹ Per Flowden, J., in Murad, (1892) P. R. No. 29 of 1894, p. 97.

² Chidra, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 327.

³ Per Flowden, J., in Murad, (1892) P. R. No. 29 of 1894, p. 97.

⁴ Karim Bulsh, (1888) 17 Cal. 574, F. R., overruling Karim Bulsh, (1887) 14 Cal. 633. See Ram Lohan Lal, (1903) 7 C. W. N. 556.

⁵ (1896) 20 Mad. 79, 81.

⁶ Mallappa Reddi, (1903) 27 Mad. 127, 128, F. R.

⁷ Parneshwar Lal (1925) 4 Pat. 472.

⁸ Ibid.

a charge does not amount to an institution of criminal proceedings, and the offence committed will fall within the first paragraph, notwithstanding that the offence so falsely charged may be one of those referred to in the second paragraph.¹ The words "if such criminal proceeding be instituted on a false charge of an offence punishable with death, etc.," compared with the phraseology of the first part of the section, leave no doubt that the actual institution of criminal proceedings on a false charge is essential to the application of the latter part of this section and that if the offence of the accused stops at making a false charge, his case falls under the first part of the section irrespective of the fact that the false charge relates to 'an offence punishable with death, transportation for life, or imprisonment for seven years or upwards.'²

The former Chief Court of the Punjab held likewise: "The first part of s. 211 deals with two kinds of acts by an accused, (a) the institution, or causing the institution, (not an attempt to cause the institution) of any criminal proceeding; (b) the making of a false charge: and however grave may be this charge, it is only when criminal proceedings are actually instituted that a special punishment is provided by the latter part of the section. Any charge of a cognizable offence must be followed by some inquiry by the Police, and if such inquiry alone were to be considered a criminal proceeding within the first part of the section, there would seem to be no reason for the distinction between the institution of proceedings and the making of a false charge. It seems to us clear that the 'institution' referred to in this section is the institution, either by the accused himself, by the Police or others, in consequence of accused's action, in some Criminal Court. It also appears to us that although the moral guilt of the accused may be the same in each case, yet as regards the effect of his act, it makes the very greatest difference whether the persons whom he charges are disgraced by being dragged—probably in custody—before a Criminal Court, or whether they are merely put to the inconvenience of answering a few questions by the Police and supporting their answers by evidence ready to their hand."³ Following this case the same Court held that the submission of a petition containing a false charge of bribery to the Inspector-General of Police against a Sub-Inspector is punishable under this section.⁴

False charge of arson.—Where a man burnt his own house and charged another with the act, it was held that he had committed an offence under this section and not under s. 195.⁵

False charge of dacoity.—Where a false charge of dacoity was made to a Police-officer, who referred it to a Magistrate as false, and the Magistrate ordered the charge to be dismissed without taking any action against the parties implicated, and the prisoner who preferred the charge was tried under this section, it was held that the person had instituted criminal proceedings within the meaning of this section.⁶

False charge of theft.—Where A falsely and with intent to injure B informed the Police that B had stolen property in his house, and the Police searched B's house, and the information proved to be false, it was held that A had instituted

¹ Bisheshar, (1893) 16 All. 124; Niaz Ali, (1907) 27 A. W. N. 149; Barkatullah v. Sadho Nalwar, (1912) 10 A. L. J. R. 429. See Jag-mohan, (1909) 6 A. L. J. R. 989, in which it is held, following these authorities, that if the Magistrate commits the accused for trial to the Court of Session only on the ground that the offence charged falls within the second paragraph of that section, and does not say that the fine or sentence which he can impose will not be adequate to meet the ends of justice, the commitment is bad in law.

² Pitam Rai, (1882) 5 All. 216, 218, approved of in Parahu, (1883) 5 All. 598 and Bisheshar, sup.

³ Per Roe, J., in Sullan, (1887) F. R. No. 3 of 1888. See Khan Bahadur, (1893) F. R. No. 26 of 1888.

⁴ Hamayan, (1907) F. R. No. 26 of 1908.

⁵ Bhugwan Akir, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 63.

⁶ Nanjunda Rao, (1896) 20 Mad. 70.

criminal proceedings, and that he was therefore guilty of an offence under this section and not under s. 182.¹

False charge of hurt.—Where a charge of voluntarily causing hurt contained in a petition of complaint was wilfully false, and made with intent to injure another, the complainant was held guilty of this offence.²

False charge in a petition which is not a complaint.—Where the accused submitted a petition to the Deputy Commissioner while he was on tour making certain complaints against a manager of the Court of Wards, and the accused was convicted of an offence under this section for making a false charge against the manager of the Court of Wards, it was held that the petition submitted by the accused not being a complaint within the meaning of s. 4 (h) of the Criminal Procedure Code and there being no institution of criminal proceedings, the conviction was illegal.³

False report by a police-officer.—Where a Head Constable falsely reported to his superior that certain persons were in the habit of dealing with stolen goods and they were prosecuted but acquitted, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.⁴ But where a police-officer made a false report regarding a certain offence which the Magistrate found, after hearing the evidence, to be false, it was held that he could not be prosecuted under this section as he had not instituted criminal proceedings against any person.⁵

Partly false and partly true complaint.—The section contemplates a charge which is indivisible in its nature; to judge whether a complaint, part of which is true and part of which is false, falls under the section the nature of the complaint or charge made by the accused has to be considered: in other words, whether the complaint is substantially true or whether it is substantially false; no precise rule or principle can be laid down in respect of the question, and each case must depend upon its own circumstances.⁶

Vexatious charge.—To bring a vexatious charge is not an offence under this section.⁷

Compounding.—The fact that an offence alleged to have been committed had been compounded is no conclusive answer to a charge made against the prosecutor under this section.⁸

Abetment.—A person cannot be convicted of a false charge solely on the ground of his having given evidence in support of such charge.⁹

Civil remedy.—A person aggrieved by a false charge may, if he choose, sue in a civil Court for damages for malicious prosecution, instead of taking criminal proceedings under this section. (For civil remedy, see The authors' "Law of Torts," Ch. XV). A criminal prosecution for an offence under this section is not a condition precedent to the right to sue for damages.¹⁰

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused instituted or caused to be instituted criminal proceedings; or

That he made a charge of an offence.

(2) That there were no just or lawful grounds for such proceedings; or

That such charge was false.

¹ Muthra v. Roora, (1870) P. R. No. 16 of 1870. See Hunooman Lall, (1872) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 5.

² Mata Dyal, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 6.

³ Ahmad Khan, (1904) P. L. R. No. 109 of 1904. See also Jagbundhoo Karmakar, (1902) 30 Cal. 415.

⁴ Rhedoy Nath Biswas, (1895) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 44.

⁵ Thakur Tewary, (1900) 4 C. W. N. 347.

⁶ G. S. v. M. S., (1900) 5 C. W. N. 727.

⁷ G. S. v. M. S., (1900) 5 C. W. N. 727.

⁸ G. S. v. M. S., (1900) 5 C. W. N. 727.

⁹ G. S. v. M. S., (1900) 5 C. W. N. 727.

¹⁰ Viranna v. Nagayyah, (1881) 3 Mad. 6; Shama Churn Bose v. Bhola Nath Dutt, (1866) 6 W. R. (Civ. Ref.) 9.

It is the duty of the prosecution to prove by satisfactory evidence that the charge was wilfully false to the knowledge of the maker of the charge.¹

(3) That the accused then knew such criminal proceedings or charge to be without just or lawful grounds.²

(4) That he did as above with intent to cause injury to the person in question.³

It is for the prosecution to make out a distinct case against the accused; not for the accused in the first instance to show that he had just or lawful ground.⁴ It is for the prosecution to establish its case, and if it fail to supply that proof which is required to secure the conviction of the accused, the failure on the part of the latter to examine any particular witness will not imply the guilt of the accused.⁵ The party accused should be allowed to show the information on which he acted and the Judge ought not only to be satisfied that the facts alleged as the ground for making the charge are in themselves untrue and insufficient, but also that they were known to be such to the accused when the charge was made by him.⁶

Failure on the part of the complainant to establish the truth of his allegation does not by any means justify the inference that the complaint was false; and to secure a conviction in this class of cases it must further be established beyond reasonable doubt that the circumstances are not merely consistent with the guilt of the accused but entirely inconsistent with his innocence.⁷

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class: by Court of Session, and any such Magistrate if the offence charged is punishable with imprisonment for seven years or upwards; by Court of Session alone if the case falls under the second class.

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate is required for a prosecution under this section.⁸ A false complaint made to the Police does not require any such sanction.⁹

The 'criminal proceedings' contemplated in this section are proceedings in Court.¹⁰

Where an information to the police is followed by a complaint to the Court, based on the same allegations and the same charge, and such complaint has been investigated by the Court, the complaint of the Court itself is necessary even for a prosecution of the informant under this section in respect of the false charge made to the police.¹¹ Where an information is lodged with the police and the police on enquiry report it to be false but the informant, by an application to the Magistrate, insists on a judicial investigation, he is deemed to have preferred a complaint to the Magistrate and a complaint by the Court itself is requisite before cognizance of an offence punishable under this section can be taken in respect of the false charge.

¹ Mirza Hassan Mirza v. Muss. Mahbuban, (1913) 18 C. W. N. 391.

² Vridachella Pillai, (1883) 1 Weir 185; Murad, (1893) P. R. No. 29 of 1894; Tomij alias Tomijuddin Pramanick, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 391; Chidda, (1897) 20 All. 40; Muthoorapershad Panday, (1895) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 10.

³ Jan Muhammad Husen, (1885) P. R. No. 1 of 1886.

⁴ Nobokisto Ghose, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 87.

⁵ Mirza Hassan Mirza v. Muss. Mahbuban, sup.

⁶ Narainmal valat Umedmal, (1866) 3 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 16.

⁷ Ram Prasad, (1912) 17 C. W. N. 379, 16 C. L. J. 453.

⁸ Section 125, Criminal Procedure Code; Khandersao Yeshwant, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R.

302, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 125; Hardwar Pal, (1912) 34 All. 522.

⁹ Gokool Chunder Chowdry, (1875) 24 W. R. (Cr.) 41; Ram Ranjan Bhandari v. Madhub Ghose, (1876) 25 W. R. (Cr.) 33; Putiram Rudas v. Mahomed Kasem, (1895) 3 C. W. N. 33; Dharmadas Kaurar, (1908) 12 C. W. N. 575, 7 C. L. J. 373; Jadu Nandan Singh, (1909) 37 Cal. 250; Todur Mal v. Mussammat Bholi, (1882) P. R. No. 14 of 1882; Muthra v. Roora, (1870) P. R. No. 16 of 1870; Ramasami, (1884) 7 Mad. 292; Ganpat, (1894) Unrep. Cr. C. 704 No. Cr. R., 26 of 1894; Mi Ngue v. Mi Chu, (1911) U. B. R. 134; Po Hling v. Ba E, (1911) 6 L. B. R. 50.

¹⁰ See Mi Wa, (1915) 8 L. B. R. 534.

¹¹ See Ananda Lal Mullick, (1916) 44 Cal. 650.

made to the police, irrespective of whether the Magistrate has investigated the complaint or not.¹

A prosecution of a charge under this section should not be launched as a matter of course, but only when the complainant can satisfy the Court that the interests of justice require a prosecution, and there is a strong prima facie case against the accused.² It is not in every case that a Magistrate should launch a prosecution under this section. Each case must be judged by its own facts. Where, therefore, the Magistrate and the Judge came to different conclusions upon the evidence, which was of a doubtful character, and the complainant was a boy of twelve years of age, it was held that the Magistrate should not have directed his prosecution, and his order was accordingly set aside.³ The fact that the complainant fails to prove his case is by itself not sufficient.⁴ Prosecution should only be instituted where the case is a deliberately false one,⁵ and there is a reasonable probability of conviction.⁶ It would be an abuse of the powers vested in a Court of Justice, if a complaint were made on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility it is desirable that the matter should be threshed out so that it may be decided whether or not an offence has been committed.⁷ Before launching a prosecution there must be a reasonable belief in the mind of the Court that there was no foundation for the criminal charge, and that in instituting criminal proceedings the complainant acted knowingly without belief in the truth of the allegations made by him or recklessly without caring whether the allegations were true or false.⁸

Where the Court of first instance finds an instrument to be genuine and the Judge in appeal happens to take a different view of the matter, it is not desirable to file a complaint.⁹ him then he may determine whether the complaint is true or false. There is accused must be in a position to know what statements alleged to be false are.¹²

A Deputy Magistrate has no power to question an order made by his superior.¹³

Before making complaint the accused should be allowed to prove the truth of his complaint.—A Magistrate does not exercise a proper discretion who on the receipt of a police report that a complaint is false, forthwith makes a complaint under this section. The complainant must be given an opportunity to prove the truth of his complaint, but before the Magistrate. "If persons are to be prosecuted... upon the ¹ Shankh Muhammad Yassin, (1924) 4 Pat. 323.

² See Gauri Sahai, (1883) 6 All. 114; Veeraraghava Swami Naidu v. Bhagavatula, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 172; Ma Saw Kyn v. Maung Tun Lin, (1899) P. J. L. B. 542; Chundra Kant Ghose, (1888) 3 C. W. N. 3; Prabh Dial v. Gurdit Singh, (1922) 4 L. L. J. 89.

³ Gopal Baril, (1906) 34 Cal. 42; Jadu

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ See Kusum Sao v. Janak Lal, (1919) 4 P. L. J. 374.

⁶ See Ram Prasad Roy v. Sooba Roy, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 400; Raghupat Sahay, (1921) 3 P. L. T. 93.

⁷ Chundra Kant Ghose, sup

⁸ See Rachappa Tippanna, (1910) 12 Bom. L. R. 229.

⁹ See Bholu, (1910) 7 A. L. J. R. 991.

¹⁰ See Irad Ally, (1879) 4 Cal. 889.

¹¹ See Lalji Gope v. Giridhari Chaudhury, (1900) 5 C. W. N. 106; Gubala Ram Reddi, (1887) 1 Weir 188.

mere report of a Police officer that their complaints are not true, the Police are made the judges whether a complaint is true or false. Such a delegation of magisterial functions is not contemplated by the law, and it requires but little experience of this country to understand how dangerous it would be to the best interests of justice. Magistrates of all grades cannot understand too clearly that, while the police perform their proper duty in collecting evidence, it is the function of the Magistrate alone to decide upon the sufficiency or credibility of this evidence when collected."¹ All the witnesses whom the person accused of making the false charge wishes to produce must be heard.² A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has laid down that a Magistrate may take cognizance, under ss. 191 and 192, Criminal Procedure Code, of an offence brought to his notice by a police report which affords ground for a suspicion that an offence has been committed; but, as a matter of sound judicial discretion, a Magistrate should not so proceed and direct that the person suspected be tried until some person aggrieved has complained, or until he has before him a police report on the subject based on an investigation directed to the offence to be tried, and, in cases of alleged false charges, until it is clear that the original charge has been either heard and dismissed or abandoned. The person who made the original charge should be offered an opportunity of supporting it or abandoning it.³ This Full Bench case has been unwillingly followed in a later case of the same Court in which it is said that when a person institutes before the police criminal proceedings, found on inquiry to be false, before he can be prosecuted under this section, he must first have an opportunity of proving his case; if he impugns the correctness of the police inquiry by a petition, he is entitled to have the persons complained against tried on the charge, or else his statement must be recorded on oath and his complaint dismissed under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code.⁴

A different view has been taken by the Bombay, Madras and Allahabad High Courts. According to the Bombay High Court the fact that no opportunity was allowed to the accused by the Magistrate to substantiate his complaint before striking it off, is not a circumstance which will invalidate the commitment duly made, and the conviction otherwise good cannot be set aside on account of such omission.⁵ A person who makes a false complaint to the police may be proceeded with under this section, and it is not competent to a Magistrate to refuse to entertain such a case on the ground that the accused is not afforded an opportunity of proving his original complaint in a Court of competent jurisdiction.⁶

A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has decided that the party to whose prejudice action under this section is taken must be previously heard and a judgment formed upon legal evidence. In cases in which the Magistrate dismisses the original complaint upon a report from the police there is no legal evidence before him on which to form his judgment. In cases, however, in which the Magistrate examines the complainant, and hears the evidence, and acquits or discharges the accused and then no notice to show cause is given, the case is different.⁷

The Allahabad High Court has also held that the complainant should be given reasonable opportunity of proving his case, and it is not sufficient to take

¹ Per Garth, C. J., and Field, J., in Karimdad, (1880) 6 Cal. 496, 498; Grish Chunder Nandi, Solhina Bibi, (1881) 7 Cal. 87; Gyan Chunder Roy v. Protap Chunder Dass, (1881) 7 Cal. 208, 211; Giridhari Mondul, (1881) 8 Cal. 435; Gangoo Singh, (1878) 2 C. L. R. 389; Mahadeo Singh, (1900) 37 Cal. 921.

² Shibo Behara, (1881) 6 Cal. 534; Mahadeo Singh, sup.

³ See Sham Lall, (1887) 14 Cal. 707, r. 2.; Jyotsankar Karmakar, (1902) 30 Cal. 415; Ganamoey Sengul, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 738; Mukunda Behari v. Bhikari Charan Mahanti, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 452, Vishnu Morshwar Gadgil, (1900) Criminal Application for Revision No. 71 of 1900. Unrep. (Bom.). Decided on the 21st July 1900. Per Scott, C. J., and Batchelor, J.; Abbas Ali, O. S. C. 94; Gangaram Sonar, (1893) 7 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 6.

⁴ Jogendra Nath Mookerjee, (1905) 33 Cal. 1.

⁵ Jyibhai Gorind, (1896) 22 Bom. 506.

⁶ Salik Roy, (1891) 6 Cal. 582.

⁷ Bhika Lala, (1890) Unrep. Cr. C. 524.

Cr. R. No. 55 of 1890.

⁸ See Sheik Beari, (1887) 10 Ind. 232, r. n.

action merely on the report of the police.¹ But where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint as a false one, and decides to proceed against the complainant for making a false charge, he is not bound before so proceeding to give the complainant an opportunity of substantiating the truth of the complaint, by being allowed to produce evidence before him.²

The former Chief Court of the Punjab held that notice to show cause is not always essential before taking action.³

False charge to the police and to the Magistrate.—Where a charge has been made to the police and on investigation found to be false, if the same charge is repeated to a Magistrate by a complaint upon which he takes action, the person aggrieved cannot then ignore the Magistrate's proceedings and institute a prosecution in respect of the charge made to the police.⁴ A written complaint of the Magistrate will be necessary for the prosecution of the complainant. He can be prosecuted under s. 182, for although the offence under this section must always include that under s. 182, a Court can convict of the minor offence if it so chooses.⁵

Section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—Where criminal proceedings have been instituted against a person with intent to cause injury to him, without lawful ground, the Magistrate should not dismiss the complaint as false and vexatious and direct the complainant to pay compensation to the person against whom the proceedings are instituted, but should take proceedings under this section.⁶

No pending proceedings.—It must be proved that the original proceedings are not pending at the time of the offender's trial.⁷

The original charge need not have been fully heard and dismissed, it is sufficient if it is not pending.⁸

Finding should state the nature of the charge—Where a prisoner is convicted of having made a false charge of an offence, the nature of the false charge should be stated in the finding and entered in the calendar.⁹

Punishment under second clause—A prisoner convicted under the second clause should be sentenced to imprisonment, with or without fine, and not to fine alone.¹⁰

Summary proceeding—The conviction by a Magistrate of a person for an offence under this section in a summary proceeding is improper.¹¹

Misdirection to jury—In a case of bringing a false charge of dacoity under this section, the Sessions Judge concluded his charge to the jury in these words: "If you believe the charge of dacoity to be false, then you should find the prisoner guilty under s. 211; otherwise you should acquit him." It was held that the charge view of the Bombay, Madras and Allahabad High Courts.

¹ Kina Karmakar v. Preo Nath Dutt, (1901) 29 Cal. 479.
² Salik, (1887) 1 All. 527; Manga Ram, (1886) P. R. No. 28 of 1883; Gati Mandal, (1905) 4 C. L. J. 88, following Gunamony Sapui, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 758.
³ Subbanna Goundan, (1862) 1 M. H. C. 30.
⁴ Arjun, (1863) 1 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 87.
⁵ Rama bin Rabbaji, (1863) 1 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 34.
⁶ Paras Hajra v. Bandhi Dhanuk, (1900) 28 Cal. 251.
⁷ Tomijalias Tomijuddin Pronanick, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 301.
⁸ Daroga Gope, (1925) 6 P. L. T. 515.

mere report of a Police officer that their complaints are not true, the Police are made the judges whether a complaint is true or false. Such a delegation of magisterial functions is not contemplated by the law, and it requires but little experience of this country to understand how dangerous it would be to the best interests of justice. Magistrates of all grades cannot understand too clearly that, while the police perform their proper duty in collecting evidence, it is the function of the Magistrate alone to decide upon the sufficiency or credibility of this evidence when collected."¹ All the witnesses whom the person accused of making the false charge wishes to produce must be heard.² A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has laid down that a Magistrate may take cognizance, under ss. 191 and 192, Criminal Procedure Code, of an offence brought to his notice by a police report which affords ground for a suspicion that an offence has been committed; but, as a matter of sound judicial discretion, a Magistrate should not so proceed and direct that the person suspected be tried until some person aggrieved has complained, or until he has before him a police report on the subject based on an investigation directed to the offence to be tried, and, in cases of alleged false charges, until it is clear that the original charge has been either heard and dismissed or abandoned. The person who made the original charge should be offered an opportunity of supporting it or abandoning it.³ This Full Bench case has been unwillingly followed in a later case of the same Court in which it is said that when a person institutes before the police criminal proceedings, found on inquiry to be false, before he can be prosecuted under this section, he must first have an opportunity of proving his case; if he impugns the correctness of the police inquiry by a petition, he is entitled to have the persons complained against tried on the charge, or else his statement must be recorded on oath and his complaint dismissed under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code.⁴

A different view has been taken by the Bombay, Madras and Allahabad High Courts. According to the Bombay High Court the fact that no opportunity was allowed to the accused by the Magistrate to substantiate his complaint before striking it off, is not a circumstance which will invalidate the commitment duly made, and the conviction otherwise good cannot be set aside on account of such omission.⁵ A person who makes a false complaint to the police may be proceeded with under this section, and it is not competent to a Magistrate to refuse to entertain such a case on the ground that the accused is not afforded an opportunity of proving his original complaint in a Court of competent jurisdiction.⁶

A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has decided that the party to whose prejudice action under this section is taken must be previously heard and a judgment formed upon legal evidence. In cases in which the Magistrate dismisses the original complaint upon a report from the police there is no legal evidence before him on which to form his judgment. In cases, however, in which the Magistrate examines the complainant, and hears the evidence, and acquits or discharges the accused and then no notice to show cause is given, the case is different.⁷

The Allahabad High Court has also held that the complainant should be given reasonable opportunity of proving his case, and it is not sufficient to take

¹ Per Garth, C. J., and Field, J., in Karimdad, (1880) 6 Cal. 498, 498; Griish Chunder Nundi, Solkhina Bibi, (1881) 7 Cal. 87; Gyan Chunder Roy v. Protap Chunder Dass, (1881) 7 Cal. 208, 211; Giridhari Mondul, (1881) 8 Cal. 435; Gangoo Singh, (1878) 2 C. L. R. 339; Mahadeo Singh, (1900) 37 Cal. 921.

² Shibo Behara, (1881) 6 Cal. 384; Mahadeo Singh, sup.

³ See Sham Lal, (1887) 14 Cal. 707, re. n.; Jogabandhoo Karmakar, (1902) 30 Cal. 415; Gunamony Supui, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 758; Mukunda Behari v. Bhikari Charan Mahanti, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 452; Vishnu Moresahwar Gadgil, (1900) Criminal Application for Revision No. 71 of 1900. Unrep. (Bom.). Decided on the 21st July 1900. Per Scott, C. J., and Batchelor, J.; Abbas Ali, O. S. C. 91; Gangaram Sonar, (1893) 7 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 6; Jogendra Nath Mookerjee, (1905) 33 Cal. 1; Jijibhai Govind, (1896) 22 Bom. 506; Salik Roy, (1881) 6 Cal. 582.

⁴ Bhika Lal, (1880) Unrep. Cr. C. 624, Cr. R. No. 53 of 1890.

⁵ See Sheik Beari, (1887) 10 Mad. 232, re. n.

action merely on the report of the police.¹ But where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint as a false one, and decides to proceed against the complainant for making a false charge, he is not bound before so proceeding to give the complainant an opportunity of substantiating the truth of the complaint, by being allowed to produce evidence before him.²

The former Chief Court of the Punjab held that notice to show cause is not always essential before taking action.³

False charge to the police and to the Magistrate.—Where a charge has been made to the police and on investigation found to be false, if the same charge is repeated to a Magistrate by a complaint upon which he takes action, the person aggrieved cannot then ignore the Magistrate's proceedings and institute a prosecution in respect of the charge made to the police.⁴ A written complaint of the Magistrate will be necessary for the prosecution of the complainant. He can be prosecuted under s. 182, for although the offence under this section must always include that under s. 182, a Court can convict of the minor offence if it so chooses.⁵

Section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—Where criminal proceedings have been instituted against a person with intent to cause injury to him, without lawful ground, the Magistrate should not dismiss the complaint as false and vexatious and direct the complainant to pay compensation to the person against whom the proceedings are instituted, but should take proceedings under this section.⁶

No pending proceedings.—It must be proved that the original proceedings are not pending at the time of the offender's trial.⁷

The original charge need not have been fully heard and dismissed, it is sufficient if it is not pending.⁸

Finding should state the nature of the charge.—Where a prisoner is convicted of having made a false charge of an offence, the nature of the false charge should be stated in the finding and entered in the calendar.⁹

Punishment under second clause.—A prisoner convicted under the second clause should be sentenced to imprisonment, with or without fine, and not to fine alone.¹⁰

Summary proceeding.—The conviction by a Magistrate of a person for an offence under this section in a summary proceeding is improper.¹¹

Misdirection to jury.—In a case of bringing a false charge of dacoity under this section, the Sessions Judge concluded his charge to the jury in these words: "If you believe the charge of dacoity to be false, then you should find the prisoner guilty under s. 211; otherwise—" was erroneous and defective instead of directing as he

most essential elements of the charge under this section, namely, that in instituting the false charge of dacoity there was no just or lawful ground for the charge, and the jury should have been asked to say whether the charge was false and whether in instituting that charge there was no just or lawful ground.¹²

¹ See, e.g., P. R. No. 1889 (1889) 5 All. 20, 22.

² Kina Karmakar v. Preo Nath Dutt, (1901) 29 Cal. 479.

³ Salik, (1887) 1 All. 527; Manga Ram, (1886) P. R. No. 28 of 1883; Gati Mandal, (1905) 4 C. L. J. 88, following Gunamony Sapui, (1899) 3 C. W. N. 758.

⁴ Subbanna Goundan, (1862) 1 M. H. C. 30.

⁵ Arjun, (1863) 1 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 87.

⁶ Rama bin Rabbaji, (1863) 1 B. H. C. (C. Cr.) 34.

⁷ Parsi Hajra v. Bandhi Dhanuk, (1900) 28 Cal. 251.

⁸ Tomij alias Tomijuddin Promanick, (1897) 1 C. W. N. 301.

(1908) 4 N. L. R. 136, which follows the view of the Bombay, Madras and Allahabad High Courts.

⁹ See, e.g., P. R. No. 1889 (1889) 5 All. 20, 22.

¹⁰ Daroga Gope, (1925) 6 P. L. T. 515.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, with intent to cause injury to one—[instituted criminal proceedings before—charging the said—with having committed an offence, to wit—.] (or) [falsely charged the said—before—with having committed an offence, to wit—,] knowing at the time that there was no just or lawful ground for such proceedings (or charge) against the said—; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 211 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 6, 11 and 12.

212. Whenever an offence has been committed,¹ whoever harbours or conceals a person whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the offender,² with the intention of screening him from legal punishment,³

Harbouring offender—

shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if a capital
offence;

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year and, not to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

“Offence” in this section includes any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460; and every such act shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be punishable as if the accused person had been guilty of it in British India.

Exception.—This provision shall not extend to any case in which the harbour or concealment is by the husband or wife of the offender.

ILLUSTRATION.

(C.C.) A, knowing that B has committed dacoity, knowingly conceals B in order to screen him from legal punishment. Here, as B is liable to transportation for life, A is liable to imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding three years, and is also liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section applies to the harbouring of persons who have actually committed some offence under the Penal Code or an offence under some special or local law, when the thing punishable under such special or local law is punishable with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards. It supposes that some offence has actually been committed, and that the harbourer gives refuge to one whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the offender with the intention of screening him from legal punishment. It does not apply to the harbouring of persons, not being criminals, who merely abscond to avoid or delay a judicial investigation.

Harbouring escaped prisoners of war is punishable under s. 130 and harbouring a deserter from the Army or Navy is punishable under s. 136.

This section deals with that class of offenders who are known as 'accessories after the fact' under the English law. An 'accessory after the fact' is one who, knowing a felony to have been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts, or assists the felon.¹

Ingredients.—The section has three essentials—

1. Commission of an offence.
2. Harbouring or concealing the person known or believed to be the offender.
3. Such concealment must be with the intention of screening him from legal punishment.

1. 'Offence has been committed.'—It must be shown that the offence has been completed before the offender was harboured or concealed. Hawkins² says:—“A man shall never be construed an accessory to a felony, in respect of the receipt of an offender, who at the time of the receipt was not a felon, but afterwards becomes such by matter subsequent; as where one receives another who has wounded a person dangerously, that happens to die after such receipt. For though the offender be for special reasons adjudged to some purposes guilty of homicide ab initio, yet he shall not be so esteemed in respect of any others but himself; for fictions in law shall never be carried further than the reasons which introduce them necessarily require.” Under the Penal Code such a person is liable to be convicted of harbouring one who had committed grievous hurt.

2. 'Harbours or conceals a person whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the offender.'—See s. 216-B, infra, as to the meaning of 'harbour.' A person who employs another to harbour the offender may be convicted as 'accessory after the fact' though he himself did no act of relieving, etc.³

'Knows'—It is necessary that the harbourer at the time when he assists, comforts the offender, should have notice, express or implied, that he had committed a crime.⁴

'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra.

3. 'Intention of screening him from legal punishment.'—The harbouring or concealing must be with intent to save the offender from punishment.

Exception.—The exception only extends to the cases where harbour is afforded by a wife or husband. No other relationship can excuse the wilful receipt or assistance of felons; a father cannot assist his child, a child his parent, a brother his brother, a master his servant, or a servant his master. The law in England is to the same effect.

In a case in England a woman was charged with comforting, harbouring, and assisting a man who had committed a murder, and it appeared that she considered herself as his wife, and lived with him as such for years, it was held that she was

¹ 2 Hawk., c. 29, s. 1.

² Ibid., s. 35.

³ Jarris, (1837) 2 M. & Rob. 40.

⁴ 2 Hawk., c. 29, s. 32.

entitled to be acquitted even though the marriage was in some respects irregular and probably invalid.¹

Amendment.—The clause defining 'offence' under this section was introduced by Act III of 1894, s. 7.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that an offence has been committed by the person harboured.

(2) That such offence is punishable with (a) death, or (b) transportation for life or imprisonment not exceeding ten years, or (c) imprisonment from one to ten years.

(3) That the accused has harboured or concealed the offender.

(4) That the accused then knew him to be an offender, or had reason to believe him to be so.

(5) That the accused thereby intended to screen such offender from legal punishment.²

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or by Magistrate, Presidency or first class, if the case falls under the first or second clause; by Magistrate, Presidency or first class, or by Court by which the offence is triable, if the case falls under the third clause.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That on or about the—day of—the offence of (specify it) was committed at (specify the place) by AB, and that you on or about the—day of—at—harbo—time o—offence—of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901).

213. Whoever¹ accepts or attempts to obtain, or agrees to accept, any gratification² for himself or any other person, or any restitution of property to himself or any other person, in consideration of his concealing an offence or of his screening any person from legal punishment³ for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment, shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to a fine;

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

¹ Mary Good, (1817) 1 C. & K. 185.

² Pakeh Singh, (1859) 13 All. 432; Kala

Singh, (1867) P. R. No. 21 of 1867.

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

The compounding of a crime by some agreement not to bring the criminal to justice, if the property is restored or a pecuniary or other gratification is given, is the offence punished by this and the following sections. This section does not apply where the compounding of an offence is legal. It is the duty of every State to punish criminals. No individual has, therefore, a right to compound any crime because he himself is injured and no one else.

Ingredients.—The section has two essentials—

1. A person accepting or attempting to obtain any gratification or restitution of property for himself or any other person.

2. Such gratification must have been obtained in consideration of (a) concealing an offence, or (b) screening any person from legal punishment for an offence, or (c) not proceeding against a person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment.

1. 'Whoever accepts...gratification for himself or any other person, or any restitution of property, etc.'—The offence of compounding a larceny may be committed by a person other than the owner of the goods stolen or a material witness for the prosecution.¹

'Gratification'.—See s. 161, supra.

2. 'In consideration of his concealing an offence, or of his screening any person from legal punishment.'—See s. 214, infra. This section applies only where there has been an actual concealment of an offence, or screening of a person from legal punishment, or abstention from proceeding criminally against a person, and as consideration for the same, there has been an acceptance of, or attempt to obtain, or agreement to accept, any gratification or restitution of property. It has no application where only an acceptance of, or attempt to obtain, or agreement to accept, any gratification or restitution on a promise to conceal, screen, or abstain, is proved, and nothing more.²

This section is applicable only when it is proved that the person screened or attempted to be screened from legal punishment has been guilty of an offence,³ and not when there is merely a suspicion of his having committed some offence.⁴ A person complained to the accused, who were Panchayets, that A had stolen his fishing cage and concealed it in a tank near his house. The accused came to A's house and found the cage in the tank. They then took him into custody and threatened to send him up to the thana. Eventually they took from him Rs. 5 and did not proceed against him. The accused were charged with and found guilty of an offence under this section. It was held that the conviction was wrong as there was mere jewellery to M, such pledging returned by S to G on the latter undertaking not to prosecute M for the offence of criminal breach of trust. M was accused of criminal breach of trust, but was acquitted. S and G were also charged with offences under this and the following ¹ Burgess, (1888) 16 Q. B. D. 141.

² 694, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 101.

³ Hemchandra Mulherjee, (1924) 52 Cal. 151.

⁴ Girish Mitya, (1896) 23 Cal. 420.

⁵ Ibid.

⁶ Sanalal Lalubhai, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R.

sections, in that they took and offered restitution of property in consideration of screening an offence. The trying Magistrate¹ convicted S and G of the offences charged, on the ground that for the purposes of the present case M must be held guilty. On appeal it was held, acquitting the accused, (1) that there could be no screening of an offence, which offence was not proved to have been committed; (2) that the trying Magistrate was bound to proceed on the footing that no criminal breach of trust had been committed, since the prosecution could not make it appear that such an offence had been committed.²

The word 'offence' denotes a thing punishable under the Code or any special or local law (s. 40).

¹ Exception.—See Exception to s. 214, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the commission of the offence concealed.

(2) That the accused (a) concealed such offence; or (b) screened the offender from legal punishment; or (c) omitted to proceed against such offender so as to bring him to punishment.

(3) That the accused accepted, or attempted to obtain, or agreed to accept the gratification or restitution, as described in the section.

(4) That the accused so accepted, etc., in consideration of such concealment, etc., as (2).

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session if the case falls under the first clause; by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class, if it falls under the second; by Magistrate, Presidency or first class, or by Court empowered to try the offence screened, if it falls under the third.

Charge—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That on or about the—day of—, at—, one AB committed the offence —, punishable with—, and that you on or about the—day of—, at—, accepted (or attempted to obtain, or agreed to accept), a certain gratification, to wit—, [or certain property, to wit—] for yourself (or for—) in consideration of your concealing the said offence of—[or screening the said—] from legal punishment for the said offence, or not proceeding against the said AB for the —, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by the Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

214. Whoever gives or causes, or offers or agrees to give

Offering gift or restoration of property in consideration of screening offender—or cause, any gratification to any person¹, or to restore or cause the restoration of any property to any person, in consideration of that person's concealing an offence, or of his screening any person from legal punishment² for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment,

shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;
if a capital offence;

¹ Sanakal Lalubhai, (1913) 15 Bom. L. R. 694, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 101.

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—The provisions of sections 213 and 214 do not extend to any case in which the offence may lawfully be compounded.³

COMMENT.

The last section punished the receiver of a gift in consideration of compromising an offence : this section punishes the offerer of the gift.

Scope.—The offence of giving a gratification to any person in consideration of that person concealing any offence, or of his screening any person from legal punishment for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment, may be committed not only in respect of a completed offence, but also in respect of an offence, which it is proposed to commit.¹

Ingredients.—This section has two essentials—

1. Offering any gratification or restoration of property to some person.
2. Such offer must have been in consideration of that person's (a) concealing an offence, or (b) of his screening any person from legal punishment for an offence, or (c) of his not proceeding against a person, for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment.

1. 'Whoever gives or causes, or offers or agrees to give or cause, any gratification to any person, etc.'—This section makes it an offence not only to give a gratification but also to agree to give it in consideration of the donee screening any person from legal punishment for any offence, and the use of the word 'agrees' involves the idea of something in the nature of a demand.² Such agreement is also void under the Indian Contract Act

'Gratification to any person.'—See s. 161, supra.

2. 'In consideration of that person's concealing an offence, or of his screening any person from legal punishment, etc.'—The terms 'concealing an offence' and 'screening any person from legal punishment for any offence' appear to pre-suppose the actual commission of an offence, or the guilt of the person screened from punishment. It is not the intention of the legislature to punish the giving of gratifications, under a delusion that an offence had been committed or that a person was guilty of such an offence. The intention was to discourage malpractices, when offences have really been committed, or when persons really guilty are screened, and not to ensure general veracity on the part of the public in regard to imaginary offences or offenders. In this case the accused had agreed to give Rs. 10 to S in consideration of his not giving evidence against K, who was charged with the offences of house-breaking by night and theft in a building. S gave evidence against K who was acquitted. The accused was thereupon charged

¹ Saya Po, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 106.

² Per Burgess, J. C., in Ma Ka, (1895) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 158.

under this section ; it was held that he had committed no offence under it.¹ When two of the accused offered a gratification to a public servant in consideration of his not proceeding against them and the other accused, whose books and papers he had seized, it was held that they were guilty under this section and not under ss. 109 and 161.²

This section includes the offer of a bribe by the person who has committed the offence that it is desired to screen.³

3. 'Compounded.'—"Compounding an offence...supposes an arrangement by which the parties have settled their differences, and in the more usual acceptance of the term implies that the prosecutor has received some consideration or gratification for dropping the prosecution. Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply, the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue; unless it appears that the parties were free from influence of every kind and were fully aware of their respective rights, it would be impossible to give effect to a so-called arrangement or composition."⁴ If the offence is a compoundable one, then even if the gratification is offered to a person who has no right to compound it is immaterial.⁵

Under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 345 (1), the offences punishable under the sections of the Indian Penal Code specified in the first two columns of the table next following may be compounded by the persons mentioned in the third column of that table :—

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable	Persons by whom offence may be compounded.
Uttering words, etc., with deliberate intent to wound the religious feelings of any person.	298	The person whose religious feelings are intended to be wounded.
Causing hurt ..	323, 334	The person to whom the hurt is caused.
Wrongfully restraining or confining any person.	341, 342	The person restrained or confined.
Assault or use of criminal force ..	352, 355, 358	The person assaulted or to whom criminal force is used.
Unlawful compulsory labour ..	374	The person compelled to labour.
Mischief, when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person	426, 427	The person to whom the loss or damage is caused.
Criminal trespass ..	447	The person in possession of the property trespassed upon.
House trespass ..	448
Criminal breach of contract of service..	490, 491, 492	The person with whom the offender has contracted.
Adultery ..	497	The husband of the woman.
Enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman.	498

1, 13 of 1881.

2 Weir 194.

Murray, (1893)

1084

L. R. 694, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 161. See s. 213 21 Cal. 103, 116.

where the facts are set out. * Kya Sone, (1912) 6 L. B. R. 48.

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable.	Persons by whom offence may be compounded.
Defamation ..	500	The person defamed.
Printing or engraving matter, knowing it to be defamatory.	501
Sale of printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter, knowing it to contain such matter.	502
Insult intended to provoke a breach of the peace	504	The person insulted.
Criminal intimidation, except when the offence is punishable with imprisonment for seven years.	506	The person intimidated.
Act caused by making a person believe that he will be an object of divine displeasure.	508	The person against whom the offence was committed.

(2) The offences punishable under the sections of the Indian Penal Code specified in the first two columns of the table next following may, with the permission of the Court before which any prosecution for such offence is pending, be compounded by the persons mentioned in the third column of that table :—

Offence	Sections of Indian Penal Code, applicable.	Persons by whom offence may be compounded.
Voluntarily causing hurt by dangerous weapons or means.	324	The person to whom hurt is caused.
Voluntarily causing grievous hurt ..	325	Do.
Voluntarily causing grievous hurt on grave and sudden provocation.	335	Do.
Causing hurt by doing an act so rashly and negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others	337	Do.
Causing grievous hurt by doing an act so rashly and negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others.	338	Do.
Wrongfully confining a person for three days or more.	343	The person confined.
Wrongfully confining a person in secret.	346	Do.
Assault or criminal force in attempting wrongfully to confine a person.	357	The person assaulted or to whom the force was used.
Dishonest misappropriation of property.	403	The owner of the property misappropriated.
Cheating ..	417	The person cheated.

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable.	Persons by whom offence may be compounded.
Cheating a person whose interest the offender was bound, by law or by legal contract, to protect.	418	The person cheated.
Cheating by personation ..	419	Do
Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property or the making, alteration or destruction of a valuable security.	420	Do
Mischief by injury to work of irrigation by wrongfully diverting water when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person.	430	The person to whom the loss or damage is caused.
House trespass to commit an offence (other than theft) punishable with imprisonment.	451	The person in possession of the house trespassed upon.
Using a false trade or property mark ..	482	The person to whom the loss or injury is caused by such use.
Counterfeiting a trade or property mark used by another.	483	The person whose trade or property mark is counterfeited.
Knowingly selling, or exposing or possessing for sale or for trade or manufacturing purpose, goods marked with a counterfeit trade or property mark.	486	Do.
Marrying again during the lifetime of a husband or wife.	494	The husband or wife of the person so marrying.
Uttering words or sounds or making gestures or exhibiting any object intending to insult the modesty of a woman or intruding upon the privacy of a woman.	509	The woman whom it is intended to insult or whose privacy is intruded upon.

(3) When any offence is compoundable under this section, the abetment of such offence or an attempt to commit such offence (when such attempt is itself an offence) may be compounded in like manner.

(4) When the person who would otherwise be competent to compound an offence under this section is under the age of eighteen years or is an idiot or a lunatic, any person competent to contract on his behalf may with the permission of the Court compound such offence.

(5) When the accused has been committed for trial or when he has been convicted and an appeal is pending, no composition for the offence shall be allowed without the leave of the Court to which he is committed, or, as the case may be, before which the appeal is to be heard.

(5) A High Court acting in the exercise of its powers of revision under s. 439

(b) an acquittal

(7)

Amendment.—The Exception was substituted by Act VIII of 1882, s. 6 ; and the illustrations to the section were repealed by Act X of 1882.

P R A C T I C E.

Evidence—Prove points (1) and (2) as in s. 213 ; and further—

(3) That the accused gave or caused or offered to give or caused the gratification, etc., as stated in the section.

(4) That he so gave or caused, etc., in consideration of such concealment, etc.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, if the case falls under the first clause ; by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class, if it falls under the second ; by Magistrate, Presidency or first class, or by Court empowered to try the offence screened, if it falls under the third.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That on or about the—day of—, at—, you gave (or caused or offered to give) gratification, to wit—, to AB in consideration of the said AB's concealing the offence of—under s.—of—and which offence is punishable with—{or in the Court of—AB's or of his screening you (or —)} from legal punishment for the said offence of—or of his screening you (or any person from legal punishment for the said (or any offence) (or of his not proceeding against you or —) for the purpose of bringing you (or him) to legal punishment and thereby committed an offence under s. 214 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session.)

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (omit these words when tried by the Magistrate)] on the said charge.

215. Whoever takes or agrees or consents to take¹ any gratification under pretence or on account of helping

Taking gift to help to recover stolen property, etc.

any person to recover any moveable property of which he shall have been deprived by any offence punishable under this Code,² shall, unless he uses all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence,³ be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

C O M M E N T.

Object.—This section is primarily aimed at professional trackers and other persons who, being usually in league with thieves or well aware of their proceedings, obtain money, etc., for the recovery of stolen property, without making any effort to bring the offenders to justice.¹ It is not intended to apply to the actual thief but to some one who, being in league with the thief, receives some gratification on account of helping the owner to recover the stolen property, without at the same time using all the means in his power to cause the thief to be apprehended and convicted of the offence.² It would, however, apply to cases of persons taking rewards offered in advertisements for the return of stolen property ; and such advertisements might amount to abetments of the offence punishable under this section.

Ingredients.—This section has three essentials—

¹ M. & M. 178.

² Muhammad Ali, (1900) 23 All. 81; Nall, Vera Thavar, (1914) 26 M. L. J. 598; Kudumbam, (1895) 1 Weir 196; Twee Pe alias Shan Gale, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 199, v. 2; Nga Ngan U, (1914) U. B. R. (1914-16) 43; Karar Singh, (1925) 2 L. C. 25, 26 P. L. R. 303, 7 L. L. J. 477.

1. Taking or agreeing or consenting to take any gratification under pretence or on account of helping any person to recover any moveable property.

2. The owner of such property must have been deprived of it by an offence punishable under the Penal Code.

3. The person taking the gratification must not have used all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence.

1. 'Takes or agrees or consents to take, etc.'—These words "imply that the person taking the gratification and the person giving it have agreed, not only as to the object for which the gratification is to be given, but also as to the shape or form the gratification is to take... if a person has actually taken a gratification from another, it must be assumed that he agreed to take, and the other to give it in that particular form or shape; but where the gratification has not actually passed and there is a disagreement as to the form or shape that the gratification is to take the idea of agreement or consent is negated."¹

2. 'Property of which he shall have been deprived by any offence punishable under this Code.'—To constitute an offence under this section it is necessary that the moveable property should have been taken out of the possession of some person by means of an offence punishable under the Code. A lost a cow from his grazing ground. Some days later he heard that B had it. A went to him. B took Rs. 12 from him and promised to return the cow in ten days' time. He did not, however, keep his promise and subsequently refused to return either the cow or the money. It was held that A was not guilty of an offence under this section.²

Attempt.—"An attempt to take a gratification within the meaning of s. 215. - necessarily includes the idea of a concurrence of wills between the giver and taker; with this much superadded thereto, that some act has been done preliminary to the act of taking. In other words, an attempt is a stage in the commission of the offence which is intermediate between the agreement or consent and the actual taking."³ Thus, where two persons offered to secure the return of bullocks stolen from a third person for Rs. 30, and that third person refused but offered Rs. 15, which offer was rejected by the two persons, it was held that they had committed no offence.⁴ This case has been dissented from in a later case where the Court observed: "I think that if an attempt to take a gratification within the meaning of s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code necessarily includes the idea of a giver and taker, it is no more an attempt to commit an offence but a substantive offence, on the language of the section. In an offence like the one specified in s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code, an attempt to commit it could only be under circumstances similar to those of the present case." In this case S had some of his buffaloes stolen. H proposed to S that if S gave him Rs. 200 and promised to take no steps to prosecute the thieves he would procure the restoration of the stolen cattle. S, however, would not agree to this proposal and reported the matter to the police. It was held that H was guilty of an attempt to commit the offence under this section.⁵ The former Chief Court of Lower Burma, dissenting from Chittar's case, decided that in order to constitute an attempt to commit an offence under this section it is not necessary that the person who is willing to take and the person who is willing to give the illegal gratification should agree both as to the object for which the gratification is to be given and also as to the shape or form the gratification is to take. When once a proposal has been made for the payment of an illegal gratification whether it is completed by an agreement or not the offence of an attempt to commit an offence under this section is complete.⁶

¹ Per Dillon, J., in Chittar, (1898) 20 All. 389, 391.

² Sharfa, (1915) P. R. No. 3 of 1915.

³ Per Dillon, J., in Chittar, sup.

⁴ Chittar, ibid.

⁵ Hargayan, (1922) 45 All. 169.

⁶ Nga Nya, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 319.

3. 'Unless he uses all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended, etc.'—The offence under this section is only committed if the person accepting gratification has failed to use all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended. A had her goods stolen. B, who knew the thieves, received money from A to endeavour to purchase the stolen property of the thieves for A, but not meaning to bring the thieves to justice. It was held that B was guilty of the felony of taking money on account of helping A to the return of the stolen goods.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the owner of the property was deprived of it by an offence under the Code.

(2) That the accused took, or agreed, or consented to take, the gratification.

(3) That such gratification was under the pretence of, or on account of, helping to recover such property.

(4) That the accused failed to use all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted.

It is not necessary to show that the prisoner had any connection with the commission of the previous felony; it is sufficient if the evidence satisfies the Court that the prisoner had some corrupt and improper design when he received the money; and did not bona fide intend to use such means as he could for the detection and punishment of the offender.²

Although this section is enacted to provide for a particular class of offence, there is no provision of law which forbids a conviction under s. 420 for an offence of that class, if the necessary facts which constitute an offence under s. 420 are proved.³

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—Where the question is likely to arise whether a person who has accepted a gratification for the return of stolen property is the actual thief or not, alternative charges should be framed under s. 236 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.⁴

216. Whenever any person convicted of or charged with an offence,¹ being in lawful custody for that offence, escapes from such custody,

Harbouring offender who has escaped from custody or whose apprehension has been ordered—or whenever a public servant,² in the exercise of the lawful powers of such public servant, orders a certain person to be apprehended for an offence,³ whoever, knowing of such escape or order for apprehension, harbours⁴ or conceals that person with the intention of preventing him from being apprehended, shall be punished in the manner following, that is to say, if the offence for which the person was in custody or is ordered to be apprehended is punishable⁵ with death, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

if a capital offence;

¹ John Pascoe, (1849) 2 C. & K. 927, 18 L. J. (M. C.) N. S. 186.

² John King, (1844) 1 Cox 36.

³ Nga Shan, (1922) 11 L. B. R. 422.

⁴ Twet Pe alias Shan Gale, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 199, v. B.

if the offence is punishable⁵ with transportation for life, or imprisonment for ten years, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, with or without fine ;

and if the offence is punishable⁶ with imprisonment which may extend to one year and not to ten years, he shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of the imprisonment provided for such offence, or with fine, or with both.

"Offence" in this section includes also any act or omission of which a person is alleged to have been guilty out of British India, which, if he had been guilty of it in British India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition,⁷ or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India ; and every such act or omission shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be punishable as if the accused person had been guilty of it in British India.

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour or concealment is by the husband or wife of the person to be apprehended.

COMMENT.

This section should be compared with s. 212. Section 212 deals with the offence of harbouring an offender who having committed an offence absconds. This section deals with harbouring an offender who has escaped from custody, after being actually convicted or charged with the offence, or whose apprehension has been ordered ; this latter offence is in the eye of the law more aggravated, and a heavier punishment is therefore awarded to it. It is thus an aggravated form of the offence punishable under s. 212.

1. 'Offence.'—This word denotes here anything made punishable by the Code, or by any special or local law, when the thing made punishable by such law is punishable with imprisonment for six months or upwards (s. 40).

2. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

3. 'Orders a certain person to be apprehended for an offence.'—This expression only means that the offence is the causa sine qua non of the apprehension. It is an offence under this section to harbour or conceal a person for whose apprehension an order has been passed by a public servant, even when such apprehension is sought to be made not for the purpose of trying him for an offence that he may have committed, but for enforcing a punishment already inflicted on him for having committed the offence.¹

4. 'Harbours.'—See s. 212, supra, and s. 216-B, infra. The word 'harbour' does not only mean to provide shelter, food and clothing but includes "the assisting of a person in any way to evade apprehension."² The mere giving of a meal to a gang of dacoits is not an offence within the meaning of this section, because in the absence of any evidence to that effect it cannot be held that the intention of the accused was to prevent them from being apprehended.¹

¹ Sahaja Koor, (1902) 11 C. L. J. 102.

² Sarwan Singh, (1922) 5 L. L. J. 329.

The word 'harbour' must be construed liberally. A man charged with an offence might be found in the house of another, and although he might be a person, yet if for all practical purposes the person not owning the house but visiting person harbouring the accused.²

5. 'Punishable.'—This word is used merely for the purpose of describing particular classes of offences in relation to which the punishment indicated in the section is to be inflicted; and it does not indicate that in a particular case the offence must have been punished.³

6. Any law relating to extradition.—See p. 18 where the subject of extradition is discussed.

Amendment.—The paragraph above the Exception was inserted by Act X of 1886, s. 23.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person in question has been convicted of, or charged with, an offence.

(2) That such person was in lawful custody for the same.

(3) That such person escaped from such custody.

(4) That the accused knew of such escape.

(5) That he with such knowledge harboured, or concealed such offender.

(6) That he did so, with intent to prevent him from being apprehended

(7) That the offence in question was punishable with (a) death, or (b) transportation for life or imprisonment for ten years, or (c) with imprisonment from one to ten years.

Or prove the following points —

(1) That a person had been ordered to be apprehended.

(2) That such order was the order of a public servant.

(3) That such order was in the lawful exercise of his powers.

(4) That the accused knew of such order for apprehension.⁴

(5)

(6) } As above.

(7)

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class, if the case comes under the first or second clause; by Magistrate, Presidency or first class, or by Court by which the offence is triable, if the case comes under the third clause.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That on or about the—day of—, at—, one AB was charged with or convicted of an offence under s.—by the Court of—[or one AB was ordered to be apprehended for an offence punishable under s.—by—a public servant in the exercise of his lawful powers as such public servant and that you knowing of the escape of AB (or knowing of the said order for apprehension) on the—or about—day of—, at—, harboured or concealed AB with the intention of preventing him from being apprehended, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 216 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

Punishment.—Under the Frontier Crimes Regulation⁵ a person convicted of an offence under this, or the next, section may be sentenced, in lieu of or in addition to fine, to imprisonment or transportation for not more than seven years.

¹ Hukam Singh, (1924) 6 L. L. J. 481.

² Bhujabali Akappa Gorwadi, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 583, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 151.

³ Satanji Koer, (1909) 11 C. L. J. 109.

⁴ Harnam Singh, (1924) 6 L. L. J. 478.

⁵ III of 1901, s. 11, (3) (d) and 12 (2).

216-A. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe¹ that any persons are about to commit or have recently committed robbery² or dacoity,³ harbours⁴ them or any of them, with the intention of facilitating the commission of such robbery or dacoity, or of screening them or any of them from punishment, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section it is immaterial whether the robbery or dacoity is intended to be committed, or has been committed, within or without British India.

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour is by the husband or wife of the offender.

COMMENT.

This section was inserted by Act III of 1894, s. 8. It is specially enacted with a view to enable¹ the Court to inflict enhanced punishment where the persons harboured are robbers or dacoits or where they intended to commit robbery or dacoity. Section 212 is a general provision; and an offence under s. 216-A will be an offence under s. 212. But in the case of robbers or dacoits this section must be applied.

To justify a conviction under this section both knowledge and intention are required.¹

1. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra.
2. 'Robbery.'—See s. 390, infra.
3. 'Dacoity.'—See s. 391, infra.
4. 'Harbours.'—See s. 216-B, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the persons in question were about to commit or had recently committed robbery or dacoity.

(2) That the accused knew this.

(3) That the accused harboured them or some of them.

(4) That the accused did so with the intention of (a) facilitating the commission of such robbery or dacoity, or (b) screening them or some of them from punishment.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, knew (or having reason to believe) that AB was about to commit robbery (or dacoity) [or that he had on or about the—day of—committed robbery (or dacoity) at—] harboured him, with the intention of facilitating the commission of robbery (or dacoity) by the said AB [or of screening him from punishment] and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 216-A of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance [or the cognizance of the Court of Session].

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

¹ Salharam, (1895) Cr. R. No. 39 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 775.

Punishment.—As to the Frontier District, see the Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 11 (3) (d) and 12 (2).

216-B. In sections 212, 216 and 216-A, the word “harbour” includes the supplying a person with shelter, food, drink, money, clothes, arms, ammunition or means of conveyance, or the assisting a person in any way to evade apprehension.¹

Definition of “harbour” in sections 212, 216 and 216-A.

COMMENT.

This section was inserted by Act III of 1894, s. 8. It defines the word ‘harbour’ used in ss. 212, 216 and 216-A. Acts which rendered a person an accessory after the fact at common law are included in this definition.

1. ‘Assisting a person in any way to evade apprehension.’—The Allahabad High Court has held that these words are meant to point to some method ejusdem generis with those specified in the earlier portion of the section. They will not, for instance, include the assisting of an accused person to escape by merely telling a bare lie to the police as to his whereabouts.¹ The Calcutta High Court has, however, held otherwise. It has laid down that these words are not restricted to methods which may properly be regarded as ejusdem generis or of a like nature with supplies of food or of other necessary articles.² Where, therefore, the accused replied in answer to the inquiry by the police that A was in the house and promised to produce him but returned with A’s son saying that he had committed a mistake in telling that A was in and thus gave time to A to escape on the roof of the house, it was held that he had committed an offence under this section.³

Where a proclaimed offender was arrested in the act of cooking his meals at the place of a village Zemindar and the Zemindar was present at the time of the arrest, he was held to have harboured the offender with the knowledge that he was such and with the intention of preventing his apprehension within the meaning of this section.⁴

Where the accused had lent to some dacoits his pony merely to facilitate them in removing the loot, the Allahabad High Court held that the applicant could not be charged under this section with having harboured the dacoits.⁵ This case does not seem to lay down sound law for the lending of the pony would come within the words “supplying a person with... means of conveyance.”

217. Whoever, being a public servant,¹ knowingly disobeys any direction of the law² as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, intending thereby to save, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby save, any person from legal punishment,³ or subject him to a less punishment than that to which he is liable, or with intent to save, or knowing that he is likely, thereby to save, any property from forfeiture or any charge to which it is liable by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Public servant
disobeying direction of law with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture.

¹ Husain Baksh, (1903) 25 All. 261.

² Muchi Mian, (1917) 26 C. L. J. 141, 21 C. W. N. 1062.

³ Ibid.

⁴ Mathura Singh, (1909) 8 A.L.J.R. 127 (n).

⁵ Damri, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 496.

COMMENT.

This section and the three following sections deal with disobedience on the part of public servants in respect of official duty. Their proper place would have been in Chapter IX.

1. 'Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

2. 'Direction of law' means "a positive direction of law, such as those contained in ss. 89 and 90 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and cannot be made to extend to the more general obligation by which every subject is bound not to stifle a criminal charge."¹ Before a person can be convicted under this section, it must be shown that there is a direction of law as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, and this direction must be a direction to be found in some positive statute of some rules or regulations which are declared by statute to have the force of law.²

3. 'Intending thereby to save...any person from legal punishment.'—*"It appears to me quite sufficient for the purpose of a conviction under s. 21, 7 that the accused has knowingly disobeyed any direction of the law as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as a public servant, and that he should have done this with the intention of saving a person from legal punishment, and that it is not further necessary to show that in point of fact the person so intended to be saved had committed an offence or was justly liable to legal punishment...a public servant charged under that section is equally liable to be punished, although the intention which he had of saving any person from legal punishment was founded upon a mistaken belief as to that person's liability to punishment."*³ Thus, the actual guilt or innocence of the alleged offenders is immaterial, if the prisoner believes they are guilty, and intends to screen them.⁴ 'Legal punishment' does not include departmental punishment.⁵

Where several persons were apprehended at night time on suspicion of having committed culpable homicide, the police-officer tied them together by the hands, and kept them in the village in which they had been arrested, instead of at once taking them to the nearest police-station. The prisoners escaped in the course of the night. It was held that the police-officer did not commit an offence under this section, because his intention in keeping the prisoners in the village was merely to wait until it was more convenient to start, and the disobedience of the rule of law was, therefore, not such a disobedience as this section contemplates.⁶

The accused, a Police Patel, on a complaint having been made to him that an attempt had been made to commit rape on a girl, made some investigation, prepared a panchnama of the scene of the offence, and arrested the two persons against whom the accusation was laid. He sent them with a report to the police-station, but on the way the parties came to a settlement and all returned to the village. The complainant informed the Patel that he had no desire to continue the proceedings, whereupon the Patel tore up the panchnama which he had made. For this destruction the Patel was convicted of an offence under this section. It was held, acquitting the Patel, that it could not be fairly said that he knowingly disobeyed any direction of the law as to the way, in which he should conduct himself or that he intended or knew it to be likely that by tearing up the panchnama he would save any person from legal punishment.⁷

A conviction under this section of a village redti for allowing a person who had been sentenced by a Village Magistrate to escape on the way to the lock-up was held to be bad.⁸

¹ Per Turner, C. J., in Raminihi Nayar, (1877) 1 Mad. 266, 267.

² Ram Prasad, (1902) 22 A. W. N. 16.

³ Amiruddeen, (1878) 3 Cal. 412, 413.

⁴ Hurdut Surma, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.) 68.

⁵ Jungle Lall, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 40.

⁶ Uotun Chund, (1871) P. R. No. 18 of 1871.

⁷ Norambhai Bhulabhai, (1913) 15 Bom.

L. R. 578, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 90.

⁸ Bodapati Pentadu, (1882) 1 Weir 197.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is a public servant.

(2) That he conducted himself in the particular manner charged.

(3) That such conduct was in the exercise of his duties as such public servant.

(4) That such conduct was in disobedience to a direction of law.

(5) That when the accused disobeyed such direction of law, he did so knowingly.

(6) That when he was guilty of such disobedience he intended to, or knew that it was likely that he would thereby, save (a) some person from punishment, or subject some person to a less punishment than that to which he was entitled; or (b) some property from forfeiture or a charge to which it was liable; or (c) that such punishment, etc., was legally enforceable, or that such forfeiture, or charge, was a legal liability.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Tribunal by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

Charge.—It should distinctly state what the direction of law was.¹ It should run as follows:—

I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That on or about the—day of—, at—, you being a public servant knowingly disobeyed the direction of the law as to the way in which you were to conduct yourself as such public servant, to wit—, (specify the direction of law). intending thereby to save—(or knowing it to be likely that you will thereby save—) from legal punishment [or subject him to a less punishment than that to which he was liable or with intent to save or knowing that you were likely thereby to save some property, to wit—, from forfeiture (or any charge to which it is liable by law)] and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 217 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

218. Whoever, being a public servant, and being as such public servant, charged with the preparation of any record or other writing,¹ frames that record or writing in a manner which he knows to be incorrect,² with intent to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, loss or injury to the public or to any person,³ or with intent thereby to save, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby save, any person from legal punishment,⁴ or with intent to save, or knowing that he is likely thereby to save, any property from forfeiture or other charge to which it is liable by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section deals with the intentional preparation of a false record with the object of saving or injuring any person or property. The correctness of records is of the highest importance to the State and to the public. The intention with which the public servant does the acts mentioned in the section is an essential ingredient of the offence punishable under this section.²

¹ Baban Khan v. Balad Bhaskar, (1877) 2 Bom. 142.

² Shama Churn Roy, (1867) 8 W. R. (Cr.). 27.

Ingredients.—This section has three essentials—

1. The offender must be a public servant charged with the preparation of a record or writing.

2. He must have framed that record or writing incorrectly.

3. He must have done so with intent to cause or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby

(a) cause loss or injury to the public or any person, or

(b) save any person from legal punishment, or

(c) save any property from forfeiture or other charge to which it is legally liable.

1. 'Whoever being a public servant...charged with the preparation of any record, etc.'—The word 'charge' is not restricted to the narrow meaning of "enjoined by a special provision of law." So where a District Superintendent of Police usually required a first information and special diary in gambling cases, it was held that a Sub-Inspector who was given a warrant to arrest certain persons but who framed the information and the diary incorrectly to save two persons from punishment was properly convicted of having committed an offence under this section as he was charged with the preparation of such record within the meaning of it.¹ The public servant framing an incorrect record must have been charged with the preparation of it.

A public servant, in charge as such of certain documents, having been required to produce them, and being unable to do so, fabricated and produced similar documents with the intention of screening himself from punishment. It was held that such fabricated documents not being records or writings with the preparation of which such public servant as such was charged, he could not legally be convicted under this section.²

2. 'Frames that record or writing in a manner which he knows to be incorrect.'—It is essential that the record must have been incorrectly made.

3. 'With intent to cause...loss or injury to the public or to any person.'—The section contemplates the wilful falsification of a public document with intent thereby to cause loss or injury and this means by the document itself or by some transaction with which it is essentially connected. The accused must not be convicted on a remote and speculative chain of possibilities, otherwise the most innocent acts might, by the exercise of a little ingenuity, be perverted into criminality.³

was not sufficient.⁴ Where a chowkidar was charged with having made a false entry in a chowkidaree attendance book, with a view to support a charge which was made against a Sub-Inspector of having made a false report regarding the length of absence from duty of another chowkidar, and thereby to cause loss or injury to the Sub-Inspector, it was held that the intention was too remote to fall within this section.⁵ S was charged with the preparation of a certain record, and was in the habit of preparing it from certain abstracts made and read to him by D. D made and read false abstracts whereby an incorrect record was prepared. It was held that D could not be held to have committed this offence but was guilty of abetting it.⁶

It is not necessary that the incorrect document should be submitted to another person, or be otherwise used by the writer; it is sufficient if it is shown that it has been prepared by a public servant charged with its preparation, in a manner which he knows to be incorrect and with the knowledge that he is thereby likely to cause

¹ Deodhar Singh, (1899) 27 Cal 144.

² Mazhar Hussain, (1883) 5 All. 553.

³ Ramachandra, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 201.

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ Jungle Lal, (1873) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 40.

⁶ Brj Mohan Lal, (1875) 7 N. W. P. 134.

loss to the public. If, after such preparation, he submits the document, with intent to procure credit for a payment of more than to his knowledge is due to him, all the elements of an attempt to cheat in its simple or aggravated form (ss. 417, 418) would be present; but it does not follow that, because there was not a complete attempt to cheat, there was no complete offence.¹ As to the definition of 'injury,' see s. 44, supra.

4. 'With intent thereby to save, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby save, any person from legal punishment.'—The words 'any person' mean a person other than the public servant or the public servant himself. If the legislature had intended that this section should only apply when the intention was to save some person other than the public servant, it would have been easy to insert the word "other" between the words "any" and "person." A public servant who does that which, if done to save another from legal punishment, would bring the public servant within this section, has equally committed the offence punishable under this section if the person whom he intends to save from legal punishment is himself.²

'Legal punishment.'—The expression does not include departmental punishment.³ "The gist of the section is the stifling of truth and the perversion of the course of justice in cases where an offence has been committed. It is not necessary even to prove the intention to screen any particular person. It is sufficient that he knows it to be likely that justice will not be executed and that some one will escape punishment for the offence."⁴

Actual commission of offence not necessary.—The actual guilt or innocence of the alleged offender is immaterial if the accused believes him guilty and intends to screen him.⁵ It is necessary to prove that the accused believed, or had reason to believe, that the person concerned had committed an offence, though it is not necessary to prove that such an offence had, as a matter of fact, been committed. It is quite sufficient that the commission of a cognizable offence has been brought to the notice of the accused officially and that in order to screen the offender he prepared the record in a manner which he knew to be incorrect.⁶

CASES.

Public servant framing incorrect record to save a person from legal punishment.—A kulkarni who made a false report with reference to an offence committed in his village with intent to save the offenders from punishment was held to have committed this offence.⁷ Where it was proved that the prisoner's intention in making the false reports was to stave off the discovery of the previous fraud and save himself or the actual perpetrator of that fraud from legal punishment, it was held that he had committed this offence.⁸

A report of the commission of a dacoity was made at a thana. The police-officer in charge of the thana took down the report which was made to him, but subsequently destroyed the report and framed another and a false report of the commission of a totally different offence to which he obtained the signature of the complainant, and which he endeavoured to pass off as the original and correct report made to him by the complainant. It was held that the police-officer was guilty of offences punishable under s. 204 and this section.⁹

¹ Megraj, (1880) P. R. No. 13 of 1881.

² Nand Kishore, (1897) 19 All 305, overruling Govindji, (1890) 12 All 40.

³ Govindji, (1890) 12 All 40.

⁴ Khan, (1881) 20 Bom L. R. 823, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 72.

⁵ Fawcett, J., refrained from expressing any opinion on the point whether it is unnecessary to prove an intention to screen any particular person.

⁶ Krishnaji, (1888) Unrep. Cr. C. 405.

⁷ Mots Ram, (1925) 7 L. L. J. 331, 26 P. L. R. 594.

⁸ Malhar Ramchandra, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 64.

⁹ Girdhari Lal, (1886) 8 All 653.

¹⁰ Muhammad Shah Khan, (1898) 20 All 307.

Where a Police Inspector had been charged with framing an incorrect record in that he entered in his diary that certain cartmen told him that "they were not beaten by dacoits," while in fact they told him that "they were beaten by dacoits," it was held that this was not sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section. But where he, without endeavouring to enquire into the truth of the said entry in his diary, destroyed certain records which falsified it and substituted fresh notebooks, his bona fides were open to question and he was deemed to have framed an incorrect public record intentionally.¹ Where a Station House Officer, in order to support the Inspector, made a false entry in his diary that the "four cartmen stated to him as they had said before the Inspector," he was guilty of framing an incorrect public record intentionally when it appeared from the evidence that he took no action on the complaint of the cartmen, and his statement that no complaint of dacoity was made to him, was falsified by his own witness.²

The accused, a Head Constable, whilst investigating a complaint of theft, searched the house of the suspect and found there a piece of cloth and a bodice which the complainant said belonged to him. Statements made by the complainant and his wife claiming the property to be theirs were taken down. The complainant produced from his house some clothes of his own for comparison. Panch-namas were made of the search and the comparison. Subsequently, these papers were suppressed, and the accused prepared statements purporting to have been made by the complainant and his wife withdrawing the complaint; and a Panch-nama of the property produced by the complainant which was wrongly supposed to have been stolen from his house was made. The accused was charged with offences punishable under s. 201 and this section. It was held that the accused had committed no offence under s. 201, but that he was guilty of an offence punishable under this section.³

Incorrect record framed without any of the objects mentioned in this section.—A village Munsif who submitted a false calendar in which he purported to have convicted certain persons of theft was not guilty under this section.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is a public servant.

(2) That he was charged with the preparation of record or other writing in his capacity as a public servant.

(3) That he framed such record or other writing in an incorrect manner.

(4) That he then knew that he was framing it in an incorrect manner.

(5) That he did as above, with the intent or with the knowledge, that it was likely, that he would thereby (a) cause loss or injury to the public, or any person; or (b) save a person from punishment; or (3) save some property from forfeiture or charge.

(6) That such punishment was legally enforceable, or that such charge or forfeiture was a legal liability.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That on or about the—day of —, you being a public servant charged with the preparation of a record (or writing), to wit—, framed the said record (or writing) in a manner which you knew to be incorrect—(specify the incorrect statement) and which you made with intent to cause (or knowing it to be likely that

¹ Ramaswami Iyengar, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 41.

² Parasuram Ramdoss, [1911] 2 M. W. N. 61.

³ Anverikhan Mahamadikhan, (1921) 23 Bom. L. R. 823, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 72.

⁴ Chinnakannu Udayan, (1899) 1 Weir 197.

you will thereby cause) loss (or injury) to public ((or to any person, to wit—) (or with intent thereby to save or knowing it to be likely that you will thereby save any person from legal punishment or with intent to save or knowing that you are thereby likely to save any property, to wit—) from forfeiture to which it was liable by order of the Court in case No.—of —) and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 218 of the Indian Penal Code and within the cognizance of the Court of Session.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

219. Whoever, being a public servant,¹ corruptly² or maliciously³ makes or pronounces in any stage of a judicial proceeding,⁴ any report, order, verdict or decision which he knows to be contrary to law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Public servant in judicial proceeding corruptly making report, etc., contrary to law.

COMMENT.

This section must be read with s. 77; it contemplates some wilful excess of authority, in other words, a guilty knowledge superadded to an illegal act. Knowledge that the commitment is contrary to law is a question of fact, and its existence or non-existence must be inferred from the circumstances of each case.¹ This and the next section deal with corrupt or malicious exercise of the power vested in a public servant for a particular purpose.

1. 'Public servant'—See s. 21, supra.

2. 'Corruptly.'—See s. 196, as to the meaning of this word.

3. 'Maliciously.'—"Malice in common acceptation means ill-will against a person, but in its legal sense it means a wrongful act, done intentionally, without just cause or excuse."² A man acts maliciously when he wilfully and without lawful excuse does that which he knows will injure another in person or property. The term 'maliciously' denotes a wicked, perverse and incorrigible disposition.³ It means and implies an intention to do an act which is wrongful, to the detriment of another.⁴ Where any person wilfully does an act injurious to another without lawful excuse he does it 'maliciously.'⁵ Whether a person has acted corruptly or maliciously is a question of fact and must be proved. Proof of an unlawful commitment to confinement will not of itself warrant the legal inference of malice.⁶ Where a village Munsif passed a decree which was contrary to law, it was held that he was guilty under this section for maliciously pronouncing a decision.⁷

4. 'Judicial proceeding.'—See s. 192, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence—Prove (1) that the accused is a public servant.

(2) That he made or pronounced the report, order, verdict or decision.

(3) That he did as in (2) corruptly or maliciously,

(4) That such report, order, verdict, or decision was made or pronounced in the course of a judicial proceeding.

Narayan Babaji, (1872) 9 B. H. C. 346

¹ Per Bayley, J., in Bromage v Prosser, (1825) 4 B. & C. 247, 255

² Ward, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 356.

⁴ Per Bowen, L. J., in Mogul Steamship Co. v. McGregor, Gow & Co., (1869) 23 Q

B. D. 598.

³ Per Blackburn, J., in Pemberton, (1874) L. R. 2 C. C. R. 119, 122, followed in Piars Lal, (1916) 15 A. L. J. R. 106.

⁵ Narayan Babaji, sup.

⁷ Piars Lal, sup.

(3) That the accused was legally bound to apprehend such person for the same.

(4) That he omitted to apprehend.

(5) That he did so intentionally.

Prove also that the offence for which such person is charged with, etc., is punishable (a) with death; or (b) with transportation for life or imprisonment up to ten years; or (c) with imprisonment for less than ten years.

Or prove the following points :—

(1) That the accused is a public servant.

(2) That the person in question was in confinement for an offence.

(3) That the accused was legally bound to keep such person in such confinement.

(4) That he suffered such person to escape, or aided such person in escaping or in the attempt to escape.

(5) That he did so intentionally.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, if the case comes under the first clause; by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, or first class Magistrate, if it comes under the second; by Magistrate, Presidency, first, or second class, if it comes under the third.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you on or about the—, at—, being a public servant (state the office held by the prisoner so as to make him a public servant), being a public servant to keep in confinement AB charged with (state the offence punishable with (state the punishment), intention..) such person to escape, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 221 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.¹

For the second paragraph the following may be substituted :—

That you being a public servant, to wit—, and being as such public servant legally bound to apprehend (or keep in confinement one AB, who was, on or about the—day of—, at—, charged with (or liable to be apprehended for) the offence of—, punishable with—, did intentionally omit to apprehend such person (or intentionally suffer the said AB to escape or intentionally aid the said AB in escaping or attempting to escape from such confinement); and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 221 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate omit these words)] on the said charge.

222. Whoever, being a public servant,¹ legally bound² as such Intentional omission on the part of public servant bound to apprehend person under sentence or lawfully committed.

public servant to apprehend or to keep in confinement any person under sentence of a Court of Justice³ for any offence,⁴ or lawfully committed to custody intentionally omits to apprehend such person, or intentionally suffers such person to escape, or intentionally aids such person in escaping or attempting to escape from such confinement.

shall be punished as follows, that is to say :—

with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, is under sentence of death ; or .

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, Sch. V, No. xxviii.

with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, is subject by a sentence of a Court of Justice, or by virtue of a commutation of such sentence, to transportation for life or penal servitude for life or to transportation or penal servitude or imprisonment for a term of ten years or upwards ; or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, is subject, by a sentence of a Court of Justice, to imprisonment for a term not extending to ten years, or if the person was lawfully committed to custody.

COMMENT:

This section is similar to the last section with the exception that the person to be apprehended had already been convicted or committed for an offence. It is thus an aggravated form of the offence made punishable by the last section.

1. ' Public servant.'—See s. 21, supra.

2. ' Legally bound.'—See s. 43, supra.

3. ' Court of Justice.'—See s. 20, supra.

4. ' Offence.'—' Offence ' means a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law (s. 40).

Amendment.—The words " or lawfully committed to custody " in the first paragraph, and " or if the person was lawfully committed to custody " at the end were inserted by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 8.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is a public servant.

(2) That the person in question was sentenced by a Court of Justice.

(3) That such sentence was for an offence committed.

(4) That such person was liable to be apprehended under such sentence.

(5) That the accused was legally bound to apprehend such person.

(6) That he omitted to apprehend.

(7) That he did so intentionally.

Or prove the following points :—(1), (2) and (3) as above, and further—

(4) That such person was in confinement under such sentence.

(5) That the accused was legally bound to keep him in such confinement.

(6) That he suffered such person to escape, or aided him in escaping or in the attempt to escape.

(7) That he did so intentionally.

Prove also the offence for which such person was confined.

Or prove the following points :—

(1) That the accused is a public servant.

(2) That the person in question had been committed to custody.

(3) That such committal was lawful.

(4) That the accused was legally bound to keep him in confinement under such committal.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, having been sentenced to transportation by the Court of Session of—(specify the term) and that on the—day of—, at—, you did return from such transportation, the term of such transportation not having expired, and your punishment not having been remitted, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 226 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

227. Whoever, having accepted any conditional remission of punishment, knowingly violates any condition on which such remission was granted, shall be punished with the punishment to which he was originally sentenced, if he has already suffered no part of that punishment, and if he has suffered any part of that punishment, then with so much of that punishment as he has not already suffered.

COMMENT.

This section deals with those cases in which remission of punishment is made conditional by Government under s. 401 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the nature and extent of the original punishment to which the accused had been sentenced.

(2) That such punishment had been remitted.

(3) That such remission had been granted to and accepted by the accused upon a certain condition.

(4) That the accused violated such condition.

(5) That he did so, knowing that he was violating such condition.

(6) Prove also whether the accused has already suffered any part of the original punishment.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by the Court by which the original offence was triable.

Jurisdiction.—A person convicted by the Recorder's Court of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore and Malacca, of the crime of burglary, and sentenced to transportation for ten years was released from the Ratnagiri Jail on a ticket-of-leave after having been in confinement for more than eight years. At Karwar he committed theft in a dwelling-house before his sentence had expired. It was held that the First Class Magistrate at Karwar had jurisdiction to try the case.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—were sentenced in case No.—of—by the Court of—to—(mention the punishment) and which punishment was remitted on—by the order of—on your accepting the condition, to wit—, and which you accepted, and which you knowingly violated in that on or about the—day of—you—(state the nature of the violation) and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 227 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or the High Court).

And I thereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court] on the said charge.

¹ Akone Akong, (1872) 9 B. H. C. 356

228. Whoever, intentionally¹ offers any insult, or causes any interruption to any public servant,² while such public servant is sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding,³ shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The object of this section is to punish a person who intentionally insults in any way the Court administering justice. It is to preserve the prestige and dignity of the Court that this section is provided. It lays down the highest sentence that could be inflicted for contempt of Court. Under s. 480 of the Criminal Procedure Code a person guilty of contempt of Court may be dealt with summarily, but in such cases he can only be fined.

Acts such as rude and contumacious behaviour; obstinacy, perverseness, prevarication or refusal to answer any lawful question; breach of the peace or any wilful disturbance whatever, will amount to a contempt of Court. The Penal Code does not provide against a contempt of Court committed by the publication of a libel out of Court when the Court is not sitting, and neither in Chapter XXI on 'Defamation' nor elsewhere, provides for the punishment of a contempt of Court committed by the publication of a libel reflecting upon a judge in his judicial

... d judge
... g action
under this section ought not to give room for the impression that they are unduly sensitive.²

This section is confined to those cases of contempt of Court where the public servant is sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding. But the Court has inherent jurisdiction to punish cases of contempt not coming within the purview of this section. A process-server was insulted in most filthy language, caught by his throat and severely pushed out of the room by the plaintiff while effecting service of a notice; service was subsequently effected by him by affixing a copy on the outer door. It was held that when a process-server, in execution of his duty, has been abused and assaulted, it is a contempt of Court, as it is an attempt to obstruct or unduly interfere with the administration of justice. Those who have duties to discharge pursuant to the orders of a Court are protected by the law and shielded on their way to the discharge of such duties, while discharging them and on their return therefrom in order that such persons may safely have resort to Courts of justice and carry out their orders.³

Ingredients.—Three things are necessary under this section—

1. Intention.
2. Insult or interruption to a public servant.
3. The public servant insulted or interrupted must have been sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding.

1. 'Intentionally.'—The insult or interruption to the Court should be intentional. Merely uttering of words and not keeping silent can hardly be construed as intentional insult or interruption caused by an undefended prisoner

¹ Surendra Nath Banerjee, (1863) 10 Cal. 274.
109, P. C.

² Alone v. Bawa, (1925) 29 C. W. N. 700.
³ Ramasami Goundan, (1915) 29 M. L. J. 41 C. L. J. 515.

a transfer of his case, the accused could not be convicted of this offence.¹ The use of objectionable or defamatory expressions in the petition presented to a Magistrate could not be regarded as a contempt committed in his presence justifying him in taking immediate action under this section and s. 480, Criminal Procedure Code.²

Statutory application.—See s. 37 of the Indian Income-tax Act (XI of 1922).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the person offended is a public servant.

(2) That, at the time of the offence, such public servant was sitting in some stage of a judicial proceeding.³

the accused offered an insult to such public to him.

Intention must be strictly made out by the prosecution.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by the Court in which the offence is committed, subject to the provisions of Chapter XXXV of the Criminal Procedure Code. See s. 480, Criminal Procedure Code.

The law requires that a criminal Court inflicting a fine for contempt of Court should specially record its reasons, the facts constituting the contempt with any statement the offender may make as well as the finding and sentence.⁵ The record must show the nature and stage of the judicial proceedings in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting and the nature of the interruption or insult.⁶

The procedure laid down in s. 480, Criminal Procedure Code, should be strictly followed. The provisions of the section should be applied then and there, at any rate before its rising, by the Court in whose view or presence a contempt has been committed.⁷

Complaint.—Complaint in writing of the Court before which the offence is committed or of some other Court to which it is subordinate is required.⁸

229. Whoever, by personation or otherwise, shall intentionally cause, or knowingly suffer himself to be returned,¹

Personation of a juror or assessor, empanelled or sworn as a jurymen or assessor in any case in which he knows that he is not entitled by law² to be so returned, empanelled or sworn, or knowing himself to have been so returned, empanelled or sworn contrary to law, shall voluntarily³ serve on such jury or as such assessor, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section is intended to punish false personation of a juror or an assessor. It deals with two classes of cases: (1) where the accused had guilty knowledge

¹ Abdullah Khan, (1898) 18 A. W. N. 145.

² Wahid Balhsh, (1903) P. L. R. No. 137 of 1903.

³ Prakash Chunder Dass, (1869) 12 W. R. (Cr.) 64; Khushal Singh, (1886) P. R. No. 36 of 1886.

⁴ (1881) 1 Weir 216; Hurri Kishen Dass, (1871) 15 W. R. (Cr.) 62; K. Chappu Menon, (1868) 4 M. H. C. 146; Venkatrao Rajerao

Mudvedkar, (1922) 24 Bom. L. R. 386, 6 Bom. Cr. C. 186.

⁵ Panchanada Tambiran, (1869) 4 M. H. C. 229; Kashinath Vithal v. Doji Govind, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (A. C. J.) 102.

⁶ Khushal Singh, sup.

⁷ Paiambar Balhsh, (1889) 11 All. 361

⁸ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.

before he was returned, i.e., got himself enlisted as a juror or assessor, and (2) where he had such knowledge after he was returned.

Five sections of the Code deal with false personation, viz., ss. 140, 170, 171, 205 and 229.

1. 'By personation or otherwise shall intentionally cause, or knowingly suffer himself to be returned.'—'To be returned' means getting oneself enlisted as a juror or as an assessor.

It is a misdemeanour at common law for a person to pretend to be a qualified jurymen, and to go into the jury-box and act in the name of a qualified jurymen, and this without any corrupt motive on the part of such person.¹

2. 'Not entitled by law.'—Sec s. 278, Criminal Procedure Code, which says what persons are not qualified to serve as jurors or assessors. As to choosing a jury, see s. 276, Criminal Procedure Code; as to choosing assessors, see s. 321, Criminal Procedure Code.

3. 'Voluntarily.'—Sec s. 39, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was returned, etc. "¹

(2) That he was not entitled by law to be so returned or empanelled, etc.

(3) That he caused or suffered himself intentionally or knowingly to be so returned, empanelled, etc., by personation, or otherwise.

(4) That he at the time he was so returned or empanelled, etc., knew that he was not entitled to be so returned or empanelled, etc.

Or prove points (1) and (2) as above and further—

(3) That the accused knew that he had been returned or empanelled, etc., contrary to law.

(4) That he nevertheless voluntarily served in that capacity

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, intentionally caused (or knowingly suffered) yourself to be returned (or empanelled or sworn) as a jurymen (or assessor) in case No.—of—tried by—by personating AB when you knew that you were not entitled to be so returned (or empanelled or sworn) [or you knowing yourself to have been so returned (or empanelled or sworn) contrary to law voluntarily served on such jury (or as such assessor)] and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 229 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

¹ Clark, (1918) 26 Cox 138.

CHAPTER XII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO COIN AND GOVERNMENT STAMPS.

On second conviction of an offence under this Chapter punishable with imprisonment for three years, the offender may be punished with transportation for life or ten years' imprisonment (vide s. 75).

230. Coin¹ is metal used for the time being² as money, and stamped and issued by the authority of some State or Sovereign Power in order to be so used.

Queen's coin³ is metal stamped and issued by the authority of the Queen, or by the authority of the Government of India, or of the Government of any Presidency, or of any Government in the Queen's dominions, in order to be used as money; and metal which has been so stamped and issued shall continue to be the Queen's coin for the purposes of this Chapter, notwithstanding that it may have ceased to be used as money.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

- (a) Cowries are not coin.
- (b) Lumps of unstamped copper, though used as money, are not coin.
- (c) Medals are not coin, inasmuch as they are not intended to be used as money.
- (d) The coin denominated as the Company's rupee is the Queen's coin.
- (e) The "Farukhabad" rupee, which was formerly used as money under the authority of the Government of India, is Queen's coin although it is no longer so used.

COMMENT.

Why heavier punishment for counterfeiting the King's coin.—The authors of the Code say: "We have proposed that the Government of India should follow the general practice of Governments in punishing more severely the counterfeiting of its own coin than the counterfeiting of foreign coin. It appears to us peculiarly advisable, under the present circumstances of India, to make this distinction. It is much to be wished that the Company's currency may supersede the numerous coinages which are issued from a crowd of mints in the dominions of the petty Princes of India. It has appeared to us that this object may be in some degree promoted by the law as we have framed it. That coinage, the purity of which is guarded by the most rigorous penalties, is likely to be the most pure; and that coinage which is likely to be the most pure will be the most readily taken in the course of business.

"It is not very probable that any person in this country will employ himself in making counterfeit sovereigns or shillings; but should so improbable an event occur, we think that the King's coin should have the same protection which is given to the coin of the Local Government. . . It appears to us, however, that the offence of coining, though, in an arbitrary classification, it may be called by the technical name of treason, is in substance an offence against property and trade, that it is an offence of very nearly the same kind with the forging of a bank note, and that it would be an offence of exactly the same kind if the bank note, like the notes of the Bank of England formerly, were in all cases legal tender, or if the coin, like the Company's gold mohur at present, were not legal tender. We do not therefore conceive that in proposing a law for punishing the counterfeiting of the King's coin, we are proposing a law which can reasonably be said to affect any of the royal prerogatives."¹

1. 'Coin.'—The present definition of 'coin' was introduced by Act XIX of 1872 in order to check the practice of counterfeiting the copper coin of Native States. The former definition defined coin as "metal stamped and issued by the authority of some Government." But 'Government,' by s 17, denotes the person or persons authorized by law to administer executive Government in any part of British India. It had thus happened that the coin of Native States was not coin within the meaning of the Code.

2. 'For the time being.'—These words were introduced by Act XIX of 1872 as it was suggested that the definition might possibly be held to include old coin, such as a Græco-Bactrian Stater formerly used as money, but now regarded only as a curiosity. A coin of the time of Emperor Akbar² or a gold mohur of the reign of Shahjahan³ cannot be deemed to be a coin inasmuch as it is not used for the time being as money.

Legal tender not necessary.—Coin need not . . . a value in rupees fixed by law. Gold mohurs whi . . . s at an absolutely fixed value, yet have a current . . . erely by weighing them as lumps of gold, but attaching to them as coin, are coins "for the time being used as money."⁴

The test of whether a particular piece of metal is money or not (supposing it genuine) is the possibility of taking it into the market, and obtaining goods of any kind in exchange for it. For this, its value must be ascertained and notorious; that it is known to persons of special skill or information is not sufficient⁵.

3. 'Queen's coin.'—The present definition of Queen's coin was introduced by Act VI of 1896, s 1. The reasons for amending the definition are stated as follows: "At present 'coin' is defined as metal used for the time being as money, and the consequence is that, if any offence under these sections has to be proved, it has to be shown that the coin was in use at the time of the offence as money. There is a process in coinage which is provided for by law, namely, in the Indian Coinage Act, which is termed the 'Calling in of coin' This gives Government an authority which it exercises under certain circumstances to call in coin and to cause it after a certain time to cease to be used as money. It is extremely doubtful whether, if the coin so called in has been counterfeited, a Court would hold that it was in use as money after the date of the proclamation which had called it in. After a certain time it would certainly cease to be in use as money. This power to call in money has been exercised in one case,—and I think in only one, namely, that of the Farukhabad rupee, which immediately preceded the existing Government rupee, or, as it was at first called, 'the Company's rupee.' It was called in in 1877.—We have ascertained that this coin has been recently largely manufactured in Bombay. The manufacture has been carried on perfectly openly, and it has been brought to our notice by some of our Political Officers, who showed that it was being imported into Central India and Rajputana in considerable quantities. This manufacture we are unable, under the present law, to stop, because that particular coin is not in use at present as money. The immediate practical object of the change which I propose to the Council to make in the Indian Penal Code is to put a stop to this particular coinage. But it is obvious that the same necessity may arise in any future case. We may at any time find reason to call in any particular

¹ Note I, pp. 134, 135.

² Bapu Yadar, (1874) 11 B. H. C. 172.

³ Khushali, (1906) 29 ALL. 141.

⁴ Kunj Beharee, (1873) 5 N. W. P. 187.

⁵ Bapu Yadar, sup.

relation arising from the position of the object is insufficient. The possession contemplated is not possession which has never been voluntary: and for the purpose of bringing home to any person the voluntary possession of any object, the mere proof of a fact of which he knows nothing, would be valueless. The section no doubt also requires in the accused person intention or knowledge as to the use to be made of the objects in possession, and these might be implied from the nature of the objects themselves. But before that stage is reached, there must be some circumstance indicating such intention or knowledge as is inseparable from the notion of conscious retention implied in the word 'possession.' "Such indication may arise from the position of the object in a place which is constantly used by the person accused, and which could not be overlooked by him, or from the bulk of the object itself, or from any circumstance, such as the locking up of the object which would point to voluntary and conscious possession."¹

Under the English statute dealing with offences relating to coin the word 'possession' embraces a wider area. Having any matter in the custody or possession of any person includes "not only the having it by himself in his personal custody or possession, but also the knowingly and wilfully having it in the actual custody or possession of any other person, and also the knowingly and wilfully having it in any dwelling house, or other building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, open or inclosed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether such matter shall be so had for his own use or benefit, or for that of any other person."²

If coining implements are found in a house occupied at the time by a man and his wife, the presumption is that they are in the possession of the husband alone, unless there are circumstances to show that the wife was acting separately and without her husband's sanction, they cannot both be convicted. The fact of a wife attempting to break up coining implements at the time of her husband's apprehension if done with the object of screening him, is no evidence of possession.³ Where several persons are found in a room where false coining is going on and most of them are shown to have taken active part, all are all to be presumed to have been in possession of the implements lying there which can be used for the purpose.⁴

Where father and son were accused of being in possession of moulds for the purpose of using the same for making counterfeit coins and of being in possession of such coins, and there was evidence to show that the father looked after the family cultivation while the son exclusively attended to the shop, in the verandah of which the moulds and coins were discovered, and it was also shown that the father was never seen in possession of the moulds or of the counterfeit coins, it was held that the ordinary presumption that the things in the house of a joint Hindu family were in the possession, and under the control, of the managing member, had been rebutted.⁵

It is not only necessary that the accused should be in possession of the instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin, but it should also be proved that the possession was within the accused's knowledge.⁶

¹ Per Batty, J., in Hari Maniram Sonar, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 887, 891. In the same case, Aston, J., did not concur in the above remarks, and went on to say (p. 894): "I think that if we introduce 'conscious' or 'voluntary' before the word possession where that word is not so qualified in a section of the Indian Penal Code we shall be legislating instead of administering the law, with inconvenient consequences such as shifting the burden of proof indicated by sections 114 and 106 of the Evidence Act... and even altering the substantive criminal law."

² 24 & 25 Vic., c. 99, s. 1.

³ Boober, (1850) 4 Cox 272.

⁴ Lal Chand, (1911) P. W. R. No. 17 of 1912, P. L. R. No. 43 of 1912.

⁵ Amrit Sonar, (1919) 4 P. L. J. 525. See Sangam Lal, (1893) 16 All 129, as to what evidence is necessary where a criminal article is found in a common room of a joint family house.

⁶ Nga San Nyein, (1915) 8 B. L. T. 131.

The accused was in possession of a box containing instruments used for counterfeiting coin. It appeared that two other brothers of his had access to the box and it was not proved that there was any property of the accused in it. It was held that the accused could not be convicted for it was not shown that he was in exclusive possession of the box.¹ The accused went into a village and purchased sweet-meats from one K for which he paid a counterfeit two-anna piece; he also delivered another counterfeit two-anna piece to K in payment for some milk. K, on discovering the fraud, pursued the accused and aided by two others arrested him. On being pursued the accused threw away a yellow bag which was found to contain a mould, an instrument called a "gugui" used for keeping up a draught in a fire, a file and some white metal, all evidently instruments or materials used for counterfeiting coin. It was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.²

Where coining instruments were found in a house occupied by a man, his wife, and a child ten years of age, the jury were directed to acquit the child of a felonious possession.³ The prisoner was indicted for knowingly and without lawful excuse having in his possession a mould on which was impressed the figure and apparent resemblance of the obverse side of a half-crown. The mould was found in the house of the prisoner, who had previously passed a bad half-crown; but there was no evidence to show that the half-crown had been made in that mould. It was held that

Instruments of coining.—
press for coinage⁵; a mortar⁶; a punchon of iron upon which was impressed the figure and similitude of the head-side of a shilling⁷; a collar of iron for graining the edges of counterfeit money⁸; and a galvanic battery.⁹

2. 'For the purpose of using the same for counterfeiting coin.'—The mere possession of instruments and materials capable of counterfeiting coins is no offence. Possession of such instruments should be with the intention of counterfeiting coins, and the intention must be proved in order to establish the charge. The accused had in his possession three 'dies' and some instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin. He was a goldsmith by occupation, and the instruments found with him were required for his work as a goldsmith. The dies were deficient and no complete counterfeit coin could be struck from them either singly or combined. There was no evidence that he ever used those instruments or dies for the purpose of counterfeiting. It was held that he was not guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁰ Instruments and materials which can be used for the purpose of making false coins as well as other purposes are to be considered instruments and materials used for the purpose of making false coins when these are found in connection therewith.¹¹

3. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra.

4. 'Queen's coin.'—See s. 230, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument or material in question is one for the purpose of counterfeiting coin (or King's coin).

It must be shown by the prosecution that the instrument is capable of counterfeiting coin.¹²

¹ Abdul Majid, (1903) P. L. R. No. 7 of 1904.

² Ahmad Shah, (1892) P. R. No. 10 of 1892.

³ Boober, (1850) 4 Cox 272.

⁴ Weeks, (1861) L. & C. 18.

⁵ Bell, (1753) 1 East P. C. 169.

⁶ Lennard, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

⁷ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

⁸ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

⁹ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

¹⁰ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

¹¹ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

¹² De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

¹³ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

¹⁴ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

¹⁵ De Jure, (1772) 1 East P. C. 170.

(2) That the accused was in possession of such instrument or material in question.

(3) That he was in possession thereof, for the purpose of using it; or that he knew, or had reason to believe, that it was intended to be used for that purpose.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—should be committed for trial to the Court of Session.¹

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were in possession of a certain instrument (or material), to wit—, for the purpose of using the said instrument for counterfeiting a piece of King-Emperor's coin, known as—{or knowing or having reason to believe that the said instrument was intended to be used for the purpose of counterfeiting, etc.}, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 235 of the Indian Penal Code and within the cognizance of the Court of Session.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

Sentences.—Having regard to s. 71 of the Code separate sentences cannot be passed under s. 232 and this section.

236. Whoever, being within British India,¹ abets² the counterfeiting³ of coin out of British India, shall be punished in the same manner as if he counterfeited such coin.

Abetting in India the counterfeiting out of India of coin.

COMMENT.

Any person in India, whether a British subject or a foreigner, who supplies instruments or materials for the purpose of counterfeiting any coin, or assists in any other way, is punishable under this section. Abetment in British India must be complete.

1. 'British India.'—See s. 15, supra.

2. 'Abets.'—See s. 107, supra.

3. 'Counterfeiting.'—See s. 28, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evid.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—
(2) should be committed for trial to the Court of Session.

(3) should be committed for trial to the Court of Session.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—
Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being in British India abetted one AB, residing out of British India, at— in the counterfeiting of coin by doing (mention the act done) and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 236 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

237. Whoever imports into British India,¹ or exports therefrom, any counterfeit² coin, knowing or having reason to believe³ that the same is counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The offence under this and the following section consists in an import or export, whether by sea or by land, of any coin known by the importer, or which he has reason to believe, to be counterfeit.

1. 'British India.'—See s. 15, supra.
2. 'Counterfeit.'—See s. 28, supra.
3. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the coins in question are counterfeit coins.

(2) That the accused imported into, or exported from, British India, such coins.

(3) That he, at the time he so imported or exported them, knew, or had reason to believe, that they were counterfeit.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—Same as for s. 238.

238. Whoever imports into British India, or exports therefrom, any counterfeit coin which he knows or has reason to believe to be a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section describes the same offence as the one under the preceding section, but provides enhanced punishment as the coin is King's coin.

PRACTICE;

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 237, showing in (1) that the counterfeit coins are King's coins.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, did import into (or export from British India, viz., at—, certain pieces of counterfeit King-Emperor's coin, to wit—, (specify the amount and name of the coins) knowing (or having reason to believe) that the said coins were counterfeit; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 238 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

239. Whoever, having any counterfeit¹ coin, which at the time when he became possessed² of it he knew to be counterfeit,³ fraudulently⁴ or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers the same to any person, or attempts to induce any person to receive it, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Delivery of coin, possessed with knowledge that it is counterfeit.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section is directed against a person other than the coiner, who procures or obtains or receives counterfeit coin, and not to the offence committed by the coiner.¹ The receipt of the false coin, knowing at the time it is received that it is counterfeit, is made the test of a person being such a dealer. The offence contemplated in this section appears to be a delivery or attempt to deliver by such a dealer to some person whether an accomplice or not: the intention being that that person, or some other should be defrauded.

The authors of the Code say: "An utterer by profession, an utterer who is the agent employed by the coiner to bring counterfeit coin into circulation, is guilty of a very high offence. Such an utterer stands not very different from that in which a thief. He makes coining a far less it would otherwise be. He passes and in the systematic practice of fraud, one of its most pernicious forms. He is one of the most mischievous, and is likely to be one of the most depraved of criminals. But a casual utterer, an utterer who is not an agent for bringing counterfeit coin into circulation, but who, having heedlessly received a bad rupee in the course of his business, takes advantage of the heedlessness of the next person with whom he deals to pay that bad rupee away, is an offender of a very different class. He is undoubtedly guilty of a dishonest act, but of one of the most venial of dishonest acts. It is an act which proceeds not from greediness for unlawful gain, but from a wish to avoid, by unlawful means it is true, what to a poor man may be a severe loss. It is an act which has no tendency to facilitate or encourage the operations of the coiner. It is an occasional act, an act which does not imply that the person who commits it is a person of lawless habits. We think, therefore, that the offence of a casual utterer is perhaps the least heinous of all the offences into which fraud enters.

"We considered whether it would be advisable to make it an offence in a person to have in his possession at one time a certain number of counterfeit coins, without being able to explain satisfactorily how he came by them. It did not, after much discussion, appear to us advisable to recommend this or any similar provision. We entertained strong objections to the practice of making circumstances which are in truth only evidence of an offence part of the definition of an offence; nor do we see any reason for departing in this case from our general rule.

"Whether a person who is possessed of bad money knows the money to be bad, and whether, knowing it to be bad, he intends to put it in circulation, are questions to be decided by the tribunals according to the circumstances of the case, circumstances of which the mere number of the pieces is only one and may be one of the least important. A few bad rupees which should evidently be fresh from the stamp would be stronger evidence than a greater number of bad rupees which appeared to have been in circulation for years. A few bad rupees, all obviously coined with the same die, would be stronger evidence than a greater number obviously coined with different dies. A few bad rupees placed by themselves, and unmixed with good ones, would be far stronger evidence than a much larger number which might be detected in a large mass of treasure."¹

¹ Sheobur, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 150.

Three classes of offences are created by ss. 239 to 243.

(1) Delivery to another of coin, possessed with the knowledge that it is counterfeit (ss. 239, 240.)

(2) Delivery to another of coin as genuine, which, when first possessed, the deliverer did not know to be counterfeit (s. 241).

(3) Possession of counterfeit coin by a person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof (ss. 242, 243).

1. 'Counterfeit.'—See s. 28, supra. It is not necessary that the counterfeit coin should be counterfeit of a current coin.² But it must be a counterfeit of a coin used for the time being as money. Otherwise the offence will be that of cheating and not of uttering false coin.³

2. 'Possessed.'—See s. 235, supra.

3. 'Which, at the time when he became possessed of it, knew it to be counterfeit.'—These words point to a person other than the coiner, that is, the person who procures, or obtains, or receives counterfeit coins.⁴ Against such a person this knowledge of the spuriousness of the coin at

A knowledge of the coin being counterfeit at the time of becoming possessed of it was inferred from the fact of the accused being goldsmiths.⁵

4. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

Uttering under this section must be with intent to defraud the party receiving the money. The giving of a piece of counterfeit money in charity is held to be not an uttering, although the person may know it to be counterfeit.⁷ But this decision has been not only questioned in a later case where a person who gave a counterfeit coin to a woman with whom he had intercourse was held to be guilty of uttering⁸; but it is considered to have been overruled.⁹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the coin in question is a counterfeit coin.

(2) That the accused became possessed of it

(3) That when he became so possessed he knew that it was a counterfeit coin.

(4) That he delivered it to some one, or attempted to induce some one to receive it

(5) That he, when he so delivered it, etc., intended to defraud, intended that a fraud might be committed.

Evidence of the possession and the attempted disposal of coins of unusual kind is admissible in evidence.

or bills forged in other names may be given. It is impossible to lay down any general rule as to what previous uttering must have taken place in order to be admissible in evidence.¹²

¹ Note 1, pp. 135, 136.

² Kandamuru Annappa, (1883) 1 Weir 21.

³ Khushali, (1906) 29 All. 141.

⁴ Sheobuz, (1871) 3 N. W. P. 150.

⁵ Parushullah Mundul v. Kheroo Mundul, (1874) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 4; Karappa Muppen, (1887) 1 Weir 222.

⁶ Kandamuru Annappa, sup.

⁷ Page, (1837) 8 C. & P. 122.

⁸ Anon., (1845) 1 Cox 250.

⁹ William Ion, (1852) 2 Den. Cr. C. 475, 484.

¹⁰ Nur Mahomed, (1883) 8 Bom. 223.

¹¹ Harrison, (1834) 2 Lewin 118.

¹² Salt, (1862) 3 F. & F. 834; Sarah Whisley, (1804) 2 Leach 983.

Upon a charge of uttering counterfeit coin, in order to prove a guilty knowledge, evidence is admissible of the subsequent uttering by the prisoner of counterfeit coin of a different denomination.¹

Section 14, ill. (b), of the Indian Evidence Act, recognizes this principle of English cases.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—
Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge—Same as for n. 210.

240. Whoever, having any counterfeit coin which is a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, and which, at the time when he became possessed of it, he knew to be a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers the same to any person or attempts to induce any person to receive it, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine

Delivery of Queen's coin possessed with knowledge that it is counterfeit.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last.

It does not apply to the actual coiner.² The offence under it is committed even though the coin is refused by the person to whom it is offered.³

See Comment on §. 23, supra.

CASES:

Sections 240 and 243.—A person having four counterfeit rupees in his possession, but uttering only one of them, cannot be separately convicted under s. 240 respecting the one rupee, and under s. 243 regarding the other three; because an offence under this section implies prior guilty possession. *

Delivering.—The prisoner went into the shop of D, and asked to purchase some coffee and sugar, and in payment of the same he put down on D's shop a counterfeit shilling, which D took up and said to the prisoner that it was a bad one. The prisoner left D's shop, leaving the shilling; but without the coffee and sugar. It was held that the prisoner was guilty of uttering a false coin.⁵

Ringt the changes.—R bargained with the wis-five apricots for six pence, and put the change

ing a sh which al a good o.
trick a th
It was held that he was guilty of uttering bad coin.⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 339, showing in (1) that the counterfeit coin is a counterfeit of the King's coin.

¹ Forster, (1855) 6 Cox 521, 24 L. J (M. C.) 134, Doarsly 456.

* Ahmad Shah, (1892) P. R. No. 10 of 1892

* Patrick Welch, (1851) 20 L. J. (M. C.)

⁴ Lalshing, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 202.

² Patrick Welch, sup. Soe Parushullah Mundul v. Kheroo Mundul, (1874) 23 W. R. (Cr.) 4.

⁶ Frankl., (1794) 2 Lenz 614.

Joint uttering.—If two prisoners are indicted for uttering a counterfeit shilling, having another counterfeit shilling in their possession, it is necessary to prove with certainty which of the pieces was the one uttered, and which was found on them unuttered, if both the pieces of money are proved to be counterfeit; and if it appear that the two prisoners went into a shop, and that one of them went in and uttered the bad money, having no more in her possession, and the other stayed outside the shop, having other bad pieces of money, both may be convicted: the uttering and the possession being both joint.¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, having in your possession—pieces of counterfeit King-Emperor's coin, known as—, knowing at the time when you became possessed of the said coins that they were counterfeit, fraudulently (or with intent to—) delivered the same to one AB (or attempted to—) whereby committed an offence punishable under—within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate, omit these words)] on the said charge.

241. Whoever delivers to any other person as genuine,¹ or attempts to induce any other person to receive as genuine, any counterfeit² coin which he knows to be counterfeit but which he did not know to be counterfeit at the time when he took it into his possession,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine to an amount which may extend to ten times the value of the coin counterfeited, or with both.

Delivery of coin as genuine, which, when first possessed, the deliverer did not know to be counterfeit.

ILLUSTRATION.

A, a coiner, delivers counterfeit Company's rupees to his accomplice B, for the purpose of uttering them. B sells the rupees to C, another utterer, who buys them knowing them to be counterfeit. C pays away the rupees for goods to D, who receives them, not knowing them to be counterfeit. D, after receiving the rupees, discovers that they are counterfeit and pays them away as if they were good. Here D is punishable only under this section, but B and C are punishable under s. 239 or 240, as the case may be.

COMMENT:

This section applies to a casual utterer of base coins. Section 239 deals with professional utterers. A casual utterer may not be aware that the coin was counterfeit at the time when he took it into his possession but he is responsible if he utters it knowingly.

1. 'As genuine.'—The gist of an offence under this section is that a person should deliver or attempt to induce any other person to receive as genuine coin known to be counterfeit.² Where A handed a counterfeit coin to his friend, in order to avoid its being discovered by the police in A's possession, it was held that A had committed no offence under the section, because the coin was not delivered

¹ Merrit, (1826) 2 C. & P. 427.

² Soorut, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 62.

as genuine.¹ If the Court be of opinion that the coin was not intended by the utterer to pass as a good coin, it should not convict the accused.²

2. 'Counterfeit.'—See s. 28, supra.

3. 'Possession.'—See s. 231, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the coin in question is a counterfeit coin.

(2) That the accused delivered it, or attempted to induce some one to receive it.

(3) That he so delivered it, or so attempted to induce some one to receive the same, as genuine.

(4) That he, at the time he delivered it, etc., knew the same to be a counterfeit coin.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the — day of —, at —, having in your possession — pieces of counterfeit King-Emperor's coin, known as — delivered as genuine to one AB the said coins (or attempted to induce one AB to receive the said coins as genuine) knowing at the time of the said delivery (or attempt), though not at the time when you became possessed of the said coins, that the said coins were counterfeit and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 241 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

242. Whoever, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession² of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Possession of counterfeit coin by person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof.

COMMENTARY.

Section 242.

Section 242.
fraud possession

... guilty knowledge. Possession

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

2. 'Possession.'—See s. 225, supra.

3. 'Counterfeit.'—See s. 28, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the coin in question is a counterfeit coin.

(2) That the accused was in possession of it.

(3) That he was in possession thereof, with intent to defraud, or with intent that fraud might be committed.

The accused may tender evidence to shew that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not.³

¹ Michael Byrne, (1852) 6 Cox 473

² Soorut, (1872) 4 N. W. P. 62

³ Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 21, ill. (c).

(4) That at the time he became so possessed thereof, he knew it to be counterfeit. When pieces of counterfeit coin are found on one of two persons acting in guilty concert, and both knowing of the possession, both are guilty.¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—See s. 243.

243. Whoever, fraudulently¹ or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession² of counterfeit coin which is a counterfeit of the Queen's coin,³ having known at the time when he became possessed of it that it was counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT:

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

2. 'Possession.'—See s. 235, supra.

3. 'Queen's Coin.'—See s. 230, supra.

PRACTICE.

was in possession of the coin himself, or his wife, clerk or servant was in possession of the coin on his account.² The point of time to be considered was the time when the accused had actual or conscious possession of the counterfeit coins for determining whether he had knowledge at the time that the coins were spurious.³

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently (or with intent that fraud might be committed) were in possession of—pieces of counterfeit King-Emperor's coin, known as—, knowing at the time when you became possessed of the said coins that they were counterfeit; and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 243 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session or High Court.)

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate, omit these words) on the said charge.

244. Whoever, being employed in any mint lawfully established in British India,¹ does any act, or omits what he is legally bound to do,² with the intention of causing any coin issued from that mint to be of a different weight or composition from the weight or composition fixed by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Person employed in mint causing coin to be of different weight or composition from that fixed by law.

¹ William Rogers, (1839) 2 Moody 477, F.R.

² Fateh Chand Agarwalla, (1916) 44 Cal. 112, F.R.

COMMENT.

The law has fixed the weight and composition of various coins and has declared in what cases they shall be a legal tender. The object of this section is to secure the purity of the coinage and its exact conformity to the legal standard against the act or omission of persons employed in mints. The proof must be that the person is employed in a Government mint, and that the act or omission which is the subject of the charge was intended to cause the coin there made or issued to vary from the fixed standard. It is no part of the definition and therefore it will be no necessary part of the proof that any wrongful gain should accrue to the person charged, or that loss should be caused to the Government or the public.¹ See the Indian Coinage Act.²

1. 'British India.'—See s. 15, supra.

2. 'Legally bound to do.'—See s. 43, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused is employed in a lawfully established mint in British India.

(2) That he, during such employment, did or omitted to do, something he was legally bound to do, which would cause any coin issued from that mint to be of a different weight or composition from that fixed by law.

(3) That he did, or omitted to do, such thing with that intention.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, being employed as—in the—mint lawfully established in British India did an act, to wit—, (or omitted what you were legally bound to do, to wit—) with the intention of causing the coin—issued from the said mint to be of a different weight (or composition) from the weight (or composition) fixed by law, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 244 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

245. Whoever, without lawful authority, takes out of any mint, lawfully established in British India,¹ any coining tool or instrument,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Unlawfully taking coining instrument from mint.

COMMENT

The substance of this offence consists in taking a coining tool without lawful authority out of any mint for the purpose of using it for making counterfeit coins.

1. 'British India.'—See s. 15, supra.

2. 'Instrument.'—That is, coining instrument.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument in question is a coining tool or instrument.

(2) That it belonged to a mint lawfully established in British India.

(3) That the accused took it out of the mint without lawful authority.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, without lawful authority, did take out of a mint lawfully established in British India, to wit the mint—, a certain coining tool (or instrument), to wit—; and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 245 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

246. Whoever fraudulently¹ or dishonestly² performs on any coin any operation which diminishes the weight or alters the composition of that coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A person who scoops out part of the coin and puts anything else into the cavity, alters the composition of that coin.

COMMENT.

Fraudulent or dishonest diminution in the weight or composition of a coin is punishable.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25 supra.

2. 'Dishonestly.'—See s. 24, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the metal in question is a coin.

(2) That the accused performed upon such coin the operation in question.

(3) That such operation diminished its weight, or altered its composition.

(4) That the accused did as above fraudulently or dishonestly.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently (or dishonestly) performed on the coin, to wit—, an operation which diminished its weight (or altered its composition) and you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 246 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried (by the said Court) on the said charge.

247. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly performs on any of the Queen's coin any operation which diminishes the weight or alters the composition of that coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 246, showing in (1) that the coin in question is a King's coin.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—
 Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—See s. 246.

248. Whoever performs on any coin any operation which with the intention of altering the appearance of coin with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section refers to any operation which alters the appearance of a coin with the intention that the said coin shall pass as a coin of a different description. The operation, whether of gilding, or silvering, or washing, etc., must be of such a kind, and so far completed, that the coin which is subjected to it, is actually altered in appearance. Thus quick-silvering of a half-piece so as to give it the appearance of a four-anna silver piece will be punishable under this section. The offence is complete as soon as the coin is altered, though no fraudulent purpose may be proved. There is in fact a description of the coin. The alteration of the weight is diminished either s. 246 or s. 247 will apply.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the metal in question is a coin.

(2) That the accused performed on such coin the operation in question.

(3) That such operation altered the appearance thereof.

(4) That the accused did as above with the intention that such coin should pass as a coin of a different description.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—
 Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

In the case of a previous conviction the accused should be committed for trial to the Court of Session unless the Magistrate is competent to try the case and is of opinion that he can himself pass an adequate sentence.¹

Charge.—See s. 249.

249. Whoever performs on any of the Queen's coin¹ any operation which alters the appearance of that coin, with the intention that the said coin shall pass as a coin of a different description, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

See comment under the preceding section. The offence under this section is merely an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section.

1. 'Queen's coin.'—See s. 230, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 248, showing in (1) that the coin in question is a King's coin.

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 348.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, did perform a certain operation, to wit—, on a piece of the King-Emperor's coin known as—, with the intention that the said coin should pass as a coin of a different description, to wit—; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 249 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance (or cognizance of the Court of Session or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate, omit these words)] on the said charge.

250. Whoever, having coin in his possession with respect to which the offence defined in section 246 or 248 has been committed, and having known at the time when he became possessed of such coin that such offence had been committed with respect to it, fraudulently¹ or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers such coin to any other person, or attempts to induce any other person to receive the same, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This and the following sections are intended to punish persons who are traders in spurious or altered coins. They correspond to ss 239 and 240. There must be both possession with knowledge and fraudulent delivery.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the coin in question was one with respect to which the offence defined in s. 246 or 248 was committed.

(2) That the accused was in possession of it.

(3) That at the time when he became possessed of it he knew that any of the said offences had been committed.

(4) That he delivered it to some one, or attempted to induce some one, to receive it.

(5) That he did as above with intent to defraud or with intent that fraud might be committed.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—See s. 251.

251. Whoever, having coin in his possession with respect to which the offence defined in section 247 or 249 has been committed, and having known at the time when he became possessed of such coin that such offence had been committed with respect to it, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers such coin to any other person, or attempts to induce any other person to receive the same, shall be punished with

Delivery of coin
Queen's coin possessed with knowledge that it is altered.

imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.¹

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section.

1. 'And shall also be liable to fine.'—The section does not require a sentence of fine as well as imprisonment to be inflicted; the sentence of fine is optional.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that a coin in question was one with respect to which the offence defined in s. 247 or 249 was committed.

Other points as in s. 250.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or First Class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of the accused as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, had in your possession a coin, to wit—, and in respect of which the offence defined in s. 246 (or s. 248) of the Indian Penal Code had been committed, and knowing at the time when you became possessed of the said coin that such offence had been committed, you fraudulently (or with intent that fraud may be committed) delivered such coin to AB (or attempted to induce the said AB to receive the same) and thereby committed an offence within my cognizance (or)

And (in cases tried by Magistrate, omit these words)] on the said charge.

252. Whoever fraudulently,¹ or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession² of coin with respect to which the offence defined in either of the sections 246 or 248 has been committed, having known at the time of becoming possessed thereof that such offence had been committed with respect to such coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Possession of coin by person who knew it to be altered when he became possessed thereof.

COMMENT.

. the professional dealer, with fraudulent intention. This and the following section and 251 the accused is punished for uttering, under this and the next section he is punished for possessing a coin in respect of which the offence defined in either s. 246 or 247 has been committed.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

2. 'Possession.'—See s. 335, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was in possession of a coin.

(2) That it was a coin in respect of which the offence defined in s. 246 or 248 had been committed.

¹ Joseph alias Tharasi, (1883) 1 Weir 223.

(3) That the accused knew of it when he became possessed of the coin.

(4) That he was so possessed of the coin with intent to defraud, or with intent that fraud might be committed.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

253. Whoever fraudulently, or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession of coin with respect to which the offence defined in either of the sections 247 or 249 has been committed, having known at the time of becoming possessed thereof that such offence had been committed with respect to such coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence described in the last section. See Comment on the preceding section.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove the same points as for s. 252, showing in (1) that the coin in question was King's coin.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

254. Whoever delivers to any other person as genuine or as a coin of a different description from what it is, or attempts to induce any person to receive as genuine, or as a different coin from what it is, any coin in respect of which he knows that any such operation as that mentioned in sections 246, 247, 248 or 249 has been performed, but in respect of which he did not, at the time when he took it into his possession, know that such operation had been performed, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine to an amount which may extend to ten times the value of the coin for which the altered coin is passed, or attempted to be passed.

COMMENT.

Section 241 is similar to this section. Where possession is acquired innocently but on subsequent knowledge that the coin is counterfeit, if a person passes it off or attempts to pass it off as a genuine coin he will be punished under this section.

See the Metal Tokens Act, s. 3¹.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the coin in question is one with respect to which any such operation as that mentioned in ss. 246, 247, 248 or 249 has been performed.

(2) That the accused delivered it to some one; or that he attempted to induce some one to receive it.

(3) That he so delivered it, or attempted to induce some one to receive it, as a genuine coin, or as a coin of a different description.

(4) That at the time he did so, he knew that it had been operated upon.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, delivered to AB (or attempted to induce AB to receive) as genuine a coin, to wit—, in respect of which an operation as is mentioned in s. 246 (or s. 247 or 248 or 249) of the Indian Penal Code, to wit—, had been performed, and you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 254 of the Indian Penal Code and witl in my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

255. Whoever counterfeits,¹ or knowingly performs any

Counterfeiting Government stamp.

part of the process of counterfeiting, any stamp² issued by Government³ for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A person commits this offence who counterfeits by causing a genuine stamp of one denomination to appear like a genuine stamp of a different denomination.

COMMENT.

The remaining sections of this Chapter deal with offences relating to Government stamps. These stamps are impressions upon paper, parchment, or any material used for writing made by Government, mostly for the purpose of revenue.

This section is similar to s. 241 which deals with counterfeiting of coins.

1. 'Counterfeits.'—See s. 28, supra. Engraving a stamp, like in some part to a genuine stamp, and unlike in others, and then cutting out the unlike parts, and concealing the part cut out, amounts to counterfeiting a stamp.¹

2. 'Stamp.'—This word is used in this and the following sections to denote the impression or mark set upon the paper, parchment, etc. It includes postage stamps.²

The word 'stamp' must be construed according to its ordinary meaning in the English language. An obliterated stamp can be a stamp in the ordinary use of the English language. A stamp does not cease to be a stamp because it is cancelled. A person selling a forged stamp, although it bears a cancellation mark, commits an offence of selling forged stamps.³

3. 'Government.'—See s. 17, supra, and 263-A (4), infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the counterfeit was that of a stamp issued by Government for the purposes of revenue.

(2) That the accused made such counterfeit; or that he knowingly performed any part of the process of counterfeiting.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session

¹ Thomas Collect, (1811.) 2 Leech 1045.

² Indian Post Office Act, VI of 1828, ss.

16 and 17.

³ Lowson, [1911] 1 K. B. 14.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, counterfeited (or knowingly performed a certain part of the process of counterfeiting, to wit—), a certain stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 255 of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court),

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

256. Whoever has in his possession¹ any instrument or material for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for the purpose of counterfeiting any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Having possession of instrument or material for counterfeiting Government stamp.

COMMENT.

See Comment on the preceding section. This section resembles s. 235 with which it may be compared.

1. 'Possession.'—See ss. 27 and 235, supra. The proprietor of a newspaper circulating among stamp-collectors and others caused a die to be made for him abroad, from which imitations or representations of a current colonial postage stamp could be produced. The only purpose for which the die was ordered by him, and was subsequently kept in his possession, was for making upon the pages of an illustrated stamp catalogue or newspaper, called "The Philatelist's Supplement," illustrations in black and white and not in colours of the colonial stamp in question, this special supplement being intended for sale as part of his newspaper. It was held that the possession of a die for making a false stamp, known to be such to its possessor, was, however innocent the use that he intended to make of it, a possession without lawful excuse within the meaning of the Post Office Act, 1884, s. 7 (c), which says that "a person shall not make, or, unless he shews a lawful excuse, have in his possession any die, plate, instrument, or materials for making any fictitious stamps."¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument or material in question is one usable for counterfeiting stamps.

(2) That the stamps so produceable thereby are counterfeits of those issued by Government for the purposes of revenue.

(3) That the accused had such instrument or material in his possession.

(4) That the same was in possession of the accused for the purpose of its being used to counterfeit such Government stamps; or that the accused knew or had reason to believe that such instrument or material was intended to be so used.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

257. Whoever makes or performs any part of the process¹ of making, or buys or sells or disposes of, any instrument for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe² that it is intended to be used, for the purpose of counterfeiting any

Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting Government stamp.

¹ Dickins v. Gill, [1896] 2 Q. B. 310.

stamp³ issued by Government⁴ for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

This section corresponds to s. 231.

1. 'Performs any part of the process.'—It is not necessary that the instruments should be capable of making an entire impression of a stamp.¹

2. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra.

3. 'Stamp.'—See s. 255, supra.

4. 'Government.'—See s. 263-A, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument or material in question is one usable for counterfeiting stamps.

(2) That the stamps so produceable thereby are counterfeits of those issued by Government for the purpose of revenue.

(3) That the accused made, or performed, some part of the process of making such instrument; or that he bought, sold, or disposed of such instrument.

(4) That he did as above in order that such instrument might be used for the purpose of counterfeiting such stamp; or that the accused knew or had reason to believe that the same was intended to be used for such purpose.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, made (or performed any ment for the purpose of revenue, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 257 of the Indian Penal Code and within the cognizance of the Court of Session (or High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

258. Whoever sells, or offers for sale, any stamp which he knows or has reason to believe to be a counterfeit

Sale of counterfeit Government stamp.

of any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.

... although it bear

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the counterfeit was that of a stamp issued by Government for the purposes of revenue.

¹ Foster, (1836) 7 C. & P. 494.

² Lawden, [1914] 1 K. B. 141.

(2) That the accused sold or offered to sell such counterfeit stamp.

(3) That when selling or offering the same for sale he knew, or had reason to believe, that the same was counterfeit.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, sold (or offered for sale) a stamp, to wit—, which you knew (or had reason to believe) to be counterfeit of the stamp—issued by the Government for the purpose of revenue, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 258 of the Indian Penal Code, and, within the cognizance of the Court of Session.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

259. Whoever has in his possession¹ any stamp² which he knows to be a counterfeit³ of any stamp issued by Government⁴ for the purpose of revenue, intending to use or dispose of the same as a genuine stamp, or in order that it may be used as a genuine stamp, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Having possession of counterfeit Government stamp.

COMMENT.

This section resembles s. 243.

1. 'Possession.'—See ss 27 and 235, supra.

2. 'Stamp.'—See s. 255, supra.

3. 'Counterfeit.'—See s. 28, supra.

4. 'Government.'—See s. 263-A, infra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the counterfeit was that of a stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue.

(2) That the accused has such counterfeit stamp in his possession.

(3) That he then knew the same to be counterfeit.

(4) That he was so possessed intending to use or dispose of the same as a genuine stamp; or that he was so possessed thereof in order that the same may be used as a genuine stamp.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were in possession of a stamp, Exhibit—, which you knew to be a counterfeit of a stamp, to wit—, issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, intending to use (or dispose of) the same as a genuine stamp and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 259 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session, or the High Court).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by the Magistrate, omit these words)] on the said charge.

260. Whoever uses as genuine any stamp, knowing it to be a counterfeit of any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Using as genuine a Government stamp known to be counterfeit.

COMMENT.

See Comment on s. 255. This section corresponds to s. 254.

Here the stamp used as genuine must be a counterfeit stamp. Hence, where a person sold a one-anna stamp as a one-rupee stamp, it was held that he had committed no offence under this section, but was guilty of cheating under s. 415.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the counterfeit was that of a stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue.

(2) That the accused knew the same to be counterfeit.

(3) That used such counterfeit stamp with such knowledge.

(4) That he used the same as a genuine stamp.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, used as genuine stamp, to wit—, knowing it to be counterfeit of a stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue to wit—, and thereby committed an offence punishable under:

of the

At

Magistrate, omit these words if you are not a Magistrate.

261. Whoever fraudulently,¹ or with intent to cause loss to the Government, removes or effaces from any substance, bearing any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, any writing or document² for which such stamp has been used, or removes from any writing or document, a stamp which has been used for such writing or document, in order that such stamp may be used for a different writing or document, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Effacing writing from substance bearing Government stamp, or removing from document a stamp used for it,
with intent to cause loss to Government.

COMMENT.

This section provides penalty for (1) the effacing of a writing from a stamp, and (2) the removing of a stamp from a document. The intention may be to defraud some one or to cause loss of revenue to Government. The section resembles ss. 246 and 248 which provide punishment for the alteration and defacement of a coin.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

2. 'Document.'—See s. 29, supra.

¹ Shroop Chunder Dose, (1865) 2 W. R. (Cr.) 60.

PRACTICE,

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the stamp was issued by Government for revenue purposes.

(2) That such stamp had been used as such on the substance in question.

(3) That the accused removed or effaced from such stamp some of the writing for which it had been used.

(4) That he did so with intent to defraud or to cause loss to Government. Or prove points (1) and (2) as above, and further—

(3) That such stamp had been used as such for a writing or document.

(4) That the accused removed the stamp from such writing or document.

(5) That he did so in order that such stamp might be used for a different writing or document.

(6) That he did so with intent to defraud or to cause loss to Government.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently (or with intent to cause loss to the Government) removed (or effaced) from any substance bearing any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue any writing (or document) for which such stamp had been used or removed from any writing (or document) a stamp which had been used for such writing (or document, in order that such stamp may be used for a different writing (or document), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 261 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance (or the cognizance of the Court of Session).

And I hereby direct that you be tried [by the said Court (in cases tried by Magistrate, omit these words)] on the said charge.

262. Whoever fraudulently,¹ or with intent to cause loss to the Government, uses for any purpose a stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, which he knows to have been before used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Using Government stamp known to have been before used.

COMMENT.

Under this section fraudulent use of a stamp already used is made punishable.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra. The mere affixing to a letter of a postal stamp which has been previously used does not of itself prove fraud or an intent to cause loss to Government²; but if a person uses a postage stamp twice he will be punished under this section.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the stamp was issued by Government for the purposes of revenue

(2) That it had been already used for such purpose.

(3) That the accused afterwards again used such stamp.

(4) That when he used it again he knew that it had been before used.

(5) That he again so used the stamp with intent to defraud or to cause loss to Government.³

¹ Niaz Ahmad, (1881) 1, A. W. N. 56.

² Sitaram, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 43.

³ Murlidhar, (1880) Unrep. Cr. C. 145.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class.

263. ... with intent to cause loss to the Government or removes from a stamp issued Erasure of ... denoting that stamp has been used.

... by Government for the purpose of revenue, any mark put or impressed upon such stamp for the purpose of denoting that the same has been used, or knowingly has in his possession, or sells or disposes of, any such stamp from which such mark has been erased or removed, or sells or disposes of any such stamp which he knows to have been used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Under this section three things are punishable: (1) erasure or removal of a mark denoting that a stamp has been used, (2) knowingly possessing any such stamp, and (3) selling or disposing of any such stamp.

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the stamp was issued by Government for the purpose of revenue.

(2) That it had been used for that purpose.

(3) That it bore a mark or impression denoting that it had been so used.

(4) That the accused removed or erased

(5) That when ... did so with an intention to ...

Or prove p ... and (4) as above, and further—

(5) That the accused had possession of such stamp in such cancelled condition; or that such stamp, in such cancelled condition, was sold or disposed of by the accused.

(6) That the accused at the time knew that such mark or impression had been so removed or erased.

(7) That he had a fraudulent intention, or had the intention to cause loss to Government, when he had such possession, or made such sale or disposal.

Or

(4) ... knew that it had been so used. (6) That he had a fraudulent intention, or had the intention to cause loss to Government, when so selling or disposing of it.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, or Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Prohibition of fictitious stamps.

263-A. (1) Whoever—

(a) makes, knowingly utters, deals in or sells any fictitious stamp, or knowingly uses for any postal purpose any fictitious stamp, or

(b) has in his possession, without lawful excuse, any fictitious stamp, or

(c) makes or, without lawful excuse, has in his possession any die, plate, instrument or materials for making any fictitious stamp, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

(2) Any such stamp, die, plate, instrument or materials in the possession of any person for making any fictitious stamp may be seized and shall be forfeited.

(3) In this section "fictitious stamp" means any stamp falsely purporting to be issued by Government for the purpose of denoting a rate of postage or any facsimile or imitation or representation, whether on paper or otherwise, of any stamp issued by Government for that purpose.

(4) In this section and also in sections 255 to 263, both inclusive, the word "Government," when used in connection with, or in reference to, any stamp issued for the purpose of denoting a rate of postage, shall, notwithstanding anything in section 17, be deemed to include the person or persons authorized by law to administer executive government in any part of India, and also in any part of Her Majesty's dominions or in any foreign country.

COMMENT.

* This section is exactly the same as s. 7 of the English Post Office Act, 1884.¹

Object.—This section was added by Act III of 1895, s. 2, and is intended to give full effect to what is known as the Vienna Convention in respect of postage, and it provides for making it an offence to make fictitious stamps, which are defined to be stamps purporting to be used for purposes of postage whether by the British or any foreign Government. It was introduced at the instance of the Post office for the purpose of stopping the use of fictitious stamps on letters coming from abroad.

Possession of a fictitious stamp without lawful excuse is an offence. The proprietor of a newspaper circulating among stamp-collectors and others caused a die to be made for him abroad, from which imitations or representations of a current colonial postage stamp could be produced. The only purpose for which the die was ordered by him, and was subsequently kept in his possession, was for marking upon the pages of an illustrated stamp catalogue or newspaper, called "The Philatelist's Supplement," illustrations in black and white and not in colours of the colonial stamp in question, this special supplement being intended for sale as part of his newspaper. It was held that the possession of a die for making a false stamp, known to be such to its possessor, was, however innocent the use that he intended to make of it, a possession without lawful excuse.²

PRACTICE:

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused made, knowingly uttered, dealt in, or sold the fictitious stamp in question, or knowingly used it for any postal purposes; or

(2) that he had in his possession, without lawful excuse, such stamps; or

(3) that he made, or, without lawful excuse, had in his possession any die, plate, instrument, or materials for making such stamp.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

¹ 47 & 48 Vic, c. 76, s. 7.

² Dickins v. Gil, [1896] 2 Q. B. 310

CHAPTER XIII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

THE offences punishable by this Chapter are not defined with reference to any precise standard of weight or measure established by law. A false weight or measure here signifies that—taking the law or the ordinary usage of the place, or the common understanding of the parties, to have fixed on certain known instrument of weight or measure, with reference to which two persons deal together—the false dealer by deceit substitutes another weight or measure in order to defraud.¹

The legislature has, however, not left the matter quite at large. By the Indian Weights and Measures of Capacity Act,² it has fixed “a ser,” corresponding to the French “Kilogramme de Archives,” as the primary standard of weight. Later, an Act entitled the Measures of Length Act³ was passed by which the imperial yard for the United Kingdom has been made the legal standard measure of length in British India; and certain officers in every presidency and district towns in India are required to keep standards of such retail weights and measures in use throughout the particular town or district.⁴

264. Whoever fraudulently uses any instruments for weighing¹ which he knows to be false,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Fraudulent use of false instrument for weighing.

COMMENT:

“The sections...relating to weights make no mention of standard weights. In every place there are well-known customary weights, and, if any resident of the place or other person..., knowing that a weight is less than the customary weights which it purports to be, uses the weight dishonestly, he commits fraud, and may be punished under Chap. XIII.”⁵

As to inspection of weights and measures by police, s. 153, Criminal Procedure Code, provides: “(1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching for any weights or measures or instruments for weighing, used or kept therein, whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false. (2) If he finds in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false, he may seize the same, and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.”

Ingredients.—This section requires two essentials:—

1. Fraudulent use of an instrument for weighing.

¹ M. & M. 201.

² Act XXXI of 1871, s. 2.

³ Act II of 1883, ss. 2, 7.

⁴ The Calcutta Police Act (Beng. Act IV of 1866) s. 55; the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act (Beng. Act II of 1888), s. 370; the Madras City Police Act (Mad. Act III of 1888), s. 32; the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom. Act III of 1888), s. 418; the City of Bombay Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1902), s. 64; Police Duties and Powers of Magistrate (Bombay) Regulation XII of 1827, s. 20; the Burma Municipal Act (Burma Act III of 1898), s. 142(c); the Burma Excise Act (Burma Act V of 1917), s. 21.

⁵ Per Hosking, J. C., in Ma Eia Me, (1897) P. J. L. B. 354.

2. Knowledge that such instrument is false.

1. 'Fraudulently using any instrument of weighing.'—See s. 25, supra. Intention is an essential part of the offence under this section.¹ "The intention however must be alleged in laying the charge, though it may be matter of inference only, from the fact of the possession, and the attending circumstances as manifesting the purpose, and the inference may of course be rebutted... But where the incorrectness of the scale is so visible, and there is no attempt to cover or conceal it, there can be no ground for imputing fraud from that defect alone; the circumstances negative the intention of fraud, and no charge would lie against the party using such a balance. On the other hand a false balance artfully contrived to elude detection in the use of it, carries with it a presumption of fraudulent intention, which properly brings it within the scope of the chapter."² A one tola below weight in a five seers only represents a fair wear and tear, and is no evidence of a fraudulent intention.³

2. 'Knows to be false.'—The word 'false' in this and the following sections means different from the instrument, weight, or measure, which the offender and the person defrauded have fixed upon, expressly or by implication, with reference to their mutual dealings.⁴ A railway company kept a weighing machine, which for a fortnight had been so out of repair that, when anything was weighed by it, the weight appeared to be four pounds more than was really the weight. It was held that the company was liable to be convicted for having in its possession a weighing machine which on examination was found to be incorrect or otherwise unjust.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument in question is one for weighing.

(2) That it is a false one.

(3) That the accused knew it to be false.

(4) That he used it knowing it to be so.

(5) That he did as above with intent to defraud.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Summary trial.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, fraudulently used a certain instrument for weighing, to wit—, knowing it to be false at the time of using it, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 264 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

265. Whoever fraudulently¹ uses any false² weight or false measure of length or capacity, or fraudulently uses

Fraudulent use of false weight or measure.

any weight or any measure of length or capacity as a different weight or measure from what it is, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 264 punishes one who uses a false balance; this section punishes one who uses a false weight or measure.

¹ Kangalee Muduk, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 7.

² 2nd Rep., ss. 220, 221.

³ Bikka Mal, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 224.

⁴ Stokes, Vol. I, p. 193.

⁵ The Great Western Ry. Co. v. Bulle, (1864) 34 L. J. M. C. 31.

To ascertain whether a measure is false or not, the only proper test to apply is that of the measure, and the same articles must be measured in each case, and proof should be adduced that this had been done. The weight of the grain that a measure is found to hold is no evidence of its capacity, as compared with that of another measure unless the very same grain is used.¹

1. 'Fraudulently.'—See s. 25, supra.

2. 'False.'—S. 25, supra. The weight or measure which was not the capacity, it was held that they had not committed an offence under this section but one under s. 415.² Selling by means of an unstamped measure does not, in the absence of evidence of fraud or falsity of the measure, constitute this offence.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the weight or measure is a false one; or that it is different from what it was used as.

(2) That the accused used such false or different weight or measure.

(3) That he did as above with intent to defraud.

A conviction under this section cannot be maintained where there is no complaint by a purchaser.⁴

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Summary trial.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, [fraudulently used a false weight (or false measure of length or capacity)], [or fraudulently used a weight (or measure of length or capacity) as a different weight (or measure) from what it was] and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 265 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

266. Whoever is in possession¹ of any instrument for weighing, or of any weight, or of any measure of length or capacity, which he knows to be false, and intending that the same may be fraudulently² used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section punishes a person who is in possession of a false weight or measure just as s. 235, 239 and 240 punish a person who is in possession of counterfeit coins and s. 259 punishes a person who is in possession of a counterfeit stamp.

1. 'Possession.'—The mere possession of false weights or measures will not of itself raise any strong presumption of fraud, as the weights or measures may have been put away so as not to be used. The fraudulent intent will be shown greatly by the place where they are found. Suppose a false balance was found fixed to a tradesman's counter where he was accustomed to sell his goods, and there was no other in the place. There would be, in the case, the strongest possible presumption that the possession was not innocent. On the other hand.

¹ Lakshman Mortand, (1898) Unrep. Cr. C. 939.

² Nurodin, (1888) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1888, 1093. Unrep. Cr. C. 356.

³ Lehi, (1882) 1 Weir 223.

⁴ Sobhar, (1902) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 39 of suppose he had true balances in his shop, but an untrue one stowed away in an attic with a lot of lumber, there the presumption would be against fraud.

But the mere possession of the false instrument, if such possession cannot be satisfactorily explained and accounted for, is sufficient ground for presuming an intention to use it fraudulently.

As to the definition of the word "possession" see s. 27.

2. 'Knows to be false... fraudulently used.'—It is necessary to prove that the accused knew the scales to be false and intended to use them fraudulently. The mere possession of the scales, or evidence of their use, with a string not accurately tied at the centre of the beam, so that one scale outweighed the other, but which could be shifted at any time, and might sometimes have been accurately tied, was held not of itself sufficient evidence of fraud.¹ The mere possession of weights in excess of the authorized standard will not support a conviction.²

A person who professes to sell by a certain standard of weight is bound to take reasonable care that the weights he uses are not defective.³ He is bound to see that the measure is correct according to that standard and if the measure varies considerably advantage, the Courts are professed to sell by weights of a certain in the possession of the accused for the all deficient, but the Sessions Judge was fraud, because the weights had been openly and therefore presumably ignorantly used. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section.⁴

'Fraudulently'—See s. 25, supra. Where standard weights are not prescribed no presumption of fraud can arise in respect of short weights, and a conviction under this section cannot be obtained unless the element of fraud is strictly proved.⁵

Where a search took place after dark without proper precautions, and there was absence of proper description of the weights seized and there was silence of and was

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument, or the measure, or the weight in question is false.

To prove that the weight or measure is false, comparison should be made with standard weights or measures. Some reasonable allowance should be made for wear and tear and for the rough and ready methods of bazaar shop-keepers.⁶

(2) That the accused was in possession of the same.

(3) That he knew the same to be false.

(4) That he intended that such false weight, etc., should be used to defraud some one.

Pcedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Summary trial.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, were in possession of a certain instrument for weighing (or of a certain weight, or of a certain measure

¹ Hamirnal, (1890) Cr. R. No. 36 of 1890, Unrep. Cr. C. 514. Haral Chand Marwari, (1917) 15 A. L. J. R. 897.

² Damodhar Dalvi, (1864) 1 B. H. C. 181.

³ Appasami alias Munisami, (1884) 1 Weir 225.

⁴ Venkata Chetty, (1883) 1 Weir 225.

⁵ Meetalagath Puler, (1883) 1 Weir 223.

⁶ Ali Ya Pyan, (1908) U. B. R. (P.C.) 17.

⁷ Sobaa, (1902) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 38 of 1908.

⁸ Nanak Chand, (1913) P. R. No. 20 of 1913.

of length or capacity), to wit—, knowing it, at the time of your possession, to be false, and intending that the same might be fraudulently used, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 266 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

267. Whoever makes, sells or disposes of any instrument for weighing, or any weight, or any measure of length or capacity which he knows to be false,¹ in order that the same may be used as true, or knowing that the same is likely to be used as true, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT:

This section punishes a person who makes, sells, or disposes of a false balance, weight or measure. The object is to prevent the circulation of false scales, weights or measures.

1. 'False.'—See s. 264, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the instrument, or the measure, or the weight in question, is false.

(2) That the accused either made, sold, or disposed of the same.

(3) That he then knew it to be false.

(4) That he so made, sold, or disposed of it, in order that it might be used as true; or that he knew that it was likely to be used as true.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Summary trial.

Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, made (or sold, or disposed of) a certain instrument for weighing (or a certain weight, or a certain measure of—), to wit—, knowing at the time of making (or selling or disposing of) that the said instrument might be used as true, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 267 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE PUBLIC HEALTH, SAFETY, CONVENIENCE, DECENCY AND MORALS.

268. A person is guilty of a public nuisance who does any act Public nuisance. or is guilty of an illegal omission¹ or which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity,² or which must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right.^{2b}

A common nuisance is not excused on the ground that it causes some convenience³ or advantage.

COMMENT.

Nuisances are of two kinds: (1) Public, and (2) Private.

(1) 'Public' nuisance or common nuisance is an offence against the public, either by doing a thing which tends to the annoyance of the whole community in general, or by neglecting to do anything which the common good requires. It is an act affecting the public at large, or some considerable portion of them; and it must interfere with rights which members of the community might otherwise enjoy. It depends in a great measure upon the number of houses and the concourse of people in the vicinity; and the annoyance or neglect must be of a real and substantial nature. Acts which seriously interfere with the health, safety, comfort, or convenience of the public generally, or which tend to degrade public morals, have always been considered to be public nuisances.

Persons who carry on offensive trades and thereby, or by any other offensive means, corrupt the air, or by any means cause loud and continued noises and thereby occasion injury or annoyance to those dwelling in the vicinity, or to those of their health, or comfort and convenience are liable to a prosecution for causing a public nuisance. It is not necessary to me a sine qua non that such an annoyance as this should injuriously affect every member of the public within its range of operation. It is sufficient that it should affect people in general who dwell in the vicinity."² A brew-house, glass-house or swine yard may be a public nuisance if it is shown that the trade is such as to render the enjoyment of life and property uncomfortable. Erecting gunpowder mills or keeping gunpowder magazines near a town, keeping large quantities of naphtha near dwelling-ties of materials for making matches, or storing them at night in a residential locality, or in disorderly inns, bawdy houses, gaming houses, and committing acts of indecency in public places have been held to be public nuisances.

A public nuisance can only be the subject of one indictment, otherwise a party might be ruined by a million suits. An indictment will fail if the nuisance complained of only affects one or few individuals.

As to when an individual can bring a civil action in respect of a public nuisance, see the authors' Law of Torts, 9th Edn.

¹ 7th Parl. R., p. 57.

P. R. No. 9 of 1904.

² Per Anderson, J., in Phiraya Mal, (1904)

³ Ibid.

(2) 'Private nuisance' is defined to be anything done to the hurt or annoyance of the lands, tenements or hereditaments of another, and not amounting to trespass. It is an act affecting some particular individual or individuals as distinguished from the public at large. It is in the quantum of annoyance that public nuisance differs from private. It cannot be the subject of an indictment, but may be the ground of a civil action for damages or an injunction, or both.

The various sections of this Chapter deal with everything that is regarded as nuisance in English law. Section 2(1) is a general provision intended to cover a case not specially provided.

Ingredients.—The section requires two essentials—

1. A person must do an act or must be guilty of an illegal omission.
2. Such act or omission must cause

(a) common injury, danger, or annoyance (i) to the public, or (ii) to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity, or

(b) injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right.

1. 'Person does any act or is guilty of an illegal omission.'—Section 11 defines the word 'person'.

The word 'act' is defined in s. 33, supra. It is used in this section in the sense of positive conduct only, not negative conduct or omission to do something as the expression 'illegal omission' is specifically used in conjunction with it.

The word 'illegal,' as defined in s. 43, is applicable to everything which is an offence or which is prohibited by law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action. Every omission causing a nuisance is not punishable. The omission must be 'illegal.' Thus, a person omitting to fence a wall on a private ground within eight yards of a highway,¹ and a person omitting to keep his ponies² and his pigs³ from straying, were held to have committed no nuisance. Similarly, where the Lombardars of a village, who were making arrangements when an annual fair was held at that village for the public sanitation of the place, did not make the usual arrangements when a fair was held and for which they were convicted of a public nuisance, it was held that their omission to make proper sanitary arrangements was not an illegal omission within the meaning of this section.⁴

Liability of absent proprietor for nuisance committed by his servant.—Where the use of premises gives rise to a public nuisance it is, generally, the occupier for the time being who is liable for it, and not the absent proprietor.⁵

2-a. 'Causes common injury, danger or annoyance to the public... who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity.'—The injury contemplated in this section must be common, i.e., it must affect the public and not any solitary individual. Thus, a person trotting rams trained to fight in a market place,⁶ and a person fouling the water of a streamlet by putting into it bundles of stalks of tur plants,⁷ were held guilty of a public nuisance.

Villagers accumulating filth and manure in their villages are not guilty of public nuisance.⁸ But a person throwing dust and sweeping on the road in front of his house and thus making the atmosphere noxious to health⁹; and a woman keeping on her premises vegetable matter which caused a smell offensive to persons using the public street,¹⁰ were held guilty of a public nuisance. Throwing

¹ Anthony Udayan, (1883) 6 Mad. 280.

² Jaynath Mundul v. Jamul Sheikh, (1866) 6 W. R. 71.

³ Falloppoo Kotadu, (1894) 1 Weir 244.

⁴ Guj Singh, (1875) P. R. No. 11 of 1875.

⁵ Bibhut Bhuvan Biswas v. Bhuvan Ram, (1918) 46 Cal. 515, 22 C.W.N. 1062, 29 C. L. J.

262.

⁶ Rajah Sahib, (1883) 1 Weir 243.

⁷ Vithoba, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 203.

⁸ Bitha Singh, (1872) P. R. No. 25 of 1872;

Guj Singh, sup.

⁹ Varudeva Chetti, (1882) 1 Weir 242.

¹⁰ (1883) 1 Weir 243.

rubbish into one's own garden does not amount to a public nuisance.¹ It should be noted, however, that every act which causes an offensive odour does not necessarily constitute this offence.²

The 'annoyance' must also be caused to the general public. An indictment will not lie for that which is a nuisance only to a few inhabitants of a particular place. Where, therefore, from the noise made by a tinman in carrying on his trade three members of an inn were disturbed in the occupation of their chambers, it was held that the nuisance was not of a sufficiently general extent to support an indictment.³ The defendant had converted his land near a public highway into a shooting ground where persons came to shoot with rifles at a target, and also at pigeons. As the pigeons which were fired at frequently escaped, persons collected outside of the ground, and in the neighbouring fields to shoot at them as they strayed, causing a great noise and disturbance, and doing mischief by the shot. It was held that the act of the accused amounted to a public nuisance.⁴ Again, the injury or annoyance must not be fleeting or evanescent.⁵ It must be such as reasonable persons would complain of.⁶

The Allahabad High Court has held that annoyance to one individual is sufficient. If a public servant, whose duty it was to keep the streets clean, saw anybody easing himself and, therefore, he reported it, in his official capacity and gave evidence of the act, it was held that it was a reasonable inference to draw that he was annoyed.⁷

No nuisance where there is no annoyance to the public—A prostitute visiting a dark bungalow at the request of a person staying there⁸; a person committing bare solicitation of chastity⁹; a person soliciting passers-by on a public road for purposes of prostitution¹⁰; a person merely placing cowdung cakes by the side of a road to dry¹¹, a person placing a cot temporarily on a public road¹²; a person selling fish near or on a public road¹³, a person enclosing land which was village site and property of Government¹⁴; a person refusing to have any social intercourse with persons belonging to shumsees or to associate with them as Hindus¹⁵; and a person skinning an animal which has died a natural death,¹⁶ were held to have committed no offence under this section.

'To the public or the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity.'—The word "public" includes any class of the public or any community (s. 12). The expression "people in general" means a body or considerable number of persons.¹⁷ This section does not apply to acts or omissions calculated to offend the sentiments of a class. Lex non facit vots delicatorum—the law makes no allowance for the susceptibilities of the hypersensitive. "In this country (India) it must often happen that acts are done by the followers of a creed which must be offensive to the sentiments of those who follow other creeds. The erection of a place of worship in a particular spot is likely to offend the sentiments of adherents of other creeds residing in the neighbourhood, but the Penal Code does not regard such an act as a public nuisance."¹⁸ Similarly, the slaughtering of kine by the Mahomedans may injure the susceptibilities of the Hindus but it will not be deemed to be a public nuisance unless the act is done in such places or such a manner as to be

¹ Kuppa Pillai, (1888) 1 Weir 242.

Shewoo, Weir (3rd edn.) 11.

² Allen v. Lloyd, (1802) 4 Esp. 199.

³ Charles Moore, (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 184.

⁴ Benjamin v. Storr, (1874) L. R. 9 C. P. 400, 407.

⁵ Attorney-General v. Corporation of Nottingham, [1904] 1 Ch. 673.

⁶ Lallu Ram, (1923) 21 A. L. J. R. 772.

⁷ Musumet Begum, (1870) 2 N. W. P. 349.

⁸ Raja, (1895) Cr. R. No. 28 of 1895, Unrep. Cr. C. 765;

⁹ Nanni, (1899) 22 All. 113.

¹⁰ Bapu Jaga, (1886) Cr. R. No. 42 of 1886, Unrep. Cr. C. 297.

¹¹ Kumari Das, (1919) 10 A. L. J. R. 200.

¹² .

¹³ .

¹⁴ .

¹⁵ .

No. 3 of 1883.

¹⁶ Beni, (1914) 12 A. L. J. R. 349.

¹⁷ Nga Tun U, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 213.

¹⁸ Per Turner, C. J., in Muttumira, (1884)

7 Mad. 590, 591; Ramditta v. Kirpa Singh, sup.

a nuisance.¹ It is the legal right of every person to make such use of his own property as he may think fit, provided that in doing so he does not cause real injury to others or offend against the law even though he may thereby hurt the susceptibilities of others.² The scope of this section is to protect the public or people in general, as distinguished from the members of a sect.

Gambling.—A common gaming-house to which every one who chooses to pay is able to go is necessarily a nuisance and no evidence of any actual annoyance to the public is in such a case required. But a person who admits gamblers into his house, and every person who games therein is not guilty of this offence in the absence of such evidence.³ Where a lessee of a house permitted disorderly people to use it for gambling and thereby caused annoyance to the public, he was convicted of this offence.⁴ Persons who sat on a public road outside a village, and induced villagers to gamble,⁵ and persons who gambled in a market place,⁶ were held to have committed a public nuisance. Similarly, where the accused allowed large crowd of people to collect near their shops with a view to carry on satta (gambling) transactions and the crowd was so great as to stop the traffic in the street for half an hour, it was held that they were guilty of a public nuisance. The Court observed: "If a crowd collects and obstructs the traffic so as to cause a nuisance, the person who is directly responsible for the crowd collecting is obviously not less but more guilty than the other persons who form the crowd and this would be equally the case whether he were inside or outside his shop at the precise moment when the police appeared. No one is allowed to make use of his premises in such a way as to interfere with the rights of the public."⁷

The Calcutta High Court has ruled that gambling is not an offence such as is defined in this section. Where, therefore, certain persons were found to have gambled at a place where the Gambling Act was not in force and convicted under s. 290, it was held that the conviction was bad.⁸ In a Burma case, the Judicial Commissioner said: "It is quite clear that, however pernicious may be the results of gambling, whether in a private house or in a common gaming-house, the mere act of gambling cannot be regarded as a public nuisance within the Penal Code. It would be as reasonable to punish people who hold pices or keep grogshops as being guilty of a public nuisance on the ground that pices and drinking frequently endanger the public peace and safety."⁹

Lawful cremation is not a nuisance.—When persons entitled to use a particular spot dedicated for the communal purpose of cremation, use it for that purpose in a manner neither unusual nor calculated to aggravate the inconveniences necessarily incident to such an act as it is generally performed in this country, they cannot be convicted of a public nuisance on the ground that their act caused material annoyance and discomfort to persons near the place on the occasion referred to.¹⁰ But the owner of a private cremation ground may be liable for a nuisance if he allows the cremation of bodies upon the ground to be so performed as to annoy or endanger the lives and properties of persons living in the neighbourhood.¹¹

Offending the sentiments of a class is no nuisance.—Where Mahomedans, residing in a Hindu village, erected, in the neighbourhood of a Hindu temple, a shed containing a religious symbol¹²; where a person cut up meat on his verandah and exposed

¹ Zakhsuddin, (1887) 10 All. 44.

² Shahbaz Khan v. Umrao Puri, (1908) 30 All 181.

³ Hau Naggi, (1870) 7 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 74; (1870) 1 Weir 240, Dustoor Khan, (1867) P. R. No. 16 of 1867.

⁴ Thandararayudu, (1891) 14 Mad. 304; Rogier, (1823) 1 B. & C. 272.

⁵ (1878) 1 Weir 239.

⁶ Bethan Chetti, (1881) 1 Weir 242.

⁷ Hapoop Mal, (1924) 22 A. L. J. R. 662; Noor Mahomed, (1911) 13 P. M. L. R. 209.

⁸ Sasi Kumar Bose, (1903) 7 C. W. N. 710. See, to the same effect, Managil Karunan, (1891) 1 Weir 240.

⁹ Per Ward, J. C., in Nga Sare Nye, (1884) 8 J. L. B. 279.

¹⁰ Saminadha Pillai, (1896) 19 Mad. 464.

¹¹ Indra Nath Banerjee, (1897) 25 Cal. 425.

¹² Muttumira, (1884) 7 Mad. 690.

it to the sight of persons passing along the road, among whom were some Jains, whose temple was close by¹; where a person kept a shop open for the sale of meat though the sight of meat was offensive to the sentiments of a section of the public²; and where Mahomedans for a religious purpose killed and cut up two cows before sunrise in a private compound partly visible from a public road,³ this offence was held not to have been committed. But it would be a public nuisance if a person wilfully slaughtered cattle in a public street so that the groans and blood of the poor beasts were heard and seen by passers-by.

2-b. 'Which must necessarily cause injury, etc., to persons who may have occasion to use any public right.'—The persons referred to in this clause can seek a criminal remedy for apprehended injury. Under this clause common injury to the public or neighbours need not be shown; any individual might complain, provided he is interfered with in respect of a public right, e.g., obstruction caused by building over a part of a public street. Whoever appropriates any part of a street by building over it infringes the right of the public quoad the part built over, and thereby commits public nuisance under this section.⁴ If any portion, however small, of a public street is encroached upon, the inevitable result must be to cause obstruction to persons who may have occasion to use the highway, for the public is entitled to use every inch of a road that has been dedicated to the public.⁵

The Calcutta High Court in a case where persons placed a bamboo stockade across a tidal navigable river for the purpose of fishing, although they left in such stockade a narrow opening for the passage of boats, which passage was kept closed except on the actual passage of boats, held that they were guilty of a public nuisance.⁶ But subsequently it has held that an encroachment, however slight, on a tidal navigable river would not constitute this offence. There must be some evidence that such encroachment caused one of the results specified in this section.⁷ The Lahore High Court⁸ has agreed with the view expressed in the earlier case and has dissented from the view expressed in this case.

A person who filled up a portion of a ditch or drain which formed part of a public way and which belonged to the public,⁹ was held to have committed this offence. Similarly, letting loose cattle at night on a road was held to constitute this offence.¹⁰

3. 'Nuisance not excused on the ground that it causes some convenience or advantage.'—It is immaterial whether the act complained of is convenient to a larger number of the public than it inconveniences, but the fact that the act complained of facilitates the lawful exercise of their rights by part of the public may show

annoyance.¹¹

No prescriptive right can be acquired to commit nuisance.—No prescriptive right can be acquired to maintain, and no length of time can legalize, a public nuisance. Though twenty years' user may bind the right of an individual, yet the public have a right to demand the suppression of a nuisance, though of long ¹ Dyramji Edalji, (1887) 12 Bom. 437.

² Hasan Samad, (1897) Cr. R. No. 13 of 1897, Unrep. Cr. C. 903; Eesa v. Keemoo, (1867) P. R. No. 18 of 1867; Asa Nand v. Hoosein Bulah, (1868) P. R. No. 15 of 1868.

³ Zakhiuddin, (1887) 10 All. 44.

⁴ Virappa Chetti, (1896) 20 Mad. 433.

⁵ Nisar Muhammad Khan, (1925) 6 Lah. 203.

⁶ Umesh Chandra Kar, (1887) 14 Cal. 656

⁷ Jugal Das Dalal, (1893) 20 Cal. 665

⁸ Nisar Muhammad Khan, sup.

⁹ Roopnarain Dutt, (1872) 18 W. R. (Cr.) 33.

¹⁰ Kasays Ahmed, (1892) 1 Weir 238.

¹¹ Stephen's Digest of Criminal Law, Art. 197; Train, (1862) 9 Cox 180; Ward, (1836)

4 Ad. & El. 384.

¹² Russell, 734.

standing.¹ But a long possession or enjoyment of what is said to be a nuisance may give to the objection of the person so possessing or enjoying it the character of a bona fide dispute as to title such as might have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under ss. 133 and 137 of the Criminal Procedure Code and making the question a proper one for the civil Court.²

Liability of a master for the acts of his servants.—Under English law the criminal liability of a master for the acts of his servants in cases of public nuisance is an exception to the general rule that he who does a criminal act is alone guilty. The owner of works, carried on for his benefit by his agents, is liable to be indicted for a public nuisance caused by acts of his workmen in carrying on the works, though done by them without his knowledge and contrary to his general orders.³ The Calcutta High Court has differed from this view. Where the proprietors and the manager of a mill were prosecuted on a complaint that the working of the mill was a nuisance, and it appeared that the proprietors were not residents in the locality and there was no allegation of abetment by them, it was held that the person liable, where the user of premises gave rise to a nuisance, was the occupier for the time being whoever he might be, and the proprietors were therefore not guilty of nuisance.⁴

Prosecution under the Criminal Procedure Code not a condition precedent.—A prosecution under this section is not illegal on the ground that proceedings have not previously been taken under the Criminal Procedure Code.⁵

Civil and criminal liability.—Nuisances punishable under the Code may be made the subject of a civil action before or without prosecution. A person aggrieved by the erection of a building in a public thoroughfare, or on the waste land of a town or village, is entitled to institute a suit in a civil Court for its removal, instead of preferring a complaint to the Magistrate.⁶

Statutory authority to commit nuisance.—A statute may authorize and legalize acts which would otherwise amount to a nuisance.⁷

Situation.—If a party set up a noxious trade, remote from habitations and public roads, and after that new houses are built, and new roads constructed near it, the party may continue his trade, although it be a nuisance to persons inhabiting such houses or passing along such roads.⁸ But this case has been doubted in a later decision.⁹

Statutory application.—Act for Removal of Nuisances below highwater-mark (XI of 1853); Sanitary Regulation Act (Bom. Act VI of 1867), ss. 3, 5, 6 and 8; the Burma Water Hyacinth Act (Burma Act I of 1917), s. 3. The definition of 'public nuisance' applies to all Acts of the Governor-General in Council and Regulations under 33 Vic., c. 3, s. 1, made after 14th January 1887.¹⁰

English cases.—The following acts are held to be public nuisance.—Allowing a house near a highway to be ruinous and dangerous to the public¹¹; keeping swine

¹ Weld v. Hornby, (1806) 7 East 193, 199; Municipal Commissioners of the Suburbs of Calcutta v. Mahomed Ali, (1871) 7 Beng. L. R. 499; Shotts Iron Co. v. Inglis, (1882) 7 App. Cas. 518, 528; Attorney-General v. Richmond, (1866) L. R. 2 Eq. 306, 311; Tipping v. St. Helon's Smelting Co., (1865) L. R. 1 Ch. 66, 69; Cross, (1812) 3 Camp. 224.

² Preonath Dey v. Goberdhons Malo, (1897) 25 Cal. 278.

³ Stephens, (1866) L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; Medley (1834) 6 C. & P. 292.

⁴ Bibhutī Bhūsān Bhowas v. Bhūban Ram, (1918) 46 Cal. 515, 22 C. W. N. 1062, 29 C. L. J. 262.

⁵ Suktal, (1869) Unrep. Cr. C. 23.

⁶ Jina Ranchhod v. Jodha Ghella, (1863) 1 B. H. C. 1.

⁷ Hammermith, etc., Ry. v. Brand, (1863) L. R. 4 H. L. 171; London and Brighton Railway Co. v. Trueman, (1885) 11 App. Cas. 45; Withington Local Board, etc. v. Corporation of Manchester, [1893] 2 Ch. 19; Attorney-General v. Corporation of Nottingham, [1904] 1 Ch. 673.

⁸ Cross, (1826) 2 C. & P. 483.

⁹ Vide the judgment of Byles, J., in Hole v. Barlow, (1858) 27 L. J. C. P. 207, 208.

¹⁰ General Clauses Act, (X of 1897), ss. 3, (44) 4 (2).

¹¹ Watts, (1704) 1 Salk. 356.

in the city¹; making a great noise at night with a speaking trumpet²; collecting a number of persons for pigeon shooting³; indecent exposure in an omnibus,⁴ or on the roof of a house,⁵ or in a public urinal,⁶ or in a place where the public go⁷; negligently spreading the infection of a disease dangerous to life, living in a picture of a man naked to his waist, a bawdy-house¹⁰; naked bathing near a public footpath¹¹; keeping a booth in a public place for the purpose of showing an indecent exhibiton¹²; exposing the naked dead body of a child near a public highway so as to shock and disgust passers-by¹³; burning of a dead body in such a place and in such a manner as to annoy persons passing along public roads or other places where they have a right to go.¹⁴

PRACTICE.

As to conditional orders by a Magistrate for the removal of nuisances, see ss. 133 to 143 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; and as to a Magistrate's powers see ss. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

269. Whoever unlawfully or negligently does any act¹ which is, and which he knows or has reason to believe² to be, likely to spread the infection of any disease dangerous to life,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

If a man is abroad with it, and does what he m unless some lawful occasion or reason for this conduct can be shewn, as that the sick person had been directed to be removed to a hospital, and that the removal was performed with due caution, the act will be an offence punishable under this section¹⁶

1. 'Does any act.'—See ss. 32 and 33, supra, as to the meaning of 'act.'
 2. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra. It must be shewn that the accused had knowledge that the disease was infectious. Where the disease is generally known to be infectious there will be no difficulty.
 3. 'Likely to spread the infection of any disease dangerous to life.'—The infection which is likely to be spread must be of a disease dangerous to life.
- Syphilis.—A prostitute, who was suffering from syphilis, encouraged and permitted a man, whom she had assured that she was healthy, to have sexual intercourse with her, and that he had the disease to him, was not liable to be convicted under s. 417 or 420. West, J., said: "Assuming that the accused was guilty of culpable negligence, still accused's act of not spreading infection without the intervention of the intervening party, himself a responsible person and himself generally an accomplice." This decision does not seem to be sound, as the accused cannot be deemed to be an accomplice, he having communicated the disease of syphilis to him.

¹ Wigg, (1706) 2 Raym. 1163, 2 Salk. 460.² Smith, (1726) 2 Stran. 704.³ Charles Moore, (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 184.⁴ Charles Holmes, (1853) Dears. Cr. C. 207.⁵ Thallman, (1863) 9 Cox 388.⁶ Harris, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 282.⁷ Hellard, (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 63.⁸ Mutters, (1864) 34 L. J. (M. C.) 22.⁹ Grey, (1864) 4 F. & G. 73.¹⁰ Rice, (1866) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 21; Singleton v. Ellison, [1895] 1 Q. B. 607.¹¹ Reed, (1871) 12 Cox 1; Crunden, (1800) 2 Camp. 89, 11 R. R. 671.¹² Saunders, (1875) 1 Q. B. D. 15.¹³ Jane Clark, (1883) 15 Cox 171.¹⁴ Price, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 217.¹⁵ Sullal, (1869) Unrep. Cr. C. 23.¹⁶ M. & M. 205.

Small-pox.—Where a woman was known to have her daughter suffering from small-pox to be taken to a hospital in accordance with an order made by the District Magistrate unless she accompanied her, it was held that she committed no unlawful or negligent act within the meaning of this section. To keep one's child suffering from small pox confined to the house or to oppose the removal to hospital, where there is no evidence to show that lodgers or boarders are kept in that house, is not an act or omission as defined in s. 268. It was held similarly where a person disobeyed the order of the Health Officer of the Madras Corporation, under s. 366 of the Madras Municipality Act, to remove his son, who was suffering from small pox, to an isolation hospital, but he removed him to an isolated house. But in England it is an offence to carry a child suffering from small-pox through a public street in which persons are passing.

Cholera.—Where K, knowing he was suffering from cholera, travelled by a train, without informing the railway officers of his condition, and M, knowing K's condition, purchased his ticket and travelled with him, it was held that K was properly convicted under this section, because he must have known that he was doing an act likely to spread infection, and he did so negligently, in not informing the railway authorities, and that M was guilty of abetment of K's offence.

Plague.—The accused resided in a plague-stricken house in the Umballa Cantonment and had been in contact with a plague patient. He was taken to the plague shed in company with the patient, who died there. The next day the accused left the shed against orders and travelled by rail to the neighbouring town of Shahabad, and from thence to Karnal. It was held that he was guilty of this offence as he had acted negligently, and that his act was dangerous and likely to spread the disease.

Inoculation.—Inoculation is not in itself an illegal or negligent act. On proof of a negligent dealing with a patient or patients after inoculation, with the knowledge or belief required by the section, the operator or a third person may be liable under the section. Though inoculation for small-pox may be practised lawfully and innocently, yet it must be under such guards as not to endanger the public health by communicating this infectious disease.

Glanders.—Bringing a horse infected with glanders into a public place to the danger of infecting other people is an offence.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the disease in question is (a) infectious; and (b) dangerous to life.

(2) That the accused did an act which was likely to spread infection thereof.

(3) That such act was unlawful or negligent.

¹ Ralkha Lom Sadhu, (1886) 11 Bom. 59.

² Id., 24 Cal. 494.

³ Id., (1919) 26.

⁴ Id., 11 Bom. 59.

⁵ Vantandillo, (1816) 4 M. & S. 73; Burnett, (1815) 4 M. & S. 272.

⁶ Krishnappa, (1883) 7 Mad. 276.

⁷ Niadar Mal, (1902) P. R. No. 22 of 1902.

⁸ See Chabumian Sahib, (1912) 12 M. L. T. 661.

⁹ (1866) 1 Weir 226; San Ma, (1900) 1

U. B. R. (1897-1901) 230.

¹⁰ Burnett, (1815) 4 M. & S. 272.

¹¹ Thomas Henson, (1852) Dears. 24.

¹² See Kandarami Mudaliar, supra.

(4) That the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that such act of his was likely to spread the infection of such disease.¹

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Triable summarily.

270. Whoever maliciously¹ does any act² which is, and which he knows or has reason to believe³ to be, likely to spread the infection of any disease dangerous to life, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Malignant act likely to spread infection of disease dangerous to life.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section is an aggravation of that which is punished by the preceding section. In the last section the act is done either 'unlawfully' or 'negligently,' under this, 'maliciously.' Malice aggravates the offence.

The Law Commissioners observe: "If any person died of the plague and his death could be traced to infection so caused maliciously, the person who caused it, we apprehend, would be chargeable with homicide. . . It is contrary to the principle of the Code to punish acts which the doer when he committed them knew to be likely to cause certain evil results, if in fact such results were not produced, in the same manner as if such evil consequences had actually flowed from them."² This section is intended to meet those cases in which the malignant act is not the cause of death, but death could be traced to it.

1. 'Maliciously.'—See s. 153, supra. The word 'maliciously' denotes a deliberate intention on the part of the accused. It is nowhere defined in the Code but it is used in the sense of 'maliciously.' And the word "malice in common acceptation means ill will against a person, but in its legal sense it means a wrongful act, done intentionally, without just cause or excuse."³

2. 'Act.'—See ss. 32 and 33, supra.

3. 'Reason to believe.'—See s. 26, supra.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove points (1), (2) and (4) as in s. 269; and (3) That the accused acted maliciously.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

271. Whoever knowingly disobeys any rule made and promulgated¹ by the Government of India,² or by any Government,³ for putting any vessel into a state of quarantine, or for regulating the intercourse on vessels in a state of quarantine with the shore or with other vessels, or for regulating the intercourse between places where an infectious disease prevails and other places, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Disobedience to quarantine rule.

¹ Potina Padmanabhaswami, (1891) 1 Weir 226.

² Per Bayley, J., in Bromage v. Prosser, (1825) 4 B. & C. 247, 255.

³ 2nd Rep., s. 226.

COMMENT.

The motive for disobeying any rule is quite immaterial under this section. The disobedience is punishable whether any injurious consequence flows from it or not.

Any breach of a quarantine rule is punishable under this section.¹

1. 'Any rule made and promulgated.'—The Indian Ports Act² authorizes the making of rules in ordinary cases. For outbreaks of plague, the Epidemic Diseases Act³ is passed.

2. 'Government of India.'—See s. 16, supra.

3. 'Any Government.'—See s. 17, supra.

14. Statutory application.—Sanitary Regulation Act (Bom. Act VI of 1867), ss. 11,

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the existence of the rule of quarantine.

(2) That such rule was made and promulgated by Government.

(3) That the accused knew of such rule.

(4) That he disobeyed it knowingly.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Triable summarily.

272. Whoever adulterates¹ any article of food or drink,² so as to make such article noxious³ as food or drink, intending to sell such articles as food or drink, or knowing it to be likely that the same will be sold as food or drink, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Adulteration of food or drink intended for sale. Mere adulteration of food or drink is not punishable under it, e.g., mixing water with milk.⁴

1. 'Adulterates.'—The word 'adulterates' means mixes with any other substance, whether wholly different, or of the same kind but inferior quality.

2. 'Any article of food or drink.'—According to the plain meaning of the section the articles of food or drink may be for human consumption, or for the use of animals.

3. 'Noxious as food or drink.'—The word 'noxious' means injurious to health e.g., paddy soaked in water and sold as bread mixed with the mixture as shown to be noxious and selling the mixture both Hindus and Mahomedans.

¹ Bom. Act VI of 1867, s. 11.

² Act III of 1901 repealing the Indian Quarantine Act (I of 1870).

³ Act III of 1897.

⁴ Abdul Fakhru, (1892) 1 L. B. R. 153.

¹ Cunhyappa, (1887) 1 Weir 227.

² Ediga Narayappa, (1894) 1 Weir 228.

³ John Dixon, (1814) 3 M. & E. 11.

⁴ Gunesha, (1873) P. R. No. 15 of 1873.

come within the meaning of the expression 'noxious as food' which occurs in s. 272 of the Indian Penal Code. That the expression obviously means unwholesome as food or injurious to health and not repugnant to one's feelings. The word 'noxious,' had it stood by itself, might have had a wider meaning, but what I have to consider is the expression 'noxious as food' and not merely 'noxious.'"¹

Similarly, if a person exposes for sale milk adulterated with water he does not commit an offence under this section because the mixture is not noxious or injurious as food or drink.²

Adulteration statutes.—Recently several statutes are passed for preventing the adulteration of food. See the Bengal Food Adulteration Act (Beng. Act VI of 1919); the Punjab Adulteration of Food Act (Punj. Act VI of 1919); the Central Provinces Prevention of Adulteration Act (C. P. Act II of 1919); the Behar and Orissa Food Adulteration Act (Behar Act II of 1919); the Bombay Prevention of Adulteration Act (Bomb. Act V of 1925).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the article in question is food or drink.

(2) That the accused adulterated it.

(3) That such adulteration rendered it noxious if taken as food or drink.

(4) That the accused, at the time of such adulteration, intended to sell such article as food or drink, or knew it to be likely that such article would be sold as food or drink.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Summarily triable.

Order for destruction.—On a conviction under this section the Court may order the food or drink to be destroyed.³

273. Whoever sells, or offers or exposes for sale, as food or Sale of noxious drink, any article¹ which has been rendered or food or drink. has become noxious, or is in a state unfit for food or drink,² knowing or having reason to believe that the same is noxious as food or drink,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 272 deals with adulteration of food or drink, this section, with the sale or attempted sale of such adulterated noxious articles, and not only such food or drink. This section is more comprehensive in its provisions, and includes any article of food at any time fit for time it has been bo germinated is an offence under it.⁴

Scope.—This section is not expressly limited to food intended for human consumption. But as it comes in the Chapter dealing with offences relating to public health, ... The words "th According to nation, state, or community." Thus, this section does not make the sale of horse's it.⁵

¹ Per Sulziman, J., in Ram Dayal, (1923) 46 All. 94.

² Dhawa, (1924) 1 L. C. 273.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521.

⁴ Ediga Narasappa, (1894) 1 Weir 228.

⁵ Sita Ram, (1907) P. L. R. No. 139 of 1908.

COMMENT.

The motive for disobeying any rule is quite immaterial under this section. The disobedience is punishable whether any injurious consequence flows from it or not.

Any breach of a quarantine rule is punishable under this section.¹

1. 'Any rule made and promulgated.'—The Indian Ports Act² authorizes the making of rules in ordinary cases. For outbreaks of plague, the Epidemic Diseases Act³ is passed.

2. 'Government of India.'—See s. 16, supra.

3. 'Any Government.'—See s. 17, supra.

Statutory application.—Sanitary Regulation Act (Bom. Act VI of 1867), ss. 11, 14.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) the existence of the rule of quarantine.

(2) That such rule was made and promulgated by Government.

(3) That the accused knew of such rule.

(4) That he disobeyed it knowingly.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Triable summarily.

272. Whoever adulterates¹ any article of food or drink,² so as to make such article noxious³ as food or drink, intending to sell such articles as food or drink, or knowing it to be likely that the same will be sold as food or drink, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The mixing of noxious ingredients in food or drink, or otherwise rendering it unwholesome by adulteration is punishable under this section. Mere adulteration with harmless ingredients for the purpose of getting more profit is not punishable under it, e.g., mixing water with milk.⁴

1. 'Adulterates.'—The word 'adulterates' means mixes with any other substance, whether wholly different, or of the same kind but inferior quality.

2. 'Any article of food or drink.'—According to the plain meaning of the section the articles of food or drink may be for human consumption, or for the use of animals.

3. 'Noxious as food or drink.'—The word 'noxious' means injurious to health e.g., paddy soaked in dirty water⁵; or toddy in which germs have germinated⁶; or bread mixed with alum.⁷ It is not an offence to sell inferior food cheap, if it is not shewn to be noxious.⁸ A person who mixes pig's fat with ghee, intending to sell the mixture as food or knowing it to be likely that it will be sold as such does not commit an offence under this section. "It is true that the mixing of pig's fat with ghee and selling the mixture would be noxious to the religious and social feelings of both Hindus and Mahomedans; but I am of opinion that such an act would not

¹ Bom. Act VI of 1867, s. 11.

² Act III of 1901 repealing the Indian Quarantine Act (I of 1870).

³ Act III of 1897.

⁴ Abdul Rahman, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 153.

⁵ Gunnyappa, (1887) 1 Weir 227.

⁶ Ediga Narasappa, (1894) 1 Weir 228.

⁷ John Dixon, (1814) 3 M. & S. 11.

⁸ Gunesha, (1873) P. R. No. 15 of 1873.

come within the meaning of the expression 'noxious as food' which occurs in s. 272 of the Indian Penal Code. That the expression obviously means unwholesome as food or injurious to health and not repugnant to one's feelings. The word 'noxious,' had it stood by itself, would mean 'what I have to consider is the expression'.

Similarly, if a person exposes an article for sale, he does not commit an offence under this section because the mixture is not noxious or injurious as food or drink.²

Adulteration statutes.—Recently several statutes are passed for preventing the adulteration of food. See the Bengal Food Adulteration Act (Beng. Act VI of 1919); the Punjab Adulteration of Food Act (Punj. Act VI of 1919); the Central Provinces Prevention of Adulteration Act (C. P. Act II of 1919); the Behar and Orissa Food Adulteration Act (Behar Act II of 1919); the Bombay Prevention of Adulteration Act (Bom. Act V of 1925).

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the article in question is food or drink.

(2) That the accused adulterated it.

(3) That such adulteration rendered it noxious if taken as food or drink.

(4) That the accused, at the time of such adulteration, intended to sell such article as food or drink, or knew it to be likely that such article would be sold as food or drink.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Summarily triable.

Order for destruction.—On a conviction under this section the Court may order the food or drink to be destroyed.³

273. Whoever sells, or offers or exposes for sale, as food or drink, any article¹ which has been rendered or has become noxious, or is in a state unfit for food or drink,² knowing or having reason to believe that the same is noxious as food or drink,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

Section 272 deals with adulteration of food or drink, this section, with the sale or attempted sale of such adulterated noxious articles, and not only such food or drink. This section is more comprehensive in its provisions, and includes any article of food which has gone bad by being kept too long, or which never was at any time fit for food; or drink which has gone bad by exposure or by length of time it has been bottled, etc. For instance, the selling of toddy in which germs are germinated is an offence under it.⁴

Scope.—This section is not expressly limited to food intended for human consumption. But as it comes in the Chapter dealing with offences relating to public health, etc., it seems it is not intended to include food or drink for animals. The words "the public" mean human beings in general and do not include animals. According to Webster, 'public' means "the general body of mankind or of a nation, state, or community." Thus, this section does not make the sale of horse's food of grain, or fodder, unfit for a horse to eat, an offence punishable under it.⁵

Ingredients.—The section has the following essentials:—

1. Selling or offering or exposing for sale as food or drink some article.

¹ Per Sulaiman, J., in Ram Dayal, (1923)

46 All. 94.

² Dhawan, (1924) 1 L. C. 273.

³ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521.

⁴ Ediga Narasappa, (1894) 1 Weir 228.

⁵ Sita Ram, (1907) P. L. R. No. 139 of 1908.

2. Such article must have become noxious or must be in a state unfit for food or drink.

3. The sale or exposure must have been made with a knowledge or reasonable belief that the article is noxious as food or drink.

1. 'Sells or offers or exposes for sale as food or drink any article.'—The article of food should have been exposed for sale. Where a butcher had killed and hung up a sheep, and on inspection the flesh was found unfit for food, but it was not removed to the shop nor exposed or offered for sale, it was held that the offence was incomplete and a conviction could not be sustained.¹

'As food or drink.'—The mere sale of an article not itself an article of food, even though it be sold with the knowledge of the vendor that it is the buyer's intention to mix it with the ingredients of which an article of food—e.g., bread—is to be composed, will be no offence under this section. The appellant sold to the respondent a packet of baking powder composed of 20 per cent. of bicarbonate of soda, 40 per cent. of ground rice, and 40 per cent. of alum, the latter of which ingredients is injurious to health. It was held that such baking powder was not an article of food and that the sale of it was not an offence.²

What is punishable under this section is the sale or offer or exposure for sale of noxious articles as food or drink and not the mere sale or offer or exposure for sale of noxious articles. Where, as a matter of trade, the owner of a grain pit sold the contents of the pit before it was opened at a certain sum per maund whether the grain was good or bad, and on the pit being opened it was found that a large proportion of the grain was unfit for human consumption, it was held that the vendor could not be convicted under this section.³

2. 'Which has been rendered or has become noxious or is in a state unfit for food or drink.'—The word 'noxious' means harmful or injurious to health or unwholesome.⁴ It must be shown that the accused sold or exposed for sale an article which was to his knowledge noxious as food or drink. The accused was convicted for exposing for sale some ghi which was bad. The ghi was not adulterated but somewhat rancid. The High Court quashed the conviction on the ground that it was not shewn that the ghi was noxious as food or drink to the knowledge or belief of the accused.⁵ Milk is not rendered noxious by being mixed with water.⁶ Nor is ghi, when adulterated with vegetable oil.⁷ It is not an offence to sell inferior food cheap, if it is not shown to be noxious. Where a person sold an inferior quality of flour after reducing its price and the purchaser was aware of the fact, it was held that he was not guilty under this section.⁸ Similarly, selling wheat containing a large admixture of extraneous matter, e.g., dirt, wood, matches, charcoal, black-seeds, etc., is held to be no offence.⁹

A grocer on being asked for two pots of cream sold two pots of cream labelled: "Rich cream. This cream contains a small percentage of boron preservative to retard sourness." No indication beyond the label was given to the purchaser as to the composition of the cream, which, on analysis, was found to contain boracic acid. In the trade there were two kinds of cream known and sold, preserved cream, and cream, and the boracic acid was generally used by the trade as a preservative to keep the cream good. It was found as a fact that cream if mixed with boracic acid equivalent to that found in the cream sold was not injurious to adults, but was injurious to the health of children and invalids, and that this class of cream was given to children. It was held that the preserved cream so sold was not in itself an

¹ Madar Sahib, (1884) 1 Weir 227. See Barlow v. Terrett, [1891] 2 Q. B. 107.

² James v. Jones, [1894] 1 Q. B. 304.

³ Salig Ram, (1906) 28 All. 312.

⁴ Chokraj Marwari, (1908) 12 C. W. N.

008.

⁵ Sheo Lal, (1904) 26 All. 387.

⁶ Chinniah, (1887) 1 Weir 228.

⁷ Chokraj Marwari, sup

⁸ Gunesha, (1873) P. R. No. 15 of 1873.

⁹ Narumal Javarnal, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R.

article of food," but was an article of food—namely, cream—mixed with an ingredient; that the article so mixed was "injurious to health" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, (38 & 39 Vic., c. 93), although it was not injurious to normal adult persons, and that the seller was guilty of selling an article of food mixed with an ingredient so as to render the article injurious to health.¹

'Unfit for food or drink.'—According to the plain wording of the section the articles of food or drink may be for human consumption, or for the use of animals. But if the food in question is unfit for men, but fit for animals, and is sold as food for animals, no conviction will lie.²

3. 'Knowing or having reason to believe that the same is noxious.'—See s. 26 for the meaning of the expression 'reason to believe.' A meat salesman can be convicted for knowingly selling or exposing meat for sale in a public market as fit for human food, when it is not.³

Selling adulterated article as unadulterated.—The sale of adulterated articles of food as pure and unadulterated is not an offence under this section though it may amount to cheating or to an offence under some Municipal Act.⁴

Statutory application.—The City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom. Act III of 1888), s. 417-B.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the article is food or drink.

(2) That the accused sold, or offered, or exposed for sale such article.

(3) That at the time it was sold, etc., it had been rendered, or had become noxious, or was in a state unfit for food or drink.

(4) That he at the time knew, or had reason to believe, that the article sold, etc., was noxious, or unfit for food or drink.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Triable summarily.

Order for destruction.—On a conviction the Court may order the food or drink to be destroyed.⁵

274. Whoever adulterates¹ any drug or medical preparation in such a manner as to lessen the efficacy or change the operation of such drug or medical preparation, or to make it noxious, intending that it shall be sold or used for, or knowing it to be likely that it will be sold or used for, any medicinal purpose, as if it had not undergone such adulteration, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

To preserve the purity of drugs sold for medicinal purposes this section is enacted.

To support a conviction under this and the following section it is sufficient to show that the efficacy of a drug is lessened, it need not necessarily become noxious to life. Under both these sections mixing water with a drug would be penal, but where a drug loses its efficacy by its being kept, the sections do not

¹ Cullen v. McNair, (1908) 21 Cox 682;

² Jaish v. Aerated Bread Co., (1916) 25 Cox

78.

³ Crowley, (1862) 3 F. & F. 109

⁴ Steppington, (1869) 2 F. & F. 100

⁵ Jpendra

⁶ Jpendra

apply. A person cannot be convicted who sells an inferior quality of a drug because the word 'adulteration' imports an admixture of some foreign substance.

1. 'Adulterates.'—'Adulterates,' that is, apparently mixes with any other substance, whether wholly different, or of the same kind but inferior quality. Mayne, however, thinks that to mix an inferior quality of cod liver oil with a superior quality of that drug would not come under this section, though the efficacy of the drug would be lessened by the mixing.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the article is a drug or medical preparation.

(2) That it was adulterated by the accused.

(3) That such adulteration tended to lessen its efficacy, or to change its operation or to make it noxious.

(4) That the accused intended that such adulterated drug should be sold or used for a medicinal purpose as an unadulterated drug; or knew that it was likely that it would be sold or used as for the same.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Triable summarily.

Order for destruction.—On a conviction the Court may order the drug or medical preparation to be destroyed.¹

275. Whoever knowing any drug or medical preparation to have been adulterated¹ in such a manner as to lessen its efficacy, to change its operation, or to render it noxious, sells² the same, or offers or exposes³ it for sale, or issues it from any dispensary for medicinal purposes as unadulterated, or causes it to be used for medicinal purposes by any person not knowing of the adulteration, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Sale of adulterated drugs.

COMMENT.

The offence under this section consists in selling, or offering, or exposing for sale, or issuing from any dispensary, an adulterated drug as unadulterated. This section bears the same relation to s. 274 as s. 273 bears to s. 272. Section 273 deals with the sale of an article of food or drink that has become noxious. This section not only prohibits its sale but also its issue from any dispensary.

1. 'Knowing any drug or medical preparation to have been adulterated, etc.'—There must be knowledge that the drug or medical preparation has been adulterated in such a manner as to lessen its efficacy or to change its operation or to render it noxious. Upon a complaint, under s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, (38 & 39 Vic., c. 93) for selling tincture of opium which was not "of the nature, substance, or quality of the article demanded by the purchaser," it appeared that the drug which was sold as "tincture of opium" by the defendant was deficient in opium to the extent of one-third and in alcohol to the extent of nearly one-half as compared with the standard prescribed by the British Pharmacopœia. It was held that the defendant was liable to be convicted.² Similarly, it was held where a purchaser asked to be supplied with "mercury ointment," was given an ointment containing a less proportion of mercury than that prescribed by the Pharmacopœia.¹

¹ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521.

² White v. Bywater, (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 682.

2. 'Sells.'—He who sells, whether he be a master or servant, whether he be principal or a person to whom the conduct and management of sales is delegated, is struck at by this section.² But a mere canvasser who gets only commission for

3. 'In a packet.'—It is not necessary that it is sufficient exposure of the article if the packet containing it is in the shop for sale.⁴ There is no exposure for sale if the drug is simply stored up in a room or cellar.⁵

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the drug has been adulterated.

(2) That the adulteration was such as to lessen its efficacy, or change its operation, or render it noxious.

(3) That the accused sold, or offered, or exposed such drug for sale; or that he issued it from a medical dispensary; or that he caused it to be used for a medical purpose.

(4) That he sold, or issued such drug as an unadulterated drug; or caused it to be used by a person who did not know of such adulteration.

(5) That he knew that such drug was so adulterated when so sold, etc.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Triable summarily.

Order for destruction.—On a conviction the Court may order the destruction of the drug.⁶

276. Whoever knowingly sells, or offers or exposes for sale, or issues from a dispensary for medicinal purposes, any drug or medical preparation, as a different drug or medical preparation, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The offence constituted by this section does not involve the idea of any adulteration, or inferiority, in the substituted medicine. It is sufficient that it is not in fact what it purports to be; for instance, supplying savin instead of saffron.⁷ I: '... to be just as effective as ... he would not be justified ... the same purpose. The fraud consists, not in the injury done, but in the false pretence by which persons, who suppose that they are using one medicine, are forced to use another against their will.

The difference between this and the two preceding sections is that no adulteration is contemplated or essential for a conviction under this section while under the former it is.

This section deals with drugs only and not with articles of food or drink.

¹ Dickins v. Randerson, [1901] 1 K. B. 437.

² Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association, (1880) 5 App. Cas. 857; Hotchin v. Hindmarsh, [1891] 2 Q. B. 181.

³ Pharmaceutical Society v. White, [1901] 1 K. B. 601.

⁴ Wheat v. Brown, [1892] 1 Q. B. 418.

⁵ Crane v. Laurence, (1890) 25 Q. B. D. 152.

⁶ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521.

⁷ Knight v. Bowers, (1885) 14 Q. B. D. 845.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused sold, or offered, or exposed for sale, or issued from a dispensary for medicinal purposes, the drug or medical preparation.

(2) That it was so sold, etc., by him, as a drug or medical preparation different from what it is.

(3) That he knew of such difference at the time it was so sold, etc.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Tribable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class—Tribable summarily.

277. Whoever voluntarily corrupts or fouls¹ the water of any public spring or reservoir,² so as to render it less fit for the purpose for which it is ordinarily used,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

The water of a public spring or reservoir belongs to every member of the public in common and, if a person voluntarily fouls it, he commits a public nuisance.

Ingredients.—The section requires (1) voluntary corruption or fouling of water; (2) the water must be of a public spring or reservoir; and (3) the water must be rendered less fit for the purpose for which it is ordinarily used.

1. 'Voluntarily corrupts or fouls.'—See s. 39, supra. The purpose for which the water is ordinarily used must be considered in determining whether there has been a voluntary corrupting within the meaning of this section.

'Corrupts or fouls.'—The words 'corrupts or fouls' mean some act which physically defiles or fouls the water.¹ Bathing in a tank² or spitting into a public well³ fouls drinking water. But angling with an unfoul bait does not.⁴ Fishing with basket-nets in a tank, the water of which was used for drinking purposes, the use of the baskets having caused a slight disturbance of the mud and so rendered the water rather less fit than usual for drinking⁵; and cultivating paddy in the bed of a tank, the water of which was used as of right by the public for drinking purposes,⁶ were held to be offences under this section. The act of a woman of a lower caste taking water from public cisterns of water does not amount to corrupting or fouling.⁷ Similarly, a person of a low caste drawing water from a public well cannot be said to corrupt or foul the well.⁸

2. 'Public spring or a reservoir.'—These words do not include a public river.⁹ The word 'public' is nowhere defined. But a 'public place' is a place where the public go, no matter whether they have a right to go or not.¹⁰ Similarly, a public spring will be a spring used by the public whether rightly or not. The strewing of branches in a river for fishing purposes was held, therefore, to be no offence under this section.¹¹ The words 'public spring' do not include a continuous stream of water running along the bed of a river¹²; nor the water of a rivulet standing in pools from

¹ Bhagi, (1900) 2 Bom. L. R. 1078; Pandia Mahar, (1900) 13 C. P. L. R. 92.

² Muthian, (1897) 1 Weir 229. See, however, (1878) 1 Weir 228.

³ Ramlaranlal, (1916) 13 N. L. R. 68.

⁴ Srinivasa Nair, (1881) 1 Weir 231.

⁵ Punni Desai, (1883) 1 Weir 231.

⁶ Ramatiripati, (1881) 1 Weir 229.

⁷ Bhagi, sup.

⁸ Pandia Mahar, sup.

⁹ Nama Rama, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 52.

¹⁰ Wellard, (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 63, 66.

¹¹ Halodher Porac, (1877) 2 Cal. 383; and also Patha, (1868) Cr. R. July 1869, Unrep. Cr. C. 14.

¹² Putti Chokkan, (1881) 4 Mad. 229; Anthony, (1884) 1 Weir 230.

1884; Unrep. Cr. C. 200.

In cases of 'heedlessness,' he adverts not to consequences of the act he does.

In cases of 'rashness' he adverts to those consequences of the act; but by reason of some assumption which he examines insufficiently.

'Negligence' has been defined to be the breach of a duty caused by the omission to do something which a reasonable man, guided by those considerations which ordinarily regulate the conduct of human affairs, would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do.¹

'Negligence' is not an affirmative word; it is a negative word; it is the absence of such care, skill and diligence, as it was the duty of the person to bring to the performance of the work which he is said not to have performed.²

Culpable rashness is acting with the consciousness that the mischievous and illegal consequences may follow, but with the hope that they will not, and often with the belief that the actor has taken sufficient precautions to prevent their happening. The imputability arises from acting despite the consciousness. Culpable negligence is acting without the consciousness that the illegal and mischievous effect will follow but in circumstances which show that the actor has not exercised the caution incumbent upon him, and that, if he had he would have had the consciousness. The imputability arises from the neglect of the civic duty of circumspection.³

An injury shall be deemed to be negligently caused whensoever it is not wilfully caused, but results from want of reasonable caution, in the undertaking and doing of any act either without such skill, knowledge or ability as is suitable to the occasion, or without due care taken to ascertain the nature and probable consequences of such act; or when it results from the not exercising reasonable caution in the doing of any act, either as regards the means used or the manner of using them, or from the doing of any act without using reasonable caution for the prevention of mischief, or from the omitting to do any act which a person using reasonable caution would not have omitted to do.⁴ When 'negligently' is a part of the definition of an offence, it implies that the act constituting the offence shall have been done, or caused, by the alleged offender himself, proof that it was done by the alleged offender's servant, without more, will not bring the charge home.⁵

Criminal negligence or criminal rashness is an important element in offences punishable under ss. 279, 280, 283-289, 301-A, 336-338.

'Endanger human life.'—It is not necessary that the rash or negligent act should result in injury to life or property.⁶ It is not necessary to prove that any person was on the road, at the time, and the Court may take into consideration the probability of persons using it being placed in danger.⁷ The mere fact, therefore, that a public road happens, at the moment, to be empty is not per se a ground for acquitting a person of the offence under this section, for his rash driving or riding in such public road is likely to cause injury to human life, even though in point of fact he had, by the intervention of Providence, not endangered the safety of any person.⁸ Supposing that a person driving a vehicle in a crowded thoroughfare urges the horses to such speed that it is impossible for him to stop their course suddenly, and that a passenger is knocked down by them and killed on the spot, the driver would be found guilty of culpable homicide. Now if the passenger was just saved by the timely effort of another person pulling him out of the way, would not a want of due regard for human life on the part of the driver be, as justly inferred

¹ Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co., (1856) 11 Ex. 781, 784.

² Per Willes, J., in Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co., (1866) 35 L. J. C. P. 321, 330.

³ Nidamarti Nagabhushanam, (1872) 7 M. H. C. 119, Ketabdi Mundul, (1879) 4 Cal. 764.

⁴ 10th Par. R. 16.

⁵ Chisholm v. Doulton, (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 736.

⁶ (1871) 6 M. H. C. App. 33; Nabi Bakhsh, (1910) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 2 of 1912.

⁷ Hormuji Nowroji Lord, (1894) 10 Bom. 715.

⁸ Ganesh Das, (1910) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 39 of 1910.

from the manner of his driving, proved as we may assume by the evidence of those two persons, the one who had been in imminent peril of his life and the other who happily saved him, as if the result had been a fatal accident? The want of due regard for human life upon which the criminality depends is a matter of inference from the circumstances, and wherever the circumstances proved are such that if loss of life had ensued the party committing the act would be answerable for it criminally, the same circumstances will sufficiently warrant a conviction of the simple offence where no injury has resulted.

There can be no civil action for negligence if the negligent act or omission has not been attended by any injury to any person, but here negligence involving the risk of injury is punishable criminally, though no injury is caused.

If actual hurt is caused the case would be governed by s. 302 or 304-A.

Under ss. 279, 280, 282, and 284-289 the offences against public safety are completed although the rash or negligent act results in no injury to life or property.

'Hurt.'—See s. 319, infra.

'Injury.'—See s. 44, supra.

Liability of the master for the rash driving of his servant.—In case of collision or injury arising out of rash driving the actual driver and not the owner of the carriage is liable under this section¹; whereas in a civil suit the injured party has an option to sue any of them. In a criminal case every man is responsible for his own act; there must therefore be some personal act.²

Contributory negligence.—The doctrine of contributory negligence does not apply in criminal actions.³ The accused will be liable even though there has been a degree of negligence on the part of the prosecutor which would incapacitate him from bringing a civil suit.

Special statute.—Where there is a special statute, such as the Bombay Motor Vehicles Act (Bom. Act II of 1904), which penalises the rash driving of a motor, the punishment should be under such statute.⁴

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was driving a vehicle or that he was riding.

(2) That it was a public way on which he was driving or riding.

(3) That he was driving or riding in a rash or negligent manner.

Negligence cannot be inferred from the mere fact of a person having been run over.⁵

(4) That the same was such as to endanger human life, or such as likely to cause hurt or injury.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Triable summarily.

280. Whoever navigates any vessel¹ in a manner so rash or negligent² as to endanger human life,³ or to be likely to cause hurt⁴ or injury⁵ to any other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Rash navigation of vessel.

¹ Larrymore v. Pernendoo Deo, (1870) 14 W. R. (Cr.) 32.

² Allen, (1835) 7 C. & P. 153; Green, (1835) 7 C. & P. 156.

³ Kew, (1872) 12 Cox 355; Jones, (1870) 11 Cox 544; Dani, (1865) 10 Cox 102, 34

L. J. (M. C.) 119; Longbottom, (1849) 3 Cox 439; Swindall, (1846) 2 C. & K. 230. Blenkinsop v. Ogden, [1898] 1 Q. B. 783. See G. M. H. C. App. 31.

⁴ Bayne, (1906) 8 Bom. L. R. 414.

⁵ Pillagan, (1895) 1 Weir 232.

with her crew and a captain only; but it will afford no protection if a single passenger goes to the bottom; though he may have been carried gratuitously.

Object.—The motive for specifically providing for the case of a common carrier by water is that he exercises an employment affecting the public in general, and the probable consequences of negligence in carrying by water are much more serious than they ordinarily are in carrying by land.

1. 'Knowingly or negligently conveys or causes to be conveyed, etc.'—The word 'knowingly' has here a significance similar to 'rashly.' Where a person with the assistance of two others plied a ferry boat, which was out of order, and had a crack, and he took in one hundred passengers, and as a consequence the boat was upset, and seven persons were drowned, it was held that he should be convicted under this section.¹ Certain persons whom the accused, a ferryman, was rowing across a river, were drowned by the sinking of the boat which was an old one, with some holes in the bottom, over which planks had been nailed. It was held that the accused was guilty under this section.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused conveyed a person for hire, or caused the same to be done.

(2) That the mode of conveying that person was, in a vessel, by water.

(3) That such vessel at the time was in such a state, or so loaded, as to be dangerous to the life of that person.

(4) That when such person was thus conveyed, the accused acted negligently or with a knowledge of the state of such vessel.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

283. Whoever, by doing any act,¹ or by omitting to take order² with any property³ in his possession⁴ or under his charge, causes danger, obstruction or injury to any person⁵ in any public way⁶ or public line of navigation,⁷ shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

Danger or obstruction in public way or line of navigation.

COMMENT.

This section refers to parties who do acts so as to cause danger, obstruction or injury to any person in any public way,² or public line of navigation.

Every man is bound to use his property as not to injure others. Holt, C. J., laid down the strict principle of law—sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas (every one must so use his own as not to do damage to another). The offence punishable by this section is the nuisance of causing obstruction, etc., in a public way or navigable river or canal.

All injuries to a public way, as by digging a ditch or making a hedge across it or laying logs of timber in it, or ploughing it up, or by doing any other act which will render it less commodious to the public, will be punishable under this section.

Ingredients.—The section requires two essentials—

1. A person must do an act or omit to take order with any property in his possession or under his charge.

2. Such act or omission must cause danger, obstruction or injury to any person in any public way or line of navigation.

* Khola Jagta, (1864) 1 B. H. C. 137.

* Mogenet Bihara, (1869) 11 W. R. (Cr.) 3.

* Bhola Nath Banerjee, (1867) 7 W. R. (Cr.)

1. 'By doing an act or by omitting to take order with any property in his possession, etc.'—Here the word 'act' is contrasted with 'omitting' though it includes omission. See s. 32, supra.

'To take order.'—That is, to dispose of the property in his possession or charge in such a way as to prevent danger, obstruction, or injury. The defendant was the owner and occupier of a vacant piece of land. He had surrounded it by a hoarding, but people threw filth and refuse over, and broke up the hoarding, so that the condition of the land and the use to which it was put constituted a public nuisance. It was held that it was a common law duty of the owner of the piece of land to prevent it from being so used as to be a public nuisance.¹

'Property.'—See s. 22, supra.

'Possession.'—See s. 27, supra.

Where obstruction was caused to a public way by the erection of a hut and not by the exposing of goods for sale in the said hut by the accused, who had rented it from the person who had raised the hut, it was held that the accused could not be convicted of an offence under this section.²

2. 'Causes danger, obstruction, or injury to any person in any public way or public line of navigation.'—Every unauthorized obstruction of a highway to the public is an offence.³ A permanent obstruction of a public way by a person acting under lawful authority, is not an offence.⁴

Under this section it must be established that the act of the accused had caused 'danger, obstruction, or injury' to any particular person or class of persons.⁵ Thus, the spreading of fishing nets by the side of a thoroughfare in a town, when it did not cause obstruction to any particular person or persons, was held to be no offence.⁶ Where the danger or obstruction is not caused to any particular person the person obstructing would be guilty under s. 290 and not under this section.⁷ But in a later case the Madras High Court has held that where the evidence showed that an obstruction placed on a road must necessarily prevent vehicles from passing at all and foot-passengers from passing without inconvenience, it was a necessary inference that persons were obstructed and that it was not necessary to expressly prove that any specific individual was actually obstructed.⁸

Where the accused allowed a prickly-pear fence, which formed a boundary between accused's yard and the road, to extend itself over a part of the road, and an obstruction of the road was thereby caused, it was held that his act was punishable. The Court said: "Prickly-pear is a plant which naturally extends itself very rapidly; and it is the duty of those who use it as a hedge by the side of a public road to take care that the road is not obstructed by its growth."⁹ The accused, who had a toy shop, exhibited in the windows of their shop, overlooking a public road, certain clock-work toys during the Divali festival. A large crowd

¹ Attorney-General v. Tod Heatley, [1897] 1 Ch. 560.

² Narasim Adhikari, (1904) 8 C. W. N. 369.

³ Cross, (1812) 3 Camp. 224.

⁴ The United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co., (1862) 9 Cox 137.

⁵ Khader Moidin, (1881) 4 Mad. 235; Virappa Chetti, (1890) 20 Mad. 433; Jugal Das Dalal, (1893) 20 Cal. 665; Beni Madhav Ghakravarti, (1897) 25 Cal. 275; Ram Singh,

(1882) 11 C. L. R. 462. The Chief Court of Lower (1900) . . .

⁶ Kh

⁷ Virappa Chetti, sup; Umesh Chanara Kar, (1887) 14 Cal. 656.

⁸ Venkappa, (1913) 38 Mad. 305. See Jutan, (1920) 1 P. L. T. 564.

⁹ Palakora Kathersa, (1883) Weir (3rd edn.) 140.

of people collected on the road to witness the toys; in consequence of which there were dangerous rushes, several persons were knocked down and great obstruction and danger were caused to those using the road. The accused were asked by the police to stop the exhibition but they did not obey. On these facts, the Magistrate convicted the accused of offences under this section and s. 114. It was held that there was obstruction, danger and injury to the persons using the public way, which amounted to a public nuisance, and that the efficient cause of the nuisance was the act of the accused, inasmuch as in working the toys in the manner they did, their object was to attract a crowd, and as they knew that a crowd would be attracted by what they did, they must be regarded as having intended that consequence.¹

'Public way.'—See s. 279, supra.

'Public line of navigation.'—It is a nuisance to divert part of a public navigable river whereby the current is weakened and made unable to carry vessels of the same burden as it could before, or to lay logs of timber in it, or to erect a jetty so as to interfere with the navigation, or to build a bridge over it has the same effect.²

An owner of land at the side of a public navigable river has no right to erect on the bed of the river, for the benefit of his own trade, any structure, whether any actual obstruction to the navigation of the river will or will not thereby be occasioned; and any benefit to his own trade is too remote to be held for the advantage of the public generally, and so to justify the erection.³ On the trial for an indictment for a nuisance in a navigable river and common King's highway, called the harbour of C, the erecting of an embankment in the waterway was held to be a public nuisance although the inconvenience was counterbalanced by the public benefit in some other way.⁴

English cases.—A wagoner occupying one side of a public street in a city, before his warehouses, in loading and unloading his wagons for several hours at a time both day and night, kept one wagon at least usually standing before his warehouses, so that no carriage could pass on that side of the street, was held guilty of nuisance.⁵ Where a person, having a house in a street, exhibited effigies at his windows and thereby attracted a crowd to look at them which caused the footway to be obstructed, so that the public could not pass as they ought to do, it was held that he was guilty of nuisance.⁶ Where a person removed the pavement and dug trenches in the roadway and footway of a public thoroughfare in order to lay down service pipes for the supply of gas from mains to private houses, it was held that this was not a temporary obstruction of the highway as might be necessarily incidental to the enjoyment of his property.⁷ Where the accused, for the purposes of profit to themselves, placed telegraph posts upon a highway, and did permanently keep them there, such posts being of such sizes and dimensions as to obstruct and prevent the passage of carriages and horses or foot-passengers, it was held that the accused were liable for a nuisance.⁸ The prisoner in the night time altered the position of two arms of a semaphore signal on a railway station, so as to change the signal from "all clear" to "danger" and "caution," respectively, and also altered the colour of two distant signals on the line from white to red, thereby changing the signal from "clear" to "danger." The alteration caused a train, which would have passed the station without slackening speed, to slacken speed, and to come nearly to a stand. Another train going in the same direction, and on the same rails, was due at the station in half an hour. It was held that the prisoner

¹ Noor Mahomed Suleman, (1911) 13 Bom. L. R. 209, 1 Bom. Cr. C. 23. See Lynn Sons & Co. v. Gulliver, [1914] 1 Ch. 631, 644.

² Russell, 6th Edn., Vol. I, p. 513.

³ Attorney General v. Terry, (1874) L. R. 9 Ch. 423.

⁴ Ward, (1836) 4 Ad. & El. 384. See Cresht Chauden Kar, (1857) 14 Cal. 656;

Jugal Das Dalal, (1893) 20 Cal. 665.

⁵ Russell, (1803) 6 East 427.

⁶ Carlisle, (1834) 6 C. & P. 636.

⁷ Stole Fenton and Langton Gas Co., (1860)

29 L. J. (M. C.) 118.

⁸ Baron Lionel De Rothschild v. The United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co., (1862) 31 L. J. (M. C.) 166.

had obstructed a train.¹ A person improperly went on a line of railway, and purposely attempted to stop a train approaching by placing himself on the space between two lines of rails, and holding up his arms in the mode adopted by the inspector of the line when desirous of stopping a train. The driver was thereupon induced to diminish the speed from twenty to four miles per hour. It was held that this amounted to an obstruction.²

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused caused the danger, obstruction or injury in question.

(2) That the same was caused by his act, or omission, to take order with property in his possession or under his charge.

(3) That the person put in danger, or obstructed, or injured, was then in a public way or public line of navigation.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

284. Whoever does, with any poisonous substance, any negligent conduct with respect to dangerous act¹ in a manner so rash or negligent² as to endanger human life,³ or to be likely to cause hurt⁴ or injury⁵ to any person, or knowingly or negligently omits to take such order⁶ with any poisonous substance in his possession⁷ as is sufficient to guard against probable danger to human life from such poisonous substance, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

“A person in possession of a poisonous substance, and who omits to take such order with the substance as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger from such substance to human life, whether the substance be poison, or fire, or a combustible, or explosive substance or machinery... It is not necessary to constitute an offence under that section, that the negligent omission punishable under it should be followed by any disastrous consequences.”⁸ substance, suffices itself to impose upon him the duty of being careful, and he is criminally responsible if he negligently omits to take such order with the substance as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger from such substance to human life, whether the substance be poison, or fire, or a combustible, or explosive substance or machinery... It is not necessary to constitute an offence under that section, that the negligent omission punishable under it should be followed by any disastrous consequences.”⁸

This section proceeds on the principle that carelessness, when sufficient in degree, is to be regarded as criminal notwithstanding that it may not have occasioned hurt.

1. ‘Act.’—See s. 32, supra.

2. ‘Rash or negligent.’—See s. 279, supra.

3. ‘Endanger human life.’—See s. 279, supra.

4. ‘Hurt.’—See s. 379, infra.

5. ‘Injury.’—See s. 44, supra.

¹ Joseph Hadfield, (1870) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 253.

² Per Plowden, J., in Hosain Beg, (1852) P. R. No. 16 of 1852.

⁸ Hardy, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 278.

6. 'To take such order.'—See s. 283, supra. Where the accused, a sergeant in the police, took over a desk containing poisonous powders and other powders, which might easily be mistaken one for the other, without taking any precaution whatever to guard against misuse of the poison, and the only order he took with the poison subsequently was to hand over the key of the receptacle in which the powders were kept, to a subordinate official who by mistake issued some of the poisonous powders to a Deputy Inspector suffering from fever, who took one of the powders and died, it was held that the accused was guilty under this section.¹

7. 'Possession.'—See s. 27, supra.

PRACTICE:

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the substance in question is poisonous, and, if taken, would be dangerous to life, or likely to cause hurt or injury.

(2) That the accused did an act therewith, which endangered, or was likely to endanger, human life, or was likely to cause hurt or injury.

(3) That he did such act rashly or negligently.

Or prove (1) as above, and further—

(2) That the accused was in possession of such substance.

(3) That he omitted to take such order therewith, as was sufficient to guard against a probable danger to human life therefrom.

(4) That such omission was negligent, or with a knowledge of such probable danger.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

285. Whoever does, with fire or any combustible matter, any act¹ so rashly or negligently² as to endanger human life,³ or to be likely to cause hurt⁴ or injury⁵ to any other person, or knowingly or negligently⁶ omits to take such order⁷ with any fire or any combustible matter in his possession⁸ as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life from such fire or combustible matter, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section further extends the provisions of the preceding section.

1. 'Act.'—See s. 32, supra.

2. 'Rashly or negligently.'—See s. 279, supra. The section is not applicable where the act of the accused is wilful and not rash or negligent. The accused had a quarrel with his wife about some rice. He got angry, broke the crockery, and then went out and set fire to the eaves of his house, thereby causing risk of injury to house-owners in the neighbourhood but doing no actual mischief. It was held that this section was not applicable as the prisoner's act was wilful and not rash or negligent.² The owner of a house in which a fire breaks out cannot be convicted under this section, without proof of actual carelessness or an illegal omission from which rashness or negligence can be inferred.³

¹ Hosein Beg, (1882) R. R. No. 16 of 1882.
² Hari, (1877) Unrep. Cr. C. 126.

³ M. O., (1881) S. J. L. B. 134; Nya Sein, (1891) S. J. L. B. 569.

3. 'Endanger human life.'—See s. 279, supra.
4. 'Hurt.'—See s. 319, infra.
5. 'Injury.'—This word includes any harm illegally caused to the property of any other person, and is not confined to injury to the person only. While a marriage procession was going on, the accused, who was one of the procession, used fire works on the road, which burnt two bundles of the straw with which a mandap (a temporary structure) belonging to the complainant was thatched, thereby causing him an injury. It was held that the accused was guilty under this section.¹ The accused was similarly convicted of negligent conduct with respect to fire or combustible matter, in that he was found smoking a bidi (cigarette) close to half-pressed cotton bales lying close to the press-house in the compound of a company.² See s. 44, supra.
6. 'Knowingly or negligently.'—See s. 286, infra.
7. 'Take such order.'—See s. 283, supra.
8. 'Possession.'—See s. 27, supra.

C A S E S .

Fire balloons.—Letting off fire balloons has been held to be no offence.³

English cases.—Keeping great quantities of gunpowder so as to endanger the safety of houses in the vicinity,⁴ or keeping of a dangerous, ignitable and explosive fluid called naphtha near dwelling-houses,⁵ amounts to nuisance.

P R A C T I C E .

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused did an act that endangered, or was likely to endanger, life, or was likely to cause hurt or injury.

(2) That such act was done with fire or some combustible matter.

(3) That such act was done rashly or negligently.

Or prove (1) that the accused had in his possession some fire or combustible matter.

(2) That he omitted to take such order therewith, as was sufficient to guard against a probable danger to human life therefrom.

(3) That such omission was negligent or "with knowledge of such probable danger."⁶

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summonable—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Summary trial.

Preventive powers.—See ss. 133 and 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

286. Whoever does, with any explosive substance,¹ any act so rashly or negligently² as to endanger human life,³ or to be likely to cause hurt⁴ or injury⁵ to any other person, Negligent conduct with respect to explosive substance.

or knowingly or negligently⁶ omits to take such order⁷ with any explosive substance in his possession⁸ as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life from that substance,

¹ Natha Lalla, (1868) 5 B. H. C. (Cr. C.) 67.

² Krishna, (1878) Unrep. Cr. C. 134.

³ Yga Bo Gale, (1899) P. J. L. B. 628.

⁴ Taylor, (1742) 2 Strange 1167. In Bennett, (1858) 8 Cox 74, 28 L. J. (M. C.) 27, the prisoner had kept a quantity of fire works for a long time but owing to the negligence of his servant it caught fire and set to blaze a house in which a person was burnt to death. It was held that the prisoner could not be convicted of manslaughter on the use of (1885) S. J. L. B. 337.

Yga Bo

6. 'Knowingly or negligently.'—See s. 286, supra.
7. 'Take such order.'—See s. 283, supra.
8. 'Possession.'—See s. 27, supra.
9. 'Or under his care.'—These words would include an engineer, and all mechanics. The expression used in s. 283 is 'under his charge.'

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused did an act that endangered, or was likely to endanger, life, or was likely to cause hurt or injury.

(2) That such act was done with a machinery.

(3) That such act was done rashly or negligently.

Or prove (1) that the accused had in his possession or under his care some machinery.

(2) That he omitted to take such order therewith as was sufficient to guard against a probable danger to human life therefrom.

(3) That such omission was negligent or with knowledge of such probable danger.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, or first or second class—Summary trial.

288. Whoever, in pulling down or repairing any building, knowingly or negligently¹ omits to take such order with that building as is sufficient² to guard against any probable danger to human life from the fall of that building, or of any part thereof, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.

This section deals with negligent conduct with respect to pulling down or repairing buildings. If a building is situated on a public way and is in a dangerous condition and likely to injure persons using the way then s. 283 will apply and not this section.

1. 'Knowingly or negligently.'—See s. 286, supra.

2. 'Such order as is sufficient.'—The degree of care required by this section will vary in proportion to the actual necessity of the case. If the building is in a populous place more care will be necessary than when it is in a place less frequented by people.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused was pulling down or repairing a building

(2) That he omitted to take sufficient order therewith to guard against a probable danger of the fall thereof, or any part thereof.

(3) That such fall would probably endanger human life.

(4) That such omission was negligent, or with knowledge of such probable danger.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, first or second class—Triable summarily.

289. Whoever knowingly or negligently¹ omits to take such order² with any animal³ in his possession⁴ as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life, or any probable danger of grievous

Negligent conduct with respect to animal.

hurt⁵ from, such animal, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT:

This section deals with the 'improper or careless management' of animals.

1. 'Knowingly or negligently.'—The offence consists principally in a knowing or negligent omission, and not merely in an omission which is not an offence.¹ See Comment on s. 286, supra.

2. 'Take such order.'—See s. 283, supra.

3. 'Animal.'—See s. 46, supra. This section does not refer to savage animals alone, but to any animal, e.g., a pony,² or a dog.³

In the case of wild and savage animals, a savage or mischievous temper is presumed to be known to their owner and to all men as a usual accompaniment of such animals; and, hence, a positive duty is cast on the owner to protect the public against the mischief resulting from such animals being at large. Anyone who keeps such a wild animal as a tiger or a bear, which escapes and does damage, is liable without any proof of the animal's ferocity. In such a case it may be said res ipsa loquitur.

In the case of animals which are tame and wild in their general temper no mischievous disposition is presumed. It must be shown that the accused knew that the animal was accustomed to do mischief. Some evidence must be given of the existence of an abnormally vicious disposition.⁴ A single instance of ferocity, even a knowledge that it has evinced a savage disposition, is sufficient notice.⁵

"Before the owner or keeper of the animal can be convicted under this section, it must be made out that the animal was known to be ferocious, and that it was negligently kept. It is, however, not necessary to show that the animal had actually bitten or injured another person before it bit or injured the complainant; it would be enough to show that, to the knowledge of the owner, it had evinced a savage disposition, e.g., by attempting to bite."⁶ Where the accused's buffalo attacked the complainant's buffalo and injured the latter by breaking its leg, he was held not guilty of this offence as there was no evidence to show that the buffalo was of a savage disposition as against human beings.⁷ Where a person was injured by a buffalo, which was known to be a dangerous animal, the herdsman who was present and failed to avert the injury and the owner of the buffalo were held to have committed an offence under this section.⁸

4. 'Possession.'—See s. 27, supra. The animal must be in the actual possession of the person against whom a charge is brought under this section, whoever may be the owner of it. Where the accused, a horsekeeper, harnessed his master's horse, put him into his carriage, and then went away, leaving the horse and carriage standing in the road of the compound of his master's house, without any justification, it was held that the accused had committed an offence under this section, since the horse was not the less in the actual possession of the servant, because it was for some purpose in the constructive possession of his master.⁹ A bull was let loose by the father of the accused some years ago. On its becoming vicious it was ordered to be shot. The accused having claimed its ownership was convicted of this offence. It was held that it could not be said that the animal was in the

¹ (1866) 5 W. R. (Cr. L.) 8.

² Chand Manal, (1872) 19 W. R. (Cr.) 1.

³ Mg. Shue Zin v. Mg. Po Ngwa, (1923) 2 B. L. J. 8.

⁴ (1880) 1 Weir 238; Baker v. Snell, [1905]

⁵ K. B. 825; Lovrey v. Walker, [1911] A. C. 10.

⁶ See the author's "The Law of Torts,"

9th Edn., p. 354.

⁷ Per Mehta, J. C., in Thavira Aung, (1885) S. J. L. B. 353.

⁸ Pandu, (1884) Unrep. Cr. C. 197.

⁹ Shamlay, (1906) 3 N. L. R. 101.

¹⁰ Nalla Eera, (1881) Cr. R. April 1881, Unrep. Cr. C. 163.

influences, the publication may not be justified, though the passages form part of a religious book.¹ If the detailed passages in a book are of an obscene character, the author's liability in respect of those passages will not be saved or avoided merely by reference to other passages in the book which may contain moral precepts of an unexceptionable character. The important point to look at is rather the form of the expression than the actual meaning, for the same meaning may be obscenely expressed by one form of language, and yet by the use of another form of language may be couched in expressions free from reproach.² Obscene passages are not excused because the rest of the publication is unobjectionable.³ It is no justification that the matter published is written by an eminent writer or is composed in a style not easily understood by all,⁴ or that the publication is a medical one and sold only to registered subscribers.⁵

Exception.—Under the exception religious sculptures, paintings, and engravings are accepted. But works of art are never considered obscene.

Nude pictures.—Nude pictures which exhibit a work of art will not fall under this section. It may be interesting to note the observations of an English author on this subject. "In countries, like India, where coolies wear next to nothing and some women freely expose their charms, men and women wearing costumes which they would be taken up for, if walking in Piccadilly, it seems absurd to say that photographs of the nude are in themselves obscene." But pictures of a bawdy character, if filthy and disgusting, will be considered obscene.

Advocating checks to conception.—There is nothing obscene in advocating checks to conception, or in the explanation of what these checks are, or in the mere statement of the places where, and the prices at which, they can be procured.⁶

Purchase to entrap the seller.—The sale of an obscene print to a person in private, he having in the first instance requested that such prints should be shown to him, his object being to prosecute the seller, is sufficient to sustain the charge.⁷

Liability of a newspaper proprietor for the act of his servant.—The mere fact that a person is the proprietor and publisher of a newspaper is not sufficient to render him criminally liable in respect of matter inserted therein by one of his servants. There must be a distinct finding that the matter complained of was inserted by the order or owing to the negligence of the proprietor.⁸

CASES.

A society called "The Protestant Electoral Union" exposed for sale at their office a pamphlet entitled "The Confessional Unmasked," shewing the depravity of the Romish priesthood, the iniquity of the confessional, and the questions put to females in confession. The pamphlet consisted of extracts from the works of theologians on the doctrines and discipline of the Church of Rome, and particularly on the practice of auricular confession. The pamphlet also contained a preface and notes and comments condemnatory of the tenets and principles of the authors of the work from which the extracts were made. About one-half of the pamphlet related to casuistical and controversial questions, but the remainder of it was obscene. A member of the Society kept and sold these pamphlets. It was held that the publication of such a pamphlet was an offence as the inevitable effect of the publication must be to injure public morality.⁹ Subsequently to this case,

Cr. C. 620.

¹ Carlile, (1845) 1 Cox 229.

² Mohammad Mohsin, (1890) 10 A. W. N. 175; Mumtaz Ali, (1903) P. R. No. 35 of 1905. See De Marny, [1907] 1 K. B. 388, where the accused inserted an advertisement relating to the sale of obscene books and photographs.

³ Hicklin, (1868) L. R. 3 Q. B. 360.

⁴ Kherode Chandra Roy Chowdhury, (1911) 39 Cal. 377; Ghulam Hossein, (1916) P. R. No. 5 of 1917.

⁵ Vishnu Krishna Puranik, (1912) 15 Bom. L. R. 307, 2 Bom. Cr. C. 58.

⁶ Thakar Datt, (1917) P. R. No. 25 of 1917.

⁷ Mantripragada Markandeyalu, (1916) 22 M. L. T. 169; 5 L. W. 237.

⁸ Thakar Datt, sup.

⁹ Framji D. Taraporewalla, (1892) Unrep.

a pamphlet was published giving a correct report of the trial of one G for selling "Confessional Unmasked," but setting out that work in full. It was held that the pamphlet, though a report of judicial proceedings, was an obscene book.¹ A pamphlet which ridiculed the Head Priest of the community of Bobras and which abounded in passages expressing or presenting to the mind or view something which delicacy, purity and decency forbade to be expressed or exposed came within the purview of this section.²

The accused published a pamphlet containing a series of quotations from the Koran with his comments. There were several passages in it of an objectionable nature but there was one relating to the Virgin Mary which was perverted by the incompleteness of the quotation and commented on in a very offensive form, the language employed being not such as might be used in a bona fide controversial treatise. It was held that he was guilty under this section.³

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the book, etc., is of an obscene nature.

(2) That the accused—

(a) sold, let to hire, distributed, publicly exhibited or in any manner put into circulation, or for purposes of sale, hire, distribution, public exhibition or circulation made, produced or had in his possession any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, drawing, painting, representation or figure or any other obscene object whatsoever, or

(b) imported, exported or conveyed any obscene object for any of the purposes aforesaid, or knowing or having reason to believe that such object would be sold, let to hire, distributed or publicly exhibited or in any manner put into circulation, or

(c) took part in, or received profits from, any business in the course of which he knew or had reason to believe that any such obscene objects were for any of the purposes aforesaid, made, produced, purchased, kept, imported, exported, conveyed, publicly exhibited or in any manner put into circulation, or

(d) advertised or made known by any means whatsoever that any person was engaged or was ready to engage in any act which was an offence under this section, or that any such obscene object could be procured from or through any person, or

(e) offered or attempted to do any act which was an offence under this section.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first class.

Power of destruction.—On a conviction the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had.⁴

Charge.—A charge under this and s. 294 should be made specific in regard to the representations and words alleged to have been exhibited and uttered, and to meaning of those sections. Where no such specific decision has been given, the High Court, if the case has been transferred, may either try the case de novo or dismiss it on the ground that the Magistrate has come to no finding on which the conviction can be sustained.⁵

¹ Steele v. Brannan, (1872) L. R. 7 C. P. 261.

² Held by Hayward J. (Shah J., dissenting) in Rahimatali M. Mulla, (1919) 22 Bom. L. R. 166, 5 Bom. Cr. C. 175.

³ Hari Singh, (1905) 28 All. 100.

⁴ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521.

⁵ Upendronath Doss, (1876) 1 Cal. 356; Mi Min Si, (1884) S. J. L. B. 262.

Punishment.—The section says nothing about intention or about medical works or about agency of distribution or about immunity because only concrete cases are dealt with; or the rest of the publication is unobjectionable; but these points nevertheless indirectly affect the quantum of punishment.¹

293. Whoever sells, lets to hire, distributes, exhibits or circulates to any person under the age of twenty years any such obscene object as is referred to in the last preceding section, or offers or attempts so to do, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Sale, etc., of obscene objects to young persons.

COMMENT.

This section was inserted by s. 2 of the Obscene Publications Act (VIII of 1925).

It merely enhances the punishment where the obscene objects are sold, etc., to persons under the age of twenty years.

"In the final Act of the International Conference which drafted the convention, it was stated that the conference generally was of opinion that the offences of offering, delivering, selling or distributing obscene objects must be held to have been aggravated when committed in respect of minors. The Council [of the League] considered that it would be preferable to leave each State free to fix the age under which a person should be considered to be a minor for the purposes of this provision."²

The principle of this recommendation has been given effect to in this section.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the book, etc., is of an obscene nature.

(2) That the person to whom it was sold, etc., or offered or attempted to be sold was under the age of twenty years.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, or first or second class.

Power of destruction.—On a conviction the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had.³

Obscene acts and songs.

294. Whoever, to the annoyance¹ of others,—

(a) does any obscene act² in any public place,³ or

(b) sings, recites or utters any obscene songs,³ ballad or words, in or near any public place, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Object.—This section was substituted for the original section by Act III of 1895, s. 3. The object of the first clause is to meet a case of indecency common in the Presidency of Madras. It has reference to an unreported case in that Presidency.

1. 'Annoyance.'—Unless annoyance is caused the act will not be punishable. There must be definite evidence that annoyance was caused to a particular person or persons in general.

¹ Thakur Datt, (1917) P. 3. No. 25 of 1917. of India, 1924, Part V, p. 126.

² Statement of Objects and Reasons, Garcia * Criminal Procedure Code, s. 521.

2. 'Obscene act.'—Indecent exposure of one's person or sexual intercourse in a public place will be punished under this section.

3. 'Public place.'—See Comment on s. 159, supra, as to the meaning attached to this expression.¹ Acts such as indecent exposure of one's person in an omnibus,² in a public urinal,³ or in a place where the public go,⁴ will fall under this section. In England it has been held that an indecent exposure in a place of public resort, if actually seen by only one person, is not a common nuisance,⁵ and so offended by it, and so indecently on a roof at the back of a house so as to be visible to persons in the back premises of many other houses, but not so as to be capable of being seen from any place open to the public, and seven persons in one house saw the exposure, it was held that he could be convicted for his act.⁶

4. 'Song.'—A larni is not necessarily an obscene song. It may be, and often it is, so, but it must be proved that the words of it are actually obscene before a conviction can be supported under this section.⁷

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused did some act; or that the accused sang, recited or uttered any obscene songs, ballad or words.

(2) That this was done in or near a public place.

(3) That it was of an obscene nature.

(4) That it caused annoyance to others.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate.

A conviction under this section for uttering an obscene abuse in a public place may amount to a conviction for an offence involving a breach of the peace within the meaning of s. 106, Criminal Procedure Code.⁸

Omission to set out obscene words in evidence.—Where the obscene words used by the accused were not set out in the evidence, it was held that the omission was not a sufficient ground for setting aside a conviction.⁹

Sentence.—A sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment for using obscene language in a public place is unduly severe.¹⁰

294-A. Whoever keeps any office or place for the purpose of keeping lottery-office, drawing any lottery¹ not authorized by Government² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

And whoever publishes³ any proposal to pay any sum, or to deliver any goods, or to do or forbear doing anything for the benefit of any person, on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the drawing of any ticket, lot, number or figure in any such lottery,⁴ shall be punished with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

¹ See also Govind Venkatesh Yalgi, (1908) 10 Bom. L. R. 1047.

² Charles Holmes, (1853) 22 L. J. (M.C.) N. S. 122.

³ Harris, (1871) L. R. 1 C. C. R. 282.

⁴ Wellard, (1884) 14 Q. B. D. 63; Saunders, (1875) 1 Q. B. D. 15.

(Cr. C.) 25.

⁵ Mi Kun Ya, (1904) U. B. R. (P. C.) 4.

⁶ Narasamma, (1882) 1 Weir 251.

¹⁰ Parliam, (1923) 2 B. L. J. 99.

COMMENT.

This section was inserted by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 10. A lottery stands on the same footing as gambling because both of them are games of chance.

"Every lottery is either authorized or not authorized by Government. The section does not touch authorized lotteries, but intends to save people from the effects of those not authorized. . . . of offices or places . . . any advertisement . . . the chance of any office being kept in . . . authorized by Government is very small indeed. But people not subject to our laws may contrive to open offices for that purpose out of British India, but still near our own doors—at Navsari or Daman for instance, and then send advertisement to all the widely circulated newspapers throughout British India. In that case, if the section were to be narrowly construed as applying only to lotteries to be drawn in British India, the object aimed at by the second prohibition, to prevent the mischief of people in British India being drawn into temptation by such publications, would be very nearly, if not utterly, defeated. The words of this section are wide enough to include foreign lotteries, and we have no reason to suppose the Legislature intended to exclude advertisements relating to them from the operation of s. 291-A."¹

Ingredients.—The first part of the section deals with keeping a lottery office. It has two essentials:—

1. Keeping of any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery.
2. Such lottery must not be authorized by Government.

The second part of the section deals with the publisher of any proposal regarding a lottery.

1. 'Whoever keeps any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery.'

—The fact that an association of persons, the business carried on by which is in the nature of a lottery, is registered, does not exempt the persons keeping the office from liability under this section.²

'Keeps any office or place'—The offence is the keeping of an office or place for the purpose of a lottery. Using a place once is not keeping it for that purpose. In order to constitute a keeping there must be something habitual.³ The members of the committee of a club who exercise full control over club matters, 'inclusive of the premises, 'keep' the premises of the club.⁴

The words "office or place" for the purpose of drawing any lottery mean an office or place intended to be the scene of the actual drawing of the lottery, and do not include an office or place kept only for the correspondence and other work connected with a lottery advertised "as going to be in some public place to be selected later on."⁵ It is, however, not necessary that the place should be kept solely for the purpose of drawing a lottery.⁶ Where a house is kept open for a double purpose, viz., as an honest social club for those who do not desire to play, as well as for the purpose of gaming for those who desire to play, it is a house opened and kept for the purpose of gaming, and it is not necessary to show that the house is used exclusively for the purpose of drawing a lottery.⁷

Clause (1) applies to cases in which it is shewn that the accused did keep an office where they carried on the necessary preliminary work for running a lottery and received the lottery moneys, and which they held out to the public as the place where the lottery would finally be drawn. It is not necessary that the

¹ Per Nanabhai Haridas, J., in Manoharji Karanj, (1885) 10 Bom. 97, 101.

² Ramanjam Chetti, (1890) 1 Weir 252.

³ Martin v. Benjamin, [1907] 1 K. B. 61.

⁴ Cooke, (1914) 7 L. B. R. 310.

⁵ Madan Gopal, (1910) P. B. No. 17 of 1910, P. L. R. No. 92 of 1910.

⁶ Chakraborty, (1916) 9 B. L. T. 1241.

⁷ Cooke, sup.

⁸ Cooke, sup.

lottery should be actually drawn. It is enough if all the preliminary work is carried on and monies are received for the purpose of a lottery.¹

'Lottery.'—A lottery is a game of chance in which the event of either gain or loss of the absolute right to a prize or prizes by the person concerned is made wholly dependent upon the drawing or casting of lot.² A lottery is a distribution of prizes by lot or chance.³ It makes no difference that the distribution is part of a genuine mercantile transaction.⁴ Where a scheme has for its object the carrying on of a legitimate business, the fact that it provides for the distribution of its profits, in certain events by lots will not vitiate the scheme; and make it a lottery.⁵

The principle underlying a lottery is that there should be a distribution of prizes determined solely by chance; but if the results of the lotteries are such that no prize at all is distributed and the organiser of the lottery pockets the whole of the stakes adventured the transaction does not cease to be a lottery. The actual distribution of a prize or prizes and contribution of the whole stake by the adventurers are not essential, the essential factor in the case is that there should be a scheme for distribution of a prize or prizes to be determined solely by chance and if chance so decrees that no prize is to be distributed to the adventurers and the stakes are to be appropriated by the organizer of the lottery, the scheme is none the less a lottery.⁶

The necessary effect of a lottery is to beget a spirit of speculation and gaming that is often productive of serious evils.

A transaction is not necessarily a lottery simply because a matter of whatever kind is agreed to be decided by lot. Where twenty persons agreed that each should subscribe 200 rupees by monthly instalments of ten rupees, and that each in his turn as determined by lot should take the whole of the subscriptions for one month, it was held that the agreement was not illegal.⁷

Agreement for contributions to be paid by lot is not lottery—An agreement whereby a number of persons subscribe, each a certain sum, by periodical instalments, with the object that each in his turn (to be decided by lot), shall take the whole subscription for each instalment, all such persons being returned the amount of their contributions, the common fund being lent to each subscriber in turn, was held to be not illegal.⁸ Plaintiff and defendant promoted a "chit-fund." A capital fund of Rs. 500 a month was raised by 500 subscribing each one rupee per month. At the end of the month, there was a drawing by lot and the subscriber who drew the ticket was paid Rs. 50 and his connection with the transaction forthwith ceased. This process was repeated month after month, till the end of the 49th month. At the end of the 50th month, each of the remaining subscribers was paid Rs. 50 and the stake-holders divided the profit and the fund was dissolved. Defendant executed a promissory-note to the plaintiff, for money due on a settlement of accounts, in respect of this transaction. Plaintiff filed a suit on the promissory-note, but the same was dismissed as not being maintainable, the court held that the transaction was not

2. A lottery must have been authorized by the Indian Government. It would not be sufficient to show that it has been

¹ Ramanami Mudaliar, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 585.

² Kamalesh Achari v. Apparu Pillai, (1863) 1 M. H. C. 448.

³ Per Hawkins, J., in Taylor v. Smetten, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 207.

⁴ Chakrabarty, (1916) 9 B. L. T. 124.

⁵ Shanmuga Mudali v. Kumarasami Mudali, (1925) 21 L. W. 403.

⁶ Mukandi Lal, (1917) P. R. No. 35 of 1917.

⁷ Kamalesh Achari v. Apparu Pillai, sup.

⁸ Vasudevan Nambudri v. Mommod, (1898) 22 Mad. 212. See Doraisami Mudali, (1890)

1 Weir 251; Wallingsford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 App. Cas. 685; O'Connor v. Bradshaw, (1850) 20 L. J. Ex. 26.

⁹ Shanmuga Mudali v. Kumarasami Mudali, sup.

COMMENT.

This section was inserted by Act XXVII of 1870, s. 10. A lottery stands on the same footing as gambling because both of them are games of chance.

"Every lottery is either authorized or not authorized by Government. The section does not touch authorized lotteries, but intends to save people from the effects of those not authorized (1st) by prohibiting the keeping of offices or places for drawing them, and (2ndly) by prohibiting the publication of any advertisement relating to them. After the first prohibition, the chance of any office being kept in British India for drawing lotteries not authorized by Government is very small indeed. But people not subject to our laws may contrive to open offices for that purpose out of British India, but still near our own doors—at Navsari or Daman for instance, and then send advertisement to all the widely circulated newspapers throughout British India. In that case, if the section were to be narrowly construed as applying only to lotteries to be drawn in British India, the object aimed at by the second prohibition, to prevent the mischief of people in British India being drawn into temptation by such publications, would be very nearly, if not utterly, defeated. The words of this section are wide enough to include foreign lotteries, and we have no reason to suppose the Legislature intended to exclude advertisements relating to them from the operation of s. 291-A."¹

Ingredients.—The first part of the section deals with keeping a lottery office. It has two essentials:—

1. Keeping of any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery.
2. Such lottery must not be authorized by Government.

The second part of the section deals with the publisher of any proposal regarding a lottery.

1. "Whoever keeps any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery."

—The fact that an association of persons, the business carried on by which is in the nature of a lottery, is registered, does not exempt the persons keeping the office from liability under this section.²

"Keeps any office or place."—The offence is the keeping of an office or place for the purpose of a lottery. Using a place once is not keeping it for that purpose. In order to constitute a keeping there must be something habitual.³ The members of the committee of a club who exercise full control over club matters, 'inclusive of the premises, 'keep' the premises of the club.⁴

The words "office or place" for the purpose of drawing any lottery mean an office or place intended to be the scene of the actual drawing of the lottery, and do not include an office or place kept only for the correspondence and other work connected with a lottery advertised "as going to be in some public place to be selected later on."⁵ It is, however, not necessary that the place should be kept solely for the purpose of drawing a lottery.⁶ Where a house is kept open for a double purpose, viz., as an honest social club for those who do not desire to play, as well as for the purpose of gaming for those who desire to play, it is a house opened and kept for the purpose of gaming, and it is not necessary to show that the house is used exclusively for the purpose of drawing a lottery.⁷

Clause (1) applies to cases in which it is shewn that the accused did keep an office where they carried on the necessary preliminary work for running a lottery and received the lottery moneys, and which they held out to the public as the place where the lottery would finally be drawn. It is not necessary that the

¹ Per Nanabhai Haridas, J., in Mancherji Karsaji, (1883) 10 Bom. 97, 101.

² Ramanjam Chetti, (1890) 1 Weir 252.

³ Martin v. Benjamin, [1907] 1 K. B. 64.

⁴ Coole, (1914) 7 L. B. R. 319.

⁵ Madan Gopal, (1910) P. R. No. 17 of 1910, P. L. R. No. 92 of 1910.

⁶ Chakrabatty, (1916) 9 B. L. T. 124.

⁷ Coole, sup.

⁸ Coole, sup.

lottery should be actually drawn. It is enough if all the preliminary work is carried on and monies are received for the purpose of a lottery.¹

'Lottery.'—A lottery is a game of chance in which the event of either gain or loss of the absolute right to a prize or prizes by the person concerned is made wholly dependent upon the drawing or casting of lot.² A lottery is a distribution of prizes by lot or chance.³ It makes no difference that the distribution is part of a genuine mercantile transaction.⁴ Where a scheme has for its object the carrying on of a legitimate business, the fact that it provides for the distribution of its profits, in certain events by lots will not vitiate the scheme; and make it a lottery.⁵

The principle underlying a lottery is that there should be a distribution of prizes determined solely by chance; but if the results of the lotteries are such that no prize at all is distributed and the organizer of the lottery pockets the whole of the stakes advanced the transaction does not cease to be a lottery. The actual distribution of a prize or prizes and contribution of the whole stake by the adventurers are not essential, the essential factor in the case is that there should be a scheme for distribution of a prize or prizes to be determined solely by chance and if chance so decrees that no prize is to be distributed to the adventurers and the stakes are to be appropriated by the organizer of the lottery, the scheme is none the less a lottery.⁶

The necessary effect of a lottery is to beget a spirit of speculation and gaming that is often productive of serious evils.

A transaction is not necessarily a lottery simply because a matter of whatever kind is agreed to be decided by lot. Where twenty persons agreed that each should subscribe 200 rupees by monthly instalments of ten rupees, and that each in his turn as determined by lot should take the whole of the subscriptions for one month, it was held that the agreement was not illegal.⁷

Agreement for contributions to be paid by lot is not lottery.—An agreement whereby a number of persons subscribe, each a certain sum, by periodical instalments, with the object that each in his turn (to be decided by lot), shall take the whole subscription for each instalment, all such persons being returned the amount of their contributions, the common fund being lent to each subscriber in turn, was held to be not illegal.⁸ Plaintiff and defendant promoted a "chit-fund." A capital fund of Rs. 500 a month was raised by 500 subscribing each one rupee per month. At the end of the month, there was a drawing by lot and the subscriber who drew the ticket was paid Rs. 50 and his connection with the transaction forthwith ceased. This process was repeated month after month, till the end of the 49th month. At the end of the 50th month, each of the remaining subscribers was paid Rs. 50 and the stake-holders divided the profit and the fund was dissolved. Defendant executed a promissory-note to the plaintiff, for money due on a settlement of accounts, in respect of this transaction. Plaintiff filed a suit on the promissory-note, but the same was dismissed as not being maintainable, the chit-fund itself amounting to a lottery. It was held that the transaction was not a lottery and the plaintiff's suit was maintainable.⁹

2. 'Not authorized by Government.'—The lottery must have been authorized by the Indian Government. It would not be sufficient to show that it has been

¹ Kamarswami Mudaliar, (1922) 44 M. L. J. 595.

² Kamalsh Achari v. Appar Pillai, (1863) 1 M. H. C. 448.

³ Per Hawkins, J., in Taylor v. Smetten, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 207.

⁴ Chakrabatty, (1918) 9 B. L. T. 124.

⁵ Shanmuga Mudali v. Kumaraswami Mudali, (1925) 21 L. W. 403.

⁶ Mukandi Lal, (1917) P. R. No. 35 of 1917.

⁷ Kamalsh Achari v. Appar Pillai, sup.

⁸ Vasudevan Nambudri v. Mommod, (1899) 22 Mad. 212. See Doraisami Mudali, (1890) 1 Weir 251; Wallingford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 App. Cas. 685; O'Connor v. Bradshaw, (1854) 20 L. J. Ex. 26.

⁹ Shanmuga Mudali v. Kumaraswami Mudali, sup.

American caramel. Several packets contained a half-penny in addition to a fair penny worth of sweets. There had been no advertisement as to these inclosures. It was held that H was guilty of keeping a lottery.¹ The proprietor of a paper conducted competitions in the following manner: A sentence was inserted in the paper with one word missing; intending competitors were required to cut out a coupon attached to the paper, to write the missing word on the coupon, and to send it to the proprietor. The coupons were then drawn, and the winners were announced. It was held that the competition constituted a lottery.²

A publican arranged at his beer house a sweepstake on a coming horse race. There were sixty-one entries, each person paying 6d. to the publican. Three prizes of 15 s., 10 s., and 5 s., respectively, were offered by the publican on the result of the race; and one of the conditions of the sweepstakes was that the person who won the first prize should pay the publican at the beer house for two gallons of beer to be consumed in his house, the person who won the second prize should pay for one gallon, and the person who won the third prize should pay for two quarts of beer. The winners of the prizes were ascertained by a drawing at the beer house, and the prizes were given by the publican to the winners, less the price of the beer which was deducted by him from the prizes. It was held that the sweepstake was an illegal lottery.³

The proprietors of a weekly newspaper arranged medals to be distributed gratuitously among members of the public; and the words, "Keep this, it may be worth a shilling," and the winning numbers, which were arbitrarily selected by the newspaper proprietors and were unknown to the distributors, were published weekly in the newspaper. There were no coupons, and it was not necessary that the holder of a medal should purchase a copy of the paper as a condition of receiving a prize; information as to the winning numbers could be obtained without charge at the office of the newspaper. The object of the scheme was to induce persons to inspect or buy the paper, and the circulation in fact increased considerably during the progress of the scheme. It was held that, although it was possible for an individual holder of a medal to obtain a prize without paying anything for his chance, the medal-holders as a body collectively contributed sums of money to the fund out of which the money came for the prizes, and that the scheme was a lottery.⁴

Tickets, each bearing a different number were sold for 6d. each upon the terms that the purchaser of the tickets bearing a number to be subsequently drawn by an independent person should be entitled to a bicycle as a prize. The bicycle was presented as a gift by a firm of cycle manufacturers for the purposes of advertisement, no part of the money paid by the purchasers of the tickets being used for acquiring the bicycle. It was held that as each purchaser of a ticket bought a chance, and the holder of the ticket bearing the winning number was determined by chance, the scheme constituted a lottery and it was immaterial that no part of the money paid by the purchasers of the tickets was used for the purchase of the prize.⁵

The manager of a music hall entertainment, who was giving a performance, announced to the audience that, "being possessed of a large quantity of small orders," he would distribute some of it, and his assistants went along the seats, and they handed orders, to be given away as he thought fit. Under his directions the assistants went along the seats, and they handed postal orders of small amounts to persons nearest them. Other postal orders of larger sums were handed to members of the audience who answered questions put by him to them from the stage as to their circumstances and in other instances.

¹ Healy v. Williams, [1885] 52 J. P. 621.

² Barclay v. Pearson, [1893] 2 Ch. 154.

³ Hardwick v. Law, [1901] 1 K. B. 594.

⁴ Willis v. Young, [1907] 1 K. B. 412.

⁵ Barclay v. Parker, [1912] 2 K. B. 457.

to persons who stated their circumstances and requested the gift of an order. It was held that the distribution of the postal orders was made and determined by chance and without the exercise of any real judgment on the part of the respondent; and that the respondent had, therefore, 'exercised a lottery' contrary to s. 2 of the Lotteries Act, 1699.¹

Where the agreement for the sale of bonds was: "Every subscriber pays Rs. 10-8-0 and gets a bond for Rs. 10. This sum is guaranteed by one of seven banks and not only is negotiable, but can be cashed at the bank at par at any time. The draws were to start when 2,000 tickets had been sold, and at stated intervals further drawings were to be made until every one had got a prize or had his money returned. Those who did not draw prizes in the first draw would go on drawing at each distribution till they got a prize or decided to withdraw his money. Thus, the original ten rupees was absolutely safe, the extra eight annas was to cover the cost of correspondence, etc." It was held that the agreement showed that there was a scheme for the distribution of prizes by lot or chance and the accused who put forward the scheme were guilty of an offence within the second part of this section.²

Transaction requiring skill for winning prizes is not a lottery.—The accused published a newspaper containing an advertisement of a "coupon competition," which was to be carried out by means of coupons, to be filled up by the purchaser of the paper with the names of the horses selected by the purchases as likely to come in first, second, third, and fourth in a race. For every coupon filled up after the first the purchaser paid a penny, and the accused promised a prize of £ 100 for naming the first four horses correctly. It was held that the transaction did not amount to a lottery.³ The accused published a newspaper containing an offer of a money prize for a correct prediction of the number of births and deaths in London during a named week. Competitors, who were not limited to one prediction, were to fill in the predicted numbers on coupons which were published in the issue of the paper which contained the offer. It was held that the competition, not being one the result of which depended entirely on chance, was not a lottery.⁴ The proprietors of a newspaper published therein an advertisement of a competition for money prizes, the terms of which were that each competitor was to select one of a number of given words and compose a short sentence which defined or illustrated the word selected, the initial letter of each word in the sentence to be a letter occurring in the selected word; that all the sentences reaching the editor of the newspaper should receive careful consideration; and that the decision of the editor as to the prize-winners should be final. It was held that as the competition was one involving some degree of skill on the part of the competitors, and as there was no evidence that the number of competitors was so large as to make it impossible for the sentences to be considered on their merits, the competition was not one the result of which depended entirely on chance, and that it was, therefore, not a lottery.⁵

Keeping a lottery.—The accused kept an eating house, exhibited placards headed "Great Eastern Money Club," "White Race Club for the Radcliffe Cup", etc., and sold tickets in respect thereof. Prizes were drawn and the holders of the ticket whose numbers were drawn for prizes received the same, and the accused delivered out the prizes to such ticket-holders, but there was no evidence to connect the defendant with any drawing by lottery or otherwise for the prizes. It was held that this evidence was sufficient to support a conviction against the defendant of keeping a lottery.¹

¹ Hulton, (1891) 60 L. J. (M. C.) 116, 17 Cox of 307.

² Hall v. Cox, [1899] 1 Q. B. 198.

³ Scott v. Director of Public Prosecutions, [1914] 2 K. B. 868.

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused had kept an office or place.

(2) That the office or place was used for the purpose of drawing a lottery.

(3) That such lottery was not authorized by Government.

For the second clause of the section prove—

(1) That the accused published the proposal in question.

(2) That the nature of such proposal was to pay, etc., on an event or contingency as described in the section.

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate—Summary trial.

Sanction.—No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under this section unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, Government.²

¹ James Cranchaw, (1866) 8 Cox 375.

² Criminal Procedure Code, s. 196.

CHAPTER XV.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO RELIGION.

"THE principle on which this Chapter has been framed is a principle on which it would be desirable that all Governments should act, but from which the British Government in India cannot depart without risking the dissolution of society: it is this, that every man should be suffered to profess his own religion, and that no man should be suffered to insult the religion of another."¹

295. Whoever destroys, damages or defiles any place of worship, or any object held sacred by any class of persons¹ with the intention of thereby insulting the religion of any class of persons or with the knowledge that any class of persons is likely to consider such destruction, damage or defilement as an insult to their religion, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Injuring or defiling place of worship, with intent to insult the religion of any class.

COMMENT.

This section punishes the injury or defiling of a place of worship with intent to insult the religion of a class of persons. Intention is the gist of the offence under it. Mere defilement of a place of worship is not enough.

Ingredients.—The section requires two essentials:—

1. Destruction, damage, or defilement of (a) any place of worship, or (b) any object held sacred by a class of persons.

2. Such destruction, etc., must have been done (i) with the intention of insulting the religion of a class persons, or (ii) with the knowledge that a class of persons is likely to consider such destruction, etc., as an insult to their religion.

1. 'Whoever destroys, damages or defiles any place of worship, or any object held sacred by any class of persons.'—Any person, whether a worshipper in the place or not, comes within the purview of this section by the use of the word 'whoever.'

'Defiles.'—The word 'defile' is not to be restricted in meaning to acts that would make an object of worship unclean as a material object, but extends to acts done in relation to the object of worship which would render such object ritually impure.² "The words 'destroy' and 'damage' have obviously a physical or material signification, and as the usual principle of construction, for the words 'defile' and 'insult' are to be construed in the same sense."

in the primary physical sense. ²

¹ Note J, p. 136.

² Per Muttusami Aiyar, J., in Sirakoti Swami, (1885) 1 Weir 253; Bheema Goundan, (1891) 1 Weir 256; Kuttichami Meethan v.

Rama Pattar, (1918) 41 Mad. 980.

³ Per Burgess, J. C., in Nga Poo San, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1898) 199, 200.

This word does not include animate objects according to the Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts, but refers only to inanimate objects such as churches, mosques, temples and marble or stone figures representing gods.¹ The killing of a cow by a Mussalman, within sight of a public road frequented by Hindus, was held to be not punishable under this section.² Where a bull dedicated and set at large at the shradh of a Hindu in accordance with a religious usage was killed by certain Mahomedans secretly and at night in the presence of none but Mahomedans, it was held that no offence was committed.³ Similarly, the killing of a cow with the intention or knowledge of offending the religious susceptibilities of Hindus is not an offence under this section.⁴

‘Any place of worship or any object.’—“There is a distinction, not arbitrary, between objects which are objects of respect and even veneration and objects which are held sacred; as an example of the former, I may refer to a place of sepulture (not actually consecrated, as in the case of grounds specially consecrated for that purpose according to the rites of Christian churches), as distinguished from a place for worship to the deity or where an idol or altar is kept; and such distinction appears to have been kept in view by the Legislature, for while s. 295 deals with the latter class of objects and places, s. 297 deals more especially with trespasses on places of sepulture and places set apart for the performance of funeral rites and as depositories for the remains of the dead.”⁵

‘Any class of persons.’—This expression may include any religious sect, however small in number. The application of this section is not limited only as between those who follow different religions. It also applies to different sects or classes of Hindus who are animated by sectarian feelings.⁶

2. ‘With the intention of thereby insulting the religion of any class of persons, etc.’—The authors of the Code say: “The question whether insults offered to a religion ought to be visited with punishment does not appear to us at all to depend on the question whether that religion be true or false. The religion may be false, but the pain which such insults give to the professors of that religion is real. It is often, as the most superficial observation may convince us, as real a pain and as acute a pain as is caused by almost any offence against the person, against property or against character. Nor is there any compensating good whatsoever to be set off against this pain. Discussion, indeed, tends to elicit truth; but insults have no such tendency; they can be employed just as easily against the purest faith as against the most monstrous superstition. It is easier to argue against falsehood than against truth; but it is as easy to pull down or defile the temples of truth as those of falsehood; it is as easy to molest with ribaldry and clamour men assembled for purposes of pious and rational worship, as men engaged in the most absurd ceremonies. Such insults, when directed against erroneous opinions, seldom have any other effect than to fix those opinions deeper, and to give a character of peculiar ferocity to theological dissension: instead of eliciting truth they only inflame fanaticism.

“All these considerations apply with peculiar force to India. There is perhaps no country in which the Government has so much to apprehend from religious excitement among the people. The Christians are numerically a very small minority of the population, and in possession of all the highest posts in the Government, in the tribunals and in the Army. Under their rule are placed millions of Mahomedans, of differing sects, but all strongly attached to the fundamental articles of the Mahomedan creed, and tens of millions of Hindoos, strongly attached

¹ Imam Ali, (1887) 10 All. 150, F.B.; Romesh Chunder Sanyal v. Hiru Mondal, (1890) 17 Cal. 832; Ali Muhammad, (1917) P. R. No. 10 of 1918, F.B., overruling Hakim, (1884) P. R. No. 27 of 1884.

² Imam Ali, sup.

³ Romesh Chunder Sanyal v. Hiru Mondal, sup.

⁴ Ali Muhammad, sup.

⁵ Per Brandt, J., in Ratna Mudali, (1886) 10 Mad. 126, 127.

⁶ Sivakoti Swami, (1885) 1 Weir 253.

to doctrines and rites which Christians and Mahomedans join in reprobating. Such a state of things is pregnant with dangers which can only be averted by a firm adherence to the true principles of toleration. On those principles the British Government has hitherto acted with eminent judgment, and with no less eminent success; and on those principles we propose to frame this part of the Penal Code."¹

Under this section it must be distinctly proved that there was an intention on the part of the accused to insult the religion of a class of persons. This intention could be ascertained from the nature of the act done. Where there is no intention to wound the religious susceptibilities there will be no offence. Where a person, this section.² The defendants (Hindus) were charged under this section, in that they removed some old building materials belonging to a mosque, and thereby insulted the religious feelings of Mahomedans. They were acquitted on the finding that the mosque was, at any rate its roof was, in a rotten condition, and that no one had any particular claim to it. The complainant applied to the High Court for revision. It was held that there was no reason to believe that the defendants, in gion.³ Where a Hindu had sexual intercourse with a woman secretly and at night within an enclosure surrounding the tomb of a Mahomedan fakir, it was held that he had committed an offence under s. 297 and not under this section.⁴ Where the accused, a goldsmith by caste, performed certain ceremony by pouring cocoanut water over the idol of god Shiva, it was held that if the temple in which the ceremony was performed was one of a class in which the worshippers were not allowed to touch the idol or pour cocoanut water on it, except through persons specially appointed for the purpose, and bound to observe certain special rules, and if the accused performed the ceremony with the object of ridiculing openly the established rule, a conviction under this section might be supported.⁵ The presence of Moothans, a sub-caste of Sudras, whose status is equal to that of Nairs, in such portions of a Hindu temple as are open to non-Brahmins is not a 'defilement' within the meaning of this section.⁶

Place of worship.—A kyang is held to be a place of worship.⁷ Where the accused, who were of low caste, entered into the precincts of a temple, it was held that unless there was an intention to insult the religion of a class of persons they could not be convicted of an offence under this section.⁸

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the place was one of worship, or that the object was a sacred one.

(2) That the same was held sacred by a class of persons.

(3) That the accused destroyed, damaged, or defiled the same.

(4) That he did so (a) with the intention of thereby insulting the religion of a class of persons; or (b) with the knowledge that a class of persons is likely to consider such destruction, etc., as an insult to their religion.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency or first or second class.

¹ Note J, p. 136.

² Hamas Lalitwan, (1878) 11 Cr. C. 978.

³ Jao Muhammad v. Narain Das, (1883)

3 A W N 39.

⁴ Ratan Madab, (1886) 10 Mad 126.

⁵ Navab's Swami, (1875) 1 W. 222. See Ratan Madab, sup.

⁶ Ratan Madab v. Ratan Madab, (1878) 41 Mad 200.

⁷ (1874) 1 U. E. R. (1875) 18.

⁸ Mt. Zingro, (1873) 7 C. P. L. R. (Cr) 45.

Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, destroyed (or damaged, or defiled) a certain place of worship, to wit—, [or a certain object, to wit—, of persons) with the intention of thereby insulting persons insulted) [or with the knowledge, etc.]; and you are punishable under s. 295 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

296. Whoever voluntarily causes disturbance¹ to any assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship,² or religious ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.

Assemblies held for religious worship, or for the performance of religious ceremonies, are hereby protected from intentional disturbance.

It consists of the following ingredients:—
voluntarily.

be caused to an assembly lawfully engaged in religious worship or religious ceremonies.

1. 'Voluntarily causes disturbance.'—See s. 39, supra. Under this section proof of intention is unnecessary, as the Code supposes an intention to insult, if the disturbance, in fact, follow immediately as the result of the offender's act. Assemblies lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies are hereby protected from voluntary disturbance and insult, be that religion true or false.

To constitute a 'disturbance' within the meaning of this section, a religious service need neither be stopped nor actually prevented from being carried on; nor need a religious assembly be really disturbed.¹ The word 'disturb' means 'molest' or 'vex.' Peaceful worship must not be interfered with. Where one party could hear little or nothing of what the other recited, it was held that no disturbance "was caused within the meaning of this section."² Where the accused spread false rumours which caused a religious procession to come to an end, it was held that they could not be convicted of causing disturbance within the meaning of this section.³

2. 'Lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship.'—The assembly must have been lawfully engaged in the performance of such worship or ceremonies, i.e. they must be doing what they have a right to do.⁴ If the ceremony is commenced by an act which is not lawful, it cannot be said that the persons engaged in it are lawfully engaged from the mere circumstance of their falling into a posture of worship though such worship may be real.⁵

A religious assembly held in a public street, or thoroughfare, so as to cause obstruction, cannot be said to be "lawfully engaged" within the meaning of this section. In a Full Bench case Subrahmanya Ayyar, J., said: "The object of section 296 of the Indian Penal Code presumably is to secure freedom from molestation when people meet for the performance of acts in a quiet spot vested

¹ Selvarajala Nair, (1859) 1 Weir 259.

² Vijayaraghava Chariar, (1903) 26 Mad.

554, p. 2.

³ Mohammad Hussain, (1919) 17 A. L. J. P.

529.

⁴ Jaipal Gur v. H. Dharmapala, (1895) 23

Cal. G., Ramsam, (1895) 7 All. 461, 464, p. 2.

⁵ Jaipal Gur v. H. Dharmapala, ibid.

for the time in the assembly exclusively; and not when they engage in worship in an quiet place open to all the public as a thoroughfare. The user of a highway for religious worship is altogether wanting in lawfulness." Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., expressed the same opinion. But Davies and Benson, JJ., while agreeing that no disturbance was caused by the accused in the case before them, did not share the same view as Subrahmaniam Ayyar and Bhashyam Ayyangar, JJ., did as to the lawfulness of religious worship on the highway.¹ The former Chief Court of the Punjab adopted the view of Subrahmaniam Ayyar and Bhashyam Ayyangar, JJ. Where some boys were beating drums to summon people for joining a Moharram Procession and on being asked by the accused, whose horse was frightened, they did not stop, and the accused then seized the drums, but restored them the next day, it was held that the accused's acts did not constitute an offence under this section, inasmuch as no assembly could be "lawfully engaged" within the meaning of this section on a highway.² But where certain Lodhas, who, with the sanction of the public authorities, had been carrying flags to a temple in procession through a public street were attacked by persons who objected to the procession, it was held that such attack constituted a disturbance to the performance of a religious ceremony.³

The worship must be a real worship and not a cloak for doing something else, and the assembly must be lawfully engaged in worship.⁴

CASES.

Disturbance caused by saying 'amin.'—A mosque was used by the members of a sect of Mahomedans called the Hanifis, according to whose tenets the word 'amin' (amen) should be spoken in a low tone of voice. While the Hanifis were at prayers, R, a Mahomedan of another sect, entered the mosque, and in the course of the prayers, according to the tenets of his sect, called out "amin" in a loud tone of voice. For this act he was convicted of voluntarily disturbing an assembly engaged in religious worship under this section. The Allahabad High Court ordered the case to be re-tried.⁵ But in a subsequent case it has held that a mosque is a place where all sects of Mahomedans are entitled to go and perform their religious duties according to their consciences, and a Mahomedan proof conscience, commits no offence by causing annoyance to his fellow-worshippers in the mosque.⁷ Any person, Mahomedan or not, who goes into a mosque not bona fide for a religious purpose, but mala fide, for the purpose of disturbing others engaged in their devotions, will render himself criminally liable.⁸

Disturbance caused by saying 'mantra.'—Where the worshippers were reciting one mantram (precept from a religious work) and the accused recited another mantram, it was held that the accused committed an offence under this section.⁹

Disturbance caused by music.—Where the accused passed in procession before a mosque with music while religious worship was going on between certain hours which, to the knowledge of the accused, were fixed for such worship by the District Magistrate, it was held that the accused by their action disturbed the worship and

¹ Vijayaraghava Chariar, (1903) 26 Mad. 554, F. B.

² Dhalu Ram, (1909) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 33 of 1909.

³ Masil, (1911) 34 All. 78.

⁴ Jaiपाल Gir v. H. Dharmapala, (1895) 23 Cal. 60.

⁵ Ramram, (1885) 7 All. 461, F. B.

⁶ Ala-ullah v. Azim-ullah, (1889) 12 All. 494, F. B. See Fuzul Karim v. Hajji Moulvi

Bulshah, (1891) 18 I. A. 59; Moulvi Abdus Subhan v. Kurban Ali, (1908) 12 C. W. N. 289.

⁷ Jangu v. Ahmad Ullah, (1889) 13 All. 419, F. B.

⁸ Ibid.

⁹ Krishnatatachari, (1884) 1 Weir 259.

unlawfully within the mosque with intent thereby to insult or annoy them and thus on the facts a conviction under this section was wrong.¹

Where a joint owner of property entered a grave for the purpose of demarcating his share and in doing so dug up certain graves, and exposed the bones of the persons buried in spite of the remonstrances of the relations of the buried persons it was held that he had committed an offence under this section.² Similarly, the erection of a shed over a visible grave belonging to the complainant's family in a disused grave-yard claimed to be private property of the trespasser, with the knowledge that the feelings of the complainant would be likely to be thereby wounded, was held to be an offence under this section.³ The accused dug up and levelled certain graves existing on a plot of land which had been sold to him by the mujawars of an adjoining shrine whose names appeared as owners in the revenue records. The relatives of the persons buried in those graves prosecuted the accused. It was held that he was guilty under this section for the act of a person who destroyed or disturbed a place of sepulture with the intention of wounding the feelings of any person or with the knowledge that the feelings of any person were likely to be wounded was wrongful and amounted to a trespass, no matter whether the land in which the place of sepulture was included did or did not belong to such person.⁴

4. 'Place of worship.'—The trespass must be in a place of religious worship with the knowledge that the feelings of persons would be wounded thereby.⁵ Where a mahar, a low caste man, entered into a temple, an offence under this section was committed.⁶ A Hindu, who had sexual intercourse with a woman within an enclosure surrounding the tomb of a Mahomedan fakir was convicted under s. 295. It was held that in the absence of proof that the place was used for worship or otherwise held sacred, the conviction was bad, and that it should be altered to a conviction under this section.⁷ Persons having sexual connection inside a mosque are guilty of an offence under this section.⁸

5. 'Funeral rites.'—The section contemplates disturbance of persons engaged in performing funeral ceremonies. Obstruction to the performance of obsequies comes under this section.⁹ But a Moharram procession is not a funeral ceremony within the meaning of this section.¹⁰

6. 'Offers any indignity to any human corpse.'—Where certain persons were convicted of having offered an indignity to a human corpse, inasmuch as they had by using their influence prevented the grave diggers from digging a grave for the corpse of the complainant's son, on account of the complainant not having joined the Khilafat party, it was held that the accused had not committed any criminal offence. The Court observed: "I do not propose to expatiate upon the mentality of persons who, to support their views as to what they conceive desirable in politics, use their influence to prevent a man from burying his little child. But as the law stands they have not committed any criminal offence in this particular case. The act was an act of boycotting and was not a criminal act either under the Penal Code or any other law."¹¹

7. 'Causes disturbance to any person, etc.'—The word 'disturbance' implies some active interference in, or hindrance to, the performance of the funeral ceremonies. The grand-daughter-in-law of the complainant having died, the complainant and his relations took the body out to the cremation ground and were preparing to cremate it when the accused came there and asked them not to cremate the body, and on being asked why, said that they would state the reason to the police. It was

¹ Mustan, (1923) 1 Rang. 600.

² Ram Prasad, (1911) 33 All. 773

³ Julan Sain, (1913) 40 Cal. 548

⁴ Umar Din, (1915) P. R. No. 23 of 1915.

⁵ Bhagya, (1896) Unrep. Cr. C. 148.

⁶ Ibid.

⁷ Ratna Mudali, (1886) 10 Mad. 126;

Nga Po San, (1894) 1 U. B. R. (1892-1896) 199; Gaja, (1882) 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 32.

⁸ Magrud Hussain, (1923) 45 All. 529.

⁹ Subramania Ayyan v. Venkata Rayar, (1883) 6 Mad. 254, 257.

¹⁰ Ghosila v. Kalka, (1885) 6 A. W. N. 49.

¹¹ Amanat, (1921) 20 A. L. J. R. 93.

held that the mere utterance of the words "do not cremate the body" unaccompanied by any attempt to prevent the cremation or by any manifestation on the part of the accused of their intention to interfere if the complainant and his relations should persist in having the body cremated, could not be regarded as a disturbance to the persons assembled for the performance of the funeral ceremonies within the meaning of this section.¹

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the place in question was (a) a place of worship; or (b) a place of burial, etc.

(2) That the accused committed trespass therein.

(3) That he did so (i) intending thereby to wound the feelings of some person, or to insult the religion of some person; or (ii) with the knowledge that the feelings of some person would be likely to be wounded thereby, or that the religion of some person would be likely to be insulted thereby.

Or prove the following points:—

(1) The existence of the human corpse.

(2) That the accused offered an indignity thereto.

(3) That he, when offering such indignity, intended or knew, etc., as in (3) above.

Or prove the following points:—

(1) That persons were assembled for performing funeral ceremonies.

(2) That the accused caused disturbance to such persons when assembled.

(3) That he did so intending thereby, or knowing, etc., as in (3) above.

Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, or first or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, with the intention of wounding the feelings of— (or of insulting the religion of—) [or with the knowledge that the feelings of— are likely to be wounded (or that the religion of— is likely to be insulted thereby)] committed a trespass in a place of worship, to wit—, (or on a place of sepulture, to wit—, or etc.), and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 297 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

298. Whoever, with deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings¹ of any person, utters any word

Uttering words, etc., with deliberate intent to wound religious feelings.

or makes any sound in the hearing of that person, or makes any gesture in the sight of that person, or places any object in the sight of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT;

Object.—The authors of the Code say: "In framing clause 282, we had two objects in view: we wish to allow all fair latitude to religious discussion, and at the same time to prevent the professors of any religion from offering, under the pretext of such discussion, intentional insults to what is held sacred by others. We do not conceive that any person can be justified in wounding with deliberate intention the religious feelings of his neighbours by words, gesture or exhibition. A warm expression dropped in the heat of controversy, or an argument urged by a and annoying the professors of a different religion, and vindicating his own, will not fall under

¹ Mangal, (1918) P R No. 2 of 1919.

1. 'Deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings.'—The Law Commissioners observe: "The intention to wound must be deliberate, that is, not conceived on the sudden in the course of discussion, but premeditated; it must appear, not only that the party, being engaged in a discussion with another on the subject of the religion professed by that other, in the course of the argument consciously used words likely to wound his religious feelings, but that he entered into the discussion with the deliberate purpose of so offending him. In other places in the Code a party is held to be guilty if he causes a certain effect the causing of which is an offence, intending to cause that effect, or knowing that his act was likely to cause it. Here there is a marked difference. Although the party uttering offensive words might be conscious at the moment of uttering them that they were likely to wound the religious feelings of his hearer, yet it was apparent that he uttered them on the spur of the moment—that he did not of a deliberate purpose to offend—he would not, we think, be liable to conviction under clause 282 (this section). If however a party were to force himself upon the attention of another, addressing to him, an involuntary hearer, an insulting invective against his religion, he would, we conceive, fall under the definition, for the reasonable inference from his conduct would be that he had a deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of his hearer."²

"We are, though not without hesitation, inclined to think that in the very peculiar circumstances of this country, discourse addressed to any person with the intention of converting him from the faith he professes, which, however it may be couched in insulting language, nor forced upon him, is not a crime."³

the religion of the country is an offence; to attempt the same thing by contemptuous or vituperative language is an offence which would be severely punished in practice. But the reason is that conversion is not recognised as a legitimate object. The law assumes the truth of Christianity. But it is manifest that the Law and the Legislature of this country cannot assume the truth of any religion. And, as free discussion, or, in other words, attempts at conversion, is the best criterion of the truth of anything the truth or falsehood of which is not already assumed by law to be beyond controversy, it seems to follow that a bona fide attempt to convert ought not in this country to be treated as a crime, even though the intention to convert be an intention to do so by wounding the religious feelings of the persons addressed. We apprehend it is almost impossible to convert a sincere or ardent votary of any faith without wounding his religious feelings in the early stages of the process."⁴

Deliberate intention of the accused may be inferred from his words as well as from his acts.

CASES.

Deliberate intention to wound religious feelings.—Interpolation of a forbidden chant.—Interpolation of a forbidden chant in an authorized ritual is held to be this offence.⁵

Exhibiting flesh.—Exhibiting cow's flesh by carrying it in an uncovered state round a village with the deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of

¹ Note J, p. 137.

² 2nd Rep., s. 252.

³ Ibid., s. 254.

⁴ Ibid., s. 255.

⁵ Narasimha v. Shree Krishna, (1892) 2 Mad. Jur. 236.

the Hindus is held to be an offence under this section.¹ But it has been held that religious feelings of Mahomedans are not wounded by the slaughter of goats by jhatka and exposing the carcass outside or selling its flesh inside a shop, as Mahomedans do not worship goats.²

No offence if religious feelings are not wounded.—Swearing on cow's flesh.—Where the accused, while his caste-people were sitting to dine at the complainant's house, called out in the hearing of all that they would be eating cow's flesh if they took food without them, which made them leave their dishes untouched, it was held that the accused could not be convicted under this section.³

Willful pollution of food served at a caste dinner.—Where certain Hindus present at a caste dinner had sat down to partake of the food which had been served to them, when certain other members of the caste came, and after telling those who were seated to move to another place, which they refused to do, threw down a shoe amongst the men who were seated, and who in consequence left the food untouched, it was held that the persons who threw the shoe could not be convicted under this section.⁴ This decision does not seem to be satisfactory. The authors of the Code have said that "the rendering the food of a Hindoo useless to him by causing it to be in what he considers as a polluted state is an injury" necessitating punishment.⁵

Throwing dirty clothes.—Where a woman threw a cloth which she had been wearing . . . birth to an illegitimate child on . . . s held that that did not amount to . . . ences relating to religion and not to castes.⁶

PRACTICE.

Evidence.—Prove (1) that the accused uttered the words, or made the gesture, etc.

(2) That he did so, intending to wound the religious feelings of any person.

(3) That such intention was deliberate.

To hold a person liable under this section the intention with which the words were uttered must be strictly proved; and it is not sufficient to show that the utterer knew that his act was likely to wound the religious feelings of anybody.⁷

"It is not sufficient for conviction that a person should do one of the acts described with the knowledge that he is thereby likely to wound the religious feelings of any person, nor even that he should do it with that intention, unless the intention be deliberate."⁸

Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by Magistrate, Presidency, or first, or second class.

Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows:—

That you, on or about the—day of—, at—, uttered the word (specify it) in the hearing of—[or made a sound, to wit—, in the hearing of—; or made a gesture, to wit—, in the sight of—; or placed a certain object, to wit—, in the sight of—] with the deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of the said person, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 298 of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

¹ Rahman, (1893) 13 A. W. N. 144.

² Kirpa Singh, (1897) P. W. R. (Cr.) No. 26 of 1912.

³ Dagadi, (1892) Unrep. Cr. C. 592.

⁴ Moti Lal, (1901) 24 All. 155.

⁵ Note J, p. 137.

⁶ Tularam v. Zeli, (1892) 6 C. P. L. R. 7.

⁷ Narasimha v. Shree Krishna, (1892) 2 Mad. Jur. 236.

⁸ Per Flowden, J., in Habibullah, (1889) P. R. No. 4 of 1890.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE HUMAN BODY.

The following offences affect the human body, viz. :—

- | | |
|---|--|
| <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Unlawful homicide. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> (a) Culpable homicide. (b) Murder. (c) Homicide by rash or negligent act. (d) Suicide. 2. Causing miscarriage. 3. Exposure of infants and concealment of births of children. 4. Hurt. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> (i) Simple. | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> (ii) Grievous. 5. Wrongful restraint and wrongful confinement. 6. Criminal force. 7. Assault. 8. Kidnapping. 9. Abduction. 10. Slavery and forced labour. 11. Rape. 12. Unnatural offence. |
|---|--|

Of Offences affecting Life.

299. Whoever causes death¹ by doing an act² with the intention of causing death,³ or with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death,⁴ or with the knowledge that he is likely by such act to cause death,⁵ commits the offence of culpable homicide.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

(a) A lays sticks and turf over a pit, with the intention of thereby causing death, or with the knowledge that death is likely to be thereby caused. Z, believing the ground to be firm, treads on it, falls in and is killed. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(b) A knows Z to be behind a bush. B does not know it. A, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely to cause, Z's death, induces B to fire at the bush. B fires and kills Z. Here B may be guilty of no offence; but A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(c) A, by shooting at a fowl with intent to kill and steal it, kills B, who is behind a bush; A not knowing that he was there. Here, although A was doing an unlawful act, he was not guilty of culpable homicide, as he did not intend to kill B, or cause death by doing an act that he knew was likely to cause death.

*Explanation 1.*⁶—A person who causes bodily injury to another who is labouring under a disorder, disease or bodily infirmity, and thereby accelerates the death of that other, shall be deemed to have caused his death.

*Explanation 2.*⁷—Where death is caused by bodily injury, the person who causes such bodily injury shall be deemed to have caused the death, although by resorting to proper remedies and skilful treatment the death might have been prevented.

*Explanation 3.*⁸—The causing of the death of a child in the mother's womb is not homicide. But it may amount to culpable homicide to cause the death of a living child, if any part of that child has been brought forth, though the child may not have breathed or been completely born.

three deat

Lawful homicide, or simple homicide, includes several cases falling under the General Exceptions (Ch. IV).

(A) Lawful or simple homicide.—This may be divided into two classes—

(1) Where the death is caused by accident or misfortune, and without any criminal intention or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act, in a lawful manner, by lawful means, and with proper care and caution (s. 80).

(3) Where the death is caused unintentionally by an act done in good faith for the benefit of the person killed, when

(i) he or, if a minor or lunatic, his guardian has expressly or impliedly consented to such an act (ss. 87, 88), or

(ii) where it is impossible for the person killed to signify his consent, or where he is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit (s 92).

All the above cases are dealt with in the General Chapter of Exceptions.

2. Justifiable homicide.—This class includes cases where the death is caused

(1) By a person, who is bound, or by a mistake of fact, in good faith, believes himself bound, by law (s 76).

(2) By a Judge when acting judicially in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be, given to him by law (s. 77).

(3) By a person acting in pursuance of the judgment or order of a Court of Justice (s. 78).

(4) By a person who is justified or who by reason of a mistake of fact, in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law (s. 79).

(5) By a person acting without any criminal intention to cause harm, and in good faith, for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property (s. 81).

(6) Where the death is caused in exercising the right of private defence of person or property (ss. 100, 103).

(B) Unlawful homicide.—Culpable homicide is the first kind of unlawful homicide. It is the causing of death by doing—

(i) an act with the intention of causing death :

(ii) an act with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death; or use death.

• • be in its nature
• • • • • of culpable

The existence of an evil motive is not at all necessary. Malice is not made a necessary ingredient of the definition. Whatever may be the motive which incites the action and whether or not any motive whatsoever be discoverable, if the act relieve a beggar, even though there might be the clearest proof that the death of the beggar was the effect of this omission, and that the man who omitted to give the alms knew that the death of the beggar was likely to be the effect of the omission. It will hardly be maintained that a surgeon ought to be treated as murderer for refusing to go from Calcutta to Meerut to perform an operation, although it should be absolutely certain that this surgeon was the only person in India who could perform it, and that if it were not performed, the person who required it would die. It is difficult to say whether a Penal Code which should put no omissions on the same footing with acts, or a Penal Code which should put all omissions on the same footing with acts, would produce consequences more absurd and revolting. There is no country in which either of these principles is adopted. Indeed, it is hard to conceive how, if either were adopted, society could be held together.

² Idaho, (1886) UNION, Q. C. 6.

"It is plain; therefore, that a middle course must be taken; but it is not easy to determine what that middle course ought to be. The absurdity of the two extremes is obvious. But there are innumerable intermediate points; and wherever the line of demarcation may be drawn, it will, we fear, include some cases which we might wish to exempt, and will exempt some which we might wish to include...

"What we propose is this, that where acts are made punishable on the ground that they have caused, or have been intended to cause, or have been known to be likely to cause, a certain evil effect, omissions which have caused, which have been intended to cause, or which have been known to be likely to cause, the same effect shall be punishable in the same manner, provided that such omissions were, on other grounds, illegal. An omission is illegal (see clause 28) if it be an offence, if it be a breach of some direction of law, or if it be such a wrong as would be a good ground for a civil action.

"We cannot defend this rule better than by giving a few illustrations of the way in which it will operate. A omits to give Z food, and by that omission voluntarily causes Z's death. Is this murder? Under our rule it is murder if A was Z's gaoler, directed by the law to furnish Z with food. It is murder if Z was the infant child of A, and had therefore a legal right to sustenance, which right a Civil Court would enforce against A. It is murder if Z was a bedridden invalid, and A a nurse hired to attend him, and had thus assumed a legal duty of providing for his continuance of the confinement, with necessaries. It is not murder if A is a beggar, who has no other claim on A than that of humanity.

"A omits to tell Z that a river is swollen so high that Z cannot safely attempt to ford it, and by this omission voluntarily causes Z's death. This is murder, if A is a peon stationed by authority to warn travellers from attempting to ford the river. It is murder if A is a guide who had contracted to conduct Z. It is not murder if A is a person on whom Z has no other claim than that of humanity.

"A savage dog fastens on Z. A omits to call off the dog, knowing that if the dog be not called off, it is likely that Z will be killed. Z is killed. This is murder in A, if the dog belonged to A, inasmuch as his omission to take proper order with the dog is illegal (Clause 273). But if A be a mere passer-by it is not murder."

It will, therefore, appear that if death is caused--

(i) by an illegal omission with the intention that such omission should cause death;

(ii) by an illegal omission with the intention that such omission should cause death, and with knowledge that death is likely to be the result of such omission;

it will be culpable homicide.

See cases under s. 300 relating to neglect to supply medical aid or food.

Death caused by the effect of words on the imagination or the passions.—The authors of the Code say: "The reasonable course in our opinion is to consider such an act, and to treat A as guilty of it, if he has voluntarily caused Z's death, by inducing Z to swallow poison or directly by throwing Z into convulsions.

"...It would be most difficult to prove to the conviction of any Court that death had really been the effect of excitement produced by words; it would be still more difficult to prove that the person who spoke the words anticipated from them an effect which, except under very peculiar circumstances, and on very peculiar constitutions, no words would produce. Still it seems to us that both these points might be made out by overwhelming evidence; and, supposing them to be so made out, we are unable to perceive any distinction between the case of him who voluntarily causes death in this manner, and the case of him who voluntarily causes death by means of a pistol or a sword. Suppose it to be proved to the entire conviction of a criminal Court that Z, the deceased, was in a very critical state of health; that A, the heir to Z's property, had been informed by Z's physicians that Z's recovery absolutely depended on his being kept quiet in mind, and caused the death of Z; nor do we perceive any reason for not punishing A in the same manner in which he would have been punished if he had mixed arsenic in Z's medicine."¹

(b) A, with the intention and knowledge aforesaid, gives Z his choice whether Z will kill himself, or suffer lingering torture; Z kills himself in consequence. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

